Mr. Shaw was a native of Guilford county, and the son of the late Cyrus W. and Arlena Shaw. On August 6, 1899, he was married to Miss Ida Belle Layton, who lived only a few year afterwards, dying on December 3, 1902. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Joe Ellis, Jr.; two sisters, Miss Donnie Shaw and Mrs. John Neese, and a grandson, James Larry Ellis.

Mr. Shaw had been a faithful member of Pleasant Union M. P. church since early life. He was loved by the church members and all who knew him. For the past 30 years he has suffered with a broken back, which made it necessary for him to use crutches, but never did he complaint about his afflictions. He was a congenial and lovable man.

The funeral service was held at Pleasant Union church on Saturday morning, with the pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, in charge, assisted by the Rev. J. T. Bowman, pastor of Denton charge.

Tesh

On July 19, 1934, God called from the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Tesh their young son, James Luther, at the age of eight years and three months.

James was loved very much by his friends and his training was such that when he saw that the end was nearing he said to the family that if he had done anything wrong he wanted them to forgive him. He said, "I can forgive all." In this, Bro. and Sister Tesh saw the fruits of their untiring efforts in training their children. They had taken James to church and Sunday school from infancy. May the Lord bless the sorrowing ones.

The funeral was conducted by Revs. Grant and Hunter and Church, and interment followed in Union Grove cemetery.

G. A. BERRIER.

Coble

Robert Alexander Coble, 61, well known farmer of near Snow Camp, died at 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning, August 8, 1934, at his home. Mr. Coble had been in bad health for about five years, but he had been critically ill for only three weeks.

Mr. Coble was a native of Guilford County, and the son of the late Kimsey Coble and Martha Coble. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucy Kimrey Coble; two daughters, Mrs. W. B. Neese, of near Snow Camp, and Miss Swannie Coble, of Burlington; a son, Clyde F Coble, of North Wilkesboro; a half-sister, Mrs. John Staley, Kimesville; two half-brothers, Henry F. Coble, of Palo Alto, California, and Wesley Milton Coble, of Kinston, N C., and four grandchildren.

The funeral service was conducted Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Mount Pleasant church, of which he was a member, by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, assisted by Dr. F. W. Paschall, of Burlington, and Rev. D. I. Offman, of Burlington, R. F. D. Mr. Coble was a member of the Graham Council J. O. U. A. M., which had charge of the funeral service at the cemetery. Mr. Coble was known by many people and was highly respected, as was evidenced by the large crowd who attended his funeral and the large floral offering.

Whitaker

Virginia Lee Whitaker was born September 12, 1910, near Enfield, N. C., and passed into the hopeful beyond on the morning of August 10, 1934.

She was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley C. Whitaker, and was a grandaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wilson C. Whitaker, and late Mr. Walter A. Beavans and his widow, Mrs. W. A. Beavans.

Descending from a long line of noble ancestry and leaders in the Methodist Protestant Church, she united with Whitakers Chapel church at the early age of 12 years under the pastorate of Rev. D. R. Williams. Virginia was physically handicapped from early childhood, yet she had a spirit of courage and determination that made her to keep even with and surpass many of those most highly favored with sound bodies and perfect health. She graduated from Enfield High School in 1928 and attended Peach Junior College the following fall term, being forced to give up further pursuit of her studies.

She was cheerful and obedient at home, a good sport and student in school, loyal to her church and always a good friend to her pastor. The memory of the life and spirit of Virginia will be our help in years to come.

Ward

On July 27, 1934, the home of Jeff Ward was made lonely when the death angel visited the home and took his dear wife, Hattie Lou Ward.

Mrs. Ward was carried to Burrus Hospital, where she remained only four days, and then her death. She had been in declining health for the past year or two, and finally the last three months was unable to do any strenuous work. While the family knew her condition was serious, they with others in the community did not realize that the end was so near, and her death came as a severe shock to her family and friends.

She leaves to mourn her going a beloved husband and five children: Lillie Mae, Vernon, Lloyd, Walton, and Caine, and a large host of friends. May the Lord comfort them in their bereavement and help them to follow such examples as were laid before them by the dear mother who has gone on before. We can't express how we do miss her in our church. It seems as if we can't give her up, as she was one of our faithful members for years. How often have we seen her rejoice and praise His holy Name, and tell us how to live, and keep closer to the Lord. She has gone from us, but her good works will still follow after her. While we are mourning over our loss, no doubt heaven was made to rejoice, and some day we will go up higher and see her as she is if we are faithful.

Funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon, July 28, by her pastor, Rev. J. T. Bowman, assisted by Revs. Trogden, Hill, Groce, and Bingham.

A trio consisting of Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Fraley, and Mr. Earl Kennedy sang her two favorite songs, "Shake Hands With Mother Again," and "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

Following the funeral oration the casket was opened and the congregation viewed for the last time the remains of the former friend and neighbor. Burial took place in the Canaan cemetery.

MARRIED

Lanning-Swicegood

A beautiful wedding was solemnized on Saturday, September 1st, at 4 p. m., when Miss Louise Swicegood became the bride of Mr. Harold Lanning.

The ceremony was performed at the parsonage of Shiloh Charge by Rev. C. E. Ridge, pastor of the bride and groom.

Mr. Lanning is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lanning, of Lexington, Route 3. Mrs. Lanning is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Swicegood, of Route 4.

The bride and groom are held in high esteem by their many friends, who extend congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy life.

Bland-Kepley

On August 16, at 8 p. m., a beautiful wedding took place in Lexington, N. C., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grover B. Bland, when their only son, Cecil Bland, was married to Miss Bertha Mae Kepley, of Erlanger, N. C.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Kepley, of Erlanger, and holds a position with the Erlanger Cotton Mill.

This very popular young couple have many friends in Lexington and the community who extend congratulations and best wishes.

After an extended trip to the World's Fair at Chicago and other points north Mr. and Mrs. Bland will be at home to their many friends in Lexington, North Carolina.

CARE OF OPEN WOUNDS

In dressing open wounds do not try to aid nature with a lot of remedies which are thought to be helpful but which only hinder the natural process. The main aim of of the treatment is to rid the injured area of bacteria and prevent the entrance of more. For small wounds paint with iodine and then dress with a clean bandage. Ordinarily this dressing should not have to be touched for several days. If the wound becomes contaminated or infected consult a doctor as a precaution against lockjaw. If the wound is of a more serious nature and bleeds freely the flow can usually be stopped by applying pressure with a clean cloth. In case an artery has been severed it may be necessary to use a tourniquet. Apply it above the wound but be sure that it is removed when the flow of blood stops. Never use flour or the like to stop the blood and above all never apply salve to an open wound.—Pathfinder.

Along the coast of North Carolina the sands are constantly shifting so that there is some uncertainty about things, but not more so than about those charges that are to be in my column of honor each week. For the past few weeks it has been a real race for second and third places and the line-up has changed from week to week. This week Siler City just shoves Shiloh off the stage and steps up into second place, while Albemarle, that had to take a back seat last week, walks right up this week and claims third place. Well, Shiloh, it is too bad, but I am expecting you to come again.

Now, pick up your last week's Herald and see what Gibsonville and Fountain Place did about Subsidy. Both of them went right over the top. Well, I knew they could do it, for that young man, Dr. N. G. Bethea, is a regular wheelhorse when it comes to finances as well as in lots of other good things. And, boys, take off your hats to Mrs. J. W. Wright, the Herald agent at Fountain Place, who put her church on the honor roll some time ago and just keeps right on sending in subscriptions. That is the kind of Herald agents I like, and that is the kind every church needs.

And that young man, Rev. D. R. Williams, up on West Forsyth Charge, seems to be hustling these days. For the last few weeks he has been just rolling the money into the Herald office. And Rev. H. F. Fogleman, of Fallston Charge, just keeps sending in the money weekly. Good work, Brother Fogleman; keep it up.

I am so anxious to see the financial returns this week that I can hardly wait. Just wonder who will forge ahead.

Some folks wonder why I run a week behind with my ravings and why I do not rave more up to date. But the reason is this: Financial returns column has to be kept open until the last minute. I would have to rave to hurriedly to enjoy it if I were to wait until the last minute. As it is now I dream about what the charges did the previous week. That is why.

FROM MRS. W. C. HAMMER

A few days ago I dropped in to see Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who is having to stay in bed on account of a broken knee-cap, and she asked me to say to all her friends that she is getting along as well as could be expected though her limb is still in a cast. She asked me to tell the members of the N. C. Branch that she is using the quilt which the Branch presented her and that she is getting lots of pleasure out of reading the many names on the quilt.

Dr. McCulloch Ill

Friends of the Herald everywhere will be sorry to hear of the illness of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, the editor of the Herald. For several weeks Dr. McCulloch has been unable to do his accustomed work, but for the past week he has been in bed under the care of a physician, with the additional services of a nurse at night. During the daytime his daughter and other interested friends are doing their best to make him comfortable. He has labored long and earnestly in the interest of righteousness and Christian living. His influence in the Methodist Protestant Church, especially in the North Carolina Conference, has been great, and the church is far better today because he has had a large part in making it what it is. His friends everywhere will remember him in prayer during these trying times. In the meantime send your articles and subscriptions right on to him as you have been doing in the past. Miss Mary C., the printers, and I are doing our best to get the paper out on time.

School Days

By J. E. Pritchard

During the next few weeks the public schools as well as the colleges and the Seminary operated by our church will throw wide open their doors to admit boys and girls and men and women. Some children will be going to the public school for the first time. Some will be going back after the vacation of the summer. Some young people will be going to college for the first time, and others will be greeting the fellow-students with whom they were associated last year. But whether it is going to school for the first time or whether it is returning after the vacation, it is a great experience. It is a great experience for both pupil and parents. It is safe to say that the most of these children will remember their first day in school as long as they live. The whole thing is so very new to them. They have been living in a world where they were free to do as they pleased. In many cases loving parents yielded to the wishes of the children and let them have their way rather than to hurt their feelings. But now the case will be different. There are too many in the class-room for every one to do as he pleases. There would be no school with every child having his own way. There must be rules and there must be discipline. Otherwise the school would lose its best feature and the child would be robbed of that which it needs most.

Moreover, it is a new experience for parents for the children to start to school. Some years ago a mother told me that she had been crying all day. When I asked her what she had been crying about she said that she sent her boy off to school that day and it dawned on her that from that time on somebody else would have that child about as much of the time as she would have him. Up to that time she had had him all to herself—the care of him, the joy of him—but now she must send him out to be in the care of others and to obey others, and it made her cry.

But what a blessed experience it is for the child that it must get out and learn to obey others. No one person is wise enough and broad-minded enough to train and guide a life. God has made us social beings and there are many sides of life to be cultivated. There is much to be learned before we are ready to take our place beside those who are fitted to run the race of life. The child gets many bumps and jars before it knows how to get along with folks. Its tender feelings will be hurt lots of times in this process of learning to live with others.

Going off to college is very similar to going to public school. The difference is that the college student is somewhat older and is supposed to know more. In these days of good public schools and of high standards for entrance to college the pupil must know a good deal about books before he can enter college. But even here there is much to be learned after entering college besides the books. One of the finest things about college life is that the student must learn to shift for himself. This makes a man of the boy if he has the right kind of grit about him. Many times this is exactly what the boy needs. He has been brought up to have somebody do almost everything for him and he needs to be thrown out on his own resources. Some young people think it a handicap to be limited in financial matters. They want plenty of money and not much responsibility. But those of us who have had experience know that some of the best lessons have come to us, not when we had it easy but when we had it hard. A teacher in one of our schools of higher education used to say that he had rather his boy would come out of college in debt a thuosand dollars than for some one to give him the money. He said the boy would have better preparation for life if he had to struggle. It is true that in these days when it costs a great deal to go to college, young people need some help in order to go to college, but they ought not to have too much help financially. For it will rob them of a valuable lot of experience if they do not have to shift some for themselves.

But after all is said, it is great to be able to go to college. Some people have been able to get along very well without a college education, but think what they could have accomplished had they had the advantages of the college. The things one learns from books in the college are valuable, but the things one absorbs are also valuable. And of the two it is about a fifty-fifty proposition. The "book worm" loses a side of life that is vital, namely, social contacts. The person who has only the social contacts also loses a lot, for he misses the valuable lessons that come from books. So both are necessary.

Whether parents have children in the public school or in the college they have great responsibility. It will help the teachers wonderfully if the children are made to realize that the parents are backing up the teachers. Sometimes children are spoiled because they are made to feel at home that the parents are siding with them rather than with the teacher in any dispute that may arise. Sometimes the "big babies" in college are spoiled by over-indulgent parents back home.

What has been said about the public school is largely true of the Sunday school. And the same might be said of the church. We go to church partly to learn. If the ministry does not teach the people anything, that ministry is bound to fail. And the question of discipline in the Sunday school and the church is very closely related to that of the public school and the college. And even with the grown-up folks it is a question of association with others. Life is a great school and we need all the information we can get in order to get along with folks. And just as there is much to be learned when the pupil leaves the school, so there will be much to be learned when we leave the school of life; and yet with all their limitations both school and life are great if properly used.

CHURCH FINANCES AGAIN

Before I get through with one good Doctor here comes another. This time it is Dr. Bethea astride his favorite steed, Tither, cantering along to the tune of "Why Support Financially?" All of which prompts me to offer at least three paragraphs from an outstanding Bible student and religious leader on the general subject of tithing.

"In the law of the tithe (as given in the Old Testament) there are two elements—the one moral, the other legal—which should be carefully distinguished. First and fundamental is the principle that it is our duty to set apart to God a certain fixed proportion of our income. The other element in the law is that which declares that the proportion to be given to the Lord is precisely one-tenth. Now, of these two, the first principle is distinctly recognized and reaffirmed in the New Testament as of continued validity in this dispensation; while, on the other hand, as to the precise proportion of our income to be thus set apart for the Lord, the New Testament writers are everywhere silent.

"As regarding the first principle, the Apostle Paul, writing to the Corinthians, orders that 'upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him.' In this connection, he also adds that he has given the same command to the churches of Galatia. This most certainly gives apostolic sanction to the fundamental principle of the tithe; namely, that a definite portion of our income shall be set apart for God. While, on the other hand, neither in this connection, where a mention of the law of the tithe might naturally have been expected, nor in any other place does either the Apostle Paul or any other New Testament writer intimate that the Levitical law, requiring the precise proportion of a tenth, was still in force.

"To this general statement with regard to the testimony of the New Testament on this subject, the words of the Lord to the pharisees, regarding their tithing of 'mint and anise and cummin' cannot be taken as an exception, or as proving that the law is now binding for this dispensation; for the simple reason that the present dispensation had not at that time as yet begun, and hence those to whom He spoke were still under the Levitical law, the authority of which He here properly recognizes. Accordingly, from these facts we conclude that the law, in so far as it requires the setting apart to God of a certain definite proportion of our income, is doubtless of continued and lasting obligation; but that, in so far as it requires from all alike the exact proportion of one-tenth, it is now binding on the conscience no longer."

It is not my purpose to defend the conclusions arrived at in the three paragraphs just quoted. However, while these conclusions in certain noticeable respects closely parallel those apparently held by Dr. Bethea, there is at least one definite and very important distinction to be noted. In the amount of the tithe, Dr. Bethea places it at "a tenth or more, never less"; whereas, the above writer says, "in so far as it requires from all alike the exact proportion of one-tenth, it is now binding upon the conscience no longer." In other words, under the Christian dispensation, we are to statedly and conscientiously give as the Lord has prospered us, whether this be a tenth, more than a tenth, or less than a tenth.

However, without prejudice to either of the above conclusions, it is precisely at this point that my "hobby" appears on the scene; namely, a financial system that will permit, encourage and prompt the individual to tell the church; the church, the charge; the charge, the conference, and the conference, the denomination. The system which our denomination holds to at present is exactly the opposite of this. Under this present system the denomination tells the conference; the conference, the charge; the charge, the church, and the church, the individual.

The two systems are alike only in that which they propose to do; namely, raise money and edify the church. They approach the problem, however, from exactly opposite ends of the financial and moral question. In this approach they are as far apart as east from west, north from south. One begins at the bottom, the other at the top; one is democratic, the other autocratic. Accordingly, it is difficult to understand how anyone could imply that a discussion covering such a wide range of values and involving exactly opposite approaches to so important a problem has no higher value or classification than "splitting hairs." Such a person either, on the one hand, lacks perspective, or, on the other hand, wilfully proposes to "muddy the water" to the end that the people may not see clearly and act wisely.

I have just said that our denomination is now living under one of the above systems: this is not altogether true. Rather, we face the hapless monstrosity of trying to work both systems at one and the same time. From one end of the line we hand down the budgets, on the other end we canvass the people. But alas! the two never come together. Two thousand years ago we were given the infallible advice, that "no man can serve two masters," and further, "a house divided against itself can not stand." Under this impossible, twofold system we have made the preacher the "key man" and devised the best system of "passing the buck" ever discovered within or without the church.

What we need today is a great body of leaders who will seriously approach the problem of reconstruction within the borders of our own church. We are already from two to three years behind time in this high endeavor.

H. F. Fogleman.

I AM BEING SAD NOW

Shirley Temple, the new child movie star, is a marvel in her powers of expression. Though only five years old, she stands high in Hollywood.

Shirley does things—even difficult things—quite naturally and with apparent ease. It is necessary, however, that she be prepared for the part she takes. Her lines are well committed to memory, but that is not sufficient. She must be in the mood of the character she represents, and that requires special preparation.

A while ago, so it is reported, Buster Crabbe, a playmate whom Shirley adores, "breezed" onto the "set" where she was working, for a game of "pretend." But Shirley was getting into the mood to enact a melancholy part. So she gravely said to him: "Sorry, Buster, but I can't play with you now, I'm being sad."

Most ministers realize that they must be in the appropriate mood for the sort of service in which they are to participate. This may require frequent and rapid change. The day's program may include serious study on next Sunday's sermon during the morning hours, lunch, and dressing at noon, a funeral at 2 o'clock, a marriage at 5:30 followed by a joyous wedding feast, prayer meeting at 7:30 closing with a more or less disturbing business meeting. An afternoon's calling may include cheerful Mrs. Jones with her houseful of children; Mrs. Peters with her chronic rheumatism and a bad cough racking her distressed joints; patient Mr. Stone who is old and not long for this world; Miss Dudley who wants to talk over her young man and the sort of ceremony to be used at their approaching marriage; and Mr. and Mrs. Prosperous who want advice as to the sort of college their none-too-bright son should attend.

The minister must also be able to sense the moral, intellectual, political, business, and social moods of the various ages of the world—especially the spirit of the times in which he lives. Believe it or not—and like it or not—fashions in thought and conduct and life do change. Essentials abide, but forms change. Clothing is for adornment and comfort—but materials and patterns are subject to frequent and unaccountable changes.

Civil government is of God; but the forms of organization and administration are man-made and change from time to time. Truth is of God, and is eternal; but the manner of expressing it and the points of special emphasis in presenting it depend on men and are not the same in all ages. In the nature of things there must be some form of church polity and administration; the particular form and method, being under the control of men, vary from time to time and from place to place. Nothing can be more foolish than to claim that this, or that, polity or mode of worship, or statement of faith is the one and only one.

It is decidedly better for the minister that he is not always required to do the same things, to be in the same mood, to think the same thoughts, and to be associated with the same people. The minister has many worries—and so have other folks. But as a class ministers live longer than other people. This, I think, is largely due to the variety in their experiences and activities. But any person, no matter what his occupation, can find much variety in his thinking and living, if he will. One important advantage of the shorter working day that has been gradually coming into industry is the opportunity it affords for relief from the activities that have made long days exceedingly monotonous and wearying.

WORTHY HONOR ROLL

Final Report

If any one thing can be at the same time a colossal failure and a huge success, the Worthy Honor Roll is that.

Of 30,000 Methodist Protestants in North Carolina, at least 25,000 paid no attention to the appeal; so far as they are concerned, it is a colossal failure. But a possible 5,000 people, M. P.'s and friends, did try to carry out the plan, and these turned in a total of $1,851.32 to remove indebtedness at our Children's Home, which looks very much like success, so far as they are concerned.

The names of all who enlisted as directed, with the amounts they contributed, have been put into a book which may be seen by anyone who goes to the Children's Home.

Three pastors and churches have made truly Worthy Honor Rolls; these are:

Rev. J. L. Trollinger, Brown Summit church on Haw River charge.

Rev. B. M. Williams, Efland church on Orange charge.

Rev. H. F. Surratt, Thomasville Community church.

Brown Summit and Community church had more names and contributors on the Honor Roll than they had members on the church register, and Efland had exactly as many on the Honor Roll as church register, averaging almost 25 cents per member.

Thirty-three pastors succeeded in getting some response from every church on their charge. These are: Bros. Auman, Ballard, Bates, Bell, Bethea, Broome, Brown, Carroll, Curry, Garner, Hendry, Hill, Howard, C. G. Iseley, Mabry, J. C. Madison, T. G. Madison, Medlin, Minnis, C. P. Morris, Neese, Paschal, Peeler, Pegg, Powell, Pritchard, C. E. Ridge, Smith, Stubbins, Taylor, J. H. Trollinger, Whitehead, and J. D. Williams.

Twenty-six pastors enlisted one or more churches. These are: Bros. Anderson, E. A. Bingham, P. T. Bingham, Bowman, Burgess, Braxton, Cowan, Cranford, Grant, Hethcox, A. L. Hunter, R. A. Hunter, Hutton, H. L. Iseley, Johnson, Joyner, W. M. Loy, J. D. Morris, Short, Spencer, Suits, Trogdon, Vickery, Way, D. R. Williams and O. B. Williams.

A good number are still working toward complete success.

If the entire membership of any church, or the equivalent in numbers, enrolled on the Honor Roll, and has not been given recognition above, I will gladly extend this report in next week's HERALD, if the Pastor or Children's Home Secretary will notify me in time.

As for the measure of success from a financial standpoint attained by each church, please see Dr. Dixon's report elsewhere in this issue of the HERALD, and watch his further reports until conference for additions.

Brethren of the ministry who have not joined the ranks, we challenge you to enroll your churches in this Worthy Honor Roll between now and conference!

My sincere thanks are extended to all who have co-operated so splendidly.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

OUR COLLEGE

I have been wanting to say something ever since dancing was mentioned. I was astonished that such ever had been considered at a Christian college. If we are going to allow such, why have a college? We wanted a place to educate our boys and girls where there was sweet Christian atmosphere. God wants His people to be different from the world. Titus 2:14. Is it possible that the High Point College faculty would lower God's standard of godliness? 1 Thess. 5:22. It is pitiful to read the daily papers and see names of people of all denominations spending their time playing bridge and doing lots of other things God's children would not have time to do if they were ''about their Father's business.'' No wonder Drs. Andrews and Pritchard had to write as they did in the August 30 HERALD. If ones who have money to put in so many things which do not improve their appearance or make them more intelligent, would put it in the Lord's treasury, how much happier a place this world would be for every one!

Yours for a high standard of Christian living, at home and in our schools,

MRS. J. M. LLOYD.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. LINDLEY

For some time I have thought of offering to the readers of the HERALD a few short articles on preaching. I first thought I would call the series ''Preaching With Ease,'' but upon more mature reflection I believe that may not be so fitting and so dignified as the simple caption, ''Notes on Preaching.''

There seem to be about three reasons prompting me to write the articles. For one thing, I realize the preacher of today is in a hard position. He needs all the suggestions he can get and I believe everyone who wishes to improve his preaching will welcome any helps in the work, however humble the source of the suggestions. The minister is in such keen competition he must be alert, armed, and familiar with the best technique of organizing and presenting material. People have lost patience with a dull, uninteresting sermon. They can so easily find something good on the radio, in books and magazines, etc., that it is more and more difficult to hold them.

A second reason for my writing is this: My position here at the College is such that brings me into contact with much fine material on the question of church work, and I feel somewhat constrained to pass it on to others. Naturally I have to read a good deal in connection with my teaching. And so I just want to pass on to you—especially my former students—some of the fine hints I happen to gather from time to time.

Third, I venture upon this writing because I know there is what we might call a secret to preaching. There are effective and ineffective ways of doing anything, and preaching is no exception. It is not the content of the sermon alone that marks it a success. It may have excellent material in it and still be ineffective. On the other hand, a message may be rather ordinary from the standpoint of thought content, yet produce the desired effect.

Now, if Dr. McCulloch will allow me a little space in our paper, I hope to discuss very briefly a few vital points as I see them along this line. I shall be honored if you read and follow them, and I shall be pleased if you write me any particular questions that may call for discussion in this column.

My first topic, which may appear next week, will be ''A Definite Aim for Each Sermon.''

A DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST

During the public ministry is Jesus Christ upon the earth, the following description of His person was sent by Publius Lentulus, President of Judæa, to the Senate of Rome. It is from an ancient manuscript:

''There lives a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ, in Judæa. The barbarians esteem Him as a prophet, but His own followers adore Him as the immediate offspring of the immortal God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtue as to call the dead from their graves, and to heal every kind of disease with a word or a touch. This Person is tall and elegantly shaped; His aspect amiable and reverent; His hair flows into those beautiful shades which no united color can match, falling into graceful curces below His ears, agreeably couching upon His shoulders, and parting on His head like the head of a Nazarite. His forehead is smooth and large; His cheeks without either spot, save that of a lovely red; His nose is smooth and formed with exquisite symmetry; His beard is thick and of a color suitable to the hair of His head, reaching a little below the chin, and parted in the middle like a fork. He rebukes with majesty, commands with mildness, and invites with the most tender and persuasive language; His whole address, in deed or word being elegantly graceful and characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has ever seen Him laugh, but many have seen Him weep, and so persuasive are His tears that the multitude cannot withhold theirs from joining in sympathy with His. His is very temperate, modest, and wise, and in short, whatever this phenomenon may turn out in the end, He seems at present from His excellent bearing and Divine perfection, in every way surpassing the children of men.''—The Sword and the Trowel.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

These Charges Should Pay A. C. Expenses in September

Possible Honor Rolls

Those charges or churches which pay pastor in full, pay World Service in full, pay all items in A. C. Budget in full, pay HERALD subsidy and raise their quota of subscriptions to the HERALD, will be placed on Honor Roll A Plus.

Those charges and churches which pay the amount of World Service accepted by first quarterly conference, pay pastor's salary, all annual conference claims, and HERALD subsidy in full will be placed on Honor Roll A.

All churches which pay any claim in full will be starred in the Conference Journal, showing the claim paid.

We want to publish the first list of charges in the first issue of the HERALD in October. There are charges very close to Honor Roll A Plus now, and we are just itching to give them recognition as stated above.

The Herald Subsidy

A casual count of the charges which have not paid this amount runs into fifty, according to the last week's HERALD. These can all be paid without hurting any other claim or even hurting the financial standing of any member of our church or Sunday school.

We are appealing to the Superintendents of the Sunday schools who read this to take up this matter next Sunday and raise the amount. If your church has fewer than 100 members, you raise $2.50; if more than 100 but not over 200, you raise $5.00, etc. See HERALD of week before last for full set-up.

And now, Brother Pastor, your superintendent may not see this and may not know anything about it. I heard of a superintendent who takes the paper but refuses to read it; he passes it on. Yours may do that. So we are appealing to you to take this matter direct to your Sunday schools and raise the money then and there. We owe it to the printers to do this, but more than that, we owe it to ourselves to have a share in supporting an agency which makes it possible for our annual conference to take first rank among the conferences of the denomination. Have a share by using your hands in this splendid work.

Conference Treasurer's Report for Third Quarter

	Assessed	Paid
Annual Conference Expenses for year	$3,500	$1,532
Church Extension	2,000	719
Superannuates	2,500	552
Annual Conference Debt	2,000	222
Paid on World Service		1,554

Every pastor please see that all money collected for any claim be sent in at once. We hope to have another report the middle of October.

Birthday Offerings Continue to Come

We are hopeful that these offerings will amount to $2,000 at least, and we are hopeful that some churches will continue this method until all the people shall have a chance to participate in this effort to pay off the debt for current expenses at the Home.

Greensboro Ministerial Association

We met with this association last Monday. There was a goodly number present and a very live participation in the reports showing what the churches are doing. It was altogether a splendid showing that these pastors made for their churches. We think such meetings can be quite profitable. The session closed with a pleasing experience out at one of the city lakes, where we ate our meal as brethren and with good will.

Saxapahaw Charge, Rev. W. M. Loy, Pastor

I had planned to visit three churches on this charge, Orange Chapel, Concord, and Salem. The weather conditions were rather unfavorable for the morning. We had no service at Orange Chapel. There was a fairly good attendance at Concord in the afternoon. The church here has had some repairs made upon it of recent months. It has been underpinned and new roof has been put on; other improvements are to be made soon, I understand. At Salem there was a splendid group of new people, members of the Christian Endeavor society. We enjoyed speaking to them.

This is Brother Loy's second year on this work, and he appears to be getting along smoothly with his members. He is trying to raise all conference claims for the year; the salary for this year is $200 more than was paid last year; we hope it will be paid in full.

Brother Loy has built him a home and had just moved into it. He is not planning to locate or retire from the ministry, but is taking advantage of the present low level of building to secure a home for himself and family.

We are hoping to see the churches on this charge take their places on the Annual Conference Honor Roll. They can do it. Saxapahaw charge has yet to reach the high level of its achievements. Every church could pay the claims assessed it and not hurt those who do it. The trouble we believe to be entirely psychic. Our best wishes go to them.

Fourth Quarterly Conferences

Why Not charge, October 20, at 11 a.m.

BILLY BOY

Note: I have found four versions of the old and ever popular folk song, "Billy Boy." They vary considerably. I am giving here the essential material contained in all these versions—inserting next to the last stanza concerning her weight, in order to complete the picture. I have made some verbal changes, and rearranged order of the sanzas, both changes being in the interest of clarity and climax. This should always be an interesting and attractive folk song for children; and older people, of a commendably youthful spirit, will enjoy its quaint lines and interesting situations. The tune may be found in the memories of many persons.

Luther K. Long.

Where have you been, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
O where have you been, Charming Billy?
I have been to see my wife,
She's the darling of my life:
She's a young thing, and cannot leave her mother.

Did she invite you in, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Did she invite you in, Charming Billy?
Yes, she did invite me in,
With a dimple in her chin:
She's a young thing, too young to leave her mother.

Did she offer you a chair, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Did she offer you a chair, Charming Billy?
Yes, she did offer me a chair,
With two wrinkles in her hair:
She's a young thing, and cannot leave her mother.

Did she sit close to you, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Did she sit close to you, Charming Billy?
Yes, she sat close to me,
Close as the bark upon a tree:
She's a young thing, too young to leave her mother.

Can she make a cherry pie, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Can she make a cherry pie, Charming Billy?
She can make a cherry pie,
Quick as a cat can wink its eye:

Can she make a feather bed, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Can she make a feather bed, Charming Billy?
She can make a feather bed,
And put the pillows at the head:

Can she make a pair of breeches, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Can she make a pair of breeches, Charming Billy?
She can make a pair of breeches
Fast as you can count the stitches:
She's a young thing, and cannot leave her mother.

Can she milk a cow, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
O can she milk a cow, Charming Billy?
Yes, she can milk a cow
When her mother shows her how:
She's a young thing, too young to leave her mother.

Is she fit to be your wife, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
Is she fit to be your wife, Charming Billy?
She's as fitted for my wife
As my pocket for my knife:
She's a young thing, and cannot leave her mother.

How tall is she, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
O how tall is she, Charming Billy?
She's as tall as any pine,
And as straight as a pumpkin vine:
She's a young thing, too young to leave her mother.

How much does she weigh, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
How much does she weigh, Charming Billy?
She weighs four hundred pound,
And she's big as a barrel around:
She's a young thing, and cannot leave her mother.

How old is she, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?
O how old is she, Charming Billy?
Two times six, two times seven,
Two times forty and eleven:
She's a young thing, too young to leave her mother.

A WORKER'S PRAYER

Deuteronomy 7:1

Preserve me, O God,
From the pride of the Amorite.
From the envy of the Hittite.
From the wrath of the Perizzite.
From the gluttony of the Girgashite.
From the wantonness of the Hivite.
From the covetousness of the Canaanite and the lukewarmness of the Jebusite.
And grant me in their stead,
Humility and charity.
Patience and temperance.
Chastity and contentedness,
With spiritual zeal.

OUR STORY PAGE

DOES NO ONE CARE?

The air was cold with a thick mist from the sea, while the glow of the fires in the shipyards, reflected on the low hanging clouds, cast a lurid light through the mist which struggled with the glow of street lamps flickering in the gale that was blowing in from the dark sea.

"Good night, Fred!"

"Good night!"

So the two men parted as they passed from the dock gates at the end of another day's work.

It was a wild night and the two men turned each his own way to find pleasure now that the work of the day was over.

Tom Roaden's mind was filled with thoughts of the thrilling gatherings in the Town Hall, where a mission was being carried on that seemed to be stirring the town to its depths.

The hymn sung on the previous night had been ringing in his mind all day, and the burning words of the speaker had echoed and re-echoed in his ears as he bent to his task and went to and from the work. He was impatient to be back in the hall amid the enthusiasm of the crowds, and to feel again the power of the speaker's message.

As he walked he turned to look after his friend and saw him pass into the open door of a saloon. It was Fred's place of pleasure for the evening.

"Poor fellow!" murmured Roaden to himself. If he only knew the joy of the Lord and what it is to be a follower of Christ he would never want to go in there again!"

A little later Roaden was in the hall. Again the place was crowded, and the volume of sounds, as a thousand voices joined in the gospel hymns, floated out into the stormy night and drowned the wild moaning of the wind.

The message of the evening was a call to work for our fellow men—a summons to try to save the lost and to win others to Jesus Christ.

As Roaden listened he saw before him the picture of his friend Fred entering the public house, and he could not escape the thought that he must do something to save him from the ruin towards which he was hastening.

Why had he not invited him to the meeting that night? He felt uneasy. A sense of neglected duty lay as a burden upon his conscience, and, when the speaker appealed for all to rise who would undertake to speak to some one definitely on the morrow about their spiritual life, Roaden rose at once and made the promise.

On the following day he met his friend on the way to work and they walked together to the gates; but somehow, all the way Roaden felt that he could not say what he intended. He was afraid he would be laughed at, or have questions put to him which he could not answer, and he was silent.

They separated at the gates, going to their respective places of labor, and Roaden worked that morning with the voice of conscience accusing him of cowardice and fear.

Dinner hour came and the two men met once more and sat together at their meal. Roaden watched his companion and thought he was ill at ease; some trouble seemed to be weighing heavily upon him. This was his opportunity to speak; but again it was as though a hand were laid upon his mouth—the hand of fear—and he could only speak of the work and the passing events of the day.

So the dinner hour passed and with it another opportunity.

They had not long resumed work when a great cry was raised, and Roaden, rushing to the spot, was just in time to see that a heavy crane had fallen on a group of workmen. With a terrific crash it had hurled itself to the ground, killing some and injuring others who coul not escape in time.

It was among those men that Fred Barton worked, and as Roaden ran forward, he prayed God would give him one more chance of speaking to his friend, although all the time a voice was sounding in his ears, "Too late!"

It was not, however, too late, for his prayer was answered. Barton had a miraculous escape and was only slightly injured. He was unable, however, to continue his work, and was therefore conveyed to his home in a cab.

That evening instead of going to the crowded mission hall, Roaden sat with his friend, taking a chair beside the bedside and looking for an opportunity to speak of the deep things of life.

The sufferer awoke from a brief sleep and, seeing Roaden at his bedside, put out his hand, and said, somewhat faintly:

"It's good of you to come, old fellow. What about your meeting at the hall?"

"How did you know I'd been there?" he asked.

"I knew it by the way you've been humming those tunes all day long."

"Why don't you go, Fred?" said Roaden.

"Nobody asked me too," he replied. "And you know I'm not used to that sort of thing.

"Fred, why don't you make a new start in life and give up drink and all that sort of thing, and accept the Lord Jesus as your Savior?"

The other looked at him silently for a moment and tears rose to his eyes as he answered:

"No one has ever asked me that before, Mate. I've often worried myself about it and no one seemed to care or trouble about me; so I tried to forget it."

"Well, I've wanted to speak to you for a long time, Fred, but I kept putting it off because I didn't know just how you would take it."

"It's a wonder you're not too late!" said the sufferer. "When I saw that crane falling and I knew I could not get out of the way I felt that my last chance had gone and, in less time than it takes to tell you, I wondered what lay before me and how I could face death and—an—you know what I mean."

"You wouldn't be afraid if you had taken Jesus Christ to be your Savior, Fred."

"Tell me what it means," the other replied.

"Well, it just means that we have all sinned and it's only by accepting Christ at our Savior that we can be pardoned."

"It sounds easy, but what becomes of all the wrongs I've done? I tell you, Mate, I've done some terrible things in my time and I don't know that I dare ask for them to be forgiven. I'd suffer for them if it would do any good, but to get rid of my sin for nothing seems too easy."

"That's just where the love of God comes in," said Roaden. "He has borne the burden and paid the price and we are forgiven if we will accept Christ as our Savior."

"I can't think of that, Mate. I'll have to suffer for it yet, and to tell you the truth I'm afraid of what it means. I don't see that God is going to forgive so easily as that."

"Fred, if your little girl had disobeyed and had run away and broken your heart, and if she came back on such a night as this in the rain and the storm and stood crying at the door for you to let her in and asking you to forgive her, what do you think you would do?"

"Why, I should just throw my arms around her — ah! I see it now!"

"Yes, Fred, that's just it. God loves us. We don't know how much; but 'God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life'. That's all I've got to say about it, and if we forgive those we love, even when they break our hearts, God will forgive us if we come to Him and ask."

A wonderful light came into the face of the injured man as he said:

"Tom, you've made it so plain that I can see it all. I never knew before that God loved like that. Tom, I'll take it now. I'll take Him as my Savior. I feel as if the burden had gone already, and when I get out again, I'll do my best to let others know about it. I believe there are hundreds who would do it, if only some one would tell them how."

When Fred Barton was able to be at the works again, one thought seemed to rule his life. It was that God loved. He had never realized what it meant before, and it seemed so wonderful that he told every one the secret that had so changed his life.

Gradually a great change came over the men at the yards. One after another felt that God loved and cared for them. They gave up their swearing, and forgot the saloon, and into their hearts and lives and into their work there came a happiness they had never known before.

In this busy world there are thousands of men and women crushed by the burden of their daily toil, broken by misfortune, hardened by the cruelty of others, sinking deeper and deeper into sin, and all because they think that no one cares.

Though there be cruelty and unkindness among men, there is always love in Heaven. God loves, even though we have gone far astray. He loves, He waits to pardon. It was for those who have wandered far from the truth that Jesus came to suffer and die. On the Cross He bore the burden of our sins, and He has said: "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."—American Messenger.

Calvin tells us that every man should be familiar with at least three chapters of the Bible: the 3rd chapter of Genesis, to see how man fell; the 3rd chapter of the Epistle to the Romans to see the extent of the disaster, and the 3rd chapter of the Gospel according to John, to see how God lifted him out and put his feet on the rock again.—*W. ABSTAINERS HAVE THE BEST OF IT

A full-page advertisement in the Handbook of the recent Trades Exhibition in Birmingham, England, shows the activity of temperance sentiment in the British Isles. It says:

"Other things being equal:

"1. Abstainers have on the average a longer expectation of life.

"2. Insurance companies which separate the risks of abstainers and non-abstainers either give lower premiums to abstainers, or the bonuses paid are bigger.

"3. Abstainers have a greater chance of recovery from serious illness, or after an operation.

"4. Abstinence strengthens the body's resistance to disease.

"5. By avoiding the use of alcoholic beverages, abstainers promote personal efficiency both in work and play.

"6. The abstaining motorist is less liable to cause injury to himself or others.

"7. The abstainer shows the way to national stability and prosperity by avoiding a wasteful luxury."—Selected.

TRAVEL ON

Faithful servant of the Lord,
Travel on!
Ever trusting in His Word,
Travel on!
Though the path be rough and steep,
He your soul will safely keep,
Travel on!

What though giants you may meet,
Travel on!
In your God your strength's complete,
Travel on!
He is mighty, He will win
In every conflict over sin,
Travel on!

There is strength for each new task,

JUST "THINGS"

Some one asked John Wanamaker: "How do you get time to run a Sunday school with four thousand scholars, in addition to the business of your stores, your work as Postmaster-General, and other obligations?" Instantly Mr. Wanamaker replied: "Why, the Sunday school is my business! All other things are just things. Forty-five years ago I decided that God's promise was sure: 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.' Woman's Missionary Department

A CHALLENGE FROM INDIA

To the President, Secretary, Members and other responsible office-bearers of the Methodist Protestant Church, America:

We, the residents of villages—Morane, Wara, Kundane, Aklad and Morane Taluka-Dhulia, West Kandesh, India, beg to lay before you the following application for your kind and favorable consideration.

As fire destroys the forest, want of true religious guidance is causing a great damage to us Indians. We need protection from the dogmatic and puritanic tendencies and practices, drunkenness, gambling, and idolism. The people are divided among themselves by castes and creeds. Under these evil circumstances, the want of a hard and sincere worker is keenly felt. The services of a bold and tolerant religious worker are badly needed in the mountainous tracts and villages of this country.

Rev. J. F. Minnis, who was deputized to do this work, possessed all the above qualities. He did his duty very sincerely and at a great sacrifice. We are thankful to him and to you for this. Mere words cannot adequately bestow our praise on him. So sincere and devoted were his services to the cause of our religious and moral uplift.

We have just begun our journey towards religious salvation, but a bolt from the blue has come on us. Rev. J. F. Minnis has been called back for retrenchment and want of funds. This has given us so terrible a shock that we have become quite hopeless about our religious future. Under these circumstances it is our humble request to retain and spare the services of Rev. J. F. Minnis for our sake, no matter what trouble and economy you will have to undergo.

In closing we earnestly request you to grant our humble prayer to spare the services of Rev. J. F. Minnis for the spread of true Christian religion among us and in India.

We beg to remain,

Your most obedient servants,

May 20, 1934.

Three meetings were held in May, 1934, by the villagers of Aklad-Morane, Morane and Kundane—villages in West Khandesh District, India. In each meeting a resolution to the following effect was passed unanimously:

"We learn with regret that Rev. J. F. Minnis has been called back to America. He had been a good religious worker in our district. We request the managers of the Methodist Protestant Church, America, to cancel his transfer and to retain his religious services for our district."

This commission has just been received from India and was signed by more than 80 native Indians of the villages within our territory.

In the first place, the Board of Missions did not recall Brother Minnis. On the contrary, we were trying to make arrangements to continue him on the field when the India Mission requested that he be brought home, for financial reasons, of course. I believe the Board of Missions has not made any greater mistake in the past few years than not continuing the services of Brother Minnis in the evangelistic work in India. At that time he was doing the greatest piece of missionary work of his life and was having phenomenal responses to the invitation of the Gospel.

We wish some way could be provided to return Brother Minnis to India without interfering with the regular contributions toward our missionary budget, which is already far too small. Kind friends of the Methodist Protestant Church, here is a rare opportunity for those who are financially able to do something of a remarkable character for the Kingdom's interest. Will not some one or more come forward and furnish the money promptly that Brother Minnis may return to India? The transportation expenses will about equal one year's salary. This with the salary for the first year would be about $3,500; afterwards half that amount per year. This is not a large amount for friends of our church to furnish when compared to this great missionary enterprise.

G. W. HADDAWAY.

Dear Methodist Protestants:

Those who read the foregoing article will see that an urgent appeal comes from India for the return to India of Rev. and Mrs. Minnis. Dr. Haddaway also adds to the article, and both appeared in the Methodist Protestant Recorder last week. The call from natives for the return of the Minnis family is a distinct compliment, to the family and their very splendid work. The information is given in order that our people in North Carolina know the real situation, for much depends on N. C. Methodist Protestants and their wishes as to the return of the Minnis' to India. Rev. Minnis has been to see me regarding this matter and assures me that he is willing to be guided by the will of the Master, whom he is serving, and that wherever there is the best field for him and his family to serve. This will be his pleasure. Please write Mrs. C. W. Bates, Carolina Avenue, Winston-Salem, who previously served as secretary of the Minnis fund, expressing your feelings concerning Mr. and Mrs. Minnis returning to India.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY MEETING

The Twelfth District Missionary meeting will be held on Sunday, September 30, at Oak Grove church, Cleveland Charge. The program is being prepared by Mrs. B. L. Heavener, district chairman, and Rev. R. S. Troxler, pastor of the church. Services will begin at 11 o'clock and continue over in the afternoon, with lunch on the grounds.

Mrs. H. C. Nicholson and one or two other officials of the North Carolina Branch have been given places on the program. A good meeting is expected and all missionary workers of the district are invited to be present.

MRS. B. L. HEAVENER, Chmn.,
MRS. H. F. FOGLEMAN, Sec'y.

MRS. HAMMER EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

I take this opportunity of expressing gratitude to the many minister, Auxiliaries, individually and collectively, who have remembered me in many ways during my illness following the accident sustained in a fall on our church steps in Asheboro August 12. A trip to Duke Hospital today results in the removal of one cast, which has been on for a month, and another for another month, during which time may I urge that each Auxiliary be unusually active in the fall work, majoring on the Thank-Offering first. Mrs. Vance, of High Point, secretary of Thank-Offering, made announcement last week as to the observance and literature.

With cordial good wishes and wishing for the North Carolina Branch the most successful year in its history, I am,

Very truly,

MRS. W. C. HAMMER,
President N. C. Branch Women's Work.

DISTRICT RALLY

District Rally will be held at Pleasant Grove church the fifth Sunday afternoon, September 30th, 2:30 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, will conduct brief devotions. Dr. J. D. Williams will give an address on "Prayer As Essential to Successful Christian Living." Rev. T. G. Madison will speak on the subject, "The Joash Day." Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will also bring a message.

Will the pastors of the following charges please take notice and arrange to attend and bring a delegation from each church with them:

Guilford; High Point, English Street, First, and Welch Memorial; North Davidson; Pleasant Grove; and Thomasville, Community, First and West End.

H. FREO SURRATT, Dist. Chmn.

NINTH DISTRICT

The fourth and last district rally for this district will be held in Bethel church, Mocksville Charge, on the fifth Sunday, September 30th, commencing at 11:20 a. m.

The Conference pageant arranged by President Andrews, setting forth the Annual Conference interests, will be given as the forenoon program.

The afternoon period will be given to the discussions of Auxiliary work. Mrs. Koontz, chairman, of women's work in the district will have charge.

Everybody bring a basket for picnic dinner.

T. M. JOHNSON, Chmn.

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Four generations of the Richardson family gathered at the home of A. J. Richardson to celebrate his 80th anniversary on Sunday, September 9. Mr. Richardson has the honor of being one of the oldest members of Center church.

The big feature of the day was the picnic dinner spread on the lawn by the 12 families present, including more than 50 children, grandchildren and relatives of Mr. Richardson.

The committee's report shows that Brown Summit church on Haw River, Efland on Orange, Community Church, Thomasville, and Weaverville on Weaverville are entitled to one of the pictures. Also Kernersville church on Kernersville. The pastor will please notify the last one. Also, if any church in the Conference is entitled to a picture according to the conditions, please let us know. And if any church has almost qualified, and will continue to work until you have enrolled a number of people equal to your church membership, who will pay a penny per year for their ages, please go ahead and when you have reached the goal we shall be glad to give the picture.

This is the longest report we have ever made at one time, so we will just say a hearty THANK YOU to everybody who helped, and ring off.

Will report produce next week. If there are mistakes please help us to correct them. Thank you and God bless you.

Yours in His service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

SPECIAL FOR THIS WEEK

Clothing for Boys

The Baraca class, Winston-Salem, and the Baraca class, Denton, have each promised to send us $10.00 to clothe a boy this fall.

Clothing is higher than last fall, and so are shoes, so it is going to take an average of $10.00 per boy this time.

What individual, or group of individuals, will join these two fine Baraca classes?

Please me hear soon. Thank you.

Faithfully yours,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

—Quite a goodly number of people assembled at High Point last week for the annual Home-Coming, at the Children's Home. Among the delegations travelling, perhaps, the greatest distance were those from Spring Church Charge and those fromRockingham.

—Rev. D. I. Garner, who was kept from his pulpit on account of illness, was able to be at the ministers' meeting Monday morning.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Salem, Saxapahaw Charge.—Due to neglect of the reporter you have not seen a report from Salem in quite a while. But we have not folded our hands and sat down on the stool of do-nothing.

Pastor Loy filled his regular appointment Sunday. He gave us a splendid message on the subject, "What Is Your Life?" It seems to me this is a wonderful thing to think about and one which deserves much attention, for each person helps to make someone else better or worse.

Our revival began the second Sunday in August and continued for a wtek. Brother Mabry was our pulpit help for the week. We enjoyed his sermons very much and feel that the meeting was a great success. Several were converted and united with our church. Am sorry I am unable to state the exact number. We are proud to have these new members join our family and may we be real brothers and sisters to them. We were glad to have Brother Mabry's wife and son with us for most of the services.

We have a committee of four working trying to collect a penny for each year of age from each member of our church for the Children's Home. The committee is real busy and we trust they will collect the full amount within the next few days.

We are proud to tell you we have a well at our church and we have it because the members got thirsty enough to become so interested as to want to use the pick, and all the other necessary tools to dig one. This has been needed for years, but we never did get down to what we might call business until a few weeks ago.

Just recently we have added more space to our cemetery.

A short time ago the C. E. Society had a lawn party. The proceeds amounted to $10.25, which will go to improvements of the church.

Do we realize it is just a few months until Conference? Well, if we haven't told our pocketbooks about it, let's do it right away and pay our assessment in full.

If you are not taking the Herald, the Herald Committee will be glad to take your subscription at any time.

Halifax Charge.—We have had our revivals at Eden, Bethesda, Ringwood and Hollister. We feel that much good has been accomplished at each of these churches. Rev. W. M. Loy did the preaching at Eden, Rev. J. L. Trollinger at Bethesda, Rev. C. G. Isley at Hollister and the pastor did the preaching at Ringwood. Each of these assisting ministers did splendid preaching which was enjoyed by all. As a result of these meetings, there were about 30 conversions and reclamations, and 12 new members added to the charge. Because of sickness we had to call off the meeting at Harmony. Rev. D. I. Garner of Greensboro, was secured as help there. We fear at present that conditions are going to make it unwise to hold a meeting there this year. Our meeting begins at Union next Sunday, September 23, with Rev. E. O. Peeler of Enfield, doing the preaching.

Duing the meeting at Hollister the pastor and family received a very nice pounding. This was done in a very clever manner, and brought a pleasant surprise to the recipients. The pounding was large and almost completely furnished the parsonage pantry for some time. We apppreciate this kindness very much and are thankful for the privilege of serving such splendid people.

We are glad to report that our work is progressing as well as could be expected under present conditions. At our third quarterly conference we were encouraged by the reports given by officials of the different churches. We are expecting to make a fair report to the Annual Conference this fall on all the conference claims. Our people are progressive, but have been greatly handicapped by financial conditions over which they have no control. Conditions have improved and we are going to try to do more for the cause of the church.

Miss Winnie Bert was declared elected delegate to the Annual Conference recently by our third quarterly conference. We are sure she will well represent Halifax Charge, and the interest of our work.

We are missing very much Mrs. E. G. Glenn, "Miss Lizzie," who has left Brinkleyville to spend the winter in Greensboro. We shall anxiously await for her return home next spring. Her home is just across the road from the parsonage, and she is a great friend and help to her pastor and family. But we hope that her stay in Greensboro will be a pleasant one.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, of Greensboro, were recent visitors to our section. Their visits were enjoyed and appreciated by all the homes in which they went. They are held in high esteem by the people of Halifax charge. We hope they will visit us again in the near future.

We regret to report that Mrs. Frank Avent, and Mr. Alfred Cooper and entire family, all of Harmony church have been sick for some time. Mrs. Avent has been very ill. Mrs. E. V. Neville, of Ringwood is also sick. Our prayer is that God will give back to them normal health. O. C. LOY.

* * *

Orange Charge.—September 3-11 was spent in Creswell and other places in Eastern N. C. I preached 10 times in a revival meeting at our church in Creswell. It was a pleasure to renew old friendships and form new ones. Enjoyed very much preaching to these people. Two fine young people were converted and joined our church.

The third quarterly conference was held at Rehoboth church Sunday afternoon, September 10. Pastor's report and reports from the Creswell Auxiliary contained many encouraging items. The pastor reported Creswell church paid up to date on pastor's salary. Pastor and Mrs. Bingham seem to be happy in the work. The people seem to be co-operating with them. It appears to me there is a future for this charge.

Mrs. Williams accompanied me. We spent all our nights with the Binghams at the parsonage. The people furnished us a number of meals. We are thankful to all for their many acts of kindness.

While on our trip we visited Bath, the oldest town in North Carolina; also Edenton, Nag's Head, Roanoke Island, and other places of interest.

We enjoyed our trip and the opportunity of working with Bro. Bingham and his people very much. B. M. WILLIAMS.

* * *

Friendship Station.—The special meeting started the first Sunday in August and closed the following Sunday night. Rev. E. A. Bingham, the pulpit help, was with us for the first service and remained until the close. Bro. Bingham is an earnest, consecrated, faithful worker and a good preacher. The attendance was good, and the visible results were about 15 reclamations and conversions and two joined the church. Most of the people in this immediate section are members of some church.

We are hoping, praying and working to have a creditable report at Conference. God bless every pastor and church.

A. D. SHELTON.

Anderson-Yarborough—Our revival services on Anderson-Yarborough charges have been held at all the churches. We began at Harmony the fourth Sunday in July. True to its name, here is as fine a spirit of harmony among the members and other churches as I have yet seen. The pastor did the preaching and had full co-operation and the help of all Christians in the community. We had a good meeting, with 20 professions and reclamations. This is a small band, but loyal Methodist Protestants.

We next came to Fairview the fifth Sunday and ran eight days. This is a good church with a host of fine youths, who throw themselves faithfully into the organizations of the church. Here we had 60 professions and reclamations. Rev. J. D. Cranford did the preaching and did it well. His sermons were inspiring, instructive, forceful and convincing, sound in doctrine and fearlessly presented. His efforts were appreciated and he made a host of friends.

The second Sunday in August witnessed our beginning at Liberty Hill. Here we have a good church and as good a band of young workers as I know in any rural church. We had a good meeting here also. Not a large number of professions, due to the fact that the church here looks after its youth and leads them into the church as fast as they became mature enough. If all churches would look after their children and young converts as well as Liberty Hill there would be less backsliding and moral shipwreck among our youth today. The church was revived and seven were converted. At the close of the meeting the pastor was remembered with a splendid pounding, which was greatly appreciated by him and his family. Also, they are working splendidly in answer to the call of Mrs. R. M. Andrews for Birthday Offerings for the Children's Home. They reported $20 to be sent in last Sunday. Isn't that fine? I should say!

Our last meeting was at Yarborough's Chapel. The work at this church has been woefully discouraged. But the interest and attendance was good throughout. They say it was the best in several years. Here is a loyal number of Methodist Protestants, not large, but we are looking forward to the day when she will be in prosperity again. They are loyal to their pastor, and their attitude toward the future is encouraging. This was once the leading church in the community, and may the day soon come when it will be such again. Some of the best preachers in the North Carolina Conference have been listed among their pastors.

The isolation of these charges from the center of Conference activities is a major drawback to the prosperity of this work. If Anderson charge was located up around High Point or closer in somewhere, with her two churches, well kept, with beauty smiling around them, there would be a "scramble" among pastors for an assignment from Conference to them. You ought to see the fine "friers" walking about our door, and as fast as we devour them the supply is replenished; and that good old country ham that graces our table, with many other good things constantly coming in. May the Lord bless them.

ROBERT SHORT.

Rockingham.—Rockingham is still on the map. We were glad to have President Andrews with us at Melton's Grove and Rockingham the first Sunday in September. Hope he can visit Bethesda later in the year.

We are expecting to begin our revival here at Rockingham next Sunday night. Bro. E. A. Bingham is expected to be here Monday and he will do the preaching after Sunday.

Bro. Earl Cook did the preaching at Bethesda and we did the preaching at Melton's Grove.

Attending the Home-Coming of the Children's Home last week from Rockingham were Ivens Dunn, W. F. Hudson, Luther Bevelie, J. T. Maness, Charlie Macon and a few others. The churches on the charge are expecting to raise 100 jars of fruit each for the Children's Home.

JAMES H. TROLLINGER.

Kannapolis Church.—The pastor, Rev. C. P. Morris, used for his subject "What Doth the Lord Require of Thee?" at the morning hour Sunday, his text being found in Micah 6:8. At this service the congregation voted to release Mr. Morris that he might enter Westminster Theological Seminary to further prepare himself for the ministry. A committee composed of Mr. M. W. Henderson, Mrs. Joe Dwiggins and Mr. M. E. Marlowe, was appointed to act with the pastor as pulpit supply committee.

Mr. Morris has made many friends in Kannapolis and the surrounding community who regret to see him leave. Since coming to this church nearly two years ago Mr. Morris has seen the work go forward in a wonderful way. The membership has more than doubled, the Sunday school has outgrown its present quarters, a Woman's Auxiliary has been organized, the Layman's Fellowship, a Tithers' League, and all organizations are working.

The services next Sunday will be the last Mr. Morris will hold under the present pastorate. At the morning hour he will preach, and at the evening hour a candlelight communion service will be held.

The Laymen's Fellowship will hold its regular meeting on next Saturday night. Mr. Chester Smith, of the local Y. M. C. A., will be the guest speaker.

The Birthday Offering from Kannapolis church to the Children's Home amounted to $29.25, according to Mrs. Carrie Braswell, secretary for our church.

Miss Laura Braswell is leaving this week for Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., where she will enter training.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ramseur were held in our church on last Thursday a week ago, and were in charge of Mr. Morris, assisted by Rev. J. L. Love, a former pastor. The church deeply sympathizes with the bereaved ones.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Union Chapel, Granville.—Mr. Spencer has been bringing us some unusually fine messages this summer. As a whole they have been very inspiring. His scripture last Sunday was taken from the third chapter of the Gospel of St. John, verses 1-17, while the text was from the 14th verse.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary met in its regular August meeting with Mrs. Lonzie Woodlief. A goodly number were present and the collection taken amounted to $26.00, coming from different projects. The September meeting will be held with the writer.

Our young people's mission work is also doing its part to carry on, not so much financially, but spiritually and socially. The most recent social function was a lawn party given on Mrs. Vernon Edwards' spacious lawn. Every girl and boy seemed to enjoy it.

The Birthday money for the Children's Home amounted to around $50.00. We had hoped for 100 per cent.

Some of our good ladies have completed the school wardrobe for one of the orphan girls and the box has been sent in, which was supposed to arrive at the Home on September 13, the Home-Coming day there.

Our Ladies' Auxiliary served dinner in Henderson last Tuesday, September 11, on tobacco market opening day. Around 75 people were served, bringing in about $25.00 to go toward paying the budget.

MRS. E. S. HUFF, Reporter.

Connelly Springs.—Our work is progressing nicely. There has been a general increase in interest and attendance since spring. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us in our recent revivals; it has been inspiring and strengthening to our faith to experience such wonderful results in a gracious ingathering of souls from our feeble efforts. The power of the Spirit was evident from the beginning. Some of the toughest characters in the community were gloriously saved and joined the church. Most all the conversions were adults with few children. I baptized several gray-haired people who were converted. Old members at Shady Grove say it was the best in 30 or 40 years. At Shiloh many say it was the best in their recollection; others in 60 years.

There have been over 100 conversions and reclamations—43 at Shady Grove and 60-odd at Shiloh. We have received 44 members, and expect to receive eight or ten more, giving us over 50 total.

As a result of the revival with other developments, the work has been strengthened 100 per cent. Many inactive members have been restored to active relationship. Many have received special blessing that has increased their faith and zeal for the Kingdom.

In all that has been accomplished we bow in humble gratitude to Him who performed it, realizing that I was used only as a weak instrument in His hands. To Him be the honor, glory and praise.

We desire the prayers of our friends.

J. L. LOVE, Pastor.

Clark's Chapel.—It has been some time since we have reported. The first six months of this year we seem to be greatly handicapped. Lots of sickness and also our Sunday school superintedent moved away, and it was some time before we were able to get another. We elected Mrs. H. R. Woodall as superintendent and sent for her. So the work is just doing fine at present, everything considered.

Services Sunday were good all the way through. Attendance and interest are both good. At the 11 o'clock service Bro. Cowan preached a most beautiful sermon, using as his subject, "Watching At the Cross," after which he administered the Lord's Supper.

We are indeed glad to have Mrs. Cowan home again after her most serious operation. Her condition is much improved. Plans were made Sunday to give Pastor and Mrs. Cowan a pounding on Tuesday evening.

Kannapolis.—Most of us like surprises, even though sometimes they prove quite embarrassing. Some months ago when I was surprised with a birthday supper I made the assertion that the people of Kannapolis would never pull another surprise on me. My threat fell through, however, when on last Saturday night, upon returning from our stewards' meeting, I found a host of people gathered in the parsonage and a table heaped up with nice gifts, and all this in the midst of a heavy down-pour of rain. Upon examination I found the packages to contain clothing articles so much needed by one entering school. There were 5 shirts, 4 pillow cases, 13 pair of hose, 2 sheets, 7 wash cloths, 3 undershirts, 3 pair of shorts, 17 handkerchiefs, 4 packages of razor blades, 1 bottle of face lotion, and 3 one-dollar bills. I deeply appreciate this splendid shower, and am bound to confess that I love surprises like this.

Sunday, September 23, will be my last day with these good people before leaving for Westminster Theological Seminary. It is with a great deal of regret and somewhat of a heavy heart that I take my leave from this people whom I have learned to love. I feel toward these people somewhat the same way Ruth felt toward Naomi when she said, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." And still of necessity I must go on to school to better prepare myself for the Lord's service. As I go, however, I trust that the ties of love and friendship thus formed may ever remain.

The Lord has wonderfully blessed us during our stay here. One huundred and five have been added to the church roll, two hundred have professed faith in Jesus Christ, forty-eight have been baptized, $300.00 has been raised on the building fund, all Conference claims were paid last year, and this church will be on the Honor Roll again this fall in all particulars. Also, I would like to add that this is what the Lord has done and not what I have done. It would not have been possible for us to progress in the manner we have had it not been for the spirit of co-operation which has existed between pastor and people. I have received splendid co-operation and support from these people. They are willing to try even when the way seems dark. I doubt if there could be found anywhere in the state a more heroic group of Methodist Protestants. The history of this church is an inspiration to anyone who is interested in the advancement of the Methodist Protestant Church. They were faced with despair, but were not willing to give up. As a result they have come to where they now are, a church of 200 members, which began about eight years ago with 15 charter members. Now they are faced with the problem of congestion and the great need for Sunday school rooms, and we believe they will meet this problem just as heroically as they have those of the past.

As a parting word I wish to say that I have enjoyed my work with these people. I came to them while a student at High Point College, 21 years of age, and having preached only five sermons. I have gained in spirituality, in experience and in friendships formed during my stay here. I came as their boy preacher, and I leave, still their boy. May God bless these good people of Kaunapolis and lead them on to greater things through the medium of their new pastor.

C. P. MORRIS, Pastor.

Calvary.—There are so many things to write about this week that our reporter is swamped with news, so she has asked me to say it for her.

Calvary church roll reached the 304 mark last Sunday when we received seven new members, all by certificate. Mr. and Mrs. Holt Huuter came to us from Denton. Mrs. L. W. Gerringer and four children, Mary Frances, William, Sara Lou, and Wilson from Henderson. We are delighted to have all these fine people in our community. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter are now living on McCulloch street, near Asheboro street. They are very convenient to Calvary church and to the public school. Mrs. Gerringer and children are living in their home at 1113 Bellvue street, which is also close to the church.

Our people are distressed about the serious illness of Dr. McCulloch. He has been one of the leading spirits in Calvary church since it was founded. For the past two years his health has been such that he has not been able to attend very regularly.

Picnics and outings have been very popular here for the past few weeks. Recently the Sunday school and the Woman's Auxiliary had a joint picnic for the entire church on the church lawn. Since then Sunday school closses and the Christian Endeavor Society have been going out and having a good time. The pastor assisted Brother J. Frank Coble in getting his class of boys to the top of Carraway mountain, near Asheboro, recently. Two other car loads have been taken to the same place by the pastor, who is very enthusiastic about the scenery there. The Senior C. E. went out to the City Recreation Park on a picnic a week ago.

A very fine business meeting of the Senior C. E. was held last week with Rebecca and Polly Coble. It was decided to combine the Intermediate and Senior societies and in place of the Intermediate Society, organize a Junior. Miss Ruth Laughliu was elected president of the Senior Society. The new Junior Society met Sunday evening with good prospects.

A committee headed by Miss Vivian Sullivau is now getting things in readiness for Rally Day the first Sunday in October.

Our tithing campaign for the month of September is going very well. About 40 persons have already signified their willingness to tithe for the month, the proceeds to be divided equally between the church debt and local expenses.

Calvary has received 27 new members this year, with several more good prospects before Conference. We are now ready for the Conference Honor Roll on all of the items which used to be called the Annual Conference budget, and will be out on our payments to the college right away. We are also ready on Subsidy and subscriptions for the Herald.

There are quite a lot of sick folks among us at present. In addition to Dr. McCulloch there are Mrs. T. F. McCulloch, who has been in for several weeks, Miss Velua McCulloch, Mrs. C. A. Parrish, Mrs. J. A. Cox, and E. F. Allred. We trust that all of these may be better soon.

Our Boy Scout Troop went out to Camp Graystoue last Friday and stayed until Saturday. The boys had a great time.

Finally, the women of the church are busy this week getting ready to serve at the Fair next week. It means a lot of work, but they usually make a good deal of money at it.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Flat Rock Charge.—We have had the usual attendance and interest in our services for the past two Sundays. Attendance at the Sunday schools has been fairly good. Four of the Sunday schools responded to the appeal of the Children's Home Birthday Offering and a large number contributed to the amount of approximately $30.00.

The pastor and family have been the recipients of several gifts, consisting of flour, meat, beans, chickens, vegetables, fruits, milk, butter and other articles which were greatly appreciated. Those making these gifts were Mr. and Mrs. James Payne, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lemmons, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Combs, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Pegram, Mr. and Mrs. John Wray, Mrs. Hassel Angel, Mrs. J. W. Flynt, Mrs. D. A. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Johnson, Mrs. J. S. Knight, Mrs. R. W. Pegram, Miss Virgiuia Lemmons, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Middleton, Mrs. Ed Hilton, Mrs. Leslie Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Pope, Mrs. Alfred Friddle, and Houston Landreth.

The condition of Mrs. D. A. Welker, of Palestine church, who has been ill for several weeks, is unchanged. Bro. Archie Tucker, who is one of the stewards of Palestiue church, has been ill for three weeks, and is recovering nicely.

When this issue of the Herald is received, the writer will be engaged with Rev. J. P. Pegg, pastor of Glen Raven charge, in the annual revival meeting at Haw River church. In the absence of the pastor next Sunday, the services at Flat Rock church will be in charge of a minister to be selected. Rev. G. A. Middleton, of Gideon's Grove church, will preach at Bethany church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Harmony Grove, West Forsyth. — Our church services and Sunday school have been going nicely for some time. We have been having prayer meeting for the past few weeks, and we find it a success already. There have been 18 converts during the meetings. We feel that the meetings are helping all to be stronger. Mr. Fulton, a new neighbor, is leader of these meetings.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor is having larger attendance and lots more interest shown than has been the case. We are very glad that we can report that we feel we are stronger.

Our revival meeting is to begin the fourth Sunday in September, which will be Sunday, September 23, and we hope that we will have a great revival. The pastor will do the preaching.

We have had some sickness in our neighborhood, but all are improving some. Mrs. Elizabeth Waruer and Mr. Shermau Bodsford, two of our oldest members, has been sick for some time. Mr. Bodsford has been very ill but shows signs of improvement.

We ask that the readers of the Herald pray for our church they we may have a great revival.

REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—The reporter asked me to make a report for our church this week, so I will do the best I can. Our pastor has been away the past week helping in a meeting at Love Joy church. He told us this morning that they had been having a real revival. Mr. Morgan gave us a good sermon this morning.

Our Sunday school and church services have dropped off some as the sore eyes and whooping cough are right bad here. There are a few cases of scarlet fever, but I know of only one case in our church family, that of Joelyn Waddell, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Waddell. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Our revival will begin next Sunday. Rev. Troxler will be the pulpit help. This week there will be several prayer meeting held in various homes. Mr. McLauriu, Mr. Lisk and Rev. Nash have been holding cottage prayer meetings for some time. I haven't attended any of them, but I have heard that they are having old-fashioned prayer meetings with folks being converted. Oh, if we would only take more time to pray instead of the many worldly things we have on our minds this would be a much more peaceful place to stay our short lives.

Our Missionary Society is getting along right well, but not as well as we ought to. The president of our society, Mrs. L. M. Burris had a birthday the 24th of August and she invited each member to come to her home and help her celebrate her birthday. Instead of giving Mrs. Berrier gifts we each gave a penny for each year old we were and in that way helped some on our budget.

Mrs. L. M. Williams has returned to her home from the hospital after having an operation and she is getting along fine. Mrs. Esther Sides Litaker is a patient in the hospital in Charlotte. She has had an operation. She expects to return home Thursday or Friday of this week. We have noticed in the daily paper that Mrs. S. H. Teeter fell this morning broke her hip. We were real sorry to hear it, but hope she will get along fine.

The weddings are still going on here. Miss Louise Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Brown, and D. D. Nash, son of Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Nash were married some time in August. They are making their home with the bride's parents.

BERTHA ERANHARDT.

Corinth, Littleton Charge.—Our revival services began on the first Sunday in September with an all-day service. Rev. L. S. Helms, of Draper, was our pulpit help. The meeting closed on Friday night. Mr. Helms delivered some very good sermons and we were glad to have him with us. There were two baptized and four joined by letter, and a large group reconsecrated themselves to the Lord.

We are very glad to have Mr. Porter and his family join our church, as they are a lot of help.

It is almost time for our Sunday school to go back to the Baptist church, since we have a union Sunday school. We hope the M. P. folks will take as much interest and attend as regularly as the Baptists have at our church. Our Sunday school is doing fairly well.

I cannot give an account of the services Sunday night, as I was not present, but am sure our pastor was there. He is always present in spite of rain and muddy roads.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Morris, Mr. M. J. Morris and Henry Morris attended the funeral services of Mr. J. W. Crews in Oxford Sunday.

Mrs. Winborne, of Suffolk, Va., has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hettie Carter, for several days.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Fallston Charge.—In a number of places we can see good results springing out of our revival services. The Sunday school at Laurel Hill has almost doubled in average attendance. Curtains have been provided in the church for three Sunday school classes. A number of new and talented leaders have joined in the work. A Rally Day program as sent out by our Board is to be given on Sunday morning, September 30th. There are also indications that a new roof is about to be put on the church, and perhaps some other minor improvements.

Our third quarterly conference, which was held at Hebron church on Saturday following our last meeting, was the best, certainly from the standpoint of attendance, held thus far during the Conference year. Around 100 people were present for the morning sermon. Sixty-four adults were present for the quarterly conference proper in the afternoon, 25 being members. The ladies did a good job of preparing and serving lunch. Ferman Wright, now a student at High Point College, was licensed to preach the Gospel. J. C. Lewis, as per the votes taken in the churches, was declared elected delegate to the approaching Annual Conference.

A circuit Auxiliary is rapidly materializing on the charge. Mrs. F. D. Toney, of Friendship church, is acting chairman. The plan is to have one central organization with five circles, one in each church. As now planned, the central organization would meet once each quarter, each circle once a month. An organization is now in four of the five churches. The organization at Laurel Hill and at Macedonia was formed two weeks ago at the regular church period. Mrs. Toney went with us and assisted in forming the organization.

Mrs. Cline Wright joined the church yesterday morning by letter at Friendship. This makes 11 members to join since my last report, five at Knob Creek, two at Laurel Hill, three at Macedonia, and one at Friendship. In addition to this two children have been baptized, one at Laurel Hill church and one at Friendship. In each case the mother of the child joined the church.

The Young Men's Class at Friendship is going to enjoy an oyster supper and fish fry at the local Masonic Hall on Friday evening of this week. They have invited one or two other classes to join with them. The supper is similar to the one given last winter, except that on this occasion the ladies are invited to come along with the men. A program is being prepared for the occasion, and a good time is expected.

Three funerals should be recorded: John Turner, Bethlehem church; James Hartmon, Friendship; Mrs. Noah Kiser, Hebron. The first-named was a member of the M. E. Church, South. The last two were faithful members of our church, and were highly respected residents of their respective communities.

The following are among the young people from the charge who are attending college: Ferman Wright and Miss Cerelda Lackey, High Point; Thelbert Wright and Miss Doyle Martin, Brevard; Misses Clara and Alma Wright, Asheville Normal; Eli Housar, Boone.

H. F. FOGLEMAN, Pastor.

Bess Chapel Church.—On the second Sunday in September our pastor, Rev. J. D. Morris, brought to us a very inspiring sermon. The scripture lesson was taken from Ezekiel 34:1-10. His text was taken from the second verse. This was Children's Home Day at our church, so the sermon helped us realize what little we are doing to help the less fortunate ones.

The Birthday Offering taken for the Children's Home amounted to $18.20. We were very glad to be able to send this much, but should have been grateful had we been able to send much more. REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—Our pastor, Bro. Powell, has sufficiently recovered from an infected hand to be back with us again. The third Sunday in August he was to have a two weeks' vacation, but instead of a vacation he went to High Point for an operation on his hand. During his absence we had no preaching services, although he was able to be with us on the first Sunday in Sunday school and held the third quarterly conference at the 11 o'clock service. The business was conducted with nearly all members present. R. J. Kennedy was elected delegate to Annual Conference.

Since our last report two others have joined our church, making a total of 20 for the year.

Rally and Promotion services will be held the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock. A District Rally will be held at our church during the afternoon and evening of the fifth Sunday.

We are expecting to have a picture from the Children's Home, as we went over the top on the penny a year per member. Bro. Powell pushed this to the utmost and had the co-operation of the Auxiliary and Ladies' Aid.

F. N. Kennedy has been ill at the Burrus Memorial Hospital, but has been removed to his home. MRS. CLYDE PAYNE.

Love Joy, Why Not Charge. — Our camp meeting began on September 9th and closed on Saturday night, the 17. We had a wonderful meeting. There were 46 conversions and reclamations, with 10 united with the church.

Our pastor preached a wonderful sermon Sunday morning. Rev. L. A. King preached in the afternoon and Rev. J. M. Morgan preached at night. He also did the preaching in the morning and at night throughout the meeting. He did some fine preaching which was greatly enjoyed by all. We were glad to have Bro. Morgan with us. Hope he will come this way again.

We regret that our Sunday school superintendent has been unable to attend Sunday school for some time. Hope he will soon be able to be out again. We miss him very much.

Our Sunday school attendance is very good. Let's hope the new converts will become more interested in Sunday school work and that they will co-operate and work together for the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. C. T. RUSSELL, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—In the regular Sunday afternoon worship program on Sunday, September 2, the pastor Rev. L. E. Mabry, delivered a splendid message on "The Concealments of God," using as the scripture lesson the 25th chapter of Proverbs, with the second verse as the text. The weather was very favorable for this service and a large and appreciative audience received the message.

The third Sunday morning for the regular appointment the weather was very unfavorable and the roads in bad condition. Many were kept away from the services. Though the audience was not as large as usual, Mr. Mabry was there with another good sermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mabry and son are leaving us very soon. They are moving to Westminster, Maryland, where Mr. Mabry will attend school. He will return for Conference and be with us for his last appointment the first Sunday afternoon, November 4, at 2 o'clock. On the first Sunday in October at 2 o'clock Rev. J. Clyde Auman, from Graham, will fill the appointment and the third Sunday morning in October Lee Moser, a young ministerial student, will preach for us.

We regret very much to lose Mr. Mabry and family, for we have learn to love them very much. We hope for them much success in life.

Our Sunday school held the annual picnic Saturday, September 1, at the local schoolhouse. Most of the members were present. Our pastor gave a short talk on "Work," Everyone present seemed to enjoy the fine fellowship, one with another, and enjoyed the fine dinner that was served picnic style.

The Ladies Auxiliary will meet for the monthly meeting with Mrs. C. C. Holt Friday evening, September 14, at 7:30 o'clock. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Our Children's Home Birthday Offering, according to report given last Sunday, amounted to $33.35.

MRS. L. P. HOLT.

Asheville.—The spirit of friendly rivalry between the various classes of the Sunday school is evident. The Frances Cunningham Philathea Class continues to lead the entire Sunday school in amount of offering; Mrs. Bolicks' Beginners are still leading in attendance, and Miss Irene Miller's Junior Girls are leading the Primary Department in collection. In the attendance contest between the Frances Cunningham Philathea class and the Young Men's class the score seems to be piling up in favor of the Young Men's class. Get busy, Philatheas, you have four weeks yet in which to win!

The chicken supper sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary last Wednesday night was a financial success as well as a pleasant social gathering. Much credit for the success of this supper is due the committee in charge: Mrs. G. P. Younginer, Mrs. Hale Thomas, and Mrs. J. F. Minnis.

Plans are being made for a "Surprise Supper" to be given on Wednesday night of this week.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society is planning a picnic supper Friday evening at Camp Powhatan. This will probably be the last picnic of the season and it is hoped that all members of the society will be present.

The union meetings which are being held by the five churches in this part of the city are well attended. Rev. E. R. Lineberger, pastor of St. Marks Lutheran church, delivered the sermon last Sunday evening at the First Congregational church.

Our Wednesday evening prayer meetings have been resumed and Mr. Minnis is beginning a most interesting helpful study of the Book of Acts. Mr. Minnis is a thoroughly competent teacher and those of us who are Sunday school teachers are very grateful for an opportunity to study the book from which many of our lessons will be taken next quarter.

Mrs. Roeby Wilson has recently been appointed teacher of the Primary class. She succeeds Miss Josie McNeill, who left last week for High Point College.

Several of our members are sick: Mrs. C. B. Baker, Mrs. D. L. West, Miss Adele Biebinger and Miss Polly Gentry. We trust that they will soon be able to worship with us again Mr. Charles Baker, father-in-law of Mrs. C. B. Baker, is seriously ill in the Norburn Hospital. We are remembering him in our prayers and hope he will soon be restored to health.

We were glad to welcome Miss Ruth Smith as a guest in our church last Sunday. Miss Smith was the week-end guest of her sister, Miss Melle Smith, and Miss Frances Cunningham.

It is rumored that a wedding will take place in our church soon. No, don't get excited, it is to be a "manless" wedding, entitled "Oh, Promise Me, Willie," given by the Frances Cunningham Philathea class.

The September meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held at the home of Miss Frances Cunningham, 140 Washington Road, next Thursday afternoon at 3:00. Mrs. C. B. Baker, president, urges all members to be present.

Please pardon us if we have taken up too much space in the Herald this week, but so many things are happening here that we just have to tell about them.

F. S. C.

Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary.—On Wednesday, September 5, at 2:30 p. m., our Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. W. W. Grant with 16 members, three Precious Jewels and one honorary member present. At this time we were glad to welcome two new members: Mrs. Henry Harris and Mrs. Chester Goodfellow. We were also glad to have present 17 children and young people. Mrs. Grant had charge of the devotionals and was assisted by Mesdames H. E. Vassar, M. L. Crew and Wm. H. Neese. Mrs. Grant led the society in prayer.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. C. E. Dimick, who was visiting in Portsmouth, Va., the vice-president, Mrs. Jim Mitchell, presided. At this time it was decided to have our Thank-Offering programs on the fifth Sunday in September. A committee consisting of Mesdames H. E. Vassar, W. W. Grant and John Hart, were appointed to assist the Thank-Offering secretary in preparing the programs. Spring Church will give theirs on the fifth Sunday at 11 o'clock; Lebanon in the afternoon at 3, and Pleasant Hill in the evening at 7:30. We are hoping for good services and good offerings aat each church.

Mrs. R. M. Robinson was program leader. Miss Virginia Grant gave a very impressive reading on China. Mrs. J. C. Cook conducted the Question Box. Our District chairman, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, spoke in regard to the District Rally to be held soon in the Whitakers church, and urged that our Auxiliary be represented 100 per cent. The society joined in the Lord's Prayer as the closing prayer. During the social hour the entire group was served delicious ice cream and cake.

MRS. Wm. H. NEESE,

Bethesda-State Street.—The second Sunday in August was a good day for this charge. It was Home-Coming Day, and the beginning of the special meeting of Bethesda church. The attendance was large, 215 in Sunday school. The Home-Coming part of the program was in the afternoon. The address was by Samuel E. Leonard, superintendent of the Eastern Carolina Training School for Boys. Mr. Leonard, a native of the Bethesda community, discussed the youth problem. Or perhaps it would be more nearly in keeping with Mr. Leonard's philosophy to call it the "Home Problem," where youth may be started right, but in many instances are allowed to start wrong.

At night Mr. Leonard spoke in State Street church on "The Child in the Midst." Mr. Leonard speaks on the subject as one who is deeply interested and one who knows.

The Bethesda meeting resulted in nine conversions and nine accessions on profession of faith and one by certificate. Rev. H. F. Surratt came Monday and did all the preaching to the end of the meeting. His sermons were interesting, clear, forceful.

The nine who joined on profession of faith were baptized with water from the River Jordan, as also one baby.

The second Sunday in this month was a good day for Bethesda; 205 in Sunday school and Miss Elizabeth Yokley gave an interesting account of her visit to the Holy Land and other countries.

Mr. J. A. Welser has been elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held in Bethesda church late in October, with President Andrews presiding.

Improvement in the meetings of the State Street Christian Endeavor society is rather marked.

T. M. JOHNSON.

ONE WAY TO DO IT

I have been asked to explain the method Graham uses to sell the Methodist Protestant Herald. I have the town of Graham divided up into five districts, over which I have an agent for each district. The Heralds sent to Graham are sent in five bundles, one bundle to each of the agents. The agents are responsible for the delivering of the paper and making collections. They collect 5 cents a copy for the Herald. This amount is turned over, enclosed in a specially designed envelope on which a report is to be made, to the chief Herald Agent. The Chief Herald Agent in turn takes out 4 cents for each Herald received and sends same to Dr. McCulloch. The balance is turned back to the respective agents, after 1 cent for each ten copies has been subtracted. This 1 cent goes to the chief Herald Agent for the expense connected with the handling of the Herald.

I might add for your information that where we formerly had only six papers coming to Graham, under this present system we have FIFTY-FIVE. This is not a perfect system, but it is the best I know of. For the rural church the plan would be altered a little.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

—Methodist Protestant ministers living in and around Greensboro had a very fine meeting at Grace Church on Monday morning. Dr. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference spoke on "The Challenge to the Present-Day Minister." Following the meeting those who were able to do so drove out to the Greensboro Country Park and had lunch together. Those who went were delighted. The club house proved to be a most convenient place to eat, and the spacious North Porch overlooking the beautiful lakes was an ideal placo to rest. Rev. D. I. Garner invited the next meeting to the hut at St. Paul's church. The invitation was accepted.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett has sufficiently recovered from his illness as to be able to walk a short distance occasionally.

—Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Millaway recently spent some time in the Mount Pleasant community visiting friends.

LINCOLNTON	94
SILER CITY	82½
ALBEMARLE	78

By comparing percentages last week and this you will see that Lincolnton and Siler City stopped for a breathing spell but while they were sitting there by the side of the road resting, Albemarle came slipping up silently and got so near Siler City that Siler City had better look out. Whoever wins this race is going to have to keep at it for that man from Albemarle, Rev. J. R. Anderson, sends in something almost every week. But the pastor of Siler City is going over the top. It would not surprise me if they were to do it this week, but I cannot hold this back to wait for financial returns. Anyway, I get a thrill out of watching the race each week.

Well, well, my old friend, Ernest Whitehead of Center church on Alamance charge sent in a payment on Subsidy last week. Good for him. It might be interesting to know that he and I lived upstairs in the old school building at Liberty about so many years ago and did our own cooking, getting by on three dollars a month for board, room rent, lights and heat. Part of that money that we saved then we are giving to the Herald from time to time in these latter days.

Now the rest of you folks, come on with your Subsidy payments. The printers of the Herald have some mighty good news for us these days and I do not want you to make their prediction fall flat. We hope to tell you about it later on. While some places might have a hard time raising all of their quota subscriptions, every place can get something on Subsidy. Any pastor who will emphasize it with all his soul and will take an offering for it and does not get more than five cents can have my whole-hearted sympathy in having the stingiest people in the Conference. No, sir, the pastors will not have that experience. People will respond to a reasonable degree, at least if the matter is properly presented. Try it, brother, try it.

Now, folks, watch the Herald this week. I am expecting something fine to happen.

Dr. L. W. Gerringer—An Appreciation

By J. E. Pritchard

Some weeks ago my friend of college and seminary days and fellow-laborer in the ministry, Dr. L. W. Gerringer was called from time into eternity. At the first I could not realize that it was true. It seemed that it was a creation of some fanciful mind, or the chatterings of one who was dreaming. But as the days have come and gone, and I have neither seen his face, nor heard his voice, it has painfully dawned upon me that it is a reality—from the human standpoint, a tragic reality. To be cut off at a time when his mental powers were at their greatest and when a man's judgment is more to be trusted than in early life, to our limited way of seeing things, is to be regretted. And yet we bow to the will of One who makes no mistakes and who sees the end from the beginning.

My acquaintance with Brother Gerringer dates back to September, 1906. After spending the summer in Pennsylvania, following my freshman year at Western Maryland College, I returned to college to find a young man from the Old North State by the name of Gerringer. I found that he had completed the course of study offered at Whitsett Institute and that he was ready to enter the freshman class. And he did enter it and made a good student. He was a man who took his work seriously, and yet he found time for social contacts which made him popular with a large number of people. Having won a medal in the department of speech at Whitsett Institutue, he came to college with high hopes of making good in that department, and in this he was not disappointed; for in his sophomore year he won another medal. To our minds in that day this was a great achievement, and a prophecy of a successful career in life. He entered college one year later than I did, and so we continued on in that same ratio until we had finished both college and seminary. As each finished he returned home to find plenty of work to do. While he was serving as a student pastor of Halifax Charge in the summer of 1911 I assisted him in a revival meeting there. The next year I was the regular pastor there and he came and assisted me at the same church with good results. Later while I was pastor in Burlington he came and helped me in a meeting; then when he became pastor there I went back and assisted him. And so we worked together. It is a significant fact that there are five charges in the North Carolina Annual Conference where both of us have served. In some cases he followed me and in other cases I followed him. Wherever I have followed him I have found that he was held in high esteem by the people.

In our association of all these years we did not always agree. But we knew each other well enough to disagree and still be friends. Some people who knew each other less could not have done this. And so I feel that I have lost a friend, a friend who was close to me.

As a preacher of the gospel, Dr. Gerringer was perfectly orthodox. Or at least he was when judged by my standard. He believed that Jesus Christ was the Son of God and he preached this with all his heart. He believed, also, that Christ was the only hope of the world and that if men would accept Him, many of the world's problems would be solved. He preached the truth as it is in Christ Jesus without fear or without reservations or quibbling. His sermon on Sunday night of the last Annual Conference, preached in the conference church at Thomasville, on the subject, "The Cross," will long be remembered by those who heard it. So much confidence did the conference have in his ability to preach the truth that he was elected to preach the ordination sermon in the approaching conference, which sermon is always one of the most important events in the annual session.

Not only was Dr. Gerringer a good student and a good preacher, but he was a hard worker. He worked hard in revival meetings away from home, and he worked hard on his own charge. Some one remarked recently that he worked as if he realized that he had only a short time in which to complete a very important piece of work. It is possible that he worked too hard and may have shortened his days. But whether this was the case or not, we cannot but admire the man who works and the man who works hard.

In addition to his being a good student, a good preacher and a hard worker, he was deeply interested in every phase of the work of the church, both local and general. He was a member of the original campaign committee to raise funds to build High Point College. He went up and down the state giving his strength to this worthy task. At the time of his death he was secretary of the Board of Trustees of this noble institution. And to prove his loyalty to the institution that he had helped to build, he had set his heart on sending his oldest daughter there, a cherished ambition which he did not live to see realized, but which has taken place since his death. He was also widely known throughout the entire denomination, he having been a member of each quadrennial session of the General Conference since 1924. His scholarship and work in the local and general church were sufficient to justify High Point College in conferring the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon him in 1932.

And now that it is beginning to dawn upon us all that he has really gone out from among us, not to return, we miss him more and more. But while we shall no longer have him with us in bodily form, we shall cherish his memory and thank God that he lived. And so to my college and seminary friend, my fellow-laborer in the ministry, I say, Good bye until we meet again.

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

It was an inspired idea to deposit the body of an unrecognized soldier in the national memorial of the Great War; and yet, when one stops to think of it, how strange it is! Yesterday, in Rome, Paris, London, Washington, and how many capitals besides, the most stirring military pageantry, decked with flags and exultant with music, centered about the bodies of unknown soldiers. That is strange. So this is the outcome of western civilization, which for nearly 2,000 years has had Christ, and in which democracy and science have had their widest opportunity, that the whole Nation pauses, its acclamations rise, its colorful pageantry centers, its patriotic oratory flourishes around the unrecognizable body of a soldier blown to bits on the battlefield. That is strange.

It was the war lords themselves who picked him out as a symbol of war. So be it! As a symbol or war we accept him from their hands.

You may not say that I, being a Christian minister, did not know him. I knew him well. From the north of Scotland, where they planted the sea with mines, to the trenches of France I lived with him and his fellows—British, Australian, New Zealander, French, American. The places where he fought, from Ypres through the Somme battlefield to the southern trenches, I saw him while he still was there. I lived with him in dug-outs, in the trenches, and on destroyers searching for submarines off the shores of France. Short of actual battle, from training camp to hospital, from the fleet to No-Man's Land, I, a Christian minister, saw the war. Moreover, I, a Christian minister, participated in it. I, too, was persuaded that it was a war to end war. I, too, was a gullible fool and thought that somehow modern war could make the world safe for democracy. They sent men like me to explain to the Army the high meanings of war and, by every argument we could command, to strengthen their morale. I wonder if I ever spoke to the Unknown Soldier.

One night, in a ruined barn behind the lines, I spoke at sunset to a company of hand-grenaders who were going out that night to raid the German trenches. They told me that on the average no more than half a company came back from such a raid, and I, a minister of Christ, tried to nerve them for their suicidal and murderous endeavor. I wonder if the Unknown Soldier was in that barn that night.

Once in a dug-out which in other days had been a French wine cellar I bade God-speed at 2 in the morning to a detail of men going out on patron in No-Man's Land. They were a fine company of American boys, fresh from home. I recall that, huddled in the dark, underground chamber, they sang:

> Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
>   Lead Thou me on.
> The night is dark, and I am far from home—
>   Lead thou me on.

Then, with my admonition in their ears, they went down from the second- to the first-line trenches and so out to No-Man's Land. I wonder if the Unknown Soldier was in that dug-out.

You here this morning may listen to the rest of this sermon or not—as you please. It makes much less difference to me than usual what you do or think. I have an account to settle in this pulpit today between my soul and the Unknown Soldier.

He is not so utterly unknown as we sometimes think. Of one thing we can be certain: He was sound of mind and body. We made sure of that. All primitive gods who demanded bloody sacrifice on their altars insisted that the animals should be of the best, without mar or hurt. Turn to the Old Testament and you will find it written there: "Whether male or female, he shall offer it without blemish before Jehovah." The god of war still maintains the old demand. These men to be sacrificed upon his altars were sound and strong. Once there might have been guessing about that. Not now. Now we have medical science, which tests the prospective soldier's body. Now we have psychiatry, which tests his mind. We used them both to make sure that these sacrifices for the god of war were without blemish. Of all insane and suicidal procedures, can you imagine anything madder than this, that all the nations should pick out their best, use their scientific skill to make certain that they are the best, and then in one mighty holocaust offer 10,000,000 of them on the battlefields of one war?

I have an account to settle between my soul and the Unknown Soldier. I deceived him. I deceived myself first, unwittingly, and then I deceived him, assuring him that good consequence could come out of that. As a matter of hard-headed, biological fact, what good can come out of that? Mad civilization, you cannot sacrifice on bloody altars the best of your breed and expect anything to compensate for that.

Of another thing we may be fairly sure concerning the Unknown Soldier—that he was a conscript. He may have been a volunteer, but on an actuarial average he probably was a conscript. The long arm of the Nation reached into his home, touched him on the shoulder, saying, "You must go to France and fight." If someone asks why, in this "land of the free," conscription was used, the answer is, of course, that it was necessary if we were to win the war. Certainly it was. And that reveals something terrific about modern war. We cannot get soldiers—not enough of them, not the right kind of them—without forcing them. When a nation goes to war now, the entire nation must go. That means that the youth of the nation must be compelled, coerced, conscripted to fight.

When you stand in Arlington before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier on some occasion, let us say, when the panoply of military glory decks it with music and color, are you thrilled? I am not—not any more. I see there the memorial of one of the saddest things in American history, from the continued repetition of which may God deliver us!—the conscripted boy.

He was a son, the hope of the family, and the Nation coerced him. He was a lover and the deepest ambition in his life was not desire for military glory or hatred of another country or any other idiotic thing like that, but love of a girl and hope of a home. He was, maybe, a husband and a father and already, by that slow and beautiful gradation which all fathers know, he had felt the deep ambitions of his heart being transferred from himself to his children. And the Nation coerced him. I am not blaming him; he was conscripted. I am not blaming the Nation; it never could have won the war without conscription. I am simply saying that that is modern war, not by accident but by necessity, and with every repetition that will be more and more the attribute of war.

Last time they coerced our sons. Next time, of course, they will coerce our daughters, and in any future war they will absolutely conscript all property. Old-fashioned Americans, born out of the long tradition of liberty, some of us have trouble with these new coercions used as short cuts to get things done, but nothing else compares with this inevitable, universal, national conscription in time of war. Repeated once or twice more, it will end everything in this Nation that remotely approaches liberty.

If I blame anybody about this matter, it is men like myself who ought to have known better. We went out to the Army and explained to these valiant men what a resplendent future they were preparing for their children by their heroic sacrifice. O, Unknown Soldier, however can I make that right with you? For sometimes I think I hear you asking me about it.

Where is this great, new era that the war was to create? Where is it? They blew out my eyes in the Argonne. Is it because of that, that now from Arlington I strain them vainly to see the great gains of the war? If I could see the prosperity, plenty, and peace of my children for which this mangled body was paid down!

My friends, sometimes I do not want to believe in immortality. Sometimes, I hope that the Unknown Soldier will never know.

Many of you here knew these men better, you may think, than I knew them, and already you may be relieving my presentation of the case by another picture. Probably, you say, the Unknown Soldier enjoyed soldiering and had a thrilling time in France. The Great War, you say, was the most exciting episode of our time. Some of us found in it emotional release unknown before or since. We escaped from ourselves. We were carried out of ourselves. Multitudes were picked up from a dull routine, lifted out of the drudgery of common days with which they were infinitely bored, and plunged into an exciting adventure which they remember yet as the most thrilling episode of their careers.

Indeed, you say, how could martial music be so stirring and martial poetry so exultant if there were not at the heart of war a lyric glory? Even in the churches you sing "Onward Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War." You too, when you wish to express or arouse ardor and courage, use war's symbolism. The Unknown Soldier, sound in mind and body—yes! The Unknown Soldier a conscript—probably! But be fair and add that the Unknown Soldier had a thrilling time in France.

To be sure, he may have had. Listen to this from a wounded American after a battle: "We went over the parapet at 5 o'clock and I was not hit till 9. They were the greatest four hours of my life." Quite so! Only let me talk to you a moment about that. That was the first time he went over the parapet. Anything risky, dangerous, tried for the first time, well handled, and now escaped from is thrilling to an excitable and courageous soul. What about the second time and the third time and the fourth? What about the dreadful times between, the long-drawn-out, monotonous, dreary, muddy barrenness of war, concerning which one who knew said, "Nine-tenths of war is waiting"? The trouble with much familiar talk about the lyric glory of war is that it comes from people who never saw any soldiers except the American troops, fresh, resilient, who had time to go over the parapet about once. You ought to have seen the hardening-up camps of the armies which had been at the business since 1914. Did you ever see them? Did you look, as I have looked, into the faces of young men who had been over the top, wounded, hospitalized, hardened up—over the top, wounded, hospitalized, hardened up—over the top, wounded, hospitalized, hardened up—four times, five times, six times? Never talk to a man who has seen that, about the lyric glory of war.

Where does all this talk about the glory of war come from, anyway?

"Charge, Chester, charge! On, Stanley, on!" were the last words of Marmion.

That is Sir Walter Scott. Did he ever see war? Never.

> How can man die better
> Than facing fearful odds,
> For the ashes of his fathers,
> And the temples of his gods?

That is Macaulay. Did he ever see war? He was never near one.

> Stormed at with shot and shell,
> Boldly they rode and well,
> Into the jaws of Death,
> Into the mouth of Hell
> Rode the six hundred.

That is Tennyson. Did he ever see war? I should say not. That is where the glory of war comes from. We have heard very little about it from the real soldiers of this last war. We have had from them the appalling opposite. They say that George Washington said it is "the shame of mankind." The glory of war comes from poets, preachers, orators, the writers of martial music, statesmen preparing flowery proclamations for the people, who dress up war for other men to fight. They do not go to the trenches. They do not go over the top again and again and again.

Do you think that the Unknown Soldier would really believe in the lyric glory of war? I dare you: go down to Arlington and tell him that now.

Nevertheless some may say that while war is a grim and murderous business with no glory in it in the end, and while the Unknown Soldier doubtless knew that well, we have the right in our imagination to make him the symbol of whatever was most idealistic and courageous in the men who went out to fight. Of course, we have. Now, let us do that. On the body of a French sergeant killed in battle was found a letter to his parents in which he said, "You know how I made the sacrifice of my life before leaving." So we think of our Unknown Soldier as an idealist, rising up in answer to a human call and making the sacrifice of his life before leaving. His country seemed to him like Christ himself, saying "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Far from appealing to his worst, the war brought out his best—his loyalty, his courage, his venturesomeness, his care for the downtrodden, his capacity for self-sacrifice. The noblest qualities of this young manhood were aroused. He went out to France a flaming patriot and in secret quoted Rupert Brooke to his own soul:

> If I should die, think only this of me:
> That there's some corner of a foreign field
> That is forever England.

There, you say, is the Unknown Soldier.

Yes, indeed, did you suppose I never had met him? I talked with him many a time. When the words that I would speak about war are a blistering fury on my lips, and the encouragement I gave to war is a deep self-condemnation in my heart, it is of that I think. For I watched war lay its hands on these strongest, loveliest things in men and use the noblest attributes of the human spirit for what ungodly deeds! Is there anything more infernal than this, to take the best that is in man and use it to do what war does? This is the ultimate description of war—it is the prostitution of the noblest powers of the human soul to the most dastardly deeds, the most abysmal cruelties of which our human nature is capable. That is war.

Granted, then, that the Unknown Soldier should be to us a symbol of everything most idealistic in a valiant warrior, I beg of you, be realistic and follow through what war made the Unknown Soldier do with his idealism. Here is one eyewitness speaking:

"Last night, at an officers' mess there was great laughter at the story of one of our men who had spent his last cartridge in defending an attack. 'Hand me down your spade, Mike,' he said; and as six Germans came one by one around the end of a traverse, he split each man's skull open with a deadly blow." The war made the Unknown Soldier do that with his idealism.

"I can remember," says one Infantry officer, "a pair of hands (nationality unknown) which protruded from the soaked ashen soil like the roots of a tree turned upside down; one hand seemed to be pointing at the sky with an accusing gesture. * * * Floating on the surface of the flooded trench was the mask of a human face which had detached itself from the skull." War harnessed the idealism of the Unknown Soldier to that!

Do I not have an account to settle between my soul and him? They sent men like me into the camps to awaken his idealism, to touch those secret, holy springs within him so that with devotion, fidelity, loyalty, and self-sacrifice he might go out to war. O War, I hate you most of all for this, that you do lay your hands on the noblest elements in human character, with which we might make a heaven on earth, and you use them to make a hell on earth instead. You take even our science, the fruit of our dedicated intelligence, by means of which we might build here the City of God, and, using it, you fill the earth instead with new ways of slaughtering men. You take our loyalty, our unselfishness, with which we might make the earth beautiful, and using these our finest qualities, you make death fall from the sky and burst up from the sea and hurtle from unseen ambuscades 60 miles away; you blast children at home with blockades; and you so bedevil the children at home with blockades; and yuo so bedevil the world that 15 years after the armistice we cannot be sure who won the war, so sunk in the same disaster are victors and vanquished alike. If war were fought simply with evil things, like hate, it would be bad enough, but, when one sees the deeds of war done with the loveliest faculties of the human spirit, he looks into the very pit of hell.

Suppose one thing more—that the Unknown Soldier was a Christian. Maybe he was not, but suppose he was a Christian like Sergeant York, who, at the beginning, intended to take Jesus so seriously as to refuse to fight, but afterward, otherwise persuaded. made a real soldier. For these Christians do make soldiers. Religion is a force. When religious faith supports war, when, as in the Crusades, the priests of Christ cry, "Deus vult"—God wills it—and, confirming ordinary motives, the dynamic of Christian devotion is added, then an incalculable resource of confidence and power is released. No wonder the war departments wanted the churches behind them!

Suppose, then, that the Unknown Soldier was a Christian. I wonder what he thinks about it now. Practically all modern books about war emphasize the newness of it—new weapons, new horrors, new extensiveness. At times, however, it seems to me that still the worst things about war are the ancient elements. In the Bible we read terrible passages where the ancient Hebrews thought they had command from Jehovah to slaughter the Amalekites, "both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass." Dreadful! we say, an ancient and appalling idea! Ancient? Appalling? Upon the contrary, that is war, and always will be. A military order, issued in our generation by an American general in the Philippines, and publicly acknowledged by his counsel afterward in a military court, commanded his soldiers to burn and kill, to exterminate all capable of bearing arms, and to make the island of Samar a howling wilderness. Moreover, his counsel acknowledged that he had specifically named the age of 10, with instructions to kill everyone over that. Far from launching into a denunciation of that American general, I am much more tempted to state his case for him. Why not? Cannot boys and girls of 10 fire a gun? Why not kill everything over 10? That is war, past, present, and future. All that our modern fashions have done is to make the necessity of slaughtering children not the comparatively simple and harmless matter in Samar of shooting some of them, one by one, but the wholesale destruction of children, starving them by millions, impoverishing them, spoiling the chances of unborn generations of them, as in the Great War.

My friends, I am not trying to make you sentimental about this. I want you to be hard-headed. We can have on the one side this monstrous thing or we can have Christ, but we cannot have both. O my country, stay out of war! Co-operate with the nations in every movement that has any hope for peace; enter the World Court, support the League of Nations, contend undiscourageably for disarmament, but set your face steadfastly and forever against being drawn into another war. O church of Christ, stay out of war. Withdraw from every alliance that maintains or encourages it. It was not a pacifist, it was Field Marshal Earl Haig, who said, "It is the business of the churches to make my business impossible." And O my soul! stay out of war!

At any rate, I will myself do the best I can to settle my account with the Unknown Soldier. I renounce war. I renounce war because of what it does to our own men. I have watched them coming gassed from the front-line trenches. I have seen the long, long hospital trains filled with their mutilated bodies. I have heard the cries of the crazed and the prayers of those who wanted to die and could not, and I remember the maimed and ruined men for whom the war is not over yet. I renounce war because of what it compels us to do to our enemies, bombing their mothers in villages, starving their children by blockades, laughing over our coffee cups about every damnable thing we have been able to do to them. I renounce war for its consequences, for the lies it lives on and propagates, for the undying hatreds it arouses, for the dictatorships it puts in the place of democracy, for the starvation that stalks after it. I renounce war and never again, directly or indirectly, will I sanction or support another! O Unknown Soldier, in penitent reparation I make you that pledge.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

A Definite Aim for Each Sermon

Preaching can be done with about half the effort and twice the effectiveness if the sermon is made to answer a definite, vital religious question. Some issue must be raised and then given a Christian solution. One of our greatest authorities on preaching even claims that the only justification for a sermon is its power to settle some perplexing spiritual problem. This statement is putting it boldly, but after going into the matter we can see that it is usually about right. When a speaker begins to give an answer and explanation to your disturbing question you will very naturally give him attention. If, however, he is only moving along in some general, essay-like fashion, you find difficulty following him. Too many preachers are just saying religious pieces in the pulpit which, however good, fail to catch and grip the hearers. They only hit the target by accident, as one has said.

This, then, I call the secret of effective preaching: Find a clear, vital, disturbing question and then make the sermon answer it. Speak to some purpose! After the problem is located, the preacher has a good part of the work already done. The sermonic material can then be selected and arranged with a definite aim in mind—to answer and clear up the spiritual perplexity. By using this scheme, preaching takes on more life, it is done with great justification, gives the speaker poise and self-confidence, and tends to lead to a more finished conclusion.

Many speakers state their purpose at the beginning of the sermon just as soon as the theme is announced. Use your own pleasure about this; if it seems to help, then state your aim, but if you find that it serves no value you may omit it. Ordinarily I believe the preacher ought to state his purpose at the outset.

Now, observe these points: (1) Select problems which you know are disturbing the hearts of your people. A minister has plenty of problems of his own but they are not the same as those worrying the people, and to attempt to solve his own problems may not help very much in strengthening his hearers. The preacher can gather many of these spiritual perplexities by visiting among the people and keeping his ears open to their anxieties. Try to cultivate the capacity to locate their difficulties.

(2) Try writing down a long list of religious questions that ought to be solved. Ask others to name difficulties they meet in living the Christian life. Some ministers provide blanks upon which members are urged to write questions they wish settled. Whether you follow this method or not, one should be on the alert to detect and isolate those spiritual situations that need treatment. Having located such a condition he immediately begins searching Scripture, biography, poetry, his own past experience, and any other material that will help treat and clear up the problem. To give the treatment, a sermon becomes absolutely necessary. A sermon is not merely to be "preached," it is to be organized and directed toward that specific issue.

(3) Select problems that you are able, by the help of the Gospel, to satisfy. Beware of those difficulties you are not ready to treat adequately. You may select such and keep them on your list to be treated later as material is found to solve them. But for immediate use select only those subjects you are reasonably able to explain and answer through and with the sermon.

A TRACT AND AN ACTRESS

A man one day gave a tract to an actress. About a week later he received a letter from the actress, asking him to remember her in prayer, as she was that day going to do a most difficult thing.

A few weeks later another letter came asking for permission to call on him. A day was fixed, and this is what the actress said to him: "Your tract led me to the Savior, and I immediately felt I must leave the stage. But what was I to do? I was the understudy of one of the leading actresses of the day, and was under a seven years' contract. The day you received my letter asking you for prayer was the day I fixed to see the manager of the theater. I went to his office and told him I was converted. Could he release me? The manager, deeply moved, said: 'Years ago, when I was a young man, I was saved, but there came a day when I had to choose between my profession and Christ. I chose the stage, and from that day I have not known what happiness is. I dare not take the responsibility of ruining you. I release you from this hour.' "—Unknown.

Dr. McCulloch Continues in Critical Condition

The condition of Dr. McCulloch, Editor of the Herald, continues to be extremely critical. His strength is at a low ebb and his life seems hanging in the balance. Prayers of the brethren in his behalf are earnestly requested.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Cleveland Charge, Rev. R. S. Troxler, Pastor

This has been a six-point charge, but there has been a merger of Kistler's Grove and Pleasant Hill churches; a new brick structure is now being completed about equidistant between the two. It is a splendid building; tapestry brick, asphalt shingle roofing, ample auditorium and eight Sunday school class rooms. It is far above even the average new rural church building, and the membership of these two churches are to be congratulated on this splendid project.

A new church building has already been started at Oak Grove. The concrete foundation has been poured and the work is to be continued quite soon, I understand. This is also to be brick-veneer, with several Sunday school rooms, also room for the furnace. This building is just in front of the old church building. The parsonage, a brick house, is located at this church.

One other merger, that of Mt. Moriah and Mt. Pleasant, might be accomplished; and if done, would reduce this charge to a four-point charge and make it one of the most desirable of our rural groups of churches.

I visited three of the churches, Oak Grove, Mt. Moriah, and Lawndale. Had good attendance at all appointments, and splendid attention. It was quite a pleasure to speak to the three congregations.

Lawndale has already paid pastor's salary in full for the year and is now working on the conference claims, which it expects to pay in full also. All churches have paid assessment for Church Extension and the pastor is hopeful of securing most of the claims from all the other churches.

This is the first year of Pastor Troxler, but he has been indeed busy, four women's auxiliaries have been organized, one C. E. society reorganized; all churches have Sunday schools and the work appears to be in a very good condition. In fact, I do not know of a more constructive piece of church work done on any of our charges than is being done here this year. We congratulate both pastor and people.

This parsonage has a room in it designated as the President's room. I tested the sleeping qualities of it for two nights and can testify to any candidate for this office it is a good place to sleep. And I also discovered that Mrs. Troxler knows how to prepare a good meal, and to make the food most appetizing; so I can say of the entire parsonage and its occupants—all o.k.

"Get Set"

Every runner is acquainted with these two words; they mean to him, be ready, dig the toes deep enough for a great lunge, but not deep enough to halt a good movement towards the goal. The lack of being ready loses the race for a runner.

Now that we are approaching the finish in our annual conference activities, every church worker, pastor, steward, superintendent of Sunday school, etc.,—yes, every member—ought to take pride in a good finish. Many churches have already done well and will not have to strain so hard to finish in first place. But some have the habit of starting late and of moving slowly until within a few weeks of the time conference meets, then to put on the spurt. So my friends in this class, it is now time to put on the spurt.

It should be a great joy to every one who loves the Lord and who is a member of our church to help his pastor go to the annual conference with a good report. Many conversions reported; a good net gain in membership. The conference claims raised in full; the work in fine shape; church debts reduced, etc. These are some of the things the pastor has been trying to do all the year and they are the things every loyal church member should want to see accomplished. Therefore, as the time approaches for the pastor to go to the annual conference, the desire that he have a fine report should so urge the members on that nothing is left undone that can be done to make this report a perfect one.

We therefore appeal to pastors, to every officer in the churches, to every loyal Methodist Protestant in our conference, "Get SET and GO" with all your ability to win.

THE CHURCH NEEDS A TEACHING MINISTRY—WHAT DOES THAT INVOLVE?

By LUTHER K. LONG

When a pulpit becomes vacant and the committee is looking for a preacher, or when a pastor asks to be changed at the close of the year and the delegate to conference faces the task of helping to select his successor, the question naturally arises: What sort of a minister does our church want, or need?

Some of the answers sound like these: We want an evangelistic preacher. We need a minister strong with the young people. In our church a minister must make a good appearance. A man of real Christian experience is a necessity with us. We must have a minister with good business and administrative ability. We need a man who is not afraid to roll up his sleeves and attack our church debt. We simply must have a man who believes the Bible. We need a man of God who will serve as a worthy preacher, teacher, philosopher, and guide for our people of all ages and conditions.

Some of these answers indicate that the church people themselves, or it may be former pastors, have gotten things messed up and are now looking for a new man with superabilities to pull the enterprise out of the hole. Suppose we confine our thought to the last proposition: What our church needs is a man of God who will serve as preacher, teacher, philosopher, and guide for our people of all ages and conditions. The reader will note that I use the word need, instead of the word want. Wants, no doubt, will be talked of aplenty in selecting a particular man; but the needs of the church are what we are considering.

What is involved in the necessity for calling this sort of a minister? Several things:

1. It is implied that the church, in general, today, is not well lined up in its thinking and teaching. If I were looking for a Christian denomination with which to cast my lot, I should be somewhat at a loss for one upon which I could heartily decide. Most of them have too many frills and furbelows, too many unbelievable articles in their creeds, too many outworn ceremonies and customs, too many non-essential things that separate one denomination from another, too many insignificant tests for church membership. The result is that, with many thoughtful people, denominational loyalty is at a low ebb. Many church members are at a loss to find a sufficient reason for the sacrifices they are called upon to make in support of their denomination and its varied enterprises.

2. It is implied that the minister is a thinker, that he has had adequate scholastic training, and that he is to be granted time—and that he has the inclination—to use books and other contacts for quickening and developing his intellectual and spiritual life. Just here it may be well to admit that by no means all ministers need these requirements to the full. And we need not expect that there will ever be enough men of the sort specified, to fill all the pulpits that have been set up in the cities, villages, and rural places throughout our country. In fact, it is altogether unreasonable for Christian people to ask for such a thing. The Lord has many tasks, besides preaching, for men of exceptional ability, character, and training. These are important to society, and should be attended to.

But there should be preachers and scholars and philosophers of outstanding ability to head up the leading churches of every city and in every considerable rural region. These should set the standard of thinking and living. To many others, not so well endowed and equipped, minor tasks of instruction and details of leadership may be committed.

3. Another implication is that Christian churches must come into more harmonious and understanding relations with each other. Denominational leaders must do more than proclaim from time to time that the churches love each other, are united in service under the leadership of their common Lord and Master, and have the same aims of character and service. Federation, union, consolidation, co-operation in common tasks of education and missions—these are good words and denote some of the desirable trends of the times.

Each and all of the denominations have done excellent service. This should be freely admitted. The time has come, however, when interests may well be pooled; when the entire field should be carefully surveyed; when differences should be minimized; when agreement in substance should be emphasized; and when the great ideals and enterprises of the Christian church should be given the attention and consecrated effort they deserve.

4. It is implied that fewer and better preaching services will be held in the years to come. It should be in exceptional cases, only, that a minister preaches more than one sermon a Sunday in the same church. He may well preach a worthwhile sermon in two or three churches—and it may be broadcast. If any individual feels the need of more than one sermon a Sunday, he should be privileged to hear a second one in another church, or over the radio.

It is well that an increasingly large place is given, in our churches, to religious education, to discussion classes and clubs, and to such exercises as develop the power of the laity, especially the young, to participate. I know of one religious organization that maintains no paid preaching ministry. The Sunday morning service consists of a two-hour program of teaching and study for all ages. Young and old are grounded in the details of the faith of the church. At night is a service of music and addresses by members of various organizations, mostly young persons. The feeling is cultivated that this is their church, and that the people themselves are responsible for its maintenance and work. Throughout the week are held many classes and clubs, and the gymnasium and other recreational features are prominent. Outstanding speakers are heard from time to time. But the substance of the thought and teaching of their church is from the Bible and the writings of the man who, as their prophet, founded their organization.

5. All this implies that we should be wary of hard and fast rules as to preaching and church meetings. There needs to be considerable change in the organization and the administration of our Protestant churches. Denominationalism has had its day. It is dead, and should have a decent burial.

It may be that the Federal Council of Churches is destined to lead in a re-aligning of the Christian forces of this country. That organization may well be given larger discretionary powers by the constituent denominations, and allowed greater freedom in making over and directing the coming character and activities of Protestantism.

In view of all the conditions prevailing, the pastorate of an important church must be considered a man-sized job, for which adequate preparation should be made. The heart and mind of any godly young man might well be stirred at the thought of becoming the preacher, teacher, philosopher, and guide for a group of people of all ages and conditions.

THE TRAGEDY OF A MISSPENT LIFE

It is man's most distinguished privilege that he was made in the image and likeness of God's freedom, intelligence, holiness, and eternity. Each rational being therefore may well exclaim with the Psalmist, "I am fearfully and wonderfully made." Such Godlike endowments impose a most serious and fearful responsibility. The beneficent Creator has the sure right to expect the most grateful homage and service from each loyal subject. But alas! man has gone far away from the appointed path of rectitude. And the Father of the spirits of all flesh has been compelled to provide an allsufficient redemption to save fallen man from sin, death, and hell. And this redemption work imposes a still greater responsibility.

The failure to meet the most reasonable demands of both creation and redemption is, to say the least, a most damnable sin of disloyalty. It is to defeat the gracious purposes of the almighty Sovereign of souls. It is base ingratitude to the infinite Benefactor. It is gross rebellion against the kindest and most helpful of governments. And it is the defiant and shameful biting the hand that feeds and blesses.

The period of each human existence upon this planet constitutes a large sum of golden and precious opportunities. Each moment is an opportunity, or a fraction of one. To neglect or waste any of these Godgiven opportunities is most terrible and terrifying tragedy. It may be the tragedy of a body given over to neglect, disease, or lust. It may be the tragedy of a mind debased and enthralled by the prince of error. Or it may be the tragedy of a soul lost in sin and enslaved by evil habits. And lost opportunities never return.

There is also the tragedy of an unrequited love and devotion on the part of Deity. The Father of mercies is saying, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love. . . . Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. . . . God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." To be unmindful of this matchless love, to turn away from its anxious and longing appeal, to stamp its untold sacrifice under unhallowed feet is tragedy that makes angels weep and demons rejoice.

And there is the tragedy of an unavailing redemption. The atonement for sin is an accomplished fact. There is salvation by means of the blood of Jesus Christ, even the forgiveness of sins and everlasting life. This salvation from sin and eventually in heaven is laid up in store for each one of the sinning race. The gospel is the declaration of this gracious and glorious fact. The Holy Spirit appeals and works to transmute this fact into a real experience. Now, what a crime against self-interest it is to neglect or reject this great salvation? What ingratitude to permit the love and sacrifice of the triune God to be in vain? What a tragedy to face in the last day the terrifying reproach of an unappropriated redemption? And what an awful remorse will beset the man whose life has ended in defeat and failure? "Prepare to meet thy God."—The Word of Life.

THE LOST "AMEN"

Last night I went to see the pageant, "Marching Men of Methodism," presented here in Winston-Salem as a part of the celebration of the sesqui-centennial of Methodism in America. It was good, very good indeed. How marvelously these men of the earlier day wrought, and under what difficulties! But the difficulties were realy a challenge. They were out to win a continent for Christ.

But as I looked and listened, I also thought—which doesn't always follow—and some of my thoughts disturbed me. I listened, for instance, to the audience laugh at the little group on the stage who were reproducing a class meeting. The people were dressed in the garb of seventy-five, a hundred years ago, the rough garments of the frontier. But the audience didn't laugh at the clothes the little group on the stage wore. They laughed at the testimonies, and particularly, at the "Amens." And I wondered: Has Methodism lost its power because it has lost the "Amen," because it has ceased to testify? Or has it quit having anything to testify about, and therefore, has no need of the "Amen"?

C. W. Bates.

BE A SOUL-WINNER

It has been estimated that if there were only one Christian in the world, and he worked a year and won a friend for Christ, and if these two continued each year to win another, and if every man thus led into the Kingdom of Christ led another every year, in thirty-one years every person in the world would be converted.

Every atom in the universe can act on every other atom, but only through the atom next to it. And if a man would act upon every other man, he can do best by acting, one at a time, upon those beside him.

If you have found Christ, go, like Andrew and Philip, and tell some one else about Him; that he came to "save His people from their sins"; that there is no other way of salvation. He is "the Way, the Truth, and the Life." "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Marching Orders.

LOVE THAT UNDERSTANDS

By Charles W. Stone

With steps that were slow and leaden, Jimmy Crawford went homeward from school. A glance at his face would have revealed a troubled countenance—the look that one sometimes finds on the face of even a man who is, so to speak, down and out. Young Jimmy had cause for looking depressed and blue; his usually cheerful smile was not absent for no reason at all. In school today luck had been against him. First of all, he had lost the spelling contest to Raymond Willett; secondly, Katharine Houston, his young girl friend, had failed even to notice his brand new sweater, of which he was very proud; and even before that, his sister, Doris, hadn't had time to help him solve his left-over arithmetic problems that he had neglected to finish last night.

Thus, discouraged and seemingly isolated from the thoughts of everyone, the world held nothing more for the young man. His ego was just about flattened.

Well, he could always go to Donald, his young playmate and pal; there was someone who would help him feel better and revive in some manner his crushed feelings. Stopping at his friend's home, Jimmy walked hopelessly up on the porch and called to him:

''Hey, Don, ol' boy, come on out and let's catch some with your new ball and glove.''

The answer was discouraging. Donald grunted that he was listening to a good radio program that he couldn't possibly miss, and that he would play some with him, perhaps tomorrow.

With a suppressed desire to forcibly boot a brick that lay on the walk, Jimmy, head bowed and sorely displeased, proceeded across the lawn and on towards his home. That fellow was always listening to the radio, reading or something! Jim didn't especially desire to hear a radio of any sort today.

There was still one place to which he could go; in his room he could be alone and brood all he pleased. Why did anyone and everything have to cause a fellow to feel like he was feeling anyway? What was the use living any longer? No one would miss him; might as well be dead anyhow—these were his thoughts as he entered the door of his home and carelessly cast his books at the chair nearest him.

''Wonder where mother is,'' he thought.

But there she was. Smiling, she greeted him:

''Hello, sonny boy! How is the little soldier this afternoon? Say, did you win that spelling contest?''

''No,'' gloomily.

''Oh, that is too bad!''

''Teacher gave me all of the very hardest words,'' he grumbled. ''Everything went wrong——''

''Why, Jimmy, I've never seen you like this before. Come, now. It wasn't all that bad.''

Unconsciously he found himself responding to her loving, friendly smile—just the thing he had longed for all day. She understood, and sympathized with him when she saw his sad little attempt to smile. Suddenly her mind was made up in respect to a question which she had debated several months.

''Jimmy, dear,'' said she, ''I've decided to buy that little white doggie in the pet store that you have been wanting. Now, doesn't that help matters some?''

''Oh, mom!'' he cried, tears almost escaping from his joy-filled eyes, ''do you mean it? Oh, gee! I'm so glad! And he will be all mine, won't he? Say, mom, you are about the best person I know!''

She had understood his wants and needs; and now his clouds of gloom had given way to the bright sunshine of a mother's love. Just as did Jim, everyone needs a little love sometimes. Often it is about the best medicine that can be administered.

Brothers, and precious children, just as Mrs. Crawford understood her son's little cares and worries, so there is a Father in heaven who knows and loves. When others fail to comprehend our innermost feelings and moods and needs, we can go to Him and come away blessed, comforted, and happy. Why bother with telling our troubles and worries or cares to our neighbors or friends—who will tell them all over the community; we can take our burdens to the Lord and leave them there. Our Heavenly Father knows and supplies our every need. His love always endures and understands.

WIND

The wind doth blow so e'er it will,
Ye only hear the sound;
But whence it came, ye cannot tell,
Nor whither it is bound.
Ye only know the air, once still,
Is wakened from above,
And earth doth feel its quick'ning spell
Where e'er its breath doth move!

The Spirit comes within the soul,
New light and life are born,
As doth the lovely dawning breeze
Bring freshness of the morn.
The stagnant air doth quickly roll,
And foulness disappear,
As in the heart He sweetly breathes
A heav'nly atmosphere!

The world can never comprehend
The quick'ning from above;
But when the gentle wind doth steal,
It knows the breath of love.
Thus holy lives so softly send
Their fragrance on the air,
And souls around can sweetly feel
That God and Heav'n are there!

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

MEETING OF AUXILIARIES OF FIRST DISTRICT

There will be a meeting for all the Auxiliaries of First District held in Whitakers Methodist Protestant church, Whitakers, N. C., on Thursday, October 18, beginning at 10:30 a. m.

Due to the fact that I haven't heard from all who are to take part on the program, I am unable to publish the entire program.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Greensboro, has consented to review oer home study book, "The Christian Mission in America." I want to urge each Auxiliary to be 100 per cent present, to hear what Brother Pritchard has to say.

Some time during the afternoon session the roll will be called of the Auxiliaries and a count will be made. Appoint someone from each Auxiliary to give a financial report. Also state your best money-making plans and the things you have done to develop the spiritual side of the work.

I sincerely trust each one of the preachers of this district can be with us. I would like to introduce them. I feel sure some of our people do not know what preachers are serving this district, and I would like for them to meet them at that time.

While this is a meeting of the Woman's Work, I am sure the speakers will have something to say that the men will be interested in, so I invite them to come, too.

I am expecting some of the officials of the North Carolina Branch to speak to us. I am very sorry that our president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, cannot be with us. Let's each remember her in our prayers.

Hope this meeting will be record-breaking in attendance.

Everyone is asked to take lunch.

MRS. R. M. ROBINSON, Chmn.

CAKES FOR THE CHILDREN'S HOME CHILDREN

School has begun again, and with it the task of fixing a hundred or more lunches for the children at the Home to take to school with them. Do our children have cake in their lunches? Well, the children at the Home would like to have a piece, too, occasionally. And you can help give them that piece, by sending in cakes.

The response to this appeal last year was fine. I am making it again this year. And I started at home by asking the women from the churches in this District when we met at an all-day Mission Study last week if they would volunteer. The response was splendid. The following churches have agreed to send cakes during the following weeks:

Fourth week in September, Hickory Ridge, Forsyth Charge. Fifth week in September. Maple Springs, Forsyth Charge. First week in October, First Church, Winston. Second week in October, Mt. Carmel, Forsyth Charge.

I am asking that those interested bring this matter up in their Auxiliaries or Ladies' Aids. Four large cakes or five smaller ones will give a slice a piece around, one day a week. We would like to have some organization to make itself responsible for that one piece a week. If possible, get the cakes in early in the week. Let me know what week you will take, and if there is a conflict, I will try to arrange a schedule and publish it in the Herald for your guidance. There isn't much danger of the children getting too much cake; but we do want to spread it out.

THANK-OFFERING SERVICE AT MOUNT HERMON

Sunday evening, September 30, at 7:30, the ladies' Auxiliary of Mt. Hermon church will observe thank-offering service. Our former pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, present pastor of Grace church, Greensboro, will be the speaker. Mr. Carroll served for five successive years and has many friends around Mt. Hermon who will be glad to know that he will be with us for this occasion. We invite anyone interested to attend this service.

BIGGEST SHIP UNDER WAY

Present big ocean liners will have to send their honors over to the Normadie when she sets forth to conquer the seas next year. This great 75,000 ton, 1,027-foot vessel is now under construction in shipyards at St. Nazaire, France, and is due to sail for New York on her maiden voyage next June. Her closest competitor in size will be the British liner Majestic which has a registered tonnage of 56,600 and is 918 feet in length. All these gigantic liners are bound to be a waste of money in the end—but when it is money that is due the United States, it is a good policy for the European nations to put this money into boats rather than pay it to us.—Pathfinder.

CARD OF THANKS

On Tuesday evening, September 4, a group of people from the three churches on Spring Church Charge met in the parsonage for a surprise party and shower for our daughter, Sarah Marie, who on last Tuesday entered the freshman class at High Point College.

Miss Virginia Grant, who is a Junior in High Point College, planned the affair. A jolly good time was had by all present and many beautiful and useful gifts were received by Sara Marie.

Just before the crowd dispersed they joined hands and sang together that beautiful hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which the pastor led in prayer.

Again we want to say "Thank you," and "God bless you" for your kindness.

REV. and MRS. Wm. H. NEESE.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Friendship, Fallston, 5 tin cans and 9 glass jars and vegetables and 2 quilts.

Salem, Saxapahaw, 2 quilts.

Graham, 6 one-half gallon and 9 quart cans of fruits and vegetables, 6 glasses of jelly and 3 cans pet cream.

Baltimore, West Forsyth, 2 bushels wheat and 122 half-gallon cans fruit and vegetables.

Misses Lois and Lucile Bivins, Hillsboro, 5 dresses, 2 skirts, 1 suit and 1 bathrobe.

Mrs. T. W. Boyle, Lumberton, N. C., 5 pair shoes, 4 hats, 21 dresses, 3 pair socks, 1 pair hose, 1 girdle, 1 pair bloomers, 3 suits of pajamas, 3 collars and 1 belt.

Mrs. P. V. Bearden, Birmingham, Ala., 9 dresses, 7 pillow cases, 3 suits of pajamas and 1 pair bloomers.

Concord, Saxapahaw, 14 bushels of wheat and 44 half-gallon cans of fruit and vegetables.

We are so thankful for these gifts of money and clothing and produce. In both the above offerings of produce wheat is included. That is fine. We are expecting large offerings of canned goods within the next few weeks. We shall especially appreciate donations of grain of every kind and potatoes of both kinds in connection with these Harvest Home offerings. Work up theso offerings as best you can, deliver them to us if possible, but if you can't, then please notify us when and where to send for it.

Speiial for This Week

September 13th was a great day for the Children's Home. Though the rain poured down, a great crowd gathered in First Church, High Point, and listened to two grtat messages. Then there was an abundance of dinner for all, and the people left the balance for the children's supper. We thank you. The offering for the day was reported in last week's Herald, and was a great help to your workers here.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Spring Church Charge.—Seven of our young people have departed for college. Miss Katherine Crew finishes the U. N. C., Greensboro; Miss Virginia Massey enters the senior class in High Point College; Mr. James Massey is a Junior at the same institution; Mr. Lunsford Crew enters the freshman class at the State University. All of these are from Spring Church.

In addition to the parsonage family four from Spring Church Charge attended the Home-Coming Day the 13th. They were Mr. William Grant, Mrs. W. W. Grant, Mrs. R. M. Robinson and Mrs. H. E. Vassar. They deserve this special mention for braving the inclement weather for a distance of 180 miles.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Haw River, Glen Raven Charge.—Things are moving along very well in Haw River. We have the pastor paid and most of the budget. We hope to have it all paid by the fourth quarterly conference.

We are now in the midst of our rtvival meeting. Rev. C. B. Way, of Stokesdale, is the pulpit help. Mr. Way is doing some fine gospel preaching. The meeting will go through next Wednesday night. The congregations have not been as large as we hoped for, yet we feel we have accomplished much.

This church has only one more appointment before the Annual Conference. We hope to have all claims paid in full by the next appointment. T. S. COBLE.

Tabernacle-Julian.—We have not asked for much space or printer's ink for some time, but that does not mean that there is "nothing doing" in our churches.

Whether best or not, our churches have a set time for revival work. The custom is that the revival at Julian will embrace the third Sunday in July and that of Tabernacle will embrace the first Sunday in August. At Julian Dr. S. W. Taylor did the preaching for us. As was expected, he brought us soul-stirring messages which did us all good. There were no conversions or additions, but the work was by no means a failure. At Tabernacle Dr. N. G. Bethea was the pulpit help. His work also was highly acceptable and helpful. There was a number of reclamations and conversions, with four accessions. The large number of the people of this community are connected with some church. Our great need is the kind that will edify and develop. This is the kind we had in our revivals and we beleve great good was accomplshed. We greatly appreciate the work of the two brethren who brought the truth to us with so much emphasis and interest. God bless you, brethren. Come again.

The good people gave the pastor a nice vacation of two Sundays off duty. We did not make any long and expensive trip, but we just had a good time visiting among kinsfolk and friends. Some of the time was spent on pastorates of other days. We enjoyed church services among some of our own people and a part of the time we worshipped with people of other denominations. This was all enjoyed. Among it all we had a taste of how it seems to just enjoy what the other man does with no responsibility whaatever except to enter into the service of worship as planned by someone else, just receiving the good things with our part to contribute our presence and prayers. We were made to feel that people who have that part to play in services Sunday after Sunday should have a good time indeed. And really it should be so delightful that people should truly be able to readily say with the Psalmist, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." We enjoyed our vacation and we thank the good people for giving it to us and the good people of other churches where we worshipped as well as others who helped in making the time so enjoyable.

On last Sunday the officers for church and Sunday school at both churches were elected for the Conference year 1934-35. These will be installed at a later date. The Sunday school officers on the first Sunday of October so that with the Sunday school year they may begin their work. The church officers will be installed near the close of the Conference year so as to be ready for duties of the approaching Conference year. Our custom is to elect officers through a nominating committee which goes carefully through the entire membership, selecting those thought to be most suited for the various positions. These names are placed upon a ballot and on the day of election these ballots are distributed among the qualified members with the privilege of marking names if the nominee meets with the approval of the voter. If not, the voter has the privilege of substituting another name for the nominee. This plan has been used by the writer in various charges during the space of 20 years. It has usually met with the approval of the people. And with this experience the writer is convinced that he has never heard of a better plan for a Methodist Protestant church to elect officers. It would seem quite strange that our church has never adopted a plan by which officers of the church should be elected. It seems that this might be a matter for the next General Conference to think about.

At a recent membership meeting, the Julian people decided to recover their church and possibly do some other needed repairs. The Julian church is not large and few churches have suffered more in recent years because of death and removals but they are as faithful a band as is to be found anywhere. Their faithfulness and loyalty are certainly to be appreciated.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet on October 3 at 7:30 p. m. in Tabernacle church. It is hoped that we may have a good conference.

Among our sick is Miss Lizzie Hardin of the Julian church who underwent a very serious operation at the Wesley Long Hospital of Greensboro. She is now at her home in Julian improving, but is not yet able to leave her bed. We trus t she will soon be able to be cut again. We miss her at church.

We were indeed glad to have Mrs. Lora Belle Deviney, of Greensboro, with us at Julian on last Sunday. She formerly lived at Julian and she with her faithful husband, the late Mr. Jesse Deviney, had much to do in the making of Julian church. She and her family of fine boys are still members at Julian.

Miss Ruth Curry, daughter of the pastor, who lives in Charlotte, and Miss Virginia Jackson, of Baltimore, Md., have for the past ten days been visitors in the parsonage. Miss Ruth is a member of our church in Charlotte and Miss Virginia, who is the daughter of Mayor Jackson, is a member of our Star church in Baltimore. Miss Virginia's mother, Mrs. Howard Jacflson, accompanied her daughter during a part of her visit with us. The writer was the pastor of the Jacksons when ho was pastor of Broadway church of Baltimore. We are always glad to have them visit with us and renew experiences of other days.

GEO. L. CURRY.

First Church, Lexington.—Rev. C. G. Isley filled his regular appointment here Sunday at 11 o'clock and delivered a most timely message. Instead of the regular preaching service Sunday evening the Rally Day program was presented. The young people who took part are due much praise for their work in the pageant. Also Mrs. L. B. Koontz, under whose capable leadership it was presented. Mrs. Isley had charge of the recitations.

There will be no 11 o'clock service at First Church next Sunday due to the District Rally at Mocksville. Miss Juanita Easter and Ernest Hamilton will represent First Church.

October 7 will be the beginning of our autumn revival meeting. Rev. J. M. Morgan, of Albemarle, will be the pulpit help. We have been trying for some time to secure the assistance of Mr. Morgan for this meeting and are looking forward to a great revival.

Funeral services were conducted recently for little Odell Koontz, six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Koontz. Odell was struck down and killed instantly by a truck as he attempted to run across Main street to a baseball park. Services in charge of Rev. Isley were held at the church.

We were also made sad by the passing of Mrs. Amanda E. Morris. Although Mrs. Morris was not a member of First Church, she numbered many friends among our ranks, having made her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Westmoreland for some time. She had been in failing health for the past year and her condition became critical about four weeks before her soul slipped away to join loved ones in the spirit land.

Although her suffering was intense, she bore it patiently without a murmur or complaint. Even death had no terror. Several times before her death she spoke of her preparedness for the summons to come up higher. She left her earthly abode with an unfaltering trust in Christ, her Savior.

Mrs. Morris was possessed with a very lovable disposition. She was gentle and kind and had a kind word and smile for everyone she met. Her pain was never too severe for her to greet those who visited her with a smile. We feel our loss greatly, yet we rejoice because of her eternal gain. Also, we are proud of the goodly heritage she has left us. She needs little said of her, for her life speaks for itself.

In early girlhood she united with the church of Christ and remained a faithful and consistent member until her death.

She leaves to mourn their loss the following children: William and Carey Morris, of Canada; Harvey Morris, of Idaho; Barney Morris and Mrs. Orville Pfaff, of Winston-Salem; Mrs. T. I. Westmoreland, of Lexington; Mrs. E. M. Reid, of Thomasville; Mrs. J. W. Holder, of Canada; Mrs. C. I. Sprinkle, of Old Town, and Mrs. J. R. Holshouser, of Greensboro. Thirty-five grandchildren, 19 great-grandchildren and one brother also survive. Her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Carrie Wright and Mrs. Lula Stuart, preceded her in death. May these lonely hearts be comforted by Him who makes no mistakes and who shall wipe away all tears.

A short funeral service was held at the home of Mrs. Westmoreland, conducted by Rev. C. G. Isley and Rev. A. Odell Leonard, after which the remains were taken to Old Dutch Meeting House, near Rural Hall, where the funeral proper was conducted by Rev. Grabbs. Interment followed in the church cemetery. The many beautiful floral designs show the high esteem in which she was held.

English Street, High Point.—We have been having some unusually good services for the past few Sundays. Sunday a week ago at 2:30 we held a community singing. Singers were present from several surrounding churches and communities and there was an attendance of between four and five hundred. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the many beautiful songs.

The Senior C. E. Society presented the play, "A Poor Married Man," a few weeks ago to a large audience. The proceeds were very satisfactory and will go toward the work of the church and society. They plan to repeat it on Friday evening in Randleman. The society is also doing other good work. They usually take charge and conduct the Wednesday evening prayer services. Also, they are holding "sings," that is, singing hymns from one house to another.

We are glad to report that we have raised all of our A. C. B. and G. C. B. We are going to make a special effort to have all our claims paid in full by the end of the Conference year. Too, we hope to have our Herald quota raised before many more Sundays. We have quite a problem before us, that is, of building a new church in the near future, so that we may really accomplish something for Christ.

We are very sorry to report that our pastor's wife, Mrs. Hill, has not been able to attend church services recently. We are hoping she will soon be much improved and able to attend services again. REPORTER.

Weaver's Chapel, Littleton Charge.—As it has been quite a while since we've had a report from Weavers, will try and write a few words.

Our revival meeting was held the third week in August. Rev. C. G. Isley was our pastor's helper. He brought us some wonderful messages which will be long remembered. We believe and trust that these messages will do much towards the upbuilding of the kingdom. Nine new members were added to our register and a good number of our members reconsecrated themselves to the Lord. If there were any unsaved left it was not Bro. Isley's fault, for we believe he did his part, and we pray God's blessing on his work wherever he may go.

We had Sunday school Sunday at the usual hour 2 o'clock in the afternoon, with a good number present. We have reorganized the Sunday school and now have as our new superintendent Mr. L. G. Jenkins and Mrs. C. T. Cooley, assistant superintendent. We trust we can have a large school with lots of interest.

Mr. Frank Lancaster held prayer service at church Sunday night with a large crowd present. We hope much good was accomplished.

REPORTER.

Bethesda.—Rev. James H. Trollinger filled his appointment at Bethesda yesterday. His sermon was greatly enjoyed. We believe Bro. Trollinger is a real man of God and hope for him many blessings for his faithfulness in the work of the Master.

We are expecting the president of the Annual Conference, Dr. R. M. Andrews, to be with us sometime before Conference. It has been quite a while since any of our presidents have been with us. We trust that he feels we are a part of the N. C. Conference. We are only a little church way down in South Carolina. We know our president can not go everywhere, yet we want him to come if he can.

Well, Conference is almost here, and we have been handicapped in many ways; many things yet remain to be done. We hope to have all of our claims paid in full by Conference.

May the Lord bless all of our churches and give us a happy reunion in November.

J. R. BOAN, Reporter.

Asheville.—All of our Sunday school classes are working enthusiastically and all are doing excellent work. The Beginners' Class continues to lead the entire Sunday school in attendance and the Frances Cunningham Philathea class in amount of offering. In the children's department last Sunday the Golden Rule class won first place in amount of offering.

The Frances Cunningham Philathea class will hold its regular monthly business meeting Friday evening at the home of Mrs. D. J. Eller. This class has recently given three fine teachers to the children's department. We are proud of the work they are doing.

We deeply regret the death of Mr. C. Lincoln Baker, father-in-law of Mrs. C. B. Baker, our Auxiliary president. We extend to his bereaved family our sincerest sympathy.

Because of Mr. Baker's death, the Auxiliary meeting which was to have been held last Thursday at the home of Miss Frances Cunningham, was postponed until Thursday of this week.

The "Surprise Supper" given last Wednesday evening by Mrs. D. J. Eller and Mrs. J. R. Moore, was a great success. Proceeds of the supper were applied on the church budget. We deeply appreciate the splendid co-operation of these loyal members.

After choir practice Monday night Rev. and Mrs. Minnis were surprised with a pantry shower given by members of the church. We are not attempting to make Mr. Minnis the "biggest preacher in the Conference," (quality is more important than quantity, anyway), but merely wanted to express in a very small way our appreciation of the splendid work being done by our pastor and his wife.

Rally Day will be observed October 14th, and a splendid program is being planned. We hope everyone will join in making this the best Rally Day ever observed in our church. F. S. C.

Shiloh Charge.—It has not been necessary for me to report to the Herald very much during the year, as our church reporters have kept our readers informed about the most important activities of our work here. However, I think they have left some things to be said by the pastor, as they have not mentioned the many acts of kindness and appreciation the people have shown us during the year, and so I take this opportunity to express to all our people my very great appreciation for the splendid support and co-operation in carrying out our Conference program.

The revival meetings have all been held on this charge by the writer, and the results have been very gratifying. The meetings continued for eight days at each church and 46 have been added to our church roll.

Greer's Chapel seems to have taken on new life since the meeting. This church is young, but we have a faithful band here who are moving the work right on. Finances here are somewhat behind, but the people have two acres of church cotton to supplement their payments, and they hope to pay all claims in full and be on the Honor Roll. This church sent a birthday offering of $13.14 to the Children's Home and they have also canned 100 half gallon cans of fruits and vegetables for the Home. During the meeting here they gave me $7.00 in money and a supply of melons, fruits, vegetables, milk, etc. All these things help us along and we are grateful for the gifts and the givers.

Friendship Church is looking forward to being an Honor Roll church this year, having most of their budgets paid now. The Sunday school here sent a Birthday offering to the Children's Home of $21.16 and the ladies of the church have filled 25 half gallon cans for the Home. During the meeting seven new members were added to the church. Here we have a fine group of young people and a donation of $50.00 by a friend has made it possible for them to have a singing school that is in progress now. During the revival the people gave me an offering of $10.00 in cash, and here also we were remembered with melons, fruits, vegetables, for all of which we are grateful and may every giver be rewarded.

Shiloh church is on most of the Honor Rolls now, and those that remain unpaid will be met promptly. This church has been painted inside and outside; this of course adds much to its appearance and durability. Here the Birthday offering for the Children's Home in the Sunday school amounted to $73.30, and Circle No. 3 raised and sent in $22.40 for the same purpose. The Auxiliary has also canned 125 half gallon cans of fruits and vegetables for the Home.

We had a splendid revival in the church here with large crowds attending and the people thoroughly enjoyed it. I will not enlarge here, as the reporter has already given a report of it. During the meeting here the congregation gave me an offering of $24.50 and in addition to this I received personal donations from Bros. Richard and Floyd Berrier, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Tom and Fred Berrier, of Richmond, Va., and their father, Bro. Jed Berrier. They are good friends and supporters of Shiloh church, and while some of the boys have gone out in business they are still faithful to their church. While we are thinking of donations we are not unmindful of the many friends here who have remembered us all along with flour, fruits, vegetables, milk and butter, for all of which we are truly thankful. Space will not permit us to give all the names, but the dear Lord knows them all, and He will reward each of them.

The C. E. Society here is the largest I ever attended; their average attendance is around 75 wide-awake young people who are willing to serve in any place where they are called. They have pledged themselves to raise $125.00 of our church budget this year, and they are going to do it. Blessings upon them and their leader.

This charge has the distinction of sending in more subscriptions to the Herald than any charge in the Conference, and we hope to be 100 per cent in this before we come to the Annual Conference.

Mr. Ed Waitman, a member of Shiloh church, is the duly elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

I could write more, but for fear I stay too long I will move over and give place for more pastors to tell us what their churches are doing in Kingdom service.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

First Church, Lexington.—We will soon close our sixth year at this place. It has been six of the most pleasant years of my ministry. The people have just co-operated with us and helped us in our work. This has been the most successful year in my ministry. Here is a brief account of some of the happenings on my work. The Lord has enabled me to fill most all of my appointments. I have not missed any on account of sickness.

We began our revival at Mount Carmel the first Sunday in August, and continued through Friday night. Rev. J. T. Bowman, of Denton, came on Monday and remained through Friday night. The attendance and interest were good. The results: 18 professions and 13 accessions. Brother Bowman's preaching was of the highest order. Everybody seemed delighted with his messages. On Thursday night of the meeting these good people gave mother and me a great surprise in the way of a pounding. They know how to make a preacher feel good. We thank each and everyone that took part in it. I think this church will be clear of all indebtedness by Conference.

The salary is paid up to date at First Church. The A . C. Expense is paid for the year. The Superannuate Fund is paid for the year. The Herald Subsidy is also paid in full. Our College claims will be paid and we will make the Honor Roll in World Service. It is encouraging to see a group of people working so hard to pay all claims.

The Sunday school and preaching services seem to be taking on new life. We have already taken 43 new members in this year, and our fall revival begins the first Sunday in October with Rev. J. M. Morgan, of Concord, as our pulpit help. Hoping and praying that we may have a great revival. Our prayer meetings are well attended and have been led by the Christian Endeavor for the last two weeks.

We have been remembered with many good gifts from this church. I will mention a few of the givers. Mr. L. B. Koontz, one-half cord of wood. Mr. J. J. Mallard, wood. These men keep me in wood most of the time. Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hedrick, Mrs. C. B. Hamilton, and Mrs. J. A. Easter, vegetables. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Auman, five chickens and vegetables. Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Everidge, produce.

C. G. ISLEY, Pastor.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Charge.—It has been some time since there has been a report from this church. We are still on the map, however.

Our camp meeting began on Saturday night before the third Sunday and ran until the next Sunday. We had a right good meeting, but not what we would have liked to have had. I do not know how many were converted, but five joined the church. Others will joint at a later time. The people were made to praise God. Bro. Taylor was the pulpit help. He did wonderful preaching, and I think everybody that heard him preach greatly enjoyed it. We were pleased to have Mr. Taylor and Mrs. C. E. Ridge and Mr. E. A. Bingham in our home for dinner.

We have not had Sunday school since the protracted meeting began, but plan to resume that phase of the work the first Sunday in October.

There will be a home-coming day at Lane Chapel the second Sunday in October. Everybody is urged to attend.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Union Grove, Mocksville Charge.—Our revival meeting started last Sunday with a large congregation. Rev. Hutton surely has delivered many good sermons. Everybody seems to like him. Help us pray for lost souls to be saved.

Our Sunday school is the center of attraction in our community every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, and at 7:30 p. m. every Sunday our Junior and Senior C. E. Societies meet.

FLORA MAE WOOTEN, Reporter.

Reidsville.—Our revival meeting which began on the 10th instant closed on last Sunday night. The Lord blessed us, and we had a glorious meeting. Twenty united with the church on profession of faith. We are all greatly encouraged and believe that a better day has dawned for us here.

Rev. Joe Lynch, of Lynchburg, Va. , was with us most of the time and did the preaching. His sermons were soul-searching and results followed. In the truest sense of the term he is a great pastor-evangelist. Our people were delighted with his work.

Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, N. C., led the singing at all of the services. Despite the fact that we do not have much musical talent in our church, he succeeded in getting the congregation and the choir to sing most lustily. He endeared himself to the church and the community. He is a thoroughly consecrated young man, and sings the old Gospel songs to the glory of God.

Our pianist for the meeting was Mrs. Blanche Weatherly Neal, of Greensboro, N. C., and all who know her know that she made the old piano contribute all there was in it to the services. This service is all the more appreciated because she made a real sacrifice to render it. She is a member here. During the service we had the privilege of consecrating five children to the Lord in baptism.

The pastor is profoundly grateful for the splendid co-operation given him and his workers during the meeting by the members of the church. May God abundantly bless and prosper them. They made a fine donation of good things to eat to the pastor, and did everything possible to help during the campaign.

GEO. R. BROWN, Pastor.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—Dr. Andrews was with us the third Sunday afternoon of this month. He brought to us a fine message on "Prayer," taking his text from James 15:16. He pointed out to us some of the difficulties of prayer. Then he gave some of the results of it. His message was thoroughly enjoyed by the people present. His visit with us was appreciated very much. We always enjoy having him with us.

After the sermon he then made some remarks about the Herald. Brother Loy also asked that we people give our support to the Herald. It is one paper that I think every Methodist Protestant should support and have in their homes. I hope that our people will think about this more seriously and rally to its support.

The C. E. Society from Saxapahaw church will give a program at this church this coming Sunday evening from this. We hope to organize a society here that will be able to do much good.

The adult people of the church are planning on giving an old-time school exhibition some time soon to help raise the budget of our ladies' auxiliary.

The Lord's Supper will be observed at our next appointment the first Sunday morning in October.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—Our meeting came to a close Sunday afternoon. There were no visible results, so far as conversions and accessions are concerned, but it was by no means a vain effort. Those who attended were greatly helped by Brother Bethea's sermons. He was taken sick on Thursday, managed to get through with the service that night, but left for home Friday morning and was unable to return. So the pastor had to carry on the meeting to the close. We had a splendid congregation Sunday morning, preceded by a best-yet attendance at Sunday school.

Next Sunday will be observed as Promotion and Rally Day in Sunday school, with a Rally Day sermon following for the morning church service.

Sunday week the officers and teachers of the Sunday school will be installed, and the pastor will preach a special sermon to the Sunday school teachers in observance of National Sunday School Teachers' Recognition Day. The churches of the city are planning for a motorcade on Sunday afternoon, to be followed by a mass meeting in the Reynolds auditorium.

We are making progress on our finances. It begins to look now like we will have a good ending for the Conference year.

Perhaps the most encouraging piece of news just now is the effort to secure a parsonage. A called meeting of the quarterly conference will be held this week to hear a report from the committee appointed to investigate. They have a very fine property selected, and we think the deal will be closed within the next ten days or sooner.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Albemarle.—Our revival meeting began the first Sunday in September and closed the second Sunday night. We had Dr. Andrews with us for the 11 o'clock hour on the first Sunday. He brought a very inspiring message to an attentive congregation. Dr. Andrews' message was very helpful, and was appreciated by a large congregation.

Rev. G. H. Hendry was our pulpit help for the meeting. He came to us Sunday evening, and preached twice each day through the week. His messages were helpful and interesting. Three joined our church. A week of prayer was observed preceding the revival, and we feel that this proved of special benefit to the spiritual status of the church.

Our Sunday school is getting back to normal since the vacation season is about over. We had 181 present Sunday with several from out of town. The Men's Bible Class has increased its membership roll quite a bit. They had a chicken supper on Thursday night, September 13, in the church dining room. They invited their families to help enjoy the feast. It was a very enjoyable occasion.

Our Ladies' Aid has increased its membership surprisingly within the last year, and a new circle has been organized. We now have three very busy little groups. Our women are enthusiastic and full of courage, and their resourcefulness is a boon to our church. In times of stress they can always be depended upon.

REPORT OF FINDINGS COMMITTEE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION CONFERENCE

The following is the report made by the Committee on Findings and adopted by the leaders of the Southern Christian Education Conference held in connection with the Alabama Leadership Training School, Montgomery, Alabam, August 27-September 1, 1934. The conference proved so successful that it was decided to held it again next year, meeting with the North Carolina Summer Conference Leadership Training School: (F. L. Gibbs)..

Report of the Findings Committee

The report of the Findings Committee of the Southern Group Conference of Religious Education reaffirm our belief in leadership training as a means of extending the program of religious education throughout the entire denomination and make the following recommendations:

We, your Committee on Findings, in a conference unanimously approve the idea of having annually a conference of the Southern Conference Council Leaders.

We approve and urge the adoption in all the southern Conference Councils the A-level Curriculum as presented by Rev. F. L. Gibbs.

We recommend that wherever possible a course for ministers be held in connection with the Annual Leadership Training Schools, and that each council work out in conjunction with the Annual Conference means by which this course may be financed.

We recommend that each council sponsor a special day in the conference district in the interest of leadership training and the money raised on this day be used for that purpose.

We recommend that each Conference Council pay $10.00 annually into a common fund to be used each year toward paying the expenses of the Conference Council Executives to the Group Conference meeting and all the expenses above this amount be paid by each local Conference Council to be sent to the chairman of the Southern Group Conference by May 1, 1935.

We urge every student that attends the Leadership Training School bring his Bible and we also request the instructor to use it as his major resource book.

We recommend the organization of Leadership Training Clubs for the purpose of arousing interest in the Annual Leadership Training Schools, supporting a program of leadership training in the local church and the securing of money to pay pupils' way to the Annual Leadership Training Schools.

Realizing the importance of advertising as the means of arousing interest in the Annual L. T. Schools, we recommend that each conference appoint someone that is capable to direct the advertising.

We appreciate Mrs. Moore's address on Vacation Church Schools, calling our attention to the importance of it and we urge our councils to co-operate with local churches in promoting schools. We also urge each council to offer a course in administration of Vacation Church Schools in the Annual L. T. Schools.

We appreciate the work High Point College is doing and we urge our young people to go to this institution for their college training.

We appreciate the invitation of Rev. T. J. Whitehead, president of the North Carolina Conference Council of Religious Education, to hold our next meeting in connection with the North Carolina Leadership Training School, and we recommend that this conference take some action as to the time and place of the next meeting.

HISTORY OF WEST END, GREENSBORO

For the past 17 years the readers of this paper have followed the progress of West End Church, Greensboro. They will remember that it was from Grace church the members who were organized into a group to legally hold the property that was bought and from that church came the largest part of the 32 charter members who were taken into the church on September 23, 1917, by Rev. R. M. Andrews and Rev. N. G. Bethea.

At this time the building was incomplete and had but few furnishings. However, six years later, with the help of numerous friends and the Board of Home Missions, we were able to celebrate our sixth birthday in a building completed, furnished, and free from debt.

When the church was ten years old the community and its needs had grown so much that a new church school building was started at the cost of around $15,000. This was quite a big indebtedness for the membership, even though we had increased from 32 to over 200, and as yet this has not been paid in full, but we are hoping and planning to do so within the next few years.

Besides our regular church organization, we have carried on much successful work through other channels. Some of these were the Sunday school, Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies, which are now formed into an Auxiliary, Christian Endeavor Societies, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and a Brotherhood.

At present our Sunday school is especially well organized and is doing much good in the community. Our enrollment is about 400.

Two years ago these organizations gave the church a very unique Birthday Present in the form of five gallons of pennies. Each year some special effort is made for the building fund on this date.

The following pastors have very ably served us during the past 17 years: R. A. Huuter, N. M. Harrison, E. Lester Ballard, J. D. Williams, P. E. Lindley, Geo. L. Curry, and our present pastor, T. J. Whitehead. We would like very much to have each one of these men and their families back with us this year to celebrate our 17th birthday, which, fortunately for us, comes on Sunday. Not only would we like to have all our former pastors with us, but also all our present and former members and friends.

Below is a copy of the program we have planned for next Sunday, September 23, and we are extending a cordial invitation to everyone to attend all or part of these services.

9:45 a. m.—Sunday school.
11 a. m.—Morning service.
12:30—Picnic lunch.
1:45 p. m.—Memorial service; address by Dr. P. E. Lindley.
7:30 p. m.—Musical program, Young People's Choir.

SUMMARY OF 1934 LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS

Two thousand, nine hundred and ninety-four young people and church workers answered the challenge to train for leadership in 28 schools during the past summer. Four new schools were held. The steady growth of our schools during this quadrennium is revealed by the following statistics:

No. Schools	20	24	29	5

Incomplete returns show that a large number of youth leaders have given their time without remuneration, that more than a thousand young people have signed Life Service Declaration cards, and that the popular attendance will reach the 12,000 mark.

Statistics are very dry, but when we realize that each number indicates that someone has prepared himself for efficient service in the local church, they become very significant. A letter read to me over the telephone today by one of our deans indicates something of what his school meant to one young person in attendance. We quote from her letter as follows: "The school inspired and helped me to be a better Christian. . . . The wonderful meetings and vesper services were so well planned they made me a different person. . . . The Life Service Declaration card I signed is used as a book-mark in my Bible. I read it often to see if I am living up to the great Christian ideals which are there mentioned. I am teaching in the Junior Department of the Sunday school. The "Principles of Teaching" course which I took has certainly aided me in this work. I am eagerly looking forward to the school next summer."

This is a typical reaction which we receive from many of our young people. Their visions are broadened and their lives are inspired to more noble Christian service. Their lives are changed. There is a deeper consecration to the work that they have to do. Their training prepares them in a special way for the task in the local church. They appreciate what is being done for them and look forward to the future with great anticipation.

We have not received statistical reports from a few of the Councils, but the attendance at each school has been reported to us as follows. The schools are listed in order of their attendance:

Ohio, 418; West Virginia, 270; Maryland, 225; Indiana, 209; Pittsburgh, 152; Louisiana, 152; Onondago, 144; North Carolina, 140; Iowa-Missouri, 140; Michigan (Gull Lake), 122; Missouri, 121; Mississippi, 119; Illinois, 101; Forth Smith-Oklahoma (North), 91; Alabama, 86; Georgia, 80; Texas (East), 63; Arkansas (South), 48; Michigan (Miller Lake), 40; Arkansas (North), 38; Eastern, 38; Texhoma, 34; Ft. Smith-Oklahoma (South), 33; Kansas, 31; Texas (Central), 29; Kentucky (Stanton), 28; Kentucky (Pine Ridge), 22; Texas (West), 20.

The great interest on the part of our youth and youth leaders and the results herewith reported are due to the willingness on the part of our pastors and youth leaders to give of their time without remuneration in the cause of youth. For you we are indeed grateful! When our young people realize and come into possession of their heritage they will say of you: "Look, this our leaders did for us." And, they in turn will so aid the generations to follow them.

Yours for a better trained and consecrated leadership!

HOW UNICORN LEGEND BEGAN

At last it has been figured out, in all probability, the legend of the unicorn started. The unicorn, as everybody knows, is a fabulous horselike critter with a long sharp twisted horn in the center of its forehead. It appears with the lion on the British coat of arms. The explanation is so simple it's a wonder nobody ever thought of it before.

The word "unicorn" occurs in the Bible, but careful students of languages have said it was wrongly translated from the Hebrew word "re'em," which referred to a now extinct species of buffalo. The Modern Version of the Bible has the word translated "wild ox," whereas in the King James version it is rendered "unicorn." The word "unicorn" is Latin, and means "one-horn." It is probably worth noticing that words for this fantastic creature did not exist until Latin and Greek became important languages, which was considerably later than the Hebrew ascendancy. The Greek word for unicorn is "monoceros." Because of its similarity to rhinoceros, which means "nose-horn," it was for a long time thought there was some connection between unicorn and rhinoceros.

But now the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago has advanced a much simpler and more logical explanation. Scholars there say it all started because artists in old Babylon didn't know how to carve a picture of a bull and put on both horns so that it would look right. All they could make was flat-looking pictures that didn't show both sides of the animal. So when they made a picture of a bull they put on only one horn and, considering how many cattle's horns curve, it might have looked like it came right out of the animal's forehead. Some Greek or Latin people later saw the carvings, thought they really represnted a one-horned animal, and started the story of the nuicorn.—Pathfinder.

DEATH RAY DOUBTED

There seems to be a little misunderstanding in regard to the conditions surrounding the suppression of the death ray of Dr. Antenio Longoria of Cleveland. The program of the recent inventors' congress at Omaha included an exhibition of this new death dealing ray. According to A. G. Burns, the president of the congress, the exhibition was called off because of a request by the federal government that the ray be suppressed because of its terrible powers. The inventor readily agreed to the suppression, said Mr. Burns, who then went on to tell of the demonstration of the ray which he witnessed last October and which, he said, was also witnessed by several federal scientists.

Using a machine which was similar in appearance to a moving picture projection machine, Mr. Burns said Dr. Longoria killed small animals and pigeons at the distance of two blocks. Death appeared to take place instantly when the ray struck them, he said, and when they were examined it was found that their blood had been turned to water.

The difficulty which has now arisen is that the government officials responsible for the suppression cannot be found. Both the Patent Office and the War Department where it was thought something would be known of the affair denied all knowledge and expressed the desire to witness a demonstration by the inventor.—Pathfinder.

MARRIED

Miss Frances Millikan, the younger daughter of Mr. J. M. Millikan of Greensboro, was united in marriage to Mr. Herman H. Aderhold, of Atlanta and Greensboro, Saturday, September 8. The ceremony took place at 11 o'clock in Grace Methodist Protestant church, with Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, the bride's pastor, officiating.

Miss Millikan entered the church on the arm of her father, J. M. Millikan, who is chairman of the Board of Trustees of our Children's Home. R. T. Aderhold, of College Park, Ga., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Randolph E. Morrisett, Grace church organist.

Mrs. Aderhold is the younger daughter of Mr. J. M. Millikan of Sunset Hills, and has always lived in Greensboro. She studied at Salem Academy, Mary Baldwin College, and Virginia State Teachers College, and holds a degree from the latter institution. Since graduation she has taught in the Greensboro schools.

Mr. Aderhold is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Aderhold, of College Park, Ga. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia and for five years has been connected with the Southeastern Underwriters Association, with headquarters in Greensboro. Mr. and Mrs. Aderhold will make their home at 412 South Mendenhall street, this city.

Lemons-Heilig

Grace church parsonage was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday evening, September 22nd, when Miss Rachel Heilig, of Salisbury, and Mr. W. Raymond Lemons, of Stokesdale, were united in marriage by Rev. J. Elwood Carroll. There were no attendants.

Miss Heilig is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Heilig, of Salisbury. Mr. Lemons is the youngest son of Mr. D. P. Lemons and the late Mrs. Martha Lemons, of Stokesdale. He was a college classmate of Mr. Carroll, graduating from High Point College in 1928. Since that time he has taught school in Guilford and Rowan counties, but is now instructor of mathematics in the Walkertown High School. Mr. and Mrs. Lemons will make their home in Walkertown.

CROSSING MISHAPS DECREASE

A campaign waged in Canada during 1933 resulted in a decrease in grade crossing accidents, according to the National Safety Council. There were but 324 accidents of this type last year as compared with 529 in the peak year of 1930 and was also the lowest since 1928. One of the curious features of these crossing mishaps was that at least a third of them occurred when autos ran into trains.—Pathfinder.

As I sat in my study I closed my eyes and my mind saw some huge something passing by which resembled a great ocean liner. But the strange thing about it was, it was not on water but on land. It was larger than a dwelling-house and seemed to have lower and upper decks. And when it came to a place where the road was not smooth it seemed to make no difference with this great something—a ship or a house or whatever we may call it It moved straight ahead. And there were many people on it. Some on the lower decks were beckoning to the people by the way to come on. Those on the upper decks had musical instruments and many of the people were playing on harps. The music reminded one of the kind of music that people usually use when they are celebrating a great victory. I was greatly puzzled to know what it was all about when suddenly I recognized a man on this ship as Rev. J. D. Cranford. Then the whole thing was very plain to me. This huge structure was a float which the church at Lincolnton had rigged up to celebrate their victory in the Herald campaign. And they had made one that would run right over rough places and overcome any obstacle to represent their church which had forged ahead regardless of circumstances and had conquered. Well, well, Lincolnton, congratulations by the train load. I knew you could do it and I have been telling the world that you could do it. And now that you are over the top I trust your victory will bring you great joy and prepare you for other victories that are yet to be won.

And there was some fine work done at other places last week. Mrs. B. W. Little of Charlotte sending in so much money that she almost needed a wheelbarrow to roll it in. I am expecting several of these charges to go over the top and there is going to be great rejoicing when they do. Going over the top in the Herald campaign means more than sending in so much money for the Herald. It lets the church see that it can do things. And the Annual Conference and Haw River's subsidy! Wasn't that great!

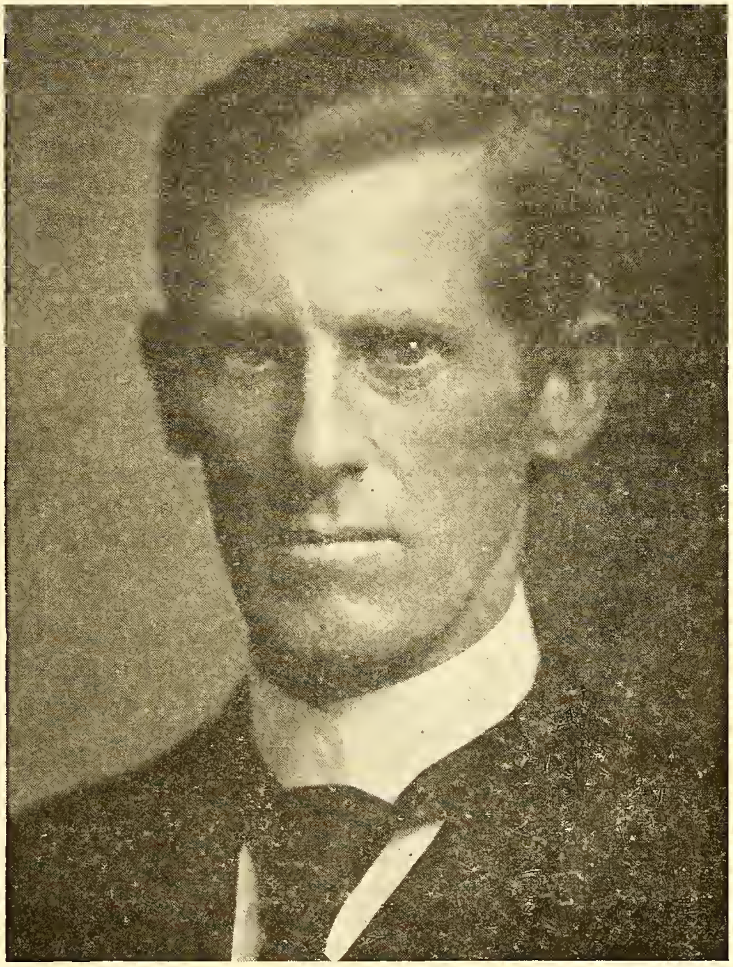
Life's Labors Ended, Heaven's Victory Won



Rev. J. F. McCulloch

HE HATH WROUGHT WELL

Dr. J. F. McCulloch—An Appreciation

By J. E. Pritchard

Joseph Flavius McCulloch, son of the late Joseph D. and Sara Julian McCulloch, was born in Guilford County, North Carolina, on June 24, 1856, and passed from labor to reward on Monday morning, October 1, 1934. Dr. McCulloch was educated in the public schools in Guilford county and later entered Adrian College at Adrian, Mich., where he graduated. He did post-graduate work at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and at Clark University at Worcester, Mass. He taught for some years at the University of Michigan and later returned to Adrian College where he served as president of that institution.

He was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Barrow, of Blissfield, Mich., who preceded him to the grave by several years. He is survived by two sons, Leon, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Warren, of Greensboro, and by one daughter, Miss Mary C., of Greensboro; three brothers, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro; A. E. McCulloch, of Pleasant Garden, and C. E., of Wilmington, N. C.

After giving up the presidency of Adrian College, Dr. McCulloch served the Methodist Protestant church at Fairmount, W. Va., for some time. In 1893 he returned to North Carolina for the purpose of establishing a church paper to be devoted to the upbuilding of the North Carolina Annual Conference. This paper was started in November, 1894, under the name of Our Church Record with Dr. McCulloch as its editor and publisher. Several years later the name of the paper was changed to The Methodist Protestant Herald, which name it still bears. Had he lived about six more weeks he would have been editor for forty years.

One of the major purposes of Dr. McCulloch in starting a church paper was to create sentiment for the building of a denominational college in North Carolina, and in this he never lost hope, and finally saw his dream come true. But there was much waiting and much work and a great deal of anxiety before his purposes were accomplished. Soon after he began publishing the paper he saw that some means of financing the paper was absolutely necessary other than subscriptions, if the paper were to succeed. So he raised the money to build a publishing house at 302½ South Elm street in Greensboro. At that time Greensboro was a comparatively small place, but now the place has grown into a considerable city and the publishing house is on the busiest street of the city. Part of this building was used as a printing plant and the remainder was rented for a considerable sum. This rent supplemented the subscription receipts to the paper. A good many years later Dr. McCulloch built a publishing house at the rear of his home on Asheboro street and the church paper was moved into new quarters. The old publishing house was turned over to the Board of Education of the North Carolina Annual Conference. Dr. McCulloch also raised the money to buy a considerable tract of land on Asheboro street on which he hoped the college would ultimately be built. It was decided, however, to build the college in High Point, and the tract of land which had been bought became the property also of the Board of Education. When the college was built, one of the dormitories was named in honor of Dr. McCulloch and he was also elected professor of mathematics, which position he held for some time.

While Dr. McCulloch was never strong in body, he made up for this in determination. When he had grown old and frail his friends advised him to retire from active work but he refused. About one month before his death his body became too weak to work longer. Two weeks before his death he became seriously ill and he lingered between life and death until, finally, as peacefully as a child goes to sleep, he went to sleep on earth to awake in glory. His funeral was held from Calvary Methodist Protestant church (of which church he was a charter member and where he taught a Sunday school class of men as long as he was able to teach) on Wednesday, October 3, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The pastor of the church, who is the writer of this article, was assisted by Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., the president of the North Carolina Annual Conference, and by Dr. S. K. Spahr, pastor emeritus of Grace church and a lifelong friend of the deceased. Dr. Spahr spoke on the subject "Dr. McCulloch as I Knew Him" and Dr. Andrews spoke on his work in the North Carolina Conference. Members of Dr. McCulloch's Sunday school class acted as active pallbearers, while the remainder of his class and ministers in the North Carolina Conference were honorary pallbearers. Burial was in the cemetery at Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church nine miles southeast of Greensboro, the community in which he was brought up.

Now that he is gone, what shall we say of him? His going is too recent for us to fully comprehend the breadth and depth of his life. As the days come and go, more and more will we realize the fact that a great man has lived among us. While we cannot now grasp the entire meaning of his life, these things will stand out as everlastingly true: First, he is the real founder of High Point College. Had it not been for his determination to keep the subject of a college before the people of the North Carolina Conference, it is doubtful if High Point College would have been built. It is true that others worked with him and in the end took the lead in building, but he was the pioneer, the one who kept it everlastingly before us.

In the second place, the paper which he founded and which he edited has been a great factor in building up the North Carolina Annual Conference. While it may have taken our minds somewhat off the general church and centered it on an annual conference, it has kept before the people of his conference from time to time the needs of the church in this state. And while it has been a conference organ its pages have always been open to the representatives of the general church and in a great many cases these officials have made use of this opportunity. But our church, our college and the Children's Home never could have been what they are had it not been for this man of God.

Finally, he was a man of strong faith and strong convictions. He believed in God and believed in men. He believed that the right must ultimately triumph. With this upon which to lean he went forward to victory. Other men of less faith and less determination would have fallen by the waysied. He persevered. He never knew defeat.

I LIKE TREES

By Luther K. Long

Trees delight my eyes.
Royal palms and spreading maples,
Stately elms, and live oaks
Draped with Spanish moss,
Slender eucalyptus and giant red woods,
Tall, long-leaved pines, and
Tulip trees with truncated leaves,
Friendly beech and spicy sassafras,
Sturdy burr-oak and tough hickory—
I enjoy their varied shades of summer green
And their rich autumn hues of
Brown and red and gold.

Trees are generous with flowers, fruits and nuts.
Thanks for the smell of apple and orange blossoms!
Blessing on the men who taught apple trees to bear
Baldwins, the Rambo and Grime's Golden.
Similar gratitude is due for training peach trees to produce
The Belle of Georgia, South Haven and gold drop.
Who would not a-nutting go?
This promotes journeys and friendships:
Yes, Cupid is interested in nuts!

Trees make excellent fuel.
Thank God for my childhood
Before a glowing fire-place.
I see my father rolling in the Big back-log.
From the green hickory fore-stick
I see sweet sap oozing out.
In spite of heat,
My eager finger
Laps up the delicious syrup.
What a place for cracking nuts and Roasting winter apples.
Mother made delicious corn-meal mush in

Trees are for houses and furniture;
For framing, oak and pine and red wood;
For roofing, cedar, pine and cypress;
Maple, ash and oak for flooring and finishing;
Furniture calls for
Walnut, cherry, ash, cedar and maple.
Sawing, planing, bending, turning, carving and polishing
Add to natural beauties and values.

Trees inspire fine sentiments.
"As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood,
So is my beloved among the sons."
"Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit."
Every good tree is a tree of life,
Helping to establish men's feet
In God's good earth
And raising the aspiring soul to Loftier heights.
Thank God for an increasing interest in trees;
May our forests and orchards be appreciated,
Preserved and improved.

PRAYING FOR PROSPERITY

Rev. W. A. Ledford

The pastoral letter of the elder John to Gaius, frequently called "New Year Letter," is almost too private and personal to make comfortable reading for the public. One feels as if he were listening in on some unlawful conversation. The aged pastor prays for the prosperity of his spiritual child in all things, compliments him on his walk, and for his hospitality; also sounds a word of warning concerning the domineering "rule or ruin" Diotrephes, who loved to have the prominence, and closes with a good word for Demetrius, as did Paul for the household of Onesiphorus.

Praying for prosperity is modern indeed. During the depression myriads of prayers have been offered up for the return of prosperity; most of them have gone beyond the scriptural limit for daily bread and have sought the riches that are both deceitful and void of life. Solomon's prayer for neither riches nor poverty has not been the common prayer. Jesus' remarks concerning the gaining of the whole world, and losing of one's soul, and the disastrous fall of the rich fool, doesn't seem to daunt in the least. Even our country has repulsed many of the temperance laws for worldly gain.

This pastor was not disturbed, as many are, over the soul prosperity of his spiritual child. That was perfectly satisfactory; but he was either suffering some bodily affliction, or financial reverses. Whatever the trouble was, such a pastoral, comforting, assuring letter would be tonic for the hard-pressed Gaius in the crucial hours. We appreciate our friends remembering us at all times, but more so when the clouds of sorrow are lowering over us.

The prosperity in which Gaius excelled is in all too many cases conspicuous by its absence. The lack is becoming disturbing, if not alarming, among so many professing Christians. They have a form of godliness, but are lacking in power thereof; and attend church on special occasions; contribute according to their meanness, rather than their means. From the way they forsake their houses of worship on the Sabbath, and crowd the highways, one would inevitably conclude that they were travelling in the way of sinners, and taking their counsel from the ungodly. This is no dream, but a real picture of life.

Who is to blame for this low ebb in spiritual prosperity? this lack of soul prosperity that the Scriptures stress so much? While there may be many contributing causes, may not the major fault be laid at the door of the church itself? Recently the editor of one of the leading national religious weeklies of America charged the modern churches of receiving new members without taking into consideration their spiritual fitness, any more than some of our fraternal orders would. One must be born again to get into the kingdom of God; but can get into our modern churches by shaking hands. The prayers for strengthening of the inner man are not heard with the force as in other days. The preaching on the cardinal doctrines of Christianity, such as repentance, conversion, the new birth, the witness of the Spirit, the baptism of the Spirit, and the judgment to come, is not done as it should be. There is too much truth for comfort, in all too many places, of the charge of the noted English minister that the American church had lost its old-time fire and become a social organizaton or society.

The outlook may appear dark, but the case is not hopeless. Concerted action from both the pulpit and pew in seeking first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and trusting God for material blessings will change things. Jesus Christ must be lifted up before the modern world, and He will draw all men unto Him. Soul prosperity, the recovery of the sense of God, and a new deal that results in making new creatures in Christ Jesus are our greatest needs. When Zion travaileth she bringeth forth sons and daughters. We shall recover our soul prosperity.

STILL CANTERING

No, "Tither" is not sick, but his rider has been somewhat indisposed for several days, so have not gotten in my reply to "Finances Again," as soon as intended. I am glad of a comeback in this financial discussion, for someone who has not given either steed a consideration may decide to "trade in" with me or Brother Fogleman, for I am sure they are good hobbies to ride, though I am of the opinion that he does not think as much of mine as I do of his.

It was not my intention to raise anybody's ire to that degree that I would be accused of being short in vision or wilfully desiring to muddy the water, in order that I might lead someone in where they could not see what they were doing. My intention is that people "may see clearly and act wisely."

Now if Brother Fogleman intends to take this "outstanding Bible student and religious leader" as a guide in his opinion about legal and moral law, I would challenge him through this writer to show just when this change came about, if "it is now binding on the conscience no longer." I have never found anyone yet who could say that such had been definitely repealed.

If I have seemed to minify Brother Fogleman's position by calling it "splitting hairs," I apologize for that, for I am in accord with having a system that has some merit to it, but until people are shown that they have a definite task to perform, you may give them the privilege of setting their own goal and the bulk of them will fall down on the job.

My purpose in my former paper was to get folks to see that if they would have a system to go by, and would live up to that system to that degree that a drop in prices would not cause them to cut off the church first, and would do the thing for the real purpose of glorifying God and having His blessings because of loyalty to a principle, there would be a reward in their giving that would bring joy and prosperity, because right living in anything brings its rewards as promised in God's word, and there is nothing more plainly brought out than that of rewards for honoring God with our substance.

Why need Paul mention a tenth? The principle had been so fully set forth that to give according to prosperity would naturally bring up the fact that if one was not so prosperous his paying would be in proportion.

Here is a plain fact on this teaching, given by an agriculturist: "One-tenth of the world's crops are being destroyed by insects." This was taken from one of our daily papers recently, given without any thought of applying a legal or moral or spiritual truth. Just a plain statement. No thought in mind but to help people to see the importance of destroying insects. But with all the improved methods for so doing the destroyer is still here and according to Malichi will still be here till people honor the Lord with their tithe. (Mal. 3:11.) He has not been rebuked as yet; if we will read this reference, we will see.

From the time I have first studied this subject I have believed that no one should ever give under a tenth, for it seems to me that under grace there should be a greater liberality. That is why I said never less.

Jesus did not condemn the Pharisee for his tithing, commended that, but for his formality. I have been accused of being pharisaical about this thing by some. It is a pity but what we would try to emulate some of the doctrines of this sect. Of course, if you will study what he believed you will see he stood for some of our fundamentals.

To be sure I see the danger here of becoming a legalist. I also see the danger of becoming a robber in God's sight of the things that belong to the Kingdom that rightfully do not belong in our pockets but in God's storehouse. Some plain, straightforward teaching along this line needs to be done, as well as some straight from the shoulder prophetic preaching of what will be the result if we keep on robbing God.

Our trouble, brethren, is this: When we first go to a place the people are so kind to us that we are afraid we will offend them if we preach on liberality. Some fail after a while to do as we see they should along this line, then we get out of patience and begin to talk in such a way as to drive folks from what we want done and from the church sometimes, and thus we begin to lose from the beginning. Jesus had great throngs in the beginning of His ministry. The people turned from Him when He laid down just what it took to be His disciple. Let us talk to folks about the truths that are essential, whatever that may be, and God will take care of the results.

The writer is convinced of this fact: What our people need is to be taught to give from principle, and then it will be a matter of loyalty and if they happen not to be too well pleased with their pastor they will give from principle and not quit as soon as the "new" wears off. Then a new man will not have to go and work hard to build up finances at the place where the folks claim it was run down because the preacher did not do his part. I wonder if any of our pastors have come in contact with anything like that?

I have advocated this not to "muddy the water" but that people might have what belongs to them in blessing and material prosperity. In the 37 years in the ministry I have tried to lead people this way, and I am satisfied there have been some results. Never failed to be paid for my work with one exception, that was negligible, overpaid many times more than that, salary only cut once, and that was here when the general slash was made during the depression; as to getting claims paid that is a matter of record. I do not attribute this to better preaching or harder work, for I have many superiors, but have tried to lead my people to greater heights along this line by precept and example in liberal giving.

I am sorry that Brother Fogleman's plan has not been tried out, voted for it to be, and am hoping that it will be done, but until then and after then I shall say, "Gallop on, Tither, for there is much work to be done among the people, including preachers in some instances. The way is long and steep, but we must not fail until the prophecy, as given in Isaiah 60:11 shall be fulfilled: "Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the wealth of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought." Yes, ride on, faithful steed, until all God's people shall become not less than a tither.

METHODIST UNION

The commissioners on church union, representing the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church, met August 28-29 in Chicago. Apparently this is the most advanced step thus far taken in the direction of Methodist union. Certainly all Methodist Protestants are deeply interested in that which happened at the meeting.

The best general description of the meeting that has thus far come to my attention is from Dr. S. W. Taylor, of our own conference, and a member of the commission. "The meeting was characterized by an unmistakable desire for union, and by thoughtful, earnest, prayerful effort to bring these three churches into organic union.'"

A more definite description of the commission and the work done is to be found in a statement from Dr. L. B. Smith, member of the commission, Maryland conference, M. P. church: "The three commissions included about 50 members, too large a body to perfect detailed plans for unity, so a committee of 15 was appointed by the commission to work out definite plans and present them to the larger group for action. . . . It is hoped that the committee of 15 will meet sometime during the sesqui-centennial celebration in Baltimore, October 10, 11 and 12. . . . The committee has been pledged to secrecy regarding its plans until a proposed method of union is worked out. . . . "

From the New York Times, September 8, as per Methodist Protestant Recorder, September 14, we glean the following additional facts: "The reopening of an organized movement to merge the three leading bodies of Methodism in the United States was announced yesterday at the Methodist Book Concern, 150 Fifth Avenue. . . . The year 1944 had been set as the goal when it is hoped to have the single Methodist body."

Other statements from the same article read as follows: "Ten years ago it was believed the Methodist Episcopal church, which takes in congregations in the north, and the Methodist Episcopal church, South, would unite, but there was a halt in this move. The proposal, when submitted to the local conferences, failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote. . . . The project remained dormant until last spring, when the Methodist Episcopal church, South, at its convention at Jackson, Miss., revived it. It was this body that advocated 1944 as the date for complete unification."

Dr. Smith gives this glimpse into the nature of the new church: "The commission meeting last week in Chicago expressed itself as recommending an episcopal form of government for a united Methodism, and no opposition was expressed from the Methodist Protestants at the meeting." Those from our church on the committee of fifteen, which lays the groundwork for the new church, are Dr. A. N. Ward, Westminster, Maryland; Dr. J. C. Williams, president of the Ohio Annual Conference, and W. C. Perkins, Pittsburgh, Pa.

On the surface these announcements seem to indicate union; deeper they indicate formalities, decisions and possible delays. At the very best, the consummation is at least ten years off, 1944. Through it all we should remember that the two churches associated with us in this high endeavor are self-sufficient, entirely able to go on indefinitely as they are. With them union is optional; we should studiously avoid any and everything that would even seem to make it compulsory with us. In other words, we should immediately address ourselves to the task of reconstruction within our own church. At present Methodist union is little more than a hope. Certainly there will be many delays, some within our own faith.

Commenting editorially upon the proposed union, the Methodist Protestant Recorder, September 14, says, "We are told that the entire commission is committed to the episcopal form of government. We are sure that is necessary when the numbers involved are considered. As one of democratic Methodism we could not hope to control the larger group. We can only say in absolute candor that if the episcopacy carries with it any sacramentarian suggestion or is to be regarded as a seperate order of the ministry we may obey its mandates in work but we will not be able to so hold it in faith."

At another point in the same editorial we read, "Frankness compels us to say that there are many members of the Methodist Protestant church who are not now certain of their desire for the union. In every public gathering the expressed hope of the union is applauded by many, but when the meeting adjourns it is always to be observed that there are numbers who express in private their doubts as to the advisability of the union. Just how many there are who are opposed to the union it is impossible now to tell and will be revealed only when the detailed plans are presented to the annual conference.

H. F. Fogleman.

COMFORT

Comfort does not come to the light-hearted and merry. We must go down into "depths" if we would experience this most precious of God's gifts—comfort, and thus be prepared to be co-workers together with Him.

When night——needful night—gathers over the garden of our souls, when the leaves close up, and the flowers no longer hold any sunlight within their folded petals, there shall never be wanting, even in the thickest darkness, drops of heavenly dew—dew which falls only when the sun has gone. —Anonymous.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

These Charges Pay A. C. Expenses in October

The following churches have paid all Annual Conference claims:

Gibsonville, Siler City.

Finish in October

Those incompleted payments to all claims and to the pastor. There are many churches very near the Honor Roll, i. e., owe just one claim or a little on several conference claims. Let's finish these during October. Last year we made October ''pay-up month'' and there were some churches which were entirely up with all claims a full week before conference met. We want to greatly enlarge this list this year.

If a Church Has Met All Claims

If a church has met all claims for either pastor or World Service or annual conference, I will appreciate it very much if someone will drop me a card saying, ''Blank church has paid A. C. claims, paid pastor in full,'' etc. I shall make a list of these, thus giving recognition to those doing it. It will encourage others to do the same. And about the first of November we can have a complete set-up of all such churches—that will be fine. So come along—begin next week.

Boost Pastor's Salary

Five years ago the average salary of our pastors was about $1,200. This was greatly boosted by a few churches paying salaries of $3,000 and more. There are no such salaries any more, but there are lots of preachers receiving around $500 this year, a majority receiving $1,000. While this represents all some churches can pay, and when it does your pastor is perfectly content to give you his best for that amount; but this does not represent the best that some churches can do, although that is all they are now paying. We urge you to do better when time comes to fix the salary for your pastor; make it just as high as possible, considering the ability of the members to pay. The cost of living is rising, in fact has already ''ris'' on several articles of food; your pastor as well as you feels this; help him to meet it. It will bring joy to both the giver and the recipient. We hope to hear of several charges doing this before conference.

About Instructing for a Pastor

There has grown up a custom in our conference that at the fourth quarterly conference a vote may be taken expressing the desires of the membership as to the return of the present pastor or as to who shall serve them for the coming year. The vote might be taken by the membership of the church at any congregational meeting with equal propriety. It indicates to the pastor the wishes of the membership he has served. It ought never to be interpreted as meaning that although a majority of those voting wanted a change that the pastor could not be returned for another year. No pastor would desire to do it, but there should be nothing final about it. The annual conference has the final say in this matter and it must be so regarded if we are to preserve this element in our system of pastoral supply. No church or delegate should make demands upon the stationing committee of the annual conference. Unless the committee is free to act in every case it should not be required to act in any case. Every church must be willing for this committee to supply it, and every pastor must put himself in the hands of said committee, ready to accept its appointment as final. Such an understanding would greatly relieve the strain and burden upon the committee and make the preacher feel better when he received his appointment.

Community Church, Rev. H. F. Surratt, Pastor

This is Brother Surratt's second year and the work is running much smoother than last year. There were elements which made it most difficult for the pastor to build a constructive program; these are less in the way and there are tokens of progress which encourage us. Brother Surratt is hopeful of closing a good year financially; expecting to pay claims. This is one church which accepted the entire assessment for World Service and he is expecting the entire amount to be paid. Already the subscription quota has been reached, the subsidy paid, and several of the annual conference claims paid in full; so there is not so much between this church and Honor Roll A plus. We are expecting it to reach this goal. The numerical increase has not been what we would like to see and yet we think the church has done well to come through with no greater numerical losses than it has sustained. We believe there is a place for community church and there are some most loyal members in it who are striving with all their might to make it fulfill this place.

District No. 8

This meeting was held at Pleasant Grove church in the afternoon. All pastors except two were present. It seems that it is difficult to find a time for these meetings which suits the convenience of all pastors. However, Chairman Surratt has held the meetings on the fifth Sundays this year and seems to think the time suits the rural churches as well as any time which might be chosen. It was a good meeting. The attendance, while not large, was representative, and there was an interesting program. We are of the opinion there is a larger place for the district meeting in our church life than we have yet discovered. Not enough interest is shown for the meetings by the church members, which has tended to lessen the effectiveness of the programs which are planned and put on.

First Church, Thomasville, Rev. T. G. Madison, Pastor

I visited this church at night; there was present a very good congregation. This is the fifth year of Pastor Madison on this work. They have been years of steady growth, of substantial progress, we believe, although there has been nothing spectacular about it. Many of the members have been greatly affected by the changes in the industrial conditions during the past few years, which effect has reflected itself upon the progress of the church. Yet, we believe this church to be in a good condition and capable of larger church in the coming decade than in the last.

The pastor expects all claims to be met in full and will doubtless see his church on the Honor Roll A plus. For more than a year this congregation has had its worship period just before the Sunday school meets and has found it so satisfactory that the pastor said no body even discussed the availability of a change back to the old time of holding the preaching service.

OUR MINISTER

By Victor P. Hammer

He is first to go, sanctifies the bier,
Plays the angel-part when the shadows near;
Goes about the parish without disguise,
Is a welcome guest where the trustful eyes
Of his flock and friends concentrate their love
On the man of God from that realm above,
As he lives and serves beneath Heaven's dome
The beatitudes of the Church and Home.

All the tender lives in their youthful zest
By his course are shaped for a life the best;
In his counsels wise to the sage and peer
Are embodied truths most divinely clear;
At the altar fires of his gracious charge
He lifts men from sin and their lives enlarge,
And turns them away from the shades of night
As he shines around like a beacon light.

Yes, our Minister is a son divine
Who ennobles that which is yours and mine;
Like the sun, his rays, in the course he goes,
Change hearts and minds and assuage woes;
Clears the way for happier, sweeter days
When we live and love in more righteous ways,
And, then, lifts our thoughts to a Christian world
Where the Flag of Christ is for us unfurled!

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

Something to Read

One reason for writing these articles, I suggested in the very beginning, was the fact that certain good material suited to the needs of ministers comes to my attention from books and magazines which I am called upon to read in connection with teaching religious education. I am urging today that you read one selection I have thus found to be of unusual importance.

The reference to which I am directing you is an article by Dr. Fosdick on "What Is the Matter With Preaching?" It can be found in the Harper's Magazine for July, 1928. You will have no difficulty in finding the article, I think, since it is the first article in that number. No doubt many of my former students will at once recognize the article, since we used to study it on class here at the college. The discussion is so fine I can never get through praising it. In my opinion it gives the best points on organizing and presenting sermonic material you can possibly find.

Perhaps I should state that in that article Dr. Fosdick is not speaking a word about theology or doctrines. So if you happen to differ with the author on certain teachings you need have no fear of danger to your orthodoxy. It is purely a matter of arranging and presenting the material of the sermon. It deals only with technique, but ever since I read it I have had a new appreciation for the question of delivery and appeal in the sermon. No doubt, if you read these "notes" you will see that Dr. Fosdick's discussion has influenced my point of view. I hope it has, since I consider his instructions in Harper's Magazine the very best on the subject. The point of view there expressed is, I believe, absolutely indispensable to the most effective preaching.

You see, I can boast of the value of the article since it is not my own. I want you to read it. Read it slowly, carefully. Then actually try to measure your methods by it. You will be greatly rewarded; preaching will become easier and more interesting, and your hearers will, I feel sure, find a new delight in your sermons.

PARALLEL LIVES

By Victor P. Hammer

Not in vain, nor lost, have their works been spread
O'er the world about, where the weary tread;
But like seed well sown for the harvest yield
There will be a day for to reap the field.

One, for years just watching and feeding flocks
Like the shepherd boy who has "climbed the rocks,"
In the same long span over tiresome days
Thus another watched at the home-fire blaze.

Of the two men's thoughts, of a common trend,
They became as one in a trusted friend;
In exalted minds for the greater good,
Both together served, and were understood.

While profession's plan kept them far apart,
It was twain to live but as one at heart;
For the same grand goal met the pair always—
Nothing stopped their zeal nor their righteous praise.

How the sunset rays seem to form a net
For these noble men we cannot forget;
Yet, there's something left in the wake of fame
That will ever brighten each holy name.

May the Hand of Time stay the fatal hour
And let these true lives grow another flower—
Just to add one more to sweet memory
To the stores in trust for eternity.

Who have labored long in their high estate,
And have shared their all, must be classed as great;
And may each receive as a just reward
Precious gifts of love from our gracious Lord.

(An appreciation of the life and ministry of Rev. J. F. McCulloch and an unnamed contemporary friend.)

WORTHY HONOR ROLL

Additional Report

Rev. H. L. Powell writes that Pleasant Grove church went over the top on September 13 and expects a picture.

Please do not send me any money for Children's Home. It should go to Dr. A. G. Dixon, Superintendent, Children's Home, High Point. Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

"GOD IS IN THE THUNDER"

One day a party sailed down the harbor in a boat. The weather was fine when they started. In the afternoon a black cloud arose, the thunder rolled and the lightning flashed, occasioning great alarm among the ladies. One lady was more frightened than the rest; her little daughter nestled towards her, taking her hand and looking up into her mother's face with a look of pity and surprise.

"Mother," said she, "God is in the thunder; can't we trust Him when He speaks loud as well as when He speaks easy?'"

"Yes, my child," replied the rebuked mother, with a tear in her eye. "And pray, Mary, that I may have the perfect trust of a little child."

How precious was little Mary's faith!

"What time I am afraid, I will trust in Thee" (Ps. 56:3). —The Home Evangel.

TEMPLE BUILDERS

By Victor P. Hammer

We are builders or wreckers wherever we go,
In the tropical sun or the cold arctic snow;
From the dawn of the morn to the twilight's last ray,
We but labor or shirk in the task of the day.
If we try to pull down that which others have wrought,
By the arts that we practice we'll surely be caught.
All the good that we do or the evil conceive
Will return as a blessing or cause us to grieve.

By the highway of life temple builders await;
Some are readily serving while others come late;
Yet the plans of construction and drawings are made
For all those who would build and no duty evade.
While the artisans come, who are able and true,
Give their labors with love in whatever they do,
Yet the least of all mortals, in sunshine of love,

We are building today in the light of the Son;
In the morning of life all our work was begun;
When the shades of the evening shall cover the dust,
May the Master proclaim: "They've completed their trust!"
All the joys that will follow the wake of the past
Can but be a reward that forever shall last,
Where dominions of builders will justly be known

THE SECRET OF A GOOD HOME

What is a good home? Need it be a rich one or a poor one? Parents have much to do with making it good. John Ruskin wrote of his home: "I have been taught the perfect meaning of peace in thought, act and word. I never heard my father's or mother's voice once raised in any question with each other nor seen an angry glance in the eyes of either. Next to this priceless gift of peace, I had received the perfect understanding of the natures of obedience and faith. Nothing was ever promised me that was not given, nothing ever threatened that was not inflicted, nothing ever told me that was not true." —Unknown.

OUR STORY PAGE

BRAVE JIMMY

"And I see the smoke," added Peggy. "It is just going to come around the curve. Look, Billy, the big train is coming, and Uncle Jim, who has been on trains and boats for days and days coming from Africa, will be here in a minute."

Then the long train roared in and almost before it had stopped a tall man stepped off and began kissing Mother and shaking hands with Daddy, and putting an arm around his nieces and nephews all at the same time.

"So this is my namesake," he said, patting Jimmy on the shoulder as they all drove home in the car. "And you'll soon be as big as I am."

"Some day I will," laughed Jimmy, stretching himself to look as tall as possible even now. "And when are you going to tell us all about your adventures, Uncle Jim, about the time you were almost killed? You wrote to Mother about it, but you didn't tell how it happened."

"It's too long a story to pack into one letter, Jimmy, but if there is time before bedtime, perhaps—just perhaps—we'll tell something about it."

And of course there was time after the tea dishes had been put away and the whole family gathered in the cozy sitting room.

"It's a long story, and I don't like to think about it all, but I will tell you how it ended, for that is the happy part.

"It was the time that three of us took a journey into a part of Africa where no missionary had ever been. We knew that the people there had heard just enough about the white people with the new God to hate them, but we felt that we would go, in spite of the danger. Everything bad that we had heard about them was true, and when they had taken us and locked us in the damp, dark hut, we feared that the worst was going to happen.

"All night we prayed and hoped that the morning would bring help, but it didn't. As soon as it was light we were led out to where they were building a fire, and when the flames began to shoot out we trembled. Then the men who were holding us let us go, and I knew what that meant. They thought we would run, and the chase after us would make it more exciting. But not one of us moved. Then, as if we were all thinking the same thing, we dropped on our knees and I asked God to help us die like Christians, and to send some one, some time, to tell these poor savages about Jesus and His love.

"Then, savage as they were, they seemed to understand that we were speaking to our God, and although some of them would have rushed at us, the chief waved them back and motioning to us, led the way to the path that we had taken, and watched that no one would harm us as we made our way back to our car."

"Of course, but we knew God would do what was best, even if it meant our being killed, and that helped us seem braver than we were. One isn't always a coward just because he is afraid, Jimmy boy."

"My, but I'm glad I'm called after you, Uncle Jim," was all Jimmy said, but what he thought was, "I don't care if the boys do think me a coward, I'm going to Mission Band next Wednesday even if every boy in school calls me 'sissy.'" And he did.—Olive Plants.

A TRUE STORY OF A LITTLE RUNAWAY

Roger was a very little boy, and he had a habit of running away. He would roam about the streets, not caring where he went, for he knew that Mother would come hunting for him after awhile.

"Why should I care where I go?" he said to himself, "Mother will come and find me all right. She always does."

So he walked through the park and up and down strange streets until he began to feel very tired.

"I wonder why Mother doesn't come," he said, after he had walked a long, long time. "She never was so slow before, and I don't know where I am. I wonder if she is looking and cannot find me."

So he kept on walking, because he did not know what else to do. The sun was getting low and he wondered what time it was. Then he heard a lady call some children in to supper, and oh, how hungry he was! He wished he could go in and eat, too, but no one paid any attention to him.

By and by it began to grow dark, and poor little Roger was so frightened that he was almost ready to cry.

"Oh, I don't see why my mother does not find me!" he cried to himself. "I don't believe she loves me any more."

Then he sat down on the curbstone and began to cry, until a big man in blue suit with lots of brass buttons came and spoke to him.

He looked up and saw the policeman bending over him, and he was terribly frightened.

He tried to run away, but his legs were so tired that he could not run at all. The policeman picked him up and told him that he would have to take him to the station and find his mother.

Poor little Roger was terribly frightened and wished he had not run away. Everyone at the station was very kind to him, but he wanted his mother. He could not understand why she did not come. He was hungry and tired and he wanted his bread and milk and his little white bed. Then suddenly he heard a familiar voice, but it wasn't Mother's. It was Daddy's.

"Oh, Daddy," he cried as he ran into his daddy's arms, "why doesn't Mother come and find me?"

Daddy carried him home and soon he was in his mother's arms.

Nobody seemed to have been very much worried about him, and he wondered why it was.

After Mother had tucked him into bed and gone out to the living room again, Roger heard her say, "Well, it was hard on him, but I guess it was the best way to cure him."

So Roger decided not to run away any more.—Our Little Ones.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THANK-OFFERING

The purpose of the thank-offering service is three-fold: to supply some of the money which is necessary to carry on our work; (2) to engender within us the spirit of gratitude which is essential to our growth in the Christian life; and (3) to pay tribute to Him from whom cometh every good and perfect gift.

Our September thank-offering places emphasis on Christian education. The money sent in for this special day is divided upon a basis of 67 per cent for missions and 33 per cent for Christian education. The sum suggested as N. C.'s goal for September is $600.

Mrs. R. W. Riggins, thank-offering secretary for the woman's auxiliary of First church, High Point, reports $61.60 as First Church's offering. Who will be next to make an equally splendid report?

May I suggest again that you write for program materials, thank-offering boxes and envelopes, if your auxiliary has not already been supplied? Let us have faith and courage to meet the challenge that is ours.

MRS. RALPH H. VANCE,
Sec., Thank-Offering, N. C. Branch.

MESSENGERS

My Dear Auxiliaries:

Not so many years ago a college professor in one of the western states, who was a great lover of flowers, originated the idea "Say It With Flowers." He shortly afterwards presented the idea to the National Floral Association. They in return for his tribute to them honored him with a distinguished medal.

I know each of you ladies that raise flowers enjoy working with them, and love their fragrance and beauty. More than that is the pleasure you receive by making some sick friend happy with your giving.

Do you really know the significance of that giving? Do you realize the good you are doing?

Lying here looking at the luscious colors of the flowers that some friend had so kindly given me, and feeling just a wee bit blue, wishing I could be out enjoying life as I once did, then they would whisper to me, "Do you know why I am here?

Do you know my responsibility to you?

First my name spells—Flourish, Loved One, We Expect Recovery Soon."

Then again they would say: "I am here because some dear friend of yours so graciously brought me. I am here to watch over you, to see that those long hours of silence are turned into hope and cheerfulness. I am secretly saying, Hurry and take up thy bed and walk. Cast off that downtrod look. My each individual petal represents the donor back home wishing for your speedy recovery."

There is nothing more cheerful during the busy hours of the day or stillness of the night than to look over and see the luster and beauty of the flowers on my stand, knowing they represent some dear friend of mine who is wishing for me to be on that home-bound train. It makes me feel as if I am emerging into a new life, and like trying harder to soon be one among you again.

A SHUT-IN.

MISSION STUDY CLASS, 14th DISTRICT

The annual mission study class of the 14th District was held at Mount Carmel church. Mrs. T. L. Speas, chairman of the district, presided over the meeting. A fine and helpful devotional service was conducted by Mrs. C. W. Bates. A beautiful solo was then rendered by Miss Margaret Bagby.

Miss Hyacinth Hunter reviewed in a very interesting manner the foreign study book. Pleas were made for raising money for the purpose of re-opening the hospital in India. The five churches represented promised to send cakes to the Children's Home. During the noon recess a bounteous dinner was enjoyed by all.

In the afternoon Mrs. Ralph Merritt, of Hickory Ridge church, reviewed in a most excellent manner the home study book. Special music was rendered by the young people. It was indeed an interesting meeting.

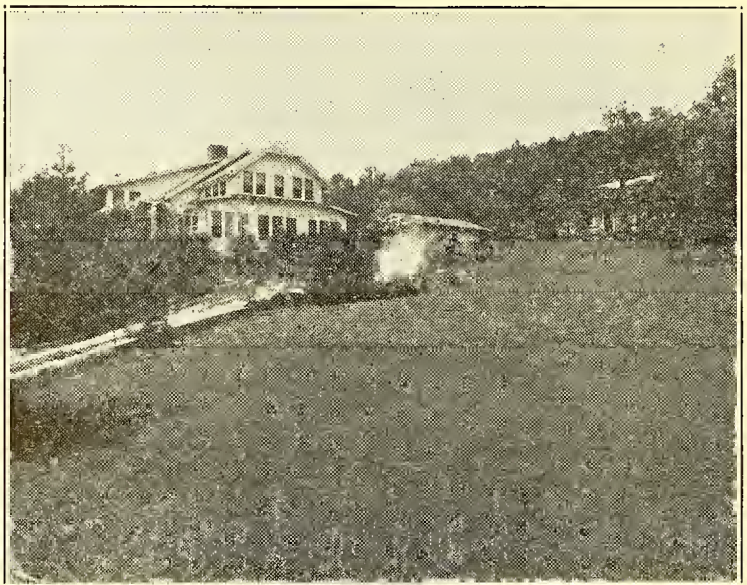
BETHEL HOME

Nestled on the side of a mountain overlooking the little town of Weaverville, North Carolina, is Bethel Home—a home for tubercular patients. From the front porch may be seen mountains piled high in the distance, casting their purple shadows from peak to peak.

The grounds are beautifully landscaped, including a formal flower garden, a rock garden, a pool, and wild flower garden. These grounds are flanked by a little park of pine trees which send forth their health-giving odor. To the side rear is a long cabin, transported from some secluded spot in the mountains. This is the summer home of Mr. Casto, owner of Bethel Home. The interior is in keeping with the outside, comfortable and attractive—for Mr. Casto believes that beauty has a therapeutic value.

Faith has been a large factor in building and maintaining this Home and in creating the helpful atmosphere of the place. With only one hundred dollars to begin with, Mr. Casto established this Home where tubercular patients might take the cure in comfortable, attractive and congenial surroundings. The property is worth twenty thousand dollars today. The Home is conducted without profit, the patients paying about what it costs to keep them.

While Mr. Casto is the owner, the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work contributes to the Home and is deeply interested in the welfare of the patients.



BETHEL HOME

Weaverville is nine miles from Asheville on highway numbers 19 and 23. If any one is interested in "taking the cure," write to Rev. Homer Casto, Bethel Home, Weavercille, N. C., for information.

(MRS. J. S.) ANNA MICHAUX WILLIAMS,

MT. PLEASANT BUSINESS GIRLS' CIRCLE

Mrs. E. H. Smith was hostess at the September meeting of the Mount Pleasant Business Girls' Circle which was held at her home Saturday night, September 9. Mrs. W. A. Stafford presided, with more than 20 members present.

Mrs. Ned Suits led in the devotional service, after which Mrs. H. F. Amick and Miss Rebecca Woody Causey sang a duet. Japan was the subject in the study book which was discussed at this meeting. Miss Sallie Amick told of the missionary work being done there, of the lives of the people, and of the great fields of work for Christian service there.

During the business session, plans were made for having a "Spooky room" as part of the entertainment at the October meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Ned Suits.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Rev. Jasper Preston preached Sunday in the absence of our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way. He and his family being away. Mr. Preston preached a good sermon, and those that heard him speak enjoyed his sermon fine. Mr. Preston is no stranger at Palestine, being a relative and friend of most of our people, and our people enjoyed very much having him preach for us. Our pastor was missed very much. Yet we are glad that our pastor could have the day off, with his wife and children, to meet with relatives and friends, and a picnic dinner all together at their family reunion. So far as we know we will have only one more appointment at Palestine before conference. This year has seemed so short, especially to this reporter because she has not got to attend church very much this year. She regrets very much having to miss so many sermons Brother Way has preached at the church. In our homes, and the general association among our people, I am sure we have never had a pastor that has rendered any better service than Pastor Way has. He has been one among us, ready to help in every way possible. I am sure he and his family have been a blessing to Flat Rock circuit.

Mrs. D. A. Walker continues about the same, not being able yet to sit up any.

Archie Tuckekr, one of our good stewarts, is just able to be out after being confined to his home for the past six weeks with pneumonia.

Mr. L. C. Tucker (Uncle Calvin) was not able to attend church Sunday.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Draper Church.—As it has been some time since there has been a report from this church, I will just say here that it is no sign that the church is asleep, by any means. The work is going good. The outlook is good for a good closing of this conference year. All conference claims will be paid in full. The board of stewards is working hard on this phase of the work. Our Sunday school and prayer meetings are well attended and much interest is shown in the preaching services. The entire membership is showing a vital interest in the work of the church.

We were pleasantly surprised to have a visit from our daughter and family, from Spartanburg, S. C., and Brother and Sister Quince Tesnear, of Caroleen, N. C., friends of other days, and we hope they will visit us again.

We have just closed our revival, with very good results. While we did not have the visible results that we hoped to see, the church we believe was greatly revived, and the town and community were greatly helped by this meeting. Bro. C. E. Ridge did the preaching for us and did it well. Brother Ridge endeared himself to the people here, as was attested by the nice purse they gave him. We hope he can come this way again.

This conference year is drawing fast to a close, and the annual conference will soon be upon us; we pray that this charge and all other charges in the annual conference may have a paid-up in full this year.

Bro. O. R. Boyles is our delegate to annual conference this year. Brother Boyles is one of our faithful and loyal members and will represent us in a fine way.

Pray for us that we may have a good closing. Yours in the Master's service,

L. S. HELMS, Pastor.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—On Wedndesday night after the third Sunday the Sisters' Class of the Belmont Sunday school held its monthly meeting at the parsonage. Several contests were engaged in and a very nice linen shower was given Mrs. Mabry. Everything they gave seemed to be so appropriate. To each donor we wish to say, Thank you!

On Saturday night before the fourth Sunday, the Mt. Hermon Sunday school gathered at the parsonage for a wiener roast. They brought the necessary equipment, plenty of everything, and everyone seemed to greatly enjoy the occasion.

On last Monday, September 24, wife, son, and I started for Westminster, where we expect to study for the Seminary year. The trip was made successfully and we are now located in Westminster and entering upon our studies.

It was with much regret that we left our people of the Mt. Hermon charge. We have learned to know these fine people, and to know them is to love them. We went to them while in school at High Point College. Then in the fall of '32 we went to Dukt Univversity to continue to study. All the while these people have followed in every enterprise in a fine way. We shall miss them so much when we take our final leave from them at conference. Wherever we go, there shall linger in our memories pleasant things about Mt. Hermon charge.

We will return to the work to finish up and hold the fourth quarterly conference, and also to attend the Annual Conference.

L. E. MABRY.

Giibsonville-Fohntain Place—Our reporter for Gibsonville has gone to Richmond to enter the Medical Hospital, and the one for Fountain Place has not been active since the former one married and moved away; there has been nothing given to the Herald about our activities here. This does not mean that we have nothing doing.

The usual slump that comes during the hot weather was a little more noticeable here this year than usual, owing to the extremely warm weather, we suppose, as our congregations are gradually picking up since the cooler weather has come in. That is an indication we think of interest.

In our elections for delegate to annual conference, Gibsonville elected G. J. Yow, and Fountain Place H. M. Scott. These brethren are regular and interested officials and will make good representatives.

Our C. E. at Fountain Place is waking up again after having suspended during the singing school which lasted for several weeks. We are hoping to get this work revived at Gibsonville soon. All the other activities at both churches are doing well, we think.

This year the people have remembered us in many ways that have helped the spirit of kindness more than in any other. The following are the ones: Mrs. W. E. Anderson, Mrs. P. L. Kivett, Mrs. Shelton, Mrs. George Petty, Mrs. Will Boone, W. A. Boone, Mrs. L. D. McCollum, Mrs. Dorothy Scott Edwards, J. W. B. Paylor, P. L. Kivett, Mrs. S. C. Stewart, Kenneth Williams, L. D. McCollum, Mrs. W. J. Jennings, Mrs. Hugh Lucas, Mrs. Thos. Sutton, Mrs. Dr. Dick, Mrs. T. A. Amick, Mrs. D. M. Davidson, Mrs. G. J. Yow, Mrs. Lettie Smith, Mrs. J. P. Huffman, Mrs. Fred Grigg. Thank you, friends, we will not soon forget your many kindnesses.

Special services leading up to Decision Day will be conducted in the Gibsonville church commencing the second Sunday night in October, continuing up to and including the third Sunday morning, which will be our Decision Day. Those of you who read this are asked to remember us in prayer. Services each evening at 7:30 through the week.

Much work needs to be done before conference, but we have faith in our people to believe that they will do their best to have a full report for the year here.

N. G. BETHEA.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We are very grateful for another good Sabbath. All the regular church services were held as usual. Our pastor preached the truth, as revealed in the Scriptures, at both morning and evening services, preaching in such clear, forceful style that we are made to feel ashamed of our shortcomings; but thanks to the Holy Spirit, the faithful Guide, it makes us desirous to do better work in the Lord's vineyard.

The subject for the morning service was "Our Sufficiency is of God." The evening subject was "Trifling with Life." Messrs. C. A. King and John Taylor and Misses Anna Briggs and Frances Taylor sang a quartet, "The Sabbath."

Next Sunday has been set apart as Loyalty Sunday. We hope for a record-breaking attendance at both services. How fine it would be to have a 100 per cent church membership attendance.

Church officials, having been duly elected for the coming year, will be installed next Sunday at 11 o'clock. Following is a list of the same:

Trustees: W. C. Montgomery, Percy Payne, A. J. Payne, C. B. Welch, H. E. Pitts, V. L. Cook, J. A. Gallimore.

Stewards: D. C. Montgomery, E. C. Blair, F. S. Pritchard, R. L. Briggs, V. J. Williard, S. E. Montgomery, D. S. Hedgecock, Lucille Payne, Dallas Ring, Mrs. V. L. Cook, Miss Emma Wray, Manly Craven, Mrs. W. L. Lee, Stokes Gallimore, J. A. Jones, Miss Nona Murphy.

Treasurer: R. E. L. Hayworth.

Class Leader: F. F. Briggs.

Choir Leader: Mrs. J. W. Thacker.

Pianist: Mrs. Doris Gallimore.

Church Reporter: Mrs. J. W. Thacker.

Ushers: Senior Board—R. L. Briggs, chairman, Fred S. Pritchard, D. C. Montgomery, E. C. Blair, John Wimberley, Manly Craven. Junior Board—Staley Montgomery, William Brinson, Everett Lee, J. S. Hedgecock, Chester Jones, Roe Brown.

Sunday School Officers:

Superintendent: C. A. King.

Assistants: J. W. Montgomery, Mrs. Glenn Lambert.

Treasurer: D. C. Montgomery.

Pianists: Ruth King and Eleanor Welch.
Secretary: Miss Jewell Welch.
Assistant secretary: Miss Doris Welborn.
Committee: A. J. Payne, D. S. Hedgecock, J. W. Montgomery, Jewell Welch, Ida G. Lambert.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held in the church at 7:30 p. m. on October 10th. A full attendance is desired.

The women's auxiliary will present our usual thank-offering program at 7:30 p.m. on the second Sunday in October. This program is in charge of Mrs. V. L. Smith. A very interesting and helpful program is planned.

We were pleased to see Brother John Cook out at church yesterday. He has been confined to his home for a few weeks with a spell of sickness.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor society held its first meeting under its new organization last night (Sunday) at 6:45. Martha Patterson, who will have charge of the October meetings, conducted this service.

The newly promoted Juniors and Intermediates have named the following officers:

President, Robert Montgomery; vice-president, Ruth King; secretary, Eleanor Welch; treasurer, Robert Lee; program committee, Martha Patterson, S. W. Taylor, Jr., Irene Harris.

West Forsyth Charge.—Our special meeting began at Harmony Grove the fourth Sunday in September. We had good attendance; it closed the fifth Sunday. We received eighteen members into the church at the 11 o'clock service. Others said they would join later, some to join other churches.

Our special meeting begins at Pleasant Hill the third Sunday in October with Bro. Grant as pulpit help. Union Hill church has recently been painted outside. Baltimore voted to build Sunday school rooms. Tabernacle has recently put in nice pulpit chairs and pledged $300 for Sunday school rooms.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Harmony Grove the fourth Sunday in October at 2 p.m., and I hope all the official members of the conference who "niged" at the third quarterly conference will be present at this conference.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

Henderson.—The work in the Henderson church is progressing as well as could be expected after the great loss experienced in the passing of the beloved pastor, Dr. L. W. Gerringer.

I came to the Henderson church in August to fill the unexpired year of the late Dr. Gerringer. I find the people here very willing to co-operate and I am favorably impressed with the possibility of ending up the year's work in a creditable way.

The church attendance continues to be good, especially the morning congregations.

The Christian Endeavor Society has been reorganized and attendance is increasing each Sunday evening. The young people are demonstrating a genuine interest in their work and everything indicates a successful society.

Special efforts are being made by devoting separate Sundays for different interests to raise our Conference and College assessments.

We are planning to observe a memorial service October 7th honoring Dr. Gerringer, the much loved former pastor of the church. Dr. N. G. Bethea will be with us to deliver the memorial address. It is also hoped that Mrs. Gerringer and children can be here for the service.

Last Friday evening the pastor and family, (lest someone wonder why "family," I have a former student friend, a boy of 15 who is making his home with me at the parsonage; I suppose he might be termed my adopted boy inasmuch as I have adopted him and he has adopted me; his name is J. H. Hicks, of Belmont, N. C.), as I started out by saying, last Friday night the pastor and family were agreeably surprised to find on returning from a pastoral call the parsonage besieged by the good ladies and gentlemen of the church bringing with them articles of food in the form of a goodly pounding. Flowers and refreshments were provided to brighten the bachelor quarters into which the parsonage has been recently converted. We are indeed grateful to these splendid folk for this expression of thoughtful consideration.

May God bless the Henderson church and people as they continue to serve Him and the denomination.

L. R. MEDLIN, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Too often we try to shut up our conscience with excuses, but I'm not going to do that in this case. I haven't written for quite a while but am not going to offer an excuse. I will say, however, that it is a great blessing to have a fine pastor write for you when you are not in a writing mood. So many, many thanks to Dr. Pritchard for keeping you all informed as to our work and progress since I wrote last.

At this time our church is overloaded with much sorrow and grief, caused by the passing of one of our most loved and loyal charter members, Dr. J. F. McCulloch. Dr. McCulloch, who has done so much for Calvary church, will be missed by everyone and will always be remembered for his faithfulness to the church.

Rally Day will be observed in all the services at our church next Sunday. A special Rally Day program is being arranged and will be given at the Sunday school hour Sunday morning.

Dr. Pritchard conducted the funeral services Sunday afternoon of Benjamin F. Newby at his home on Broad avenue. He and Mrs. Pritchard attended the burial of Mr. Newby at Farmer Sunday afternoon and also visited friends in Asheboro before returning to the city Sunday night.

Last week proved a very busy one for the Calvary women and men who served meals at the Fair. It proved a very successful one, too. Even though the final count has not been completed, we are sure the amount of money cleared during the week will almost, if not entirely, reach the $250.00 mark. We want to thank each one who helped make this possible.

Our missionary circles met Monday afternoon. Numbers 1 and 2 met at the hut and Number 3 met with Mrs. Amanda Hanner. Circle No. 1 is having a Brunswick stew this week and Circle No. 2 is sponsoring a dinner at the Morrison-Sesse Salon next Thursday, October 11th.

The Friendly class will enjoy a Hallowe'en party along with their business meeting at the home of Mrs. J. F. Caudle on Asheboro street next Tuesday evening.

We are glad to report that Mrs. J. A. Cox, who has been confined to her home and to her bed most of the time by a severe illness for the past seven weeks, is able to walk again. We hope she will soon be able to attend church, where she is missed so much.

Much to the sorrow of her many friends, Mrs. T. F. McCulloch continues quite ill at her home here. We trust she will soon recover.

MRS. HOWARD R. NEECE, Reporter.

Asheville.—I'm back on the job again; but Miss Cunningham has done so well reporting for the past two weeks that I am almost tempted to ask her to continue. It is a good thing to have someone ready always to fill a vacancy; it prevents any one person from becoming too conceited.

May I express for all my family our deep appreciation for the many expressions of sympathy accorded us in our recent great sorrow? It makes us more grateful than ever for our friends, and the Asheville church folk have been friends indeed. We shall never forget the many kindnesses shown us.

I wonder how many of you have noticed that the Herald is getting better all the time? This last issue is especially good. Did you read the sermon by Harry Emerson Fosdick? If not, by all means do so. And the articles by Mr. Luther K. Long are always worth reading. I do not know Mr. Long, but he is a thinker, and I greatly admire people who think. His article entitled "The Church Needs a Teaching Ministry—What Does It Involve?" is great. I hope all of you will read it.

The Fawcett Bible class ran off with the collection honors this week, and almost with the attendance record. I think Mr. Moore and Miss Swain had some words over the matter; Miss Swain always helps Mrs. Bolick with the Beginners, and they had 19 present, while the Bible class had 18 and one visitor. The question is, who won? Miss Miller's Junior girls are away ahead of the Junior boys. Wake up, boys! Mrs. Williams will be back with you next Sunday, and I am sure you will be glad. I know you have enjoyed having Miss Smith for the past two Sundays, and we are all grateful to Miss Smith for helping us.

The "pounding" sponsored by the Fawcett Bible Class for Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boling was a grand success. Everyone co-operated beautifully. Mr. Hanner and his class are right on the job when it comes to doing things. The regular monthly business and social meeting was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hanner, with a good attendance and an enjoyable program.

The union services which have been held by the five churches in this section of town came to a close Sunday evening. These services have been very beneficial to all of us, and have given us a stronger feeling of fellowship for our neighbor who goes to the other church. Rev. James B. McLarty, pastor of the M. E. church, brought us a most appropriate message from the subject, "Christian Fellowship." All of the five pastors took part in this the last service, and we really all felt that we were united in worshipping the true God.

The meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, which was held at the home of Miss Cunningham last Thursday, was well attended. Mrs. Minnis conducted the devotionals, using as her subject, "Prayer." Miss Cunningham reviewed most interestingly three chapters of the Home Mission Study Book. The clothes for the two children at the Home are almost finished. The women have all co-operated so well in this project, and we are happy to have had a chance to do our bit.

The Frances Cunningham Philathea Class held a business meeting at the home of Mrs. D. J. Eller last Friday night. Plans are going forward rapidly for the "Manless Wedding" to be given on the evening of October 9. Make your plans now to attend, folks; you are going to miss something if you don't.

The Senior Christian Endeavorers are sponsoring a supper at the Church Friday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock. It is hoped all will co-operate with the Endeavorers to help them raise their amount of the budget.

It was good to see Mrs. Messer at church on Sunday. She has been ill for such a long time, and we are glad to have her back again.

Circles of the Women's Auxiliary are to meet this week as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. R. Moore, chairman, with Mrs. J. S. Williams; Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. F. Minnis, chairman, with Mrs. G. P. Younginer; Circle No. 3 Miss Frances Cunningham, chairman, with Mrs. C. B. Baker. It is very gratifying that all the women are taking such an active part in the work now.
M. L. B.

First Church, Charlotte.—Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary held the regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. J. Atkins, on North Davidson street. Mrs. C. H. Dewese, chairman, presided. The meeting was interesting and well attended.

The Business Women's Circle, Mrs. G. H. Hendry, chairman, met with Mrs. Hendry. Mrs. E. M. Coble, one of the outstanding Bible teachers of the city, had charge of the devotional program and spoke on "Lessons From the Life of Hezekiah."

Of interest to their many friends in the city and throughout the state, is the marriage of Miss Bonnie Lee Ballard and Grady Tadlock. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. D. Moose. We extend to them our best wishes for a long and happy journey together through life.

Anna Lucille Dewese, charming little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dewese, celebrated her third birthday with a party at her home on Thomas Avenue on Tuesday afternoon, September 25. About 20 little guests enjoyed the happy occasion with her, and she was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

Dr. M. F. Ham, noted evangelist, who is conducting a campaign in this city, spoke to the church school on last Sunday morning. He delivered a very inspiring address and many came forward expressing their desire to re-dedicate their lives and service to Jesus Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison Alexander and Miss Janie Hazel Powell were received into membership of the church. Miss Powell is a gifted singer and will be a great addition to their choir.

The Woman's Auxiliary won the second prize of $125 in the Good Samaritan campaign, which has just closed. With several other prizes they have won this makes a total of $220.

Another campaign is to be started in a few weeks by local merchants and manufacturers. Our Auxiliary has planned to enter this campaign, and Mrs. C. S. Wommack has again been appointed captain. Members of the Ever-Ready Philathea class and their friends, and Mrs. C. S. Wommack, teacher, enjoyed a weiner roast at Cordelia Park on Monday evening.

One of the most interesting meetings of the young people's Christian Endeavor Society was held on last Sunday evening under the leadership of Miss Mary Neal Yandle. "Worthwhile Aims of the Year Ahead" was the topic, and each young person presented seemed to catch a greater vision of the work ahead and to be more determined to make the coming year to count for more than ever before. A business meeting and social will be held at the home of Miss Mary Neal Yandle on next Monday evening. Officers for the coming year will be elected.
REPORTER.

South Winston Charge.—After an absence of a few days I am back with just a few lines to remind you that we are still on the map.

We haven't much news. Our Sunday school seems to be on the upgrade just a little at present. Sure hope it will continue to do so. We are still at work on our building, trying to complete it before Old Man Winter gets so near. Our money has run low, and unless some good fortune befalls us we won't be able to complete our church this fall.

October 7th is our regular preaching day. We start the day with Sunday school at 9:45 and at 11 o'clock the service will be conducted by the pastor. We will hold our communion service at the morning hour.

We have also set apart that day as a birthday offering to be used on church debt. So let one and all come and be present and make the offering as liberal as possible. Those in attendance will be asked for just 1 cent for each year of their age—or more if you can make it so.

If you can not be present, please forward your offering. It surely will be appreciated very much.

There will also be services at 7:30 the same day. The public is cordially invited.
REPORTER.

Christian Endeavor Society, Lincolnton.—This is the first report from our Christian Endeavor to the Herald. We're not new at all. We've had a fine C. E. for years, but have just neglected reporting to the Herald.

At present we have 37 members on roll. We meet every Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock in the basement of the church. We have the usual officers and committees, each doing splendid work. Our pastor, Rev. J. D. Cranford, takes a keen interest in our society.

Our programs are always very interesting. Each Sunday a new leader has the program carefully arranged so that no particular type of program will grow monotonous. The leader is appointed by the chairman of the prayer meeting committee.

Our new president for this quarter is introducing a new plan for his committees. Each committee will serve only one month instead of the entire quarter. This holds true for all except the social committee, and due to the fact that we have only two socials a quarter, they serve for six weeks. By so doing, more members are enabled to take active parts in the C. E. It's a change and it is hoped that this will be beneficial.

We also have a Junior C. E. Society that is progressing nicely. They've about 30 members strong. Both societies meet at the same hour. Their president is elected by them from the Senior C. E. S. Otherwise, they have their other officers and committees, as usual.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

New Salem, Randleman Charge.—Our revival began the third Sunday in September and continued until Friday of that week. Rev. M. C. Henderson, of Mecklenburg Charge, was our pastor's help. We were glad to have him with us and his sermons were indeed helpful. We have a warm welcome in our hearts for him and hope that he can be with us again. Quite a good many came forward and reconsecrated their lives for the Master, with two additions to the church.

We are looking forward to Dr. Andrews' visit to us next Sunday afternoon, October 7.

We are sorry to hear of the illness of Dr. J. F. McCulloch.
MRS. R. F. WARD, Reporter.

Graham.—Our regular services were held Sunday with very good attendance. Our pastor was confined to his home for several days last week because of illness, but was able to be out again Sunday. The musical program for the evening service was in charge of P. B. Core and J. D. Foust, who prepared a splendid program. C. F. Clapp will have charge of the music for the first Sunday night in October and Miss Blanche Linens and Mrs. Christine McPherson will prepare the program for Sunday night, October 14.

Leaders of each organization of the church met Monday night, September 24, at the parsonage to make plans for a recovery program for the church. They are hoping to regain ground lost during the summer vacation and make rapid progress in the near future. It was decided at this meeting to observe "National Recognition Day for Sunday School Teachers." This day will be observed in our church by a banquet in honor of all of our Sunday School teachers, which will be held in the hut Saturday night, October 6.

The board of stewards is planning to designate one Sunday in October as "Silent Offering Sunday."

Graham church did not make the Worthy Honor Roll; however, we were very successful. The total amount sent to the Children's Home from our church was $13.

THE MILK-MAID, A FOLK-SONG

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I'm going a-milking, sir," she said.

"May I go with you, my pretty maid?"
"Yes, if you please, kind sir," she said.

"What is your fortune, my pretty maid?"
"My face is my fortune, sir," she said.

'Then I can't marry you, my pretty maid."
"Nobody asked you, sir," she said.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Brown.

Mary Ann Brown was born November 27, 1866, and died at her home near Flag Springs church September 11, 1934, aged 67 years, 9 months and 15 days. She professed religion when 13 years of age and joined Flag Springs church, of which she lived and died a consistent member.

On February 19, 1885, she was married to Daniel Brown. God honored this union with 12 children, six of whom died in infancy. The living children are Franklin Brown, of Seagrove, Route 2; Mrs. Elmira Dorsett, Mrs. Birzilla Coltrane, of Asheboro; Jesse Brown, of Pisgah; Ollie Brown, of Climax, Route 1, and Garrett Brown, of Bynum, Route 1. She is also survived by her husband and 20 grandchildren, four having died in infancy.

June 20, this year, the deceased had her first stroke of paralysis, but seemingly recovered. September 5 she had another stroke, and on the 10th, when the third stroke came, her life went out and her soul to God who gave it. In her going a good wife and an affectionate mother has been taken. To the husband and children, to neighbors and friends, the church and pastor extend the hand of sympathy. Of course the husband feels this stroke most heavily. He has lost the companion of his young manhood and the mother of his children. When he thinks of how unflinchingly she stood by him all these years, helping him through all the dark and dreary places in life's pathway, and now realizes that he can no longer enjoy her companionship in this life, of course his heart is sad and he feels a loneliness that only those who have experienced it can fully comprehended. To the children we would say you have lost your best earthly friend, but do not weep as those without hope, for mother is now waiting to welcome you into that new bright world above. Be faithful, trust your mother's God, and some sweet day you will meet her again. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. Joel Trogden, a former pastor, after which her body was laid away in church cemetery at Flag Springs.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Presnell.

John Branson Presnell, son of Nixon and Rachel Voncannon Presnell, was born near Cedar Falls November 8, 1876, and died September 3, 1934, aged 57 years, 9 months, 25 days. For some time he had been in declining health but able to go on with his usual work most of the time. On July 23 he reached a point where he could no longer carry on. For about eight days he was in bed, and on Friday, July 31, he was carried to the hospital, where he died Monday, September 3. He is the sixth child in a family of ten, four having preceded him to the grave. The surviving are Mrs. Russell Williams, of Seagrove, Route 2; Miss Louzena Presnell, also of Seagrove, Route 2; Mrs. Vaudelia McGee, of near Greensboro; Henry T., of Asheboro, and Baxter E., of near Franklinville. The deceased are Emily J., Mary L., Louetta and one child who died in infancy. Besides these he leaves his companion, two children, one grandchild and a host of friends and neighbors who mourn because he has been taken.

On February 14, 1901, he was married to Miss Ida Vellou Cole. God blessed this union with three children. The oldest child died when about two and a half years of age. His surviving children are Mrs. C. H. Hammonds, of Seagrove, Route 2, and Mrs. C. C. Cheek, of Franklinville. The people of the community realize they have lost a good friend and neighbor, but he will be missed most in the home. His companion, who labored side by side with him all these years, feels this stroke most heavily. To her and the surviving children we extend the hand of sympathy as well as to the brothers and sisters. May they all be comforted with the thought that their loved one is not dead but just moved over into that land "where there is no death." In his going a busy, industrious life has come to an end, and the church has lost a good friend and an ardent supporter. After moving to New Hope community he was not only a regular attendant as long as he was able, but stood by the church with his money. His home was always the preacher's home and he the preacher's friend. No pastor of New Hope church will ever forget the unbounded kindness shown them in the home of Bro. John Presnell and his good wife.

In early life he professed religion and joined Cedar Falls M. P. church. He never moved his membership from this church. His name, however, was lost from the records of said church, but he never lost interest in the church or his religion. He told his pastor a short while before death came that he was still holding on. May the bereaved be comforted in the thought that they can go to their loved one and again enjoy his companionship in that land where there will be no sad partings.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, assisted by two former pastors, Rev. W. F. Ashburn and Rev. Joel Trogdon, all of whom spoke very highly of the life of the deceased. The large congregation more than filled the church, and the floral display was unusually large and beautiful. In the cemetery at Flag Springs church his body now lies awaiting the resurrection morn.

GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Burrow

In the early hours of September 12 the death angel visited the home of Brother A. M. Burrow and the gentle, loving spirit of his wife, Margaret Brower Barrow, went from labor to reward. She was the daughter of the late W. D. and Rebecca Brown, born May 6, 1868.

On November 29, 1896, she was married to Addison M. Burrow. Of the immediate family, the husband, two daughters, Mrs. R. A. Ingold, and Mrs. E. M. Cox, and one son, George Burrow, survive. She leaves also one sister, Mrs. Roddy Swain; four brothers, Robert, Fletcher, Logan and Spencer Brower. She had a large number of friends, who were saddened by her going.

In early life she was converted and joined Bethel Methodist Protestant church, of which she remained a faithful member until death. The church will miss her because she was faithful to attend whenever able and always glad to do whatever she could for the good of the church. Although she was of a rather quiet nature, her firm faith and trust in God will long have its influence upon many lives. It is truly a coveted thing to have said of one, after having lived near the same place for 66 years, as so many said of "Maggie," as she was familiarly called, "She was a good woman."

The funeral service was conducted at Shiloh by her pastor, Rev. Edward Suits. He read selections of Scripture from John 14 and Psalms 116, but used especially the text, "Preciouus in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." He paid a high tribute to her Christian character, since he had known her, referring to her patience in suffering, her lack of criticism of pastors and people, and the Christian atmosphere of her home.

Although we shall miss her, we rejoice that she has gained the victory over evil, and gone to dwell with the Master, whom she loved, trusted and served.

Herbert

Mrs. Willie Herbert died on June 28 after a long and trying illness. She was patient and cheerful during her hours of suffering, interested in the well-being of others, a kindly, friendly neighbor, and a devoted mother. She was a member of the Methodist Protestant church and of the Woman's Auxiliary Home Circle.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, that the auxiliary deplores the death of this good woman;

Second, that it extends most sincere sympathy to the members of her family;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family and to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MISS MARY B. COLLINS,
MRS. MYRA MANN,
MRS. EXUM BELLAMY,
Committee from Enfield Woman's Auxiliary.

Andrew

Hope Methodist Protestant churcrh, in Bonlee, sustained a great loss in the death of Brother Joseph J. Andrew at his home in Siler City on August 6, 1934. For a number of months he had been in very poor health but his condition was not realized as critical until about two weeks before his passing. He was a native of Chatham county and lived near Bonlee until 1921, when he moved to Siler City. Although living six miles from Hope church and in very feeble health since the writer has known him, he rarely missed being at Hope each second Sunday for the morning appointment. Sixty years ago Brother Andrew united with Hope church, being the last charter member, and remained one of the most loyal members until his translation at the age of 80.

Brother Andrew was a sweetspirited, inoffensive Christian gentleman. His years of physical infirmity were spent in patient and trustful reliance upon the God whom he had served for so many years. He loved the church, he loved people, he loved God supremely, and his chief delight was in doing his will. He loved the Methodist Protestant church and was anxious for it to prosper. One who knew him well said he never knew him to say a harmful word about a single person. When the end came it was like the gathering of a ripe shock of corn. He had lived out his days, he had finished his work, "and it only remained for God to send his angels and gather him into the garners above."

His companion and four daughters and one son survive: Mrs. W. E. Hart, Mrs. C. L. Forrester, Mrs. J. B. Turner, and Miss Clatie and Mr. J. P. Andrew; one brother, also survives, W. H. Andrew, one of the leading members of Hope church.

The funeral was held in Hope church, the church he loved, on August 7, 1934. The writer was assisting in a revival meeting in the extreme eastern part of the state and could not be located in time, so Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D. D., a special friend of the family, conducted the service. Burial was made in Hope cemetery, where his ancestors lie sleeping. H. L. ISLEY.

Whitaker

Miss Virginia Whitaker, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Whitaker, passed away at her home on the morning of August 9. While she had been a sufferer for a number of years, the end was altogether unexpected and a great shock to her family and friends. She had been a member of Whitaker's Chapel since early childhood, and of the Enfield Woman's Auxiliary. As long as her health would permit, she was a regular attendant at the auxiliary meetings, Christian Endeavor, and all church services. With alert mind, she was keenly interested in social, literary and religious activities.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, that the members of this auxiliary extend their deepest sympathy to her devoted parents and grandmother;

Second, that her stedfast Christian faith should bring comfort and consolation to her family and friends, inasmuch as they are assured that their loss is her eternal gain;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family and to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MISS MARY B. COLLINS,
MRS. MYRA MANN,
MRS. EXUM BELLAMY,
Committee from Enfield's Woman's Auxiliary.

Long

Mrs. Sarah Adelia Long, 81, wife of Ellis M. Long, passed away the 21st of September at her home at Dosier, Old Richmond Township. She had been in declining health for several months, but her condition did not become critical until Tuesday and death came as a shock to her friends. She was born in Yadkin County, July 10, 1853, a daughter of William and Annie Sprinkle Shore. She was married to Mr. Long on December 11, 1879, and they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary four years ago. For the past 54 years Mrs. Long had resided at the present home place and was one of the best known women in Dosier community. She was one of the most active members of Pleasant Hill M. P. church. She was one of God's good women, and we thank God that in reality she lives on, and that "her works will follow her."

Surviving are the husband, two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Shore and Mrs. J. P. Shore; one son, W. A. Long; one sister, Mrs. Liana Weaver; 12 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at Pleasant Hill M. P. church at 3 o'clock by the pastor, assisted by Rev. Holloway and Dr. Edmund Schwartze. The floral offering was beautiful and the congregation was very large. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family. D. R. WILLIAMS.

Pickard

Ellen Pickard was bofn July 27, 1855, and died July 15, 1934. She was 78 years, 11 months and 15 days old when she died. She was the widow of the late Oscar Pickard, who died seven years ago. She spent her entire life in Alamance county. She was well known and loved by all who knew her. She was a good neighbor as well as a Christian and attended church as long as she was able to do so. She had a smile for every one she met. Not only her friends but every one she came in contact with from day to day as she went around doing her daily work. She had a kind and gentle word for everybody. And all who knew her loved her dearly. She was indeed a loving stepmother, an affectionate wife and loved by every one of her stepchildren and relatives. She is missed by every one but we all know she has gone to rest where there is no sorrow or weeping. The writer had the privilege of living beside her for eight years.
MRS. D. L. PICKARD.

—Dr. Howard Kelly, famous surgeon of Johns Hopkkins Hospital, is quoted as saying: "There is no disease in the world for which alcohol is a cure. It does undeniably cause thousands of cases of diseases. Its use is injurious to the kidneys, liver, heart and blood vessels, and gives rise to that most common fatality, high blood pressure."

—To Dr. J. H. Kellogg, head of the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium, is attributed the statement, "Alcohol never increases the vital energy of the body, but on the contrary, decreases it in a marked manner through its poisonous influence upon the living cells. Alcohol increases liability to infectious diseases and prevents the development of immunity. Alcohol does not aid digestion, but actually hinders it."

Two More Offerings

About six weeks will bring the meeting of the Annual Conference, but with most of the churches there will be two more monthly offerings to the Home before Conference. Please make them as liberal as possible, and please let EVERY CHURCH in the Conference send an offering.

Due Pictures of the Home

We are due pictures of the Home to Brown Summit, Haw River; Efland, Orange; Kernersville; Community Church; Pleasant Grove; Shiloh on Shiloh, and Weaverville.

These pictures had to be framed for hanging in your churches. They will be difficult to mail. Those close by can get their in passing, and those who do not get theirs before can get it at Conference time.

If any other churches have met the conditions, or will meet the conditions, please let us know and we will gladly present the picture.

Total amount to date for September 13th is $1,937.45. Why not raise it to $2,000.00?

Produce

Gather your produce for us with all the grain and potatoes possible. Send it to us if you can. If not, then write us and tell us where and when to get it.

SHILOH	74

Well, you see who is at the head of my column of honor this week, do you? Siler City walks right up and demands first place. And she is entitled to it, for she has been forging ahead week by week. That is what it takes to win a race. And Albemarle just keeps climbing. They are going to be at the top of the ladder some of these days, also. And while Shiloh is resting a little, they come back into the limelight again this week by virtue of the fact that Lincolnton takes her permanent place in capitals in the received column. But let me tell Shiloh that they came very near not getting back on the stage, for Charlotte lacked only one per cent of being up with them. Charlotte shows a lot of grit and determination these days and is going to make other charges hustle. Last week they went over the top in subsidy as well as did Spencer, that plucky little church that has forged ahead against great odds. Well, it pays to be associated with such great folks as I have the privilege of associating with in my column each week.

But here is the thing for me to major on this week, namely, what Lebanon at High Point, and State Street at Lexington did last week. Mrs. C. B. Welch, of Lebanon, sent in $13.00 last week, which was equal to six and one-half subscriptions. My! what a jump. And Dr. Johnson over at State Street sent in $10.42, which was also a long leap forward. Now I can imagine I can see Dr. Taylor smile at having such a good Herald Agent as is Mrs. Welch, and I can almost hear Dr. Johnson expressing his appreciation to the people who made possible this fine lot of money. While we are all sad here over the passing of Dr. McCulloch, we are glad that people do appreciate his paper and that they supported it as long as he lived.

Some time ago I got hold of a copy of the Herald, dated October 6, 1933. Next week I am going to make comparison of this year and last and see where we stand. So watch for this next week.

Send your subscriptions and letters to Methodist Protestant Herald, 1705 Asheboro street, Greensboro, and they will be credited as formerly.

Make your checks and money orders payable to M. P. Herald.

A Statement from the Herald Committee

At a joint meeting of the Herald Committee and the Committee Advisory to the President of the Annual Conference, held at the home of Rev. R. M. Andrews, D.D., President of the North Carolina Annual Conference, on Friday, October 5. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that the Herald must go on. It has found such a deep and an abiding place in the lives of our people that we would not know how to get along without it. Therefore it was voted to assure our people that every effort possible would be made to keep the Herald going. But those who know anything about settling up estates know that there is a mass of detail to be handled in transferring property from one estate to another organization, and there are certain things that must be authorized by the annual conference. In the meantime it is our purpose to carry on the Herald as usual. I was asked by the commitee to do the work that has formerly been done by the editor until the Annual Conference, at which time a permanent editor will be elected. But at the present time it seems best that all communications be addressed to The Methodist Protestant Herald, 1705 Asheboro Street. When the Herald is transferred to the Annual Conference, then other announcements can be made. But please do not send any money to me nor make any checks payable to me at the present time. Make checks and money orders payable to M. P. Herald.

At the joint meeting last week, it was decided also to recommend to the Annual Conference that a memorial to Dr. McCulloch be established to consist of a sum of money sufficient to establish the Herald on a more secure footing. A committee to work out details will be appointed by the President of the Conference. Of course we cannot give particulars now as these have not been worked out, but they will be worked out in due time.

It remains for us now to work for the Herald a little harder than we have done formerly. The Herald needs your support and cannot get along without it. All of us standing together can accomplish wonders, but no individual working alone can do the work that must be done. Dr. McCulloch was a man of large faith and it remains now to be seen how much of that faith we have been able to absorb. The difficulties facing him when the Herald was founded were infinitely greater than the ones facing us. He succeeded and we can succeed also if we will. J. E. Pritchard.

An Urgent Request

At a meeting of a group of ministers asked to assist in making plans for a part of the conference program devoted to the college it was also thought wise to appoint a committee to urge that everything possible be done to raise the $5,000.00 agreed upon by the last conference for the maintenance of the college. It will be remembered that if our conference raises the $5,000.00 the Board of Education of the General Conference will supplement it with $7,500.00. The college is in great need of every dollar we can raise for it and, besides, it would be very unfortunate indeed if we should allow this great offer to go by without availing ourselves of what it means. The General Board has gone a long way to make this very generous offer and we should be sure to place ourselves in a position to make good use of the offer. As a member of the committee above mentioned, this brief word is being given to the press to urge that every pastor, as well as every layman, do all possible to make good in this matter. We speak of pastors as being key men, and this is correct, but there are a great many laymen who occupy the position of key laymen. Please, Bro. Laymen, find your place along by the side of your pastor and help raise the amount apportioned to your charge for this great need. This is a great opportunity to do a great good.

More will be heard from this committee.

Geo. L. Curry.

MORE ABOUT RALLY DAY

Dear Brother Pastor:

Vacations are over, schools are open and our churches are beginning to catch their normal fall stride. Rally Day usually sets the pace, hence the necessity for rallying all our forces. The reports that are reaching Dr. Stephenson indicate a quicker pace than that of a year ago. This enheartens us greatly. If we could but get our 1,000 pastors to hold 1,000 Rally Day services, and lead in securing 1,000 Rally Day offerings, we would have cause for 1,000 thanksgivings.

I appeal to you in behalf of the Board of Christian Education, as well as in behalf of the whole General Conference program, to do your best in making Rally Day on your charge eminently successful. In this way you will be doing a fine piece of constructive work for the Kingdom. You are one of the 1,000.

Praying for your success, I remain

J. C. Broomfield, President,
General Conference.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS AGAIN

By LUTHER K. LONG

President Roosevelt is fortunate in having a voice and a manner of speaking that attract the attention and hold the interest of the radio audience. His matter-of-fact and convincing way of address is pleasant to listen to, though it is likely that he fools himself—as well as many of his hearers—into thinking that he is more convincing than the facts in the cause justify.

By omitting the consideration of pertinent matters concerning which he may have no suggestions of importance to offer, and by not recognizing the fact that a very large part of the increase of employment since he came into office is due to made work paid for by government money—the decrease in unemployment due to increased activity in ordinary business and industrial enterprise being comparatively small—he is free to indulge his spirit of optimism as he looks back over the 18 months of his administration and to assure his audience with a smile that everything is very good.

It was skillful strategy to quote in his speech the Republican Elihu Root, the late Chief Justice White, Benjamin Franklin, and Abraham Lincoln. In his Green Bay, Wis., speech he attacked business; Sunday night, probably intentionally—he rubbed the fur the other way when he said: "We count, in the future as in the past, on the driving power of individual initiative and the incentive of private profit, strengthened with the acceptance of those obligations to the public interest which rest upon us all.'"

The most vital thing in the President's speech, the thing that gives hope that something will be done toward industrial conciliation, is his proposal of a truce between workers and employers that will give opportunity to try out peaceable means of settling differences while the nation is on its way to recovery.

Readers will remember that during the strike in San Francisco, and other Pacific coast ports, the President was on his cruise to the Hawaiian Islands. Appeal was made that he do something. He was said to have his ear to the ground—and he went on fishing. The strike dragged on with its violence, loss of wages, inconvenience to the public and the generating of bad feeling—and the settlement was not much of a settlement.

During the textile strike the President was on another vacation. Again it was reported that he was in close touch with the situation—and attending the yacht races. After much violence, the loss of lives and destruction of property, and the further development of group hatred, the Chief Executive took some part in settling the dispute. Again not a very satisfactory settlement was made. Now he says:

"It is time that we made a clean-cut effort to bring about that united action of management and labor which is one of the high purposes of the recovery act. . . . Accordingly, I propose to confer within the coming month with small groups of those truly representative of large employers of labor and of large groups of organized labor, in order to seek their co-operation in establishing what I may describe as a specific trial period of industrial peace.

"From those willing to join in establishing this hoped-for period of peace, I shall seek the assurances of the making and maintenance of agreements, which can be mutually relied upon, under which wages, hours and working conditions may be determined and any later adjustments shall be made either by agreement or, in the case of disagreement, through the mediation or arbitration of State or Federal agencies. I shall not ask either employers or employes permanently to lay aside the weapons common to industrial war. But I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest, and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization."

This is good, and I hope it succeeds. Already the American Federation of Labor, in its convention in San Francisco, has indicated its interest—as has also the National Association of Manufacturers in New York, speaking for capital. Much adjustment will need to be made. Good luck to the effort.

I WONDER

One meaning of the word wonder is: To wait with uncertain expectation. I have been out of the work about three years. While I am greatly handicapped, I have gained strength, I am able to preach every Sunday. Can I do any visiting? Perhaps as much as the preacher who goes to school every day except Saturday, and as much as the pastor who makes ten or a dozen visits in six months. I wonder if there is any charge in the conference that would condescend to accept me for their pastor for just one year? If I am permitted to live I would be glad to have some charge for a year.

I will be wondering and hoping, and shall I say, expecting? If any are willing let them tell the stationing authority of the conference. My record for forty-one years is before you. Many failures and blunders. I wish it had been better.

Yours in humility, I trust, G. F. MILLAWAY.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. LINDLEY

Starting the Sermon

The particular way in which a sermon is started is of vital importance. The saying that "All is well that ends well" may be true, but a discourse is more likely to end well when it is started well. Some addresses seem to catch the listener's ear from the very first word while others open up in a manner that fails to grip the attention. The minister does, of course, want to attract the hearers from the very beginning if he can and hold them to the sermon's end. So the start is important.

All sermons, I believe, may be classified into three groups as regards this matter of beginning. The first group, which no doubt is the largest, contains those sermons that start by announcement of the text and an explanation of its setting. This has the advantage of clearing up the background of the text and does, of course, help us to understand and appreciate something of the conditions under which the text was spoken. This is all in the favor of this first style of opening the sermon. But it has certain disadvantages also. For one thing, it makes a rather artificial appeal. People are not greatly concerned about what happened to Moses—the situation is not real enough. Hence the speaker lingers in the vicinity of the text at the risk of losing the interest of the hearers. For another thing, one runs the added risk of taking too much time with the introduction, leaving the most vital and urgent part of the sermon to be given at the fag end of the hour.

A second group contains those sermons that start off with a heavy, abstract sentence something like this: "Men have, in all ages, and in all conditions of civilization, sought to worship some form of super-human being." This style of opening has much to its credit. It is dignified, scholarly, and has the ring of superior wisdom about it. These good, stately sentences are doubtless true and they sound well, but the difficulty with this pattern of beginning lies in the fact that it lacks naturalness and concreteness. Our minds are just not made to cling onto long, abstract generalities; we have to have definite situations if we are to follow. A few minds in any audience will, of course, take the pains to follow these opening sentences, but the average person will soon be lost, his mind wandering while the sermon takes off for its high academic goal.

Now a third group, which I think is best of all, includes the sermons that start with the listener's own interests. Here a sermon opens with reference to something very near and real to the people for whom it is intended. It goes into the Bible, of course, but it goes there for help and light needed in solving the issue with which the sermon deals. I think the text or some passage of Scripture ought to be used as a key thought or declaration of the truth under discussion. This might be read at the very beginning or stated a little later as the sermon advances, but the main point for us now is to see to it that we spend our first few minutes making a point of contact with the minds before us. Let us start with our people's problems today rather than with the problems of Moses. Some relationship must be found to link the discourse up with people's interest today. Too many preachers start at the wrong end of the sermon. After dealing at length with backgrounds, settings, etc., they finally come to a few definite "applications," the point at which they are, of course, most likely to attract the hearer's attention. But it takes too long to get around to this—we would do better, psychologically, to start with some of these concrete situations.

Those of us who heard Dr. Lichliter's sermon at Columbus, Ohio, while attending the General Conference, will recall how that great preacher started his sermon. He opened by saying that he had been asked by two or three men recently what, in his opinion, would be the results of the depression on religion and the church. He recited this very definite question, put to him by some disturbed members, in such a way as to make us who heard him that Sunday morning feel that it was our question too, and that we wanted to have it answered. Thus he was laying the groundwork for his sermon on "The Sequel to Recovery" by starting with that live, concrete situation. He started his sermon with a current issue and tied it directly to a definite inquiry. His text was in the book of Joel but he did not lose our attention by separating his introduction from our own intereststs.

I have discussed this matter longer than I intended, but it seems very vital to me, and I hope you may find a bit of help in these suggestions. Try to start with people's own natural interests and you will have the decided advantage of holding their attention.

McCULLOCH — MY CLASSMATE AND FRIEND

By Luther K. Long

"And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helpmeet for him."

Woman is necessary for man. These two joined in marriage, with the children born to them, constitute the family, the most important unit of human society. The larger groups—the community, the city, the state and the nation—are important factors in building and promoting helpful human relationships.

Friendship among the members of these individual groups, overleaping boundaries and binding together individuals of different communities, cities, and states, adds greatly to the richness and joy of human living. Nothing more effectively develops and strengthens friendships than do the intimate associations of school and college.

It was 56 years ago last spring that I first met Flavius McCulloch. He had just come from his North Carolina home, and I had come the fall before from my Illinois home. He was several years my senior, but that was no obstacle. Both of us were students in Adrian College, Michigan. Each of us was out of school during parts of the next few years. Both of us were in our places at the opening of college in the fall of 1881, and were registered as members of the junior class. We began rooming together and kept it up during the remainder of our college course.

Two of the girls in the class attracted our attention, and afterwards became our wives. The girls were good friends, and the four of us were much together. Minnie Clark and I were married in August, 1883; McCulloch and Mary Barrow—Mc. and Mary—became husband and wife a few weeks later.

Years would sometimes go by without our seeing each other as we operated in different sections of the country and did not write many letters. But the fires of friendship still held, and a letter or a chance visit always stirred the quiet fires into flame.

During my stay in southern Georgia I stopped in Greensboro, N. C., for a brief visit at two different times—preaching on a Sunday morning in Grace Church. Soon after that I began contributing to the columns of The Herald. This brought us into closer contact, though there was not much personal correspondence.

He said that I knew more of him than did any other person, as he had told me more about himself than he had told anyone else. I don't think he ever hesitated to say to me anything about any subject or person that he wanted to discuss, knowing that his confidence would never be misused. What he said was always in good spirit.

Mrs. McCulloch died nearly ten years ago, Mrs. Long passed on nearly five years ago. We were interested in each other's children. We were not perfect parents, we didn't know everything about managing children; but everybody would credit us with wanting to do well by them in preparing them to live worthy Christian lives.

Now he has gone on, and we shall see him no more in the flesh. On what shores is he now? In what activities is he engaged? During my eight-day visit in his home last spring we talked much along these lines, and he asked many questions that neither of us could answer.

Life is a mystery. The helpless babe is born with a cry. It grows up without any conscious memory of whence it came, how it came, or what occurred during the early months and years of its life. Death is a mystery, but not greater than the mystery of life. We die—at whatever age—in weakness and helplessness, in darkness and ignorance. As the growing infant soon shows that it is finding life good, and clings to it; so, perhaps, we shall gradually discover there that death is good, opening into growth and joy and satisfaction such as we had not imagined possible.

Religion helps. Almost all religions have their good points. Jesus, because He knew God, because of His understanding mind and His heart of compassion toward all men, comes the nearest of anyone whom we know to meeting our souls' needs. "'O Love divine . . . We smile at pain while thou art near."

NOTICE OF MEETING OF ANNUAL CONFERENCE

The North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will hold its one hundred and seventh session in Grace church, Greensboro, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, pastor, beginning Wednesday, November 14, 1934, at 10 A.M. All delegates and pastors are requested to be present for the first roll call and remain until the conference closes. There is much more to a session of an annual conference than getting a preacher or pastorate. Let us come to attend to the King's business.

Tabernacle Fourth Quarterly Conference

This conference was held Wednesday night, October 3. There was a fairly good attendance. The usual business was transacted. It looked like the entire charge might come out with its financial obligations excepting the World Service assessment. There was provision made for a called session of the conference. Pastor's salary for coming year fixed at same amount as present. The delegate was instructed to ask for the return of the present Pastor Curry. It was a harmonious conference.

West End Church, Greensboro, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, Pastor

I visited this church at the morning appointment. There was present a very good attendance and the people gave attention to the message. West End is trying to refinance its debt which has worried them sick now for quite a while; if this can be done, it will put new life in the church and we believe the work will advance in a most satisfactory manner. This is Pastor Whitehead's second year and he is doing good work here. He expects all the Annual Conference claims to be met in full. I enjoyed my visit with this group of Christian workers.

Randleman Charge, Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, Pastor

This is a four-point charge. I visited New Salem and Level Cross churches. There were more people out at New Salem than when I visited the church last year. But I had a surprise awaiting me at Level Cross. I had been informed by Pastor Trogdon that this church had been greatly revived during the summer but I was not expecting to find what I saw. A very good congregation and a large choir which was already singing when we arrived before the hour for the service to start. They certainly added to the effectiveness of the service by their music and there were lots of young people being used there that otherwise would have had no part in the service whatever.

The pastor has already received twenty-one people into the church here this year; five were received last Sunday night. This is Brother Trogdon's second year here and he has done a good work, and we believe the work is on the upgrade, although our members at Randleman have been greatly discouraged for several years because of economic conditions there. Brother Trogdon is expecting the Annual Conference claims to be met, already Worthville church is about out with all claims, expect to complete the job in a week or two, and some other churches have paid up part of the Annual Conference claims. We want to see this charge take its place on the Conference Honor Roll this year; we sincerely hope that the pastor shall receive his salary in full also. It was a hard day in some respects, but I enjoyed my visitations and am sorry that I shall not be able to visit the two other churches this year except to hold the fourth quarterly in Mt. Lebanon.

The M. P. Herald

There will appear in another part of The Herald of this week a full statement of what was decided to do about this paper until conference meets; then we shall expect the Annual Conference to make permanent arrangements for the continuance of The Herald. We cannot get on with our work without it without lowering our efficiency very much.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE OPENS

High Point College opened its doors to new students for the 1934-35 school year on September 11. The upper classmen registered two days later. The first week was devoted to orientation, class activities commenced the week of the 17th.

129 new students registered for work, 146 old students in the three upper classes returned, making a total enrollment of 275. This is one more than registered for work both semesters last year. Twenty or thirty usually come in for the second semester and we are led to believe that at least that number will register in January, which will put the enrollment above the three hundred mark. The above figures do not include special students in art or music.

134 are dormitory students, 141 day students. 75 of the dormitory students are boys and 59 are girls. Of the 141 day students 76 are boys and 65 are girls. There are 24 ministers' children in the group and 17 ministerial students. Of the ministerial students 12 are Methodist Protestants, 3 Baptists, and 2 Methodist Episcopal. Of the ministers' children 18 are Methodist Protestants, 8 Methodist Episcopals, and three of other denominations. There are 14 denominations represented in the student body, including Jews and Catholics.

N. M. Harrison, Promotional Secretary.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

1. Please send me the name and address of your delegate if you haven't already done so. I lack the names of delegates from twelve charges. A list of delegates so far received has been given to Dr. Andrews, and one is ready for the Conference Host. You need not send names to either of these brethren. Send them to me and I'll do the rest.

2. Thirty-seven charges have failed to send me the money for 1933 Conference Journals. If you do not remember how many copies you received, write me and I will let you know. Please get this money to me before Conference so I can settle with the printers.

3. New statistical blanks are being printed for two reasons: 1. The supply is exhausted. 2. A number of changes, particularly in the method of reporting Annual Conference funds, make a new blank necessary. All blanks will be sent you by November 1. Wait for them.

OUR STORY PAGE

TOM'S MONEY

"Boys," said Mrs. Stevens, looking into the room, "it's time you were starting to Sunday school."

"We know it, mamma," answered Jesse, the oldest, turning from the window near which he was standing with his cap on. "We're waiting for Tom."

"What is he doing? He went upstairs in plenty of time to get ready."

"Oh, he's ready, all right," impatiently, "but he had to stop and count his money. He hadn't counted it since yesterday. I suppose he is putting it away now."

Mrs. Stevens' brow contracted. Tom seemed much addicted to counting his money, and somehow she did not like it. Being thrifty and saving was all very proper and praiseworthy; that was what she had been trying to teach the boys. But thrift could be carried to excess. She stepped quickly to the foot of the stairs.

"Tom," she called, "the boys are waiting for you. Come down."

"Yes, Mother." There was a quick tinkling, as of coins being poured into a box or drawer, and a few moments later Tom came bounding down the stairs, two or three at a leap, his face in a glow.

"Oh, Mother!" he exclaimed. "I've got four dollars and ninety-five cents besides the Sunday school nickel." He hesitated a moment, adding: "Would you mind if I don't give anything to the Sunday school today? You see," hurriedly, "I'd have five whole dollars then. I earned four dollars the week before, and this week I'll have a lot more vegetables to sell out of my garden, and the new grocery store will let me help deliver goods every morning. Maybe I can save as much as six dollars. Why, Mother, just think of what a lot of money that will be!"

"Yes, it will be a lot," gravely, "but what are you going to do with the money?"

"Why, keep it, of course," wonderingly. "I mean to be rich some time. Jesse says I'm a regular grubber and save-all; but that's because he's jealous," laughing happily. "He's got forty cents saved up. He says I'd better spend part of mine in fixing up my room, to save Papa the expense; and that I ought to put the rest in a bank. But I don't want it in a bank," stoutly. "I'd rather have it where I can look at it once in a while, and count it. I know it's safe then. And I don't want Papa to fix up my room, of course; I'll do it myself some time. But I want to get more money saved up first. Won't you be glad to have me rich, Mother?"

She walked with him to the door, her hand upon his shoulder, without speaking. Then she said thoughtfully:

"You know the old man who used to live on the corner, Tom?"

"Mr. Stearns?" The bright eyes looked up at her with quick, startled protest.

"Yes. He lived all alone, without sufficient food, and went about ragged and uncared for. Folks thought him very poor. Yet when he died he was found to have saved up a large fortune. He never gave away a cent willingly."

"But, Mother, I never could be like that."

"I hope not," gently; "but Mr. Stearns was said to have been a very bright, industrious boy. The miserliness came upon him gradually."

Tom drew a quick breath.

"I couldn't be like that," he repeated; "but I guess I'd rather take the nickel. And I'll fix up my room. It would be awful to live like Mr. Stearns."

As he kissed her and sprang down the steps to join the others, she was glad to see that his face looked very sober and thoughtful.—The Religious Telescope.

HOW GERTRUDE LOST OUT

Gertrude McLean believed in standing up for her rights; she often boasted that no one could impose upon her. She was certainly not ignorant of her beauty of face, for she carried herself like a queen. "Gertrude walks as if she owned the earth," commented an envious schoolmate.

Gertrude really was not overly popular with girls of her own age. She was very bright and witty, but, as one of her boy friends sagely remarked, "A girl who persists in going about with a chip on her shoulder is never very popular."

So matters stood when Gertrude obtained her first situation and became a clerk in the Harkness Department Store. As she took her place behind the counter she noted at the next counter a meek, homely girl who was also a beginner. Gertrude had the grace—and condescension—to speak civilly to her and found that her name, Maria Magruder, was as homely as her face. She said to herself: "That girl will soon lose out unless she takes lessons from me."

Gertrude's measure of self-confidence overflowed. That night she said: "Mother, I simply corralled every customer in sight; you should have seen my sales slips. That meek girl at the next counter acts as if she were afraid of being bitten by a customer. Her sales must have been very small."

For a single week Gertrude thought her position a bed of roses, then thorns began to develop. First she was reprimanded because, as she told her mother that night, she gave a discourteous customer "as good as she sent." Then another thorn appeared because of her slackness in clearing her counter after showing goods. "When one customer goes, get ready for another!" said the floor walker, emphatically.

She was feeling resentful, the morning was gloomy, and her sales chanced to be at low water mark. A customer appeared, a drab little woman who needed four yards of silk to match her sample. "All sold out; not a yard left," said Gertrude, curtly, as she turned back to her work of clearing her counters, as much as to say, "Good-by."

The customer hesitated, then turned away. Maria had heard the conversation and was pained by the curtness of Gertrude. She said to herself: "We must hold that customer." As the lady passed her counter she smiled and said, "Excuse me, but if you are looking for silk to match that sample I am sure Mr. Harkness can get it for you. He will do anything to fill the needs of a customer."

The customer had felt offended, but the smile and kindly voice were as salve to her hurt feelings. Maria made inquiry, the silk was ordered and the customer departed satisfied.

Unknown to both clerks the floor-walker saw the incident and overheard the conversation. Was it strange that Gertrude lost out and was discharged? Is it strange that homely Maria Magruder is now one of the most efficient clerks in the employ of the Harkness Department Store? You will not think so when informed that the little woman in drab was the largest retail purchaser in the whole town of Three Meadows.—The S. S. Banner.

A BOY AND HIS BIBLE

One day a Scotch lad, not yet sixteen years old, started from his home to take care of a man's garden in Cheshire, England. He said good-bye to his father, brothers and sisters; but his mother went with him to the boat which was to take him across the Firth of Forth.

"No, my Robert," she said, as they came in sight of the ferry, "let us stand here for a few minutes. I wish to ask one favor of you before you go."

"What is it, mother?" he asked.

"Promise that you will do what I am going to ask you."

"I cannot, mother," he replied, "until you tell me what your wish is."

"Oh, Robert!" she cried, and the tears rolled down her cheeks, "would I ask you anything that is not right?"

"Ask what you will, mother, and I will do it," said her son, overcome by his mother's weeping.

"I want you to promise me that you will read a chapter in the Bible every morning and evening."

"Mother, you know I read my Bible."

"I know you do, but you do not read it as often as you should. I shall go back home now with a happy heart, since you have promised me to read the Bible daily."

The mother went away, and the lad went on his way. He kept his promise, and read a chapter in the Bible every morning and evening. He read it because he loved his mother, and had given his promise, not so much because he took pleasure in it. But as he read, the truths took hold of his mind, and he became restless, and then unhappy. If he had not promised his mother, he would have stopped reading the precious Book. He lived alone in a small house in a large garden, and his spare time was his own. He had a few other books, but they were about gardening and botany. These he had to read to know about the work which he had to do. But the words of the Bible kept going through his mind, and he became more and more unhappy. Then he prayed. One evening while he was reading a chapter in the Book of Romans, light came into his soul, and the Apostle's words, though not new to him, seemed to be different.

"Can it be possible," he said to himself, "that I never understood what I have read again and again!"

Peace came to his heart, and he found that he had a great desire to know and do the will of God. This will was made known to him in a simple way. One night he went to a neighboring town, and on the street corner was a large placard giving notice of a missionary meeting to be held. The time for the meeting had passed, but the lad stood and read the notice over and over. Stories of missionaries which his mother had told him came back to his mind. It was while standing there, that something came into Robert Moffat's heart and mind that made him the missionary to the Hottentots of South Africa.—Publisher Unknown.

THE GOOD LIFE

"The Rev. Dr. J. F. McCulloch's was the good life, passed in conformity with the traditions and ideals of the environment of his youth; ideals of faith and duty, belonging, however, to no epoch. He was of sound scholarship, and the first courses of his career were in the way of scholarship, in the faculty of the University of Michigan, in the presidency of Adrian College, his alma mater.

"That was long ago. For four decades his field has been the state, the community, of his birth. His labors in it date back to that time when denominational papers were individual enterprises. The purpose of Rev. Dr. McCulloch in founding a journal was to serve the Methodist Protestant denomination through the ministry of the printed word, but specifically to build, with his pen, an orphanage and a denominational college. Through the heat and burden of the day he toiled on, and he was to see his visions become actuality and rest for awhile in contemplation of these actualities, in the shadows of the evening of life.

"His was the good life, passed in labors satisfying mind and heart, in a community that held him in high honor, respect and esteem, and winning the rewards for which his spirit strove.

HOW HE KNEW

A boy and girl, who played a good deal together, both learned to love the Savior.

One day the boy said to his mother, "Mother, I know that Emma is a Christian!"

"What makes you think so?"

"Because, Mother, she plays like a Christian."

"Plays like a Christian!" said the mother, to whom this sounded odd. "Why, what do you mean?"

"You see," said the child, "she used to be selfish and get angry at any little thing; now she is not selfish any more and don't get angry if you take everything she has got."—The Y. P. Leader.

"SAFE HOME WITH GOD"

I never met Dr. McCulloch in person, but through the written word he endeared himself to me. Today I have one clear thought concerning him: Safe home with God.

GIDEON GROVE MISSION BAND

The regular meeting was held Saturday, October 5, at the home of Mr. Coy Angel, with Miller Angel acting as host.

There were 13 members and three visitors present. The small attendance was due to unfavorable weather conditions.

A very interesting program was rendered, after which the business was transacted. The band now has $18.65 in the treasury. After the business was transacted, the occasion being the host's birthday, he was asked to take a chair in the center of the room. The members of the band presented him with many attractive gifts as, accompanied by Mildred Way at the piano, they sang "Happy Birthday to You."

The meeting adjourned to meet at the home of Rev. C. B. Way next month.

OVELIA FRIDDLE, President.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The regular quarterly meeting of the Executive Board of the Women's Work was held Friday, October 5th, at 10:30 A. M. at the home of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point, N. C., with 18 members and several visitors present.

Mrs. J. M. Millikan, first vice-president, presided in the absence of the president, and several items of important business were presented and discussed.

Due to the pressing demands for funds at this time, the finance committee is urging all Auxiliaries to make their payments as large as possible during the months of October, November and December. Local Auxiliary officers, please take note!

We note with regret the absence of our beloved president, Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, who is still confined to her room. This was the first meeting of the Board at which she has not been present in 25 years (if we are not mistaken). We trust she will soon be well again.

MRS. GEO. C. HALTOM, Secretary.

MEMORIAL IS HAD FOR DR. GERRINGER

Memorial services in honor of the late Dr. L. W. Gerringer, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church of Henderson, were held by the congregation of that church yesterday morning at the 11 o'clock service hour. The church was filled for the service.

The principal address was by Dr. N. G. Bethea, pastor of the denomination's church at Gibsonville, who was intimately associated with the deceased minister for many years prior to his death here two months ago. Jasper B. Hicks, prominent layman of the North Carolina Conference, and a leader in the local church, spoke for the congregation in appreciation of the services of the deceased pastor.

Mrs. L. R. Gooch read a paper on behalf of the missionary society of the church. The choir and the junior choir, under the leadership of Miss Elizabeth Fox and Mrs. H. A. Jordau, respectively, united in presenting an appropriate musical program during the services.

Mrs. Gerringer and the children, who are now living in Greensboro, were here for the memorial exercises. They have moved there since the death of Dr. Gerringer, and one of the daughters is a student at North Carolina College for Women. Mrs. Gerringer expects to teach.

Dr. Gerriuger, at the time of his death, was president of the Henderson Ministerial Association and was highly esteemed by the community as a whole, as well as by members of his own congregation.

HEDRICK FAMILY GET-TOGETHER

On Sunday, September 23, the family of C .L. Hedrick, including children and grandchildren, with one great-grandchild, gathered at old home for their first get-together meeting. There are nine children, seven married, everyone with an aged grandmother present for this occasion.

God has been wondrously good to us in sparing us all together, with father and mother, until everyone reached manhood and womanhood, youngest child being 18 years old.

All grandchildren are living except four, who died in early infancy.

We truly have something to be thankful for. The circle still is unbroken.

A table of good things to eat was placed in the yard. The father made a few remarks in which he said he could hope for no greater monument in this world than to see his children all working in the Kingdom of God and the love of Christ in their hearts and lives. Thanks were given by Mr. Ray Leatherman.

Five generations were included in this number, Mrs. Obey Waitman, Mrs. C. L. Hedrick, Mrs. Franees Lambeth, Mrs. W. Leonard and small son, Billie.

This was truly a happy occasion. We hope we may be privileged to enjoy another sometime.

MRS. RAY LEATHERMAN.

Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Thomasville, 7 pieces of clothing and 1 pair shoes for girls.

Brooklyn M. P. church, Baltimore, Md., a splendid box of clothing.

Kannapolis Daily Vacation Bible School, pillow cases and towels; also, the women of Kannapolis, clothing for a little girl.

We are thankful for all this help.

Clothing for Girls

We greatly appreciate the very generous response on the part of 42 women's organizations throughout the conference in helping us to get school outfits ready for our girls. This has been a wonderful help, and the girls join us in most hearty thanks. Postal cards have gone out expressing our very great appreciation for this help. Just a few more are to be heard from yet. We have their promise, so we know the clothing will soon be coming.

Boys' Clothing

We are still hoping that the men throughout the Conference will speedily send us a bit of money to pay for boys' clothing. We have had to buy overalls for all the boys and shoes for many of them, but they are not paid for. The men's class in First Church, Thomasville, has sent $7.65; see above. Winston-Salem and Denton have each promised $10.00 which will be coming soon. Three churches are clothing boys. A number of our boys need Sunday suits. Who will be the next to help out with this? Thank you; come along.

Looking to Thanksgiving

Conference comes very late this year, so Thanksgiving will be upon us before new pastors can get settled on their fields. So please plan for the Thanksgiving offerings of money and produce before going to Con-

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pleasant Grove Station.—After a long silence, if this doesn't find its way to the wastebasket, I'll appear in the columns of the news from this charge again. We are not dead, just nursing a mighty sick hand for the last six months, finally operated on at Burrus Memorial Hospital, High Point. For six months I've been deprived of the use of my left hand. I thought of but little except my hand. My people have been very thoughtful of me, visiting me and urging me not to preach till my hand was better. Fortunately, I was operated on at the beginning of my vacation which my people voted me after our revival meeting. They also made up and gave me a nice purse to a real rest, but the doctor said that an operation was an absolute necessity and I must stay at home. I obeyed and now I am almost restored to normalcy, and I feel that I have a new lease on life. When I am a little better I will write my first experience at a hospital.

Our revival began the second Sunday in July and continued through Sunday, the pastor doing all the preaching. We did not have day preaching except on Sundays. Interest was good from start to finish, resulting in about 45 conversions and renewals; 20 have joined the church to date. The church has been greatly revived. Some, of course, did not come to get their part. This is to be greatly regretted.

We held our third quarterly conference on the first Sunday in September at 11 o'clock; had 98% of officials present. The general routine of business was transacted in harmony. Bro. Ralph Kennedy was elected to represent the church in the Annual Conference. We are taking some advance steps to improve finances for another year.

We were glad to have the District Rally to meet with us on the fifth Sunday afternoon. The program was good. The attendance was not as good as should have been the case on account of some home-comings nearby.

Everything seems to be going nicely except our financial problems, which are still problems, and I fear will be for some time yet.

May God bless all our work.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Last Sunday, "Loyalty Day," was another good day for us. Our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, preached a most excellent sermon on the subject, "None of These Things Move Me," Acts 20-24. Prior to the sermon, officers for church and Sunday school for 1935 were installed. The choir sang a chorus, "True-hearted, Whole-hearted."

In the evening service Mr. Victor P. Hammer, formerly of Washington, D. C., but now of this city, spoke on the subject, "Loyalty—What It Is and What It Does." This was an interesting message ringing clear with the fundamental teachings of the Scriptures. We hope to have Mr. Hammer speak to us again.

The fourth quarterly conference announced for this Wednesday night has been postponed until Wednesday night, October 17.

We hope to have a large audience next Sunday night, as this is the thank-offering program for the Woman's Auxiliary. An interesting program is being planned, with Mrs. Fred Pritchard and Mrs. V. L. Smith in charge.

Miss Loula Thacker is a patient in Wesley Long hospital, Greensboro, where she underwent an operation last Saturday. Her condition, while not alarming, is considered critical.

Calvary, Greensboro.—We enjoyed a splendid Rally Day service Sunday morning. Each Sunday school class after departing to their class rooms for the roll call immediately returned to the main auditorium for the special Rally Day program given by several children under the direction of Miss Vivian Sullivan. A total of 193 was present at Sunday school and the Rally Day offering amounted to $16.22.

Dr. Pritchard preached a very fine sermon at the 11 o'clock hour, using "The Teacher" as his subject. Each teacher and assistant teacher was asked to occupy the front pew. His text was: "And he went forth again by the seaside; and all the multitude resorted unto him and he taught them." "Jesus was a great teacher," said Dr. Pritchard. "Regardless of whatever else he was called upon to do He found time to teach the people. So great were the demands upon Jesus for healing the bodies of people that some might wonder why He did not continue to heal, but instead we find Him going out to the shore to a convenient place to teach the people. The true teachers of our day are like the Master, they want to teach." Dr. Pritchard stressed certain facts which are well known to those who will stop and think, namely, "the average person owes a great deal to his Sunday school teacher." Many people are what they are today because of the teaching of some godly person. The person doing the teaching may not have been conscious of any great change as the result of the effort, and yet the seed fell on good soil and brought forth fruit. The Sunday school teacher is today one of the great stabilizing forces in the nation. The teacher should be highly esteemed and should have the backing of the parents in the home."

The stewards held their meeting in the hut Monday evening. They were pretty well pleased with the results of the tithing campaign which ended Sunday. It is impossible to tell the exact amount brought in by the tithing campaign.

Mrs. T. F. McCulloch continues quite ill at her home here. Her friends are all very anxious about her.

The Business Women's Circle met Monday evening with their chairman, Mrs. Robah H. Fields, with twelve members and three visitors present. During the business hour Mrs. Fields resigned as chairman and her sister, Mrs. Wade Leach, was elected chairman in her place. They made plans for an oyster suppper to be given October 25 at the Huntley-Stockton-Hill salon. During the social hour delicious refreshments were served.

The regular monthly business and social meeting of the Friendly Sunday school class was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. F. Caudle. A Hallowe'en party had been planned and each of the sixteen members and the one visitor present came dressed in her very "tackiest" costume. The members made plans for painting their classroom. The dresses made by the class members for the little girl in the M. P. Children's Home, whom the class is clothing, were exhibited and ordered sent to her. Mrs. J. N. Griswold and Mrs. L. P. Allred directed the entertainment for the evening. The hostess was assisted in serving delicious refreshments by Mrs. C. F. Garrett.

We set out, at the beginning of the year, to increase amount paid "World Service" over last year 25 per cent. This has been accomplished; also to pay college and all items on A. C. B. in full. Union Grove church finished paying their claims yesterday. We are hoping the other churches will pay these claims soon. Forty-four new members have been received this year.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Roberta.—We have sent in no report for several weeks, but are still busy. Rev. E. A. Cook filled his usual appointments yesterday. He preached two excellent sermons. The evening service has been moved back to 7 o'clock, Christian Endeavor at 6. The attendance at both Sunday school and preaching service is about as usual.

As our meeting has not been reported, we would like to say that Rev. Bethea was the pulpit help. His sermons were splendid. There were several conversions during the meeting, and following it six new members were received into the church.

Our new church calendars have been out for a week. These calendars can be purchased for 10 cents. The money will be used for the benefit of the church. The picture of our church and of our pastor, Rev. Cook, appears on these calendars.

As the conference year rapidly draws to a close we are very busy at this time trying to finish up the business part of our church activities as they should be finished. Mr. Will Hudson has been selected as delegate to the Annual Conference.

CLARA LINKER, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—The usual services are being held at our church. Our pastor, Rev. C. P. Morris, is at Westminster Seminary, and since his departure on September 24 the pulpit has been filled by Rev. Aubert Smith, pastor of Spencer church, on September 30 at both services, and on last Sunday morning by Mr. J. T. Fesperman, of the Kannapolis Y. M. C. A. These men were no strangers to our people, as they had been with us before, and we were glad to have them again. Mr. R. T. Sides, local preacher of the church, filled the pulpit at the Sunday evening service. On next Sunday we are to have Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., of High Point, and we are looking forward with a good deal of pleasure to his visit.

The general meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held tonight (Monday) at the church with the president, Mrs. W. T. Kiser, in charge. Our people deeply sympathize with Mrs. J. S. Marshall in the death of her father, Mr. Heglar, of Mooresville, N. C., who passed away suddenly on Sunday, September 23. Also we extend sympathy to Mrs. Clyde Fagen in the loss of her father, Mr. J. H. Sizemore, who also died suddenly last Thursday night. Funeral services for Mr. Sizemore were held Sunday afternoon at his residence on West Sixth street and were in charge of Rev. Wade James, of the Baptist Church; Rev. N. C. Williams, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, and Rev. D. D. Nash, of Concord.

We are saddened at the going of Dr. McCulloch. His place will be hard to fill in the hearts and lives of Methodist Protestants in North Carolina, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved ones.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Dulin, Mocksville Charge.—Our revival meeting was held first Sunday in September with Rev. T. Glenn Madison as pulpit help. He preached interesting and soul-stirring sermons throughout the meeting. There were several confessions and reclamations and a number joined the church. I am quite sure there were seed sown which will bring forth much fruit in due time.

The Young Ladies' Class are continuing to read their Bibles. They are small in number but they have read five hundred and seventy-five chapters.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, has filled his regular appointment since the revival meeting with helpful sermons. We are sorry that his two children have whooping cough. Best wishes to the Herald.

LEONA HENDRIX.

Shiloh Church, Connelly Springs Charge.—There has been some time since there has been a report from our church, but that does not mean we are asleep. We have the best Sunday school we have had in a long time. We have had a wonderful revival. At the request of the people, our pastor did the preaching. There were 82 professions and there has been over 30 joined our church. All are adults except four or five. The attendance was fine all through the meeting. Our pastor preached a wonderful sermon Sunday night. There were 10 who accepted Christ, and four jojined the church. We are expecting others to join soon. We feel Shiloh will go forward in the Lord's work. We have prayer meeting each week and have good attendance. Our young people are taking so much interest they are willing to conduct prayer meeting or do anything they can in the church.

Just before our revival we had a singing school. The school was in charge of Mr. Lee Miller. Mr. Miller is our choir leader. This added a big improvement in the singing. Our church also has new song books. There was a Ladies' Auxiliary organized several months ago, which has been doing good work. We gave our pastor a gift of $10 during Mrs. Love's illness. This gift was appreciated very much. They also appreciated the kindness shown them during the meeting. The men met at the church today to start working on a new road into the church. This has been needed a long time and we will be glad to see it fixed. We are glad Dr. Andrews is planning to be with us Sunday. We are looking forward to his visit. Pray for us that we may continue to see our church grow. We ask the prayers of all the Christian people.

A MEMBER.

First Church, Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. Mr. Isley filled his regular appointment at Mt. Carmel Sunday morning. He chose his text from Revelation, third chapter and 20th verse: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." This was one of Mr. Isley's best sermons. We were very glad to have special music furnished by Mr. Jesse Hedrick and Mrs. Clyde Snider at this service.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of our annual conference, will be with us at the next appointment, which is the third Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. We urge that all the members be present to hear Dr. Andrews.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Carmel church October 23 at 7:30 o'clock. All officials are urged to be present and all members that can. This will be the time which the delegates to the annual conference will be instructed as to who we want for pastor, although we expect Rev. Mr. Isley to be returned for his seventh year.

Liberty.—It is with profound regret we learn of the death of our beloved editor, Dr. J. F. McCulloch, and we the members of Liberty Charge, together with our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, wish to express our deepest sympathy to his family, especially to the daughter, Miss Mary McCulloch.

Our church people have been very busy; the church has been very beautifully painted inside, and a new carpet has been laid; also new chairs for the choir loft.

Mr. Love brought an edifying message from John 2:2. His subject was, "Jesus the Guest Most to Be Desired." He said in part: "No blessings come from Jesus until we are prepared for these blessings. A prayerful attitude helps us to be prepared."

Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. Cecil Frazier for the September meeting. Rev. Fred R. Love was in charge of the devotionals. He also made an interesting talk on "Appropriation, Formation and Donation." Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. Colon Brady. The devotional was led by Mrs. Mamie Smith. A good number were in attendance.

Our prayer and praise services on Wednesday nights are well attended and much good is accomplished in His name.

Rev. G. F. Millaway will preach at Shiloh, Liberty Charge, Sunday morning, October 14, at the 11 o'clock hour.

Mrs. R. L. Elkins underwent a majojr operation at Duke hospital last week. She is recovering satisfactorily.

Dr. A. D. Gregg, one of our strongest and most faithful members, has been appointed county health doctor of Randolph County to succeed Dr. G. H. Sumner, who is away on a year's leave of absence.

Rev. Mr. Love was invited to make a talk at Rocky River Friends Church. He chose as his subject "My Task." He was also guest of honor at a birthday dinner recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Kime.

Miss Mary Farmer, sister of J. B. Farmer, one of our faithful members, was a patient at Duke hospital recently. We wish for her a very speedy recovery.

Miss Treva Hemphill was a guest of Misses Helen, Dorothy and Annie Dare Isley Sunday and worshiped with us.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shepard and daughter, Bertine, were dinner guests of Mr .and Mrs. John Holt on Wednesday.

Mrs. Mamie Smith, who has so faithfully supervised the work of beautifying our church, was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Yow, over the week-end.

Dwight Gregerson and Paul S. Hardin, of Wake Forest College, and Misses Mary Bowman Shepard and Marjorie Elkins, of High Point College, were at home Sunday; also Miss Helen Dameron, of High Point College.

Asheville.—The chief event of this week is, of course, the "Manless Wedding," which is to be given by the Frances Cunningham Philathea Class this (Tuesday) evening. The role of the bride, Mrs. Verbena Smith Jones Brown Green, will be played by Miss Frances Cunningham. Mrs. D. L. West will portray the groom, Willie Toothacker, who will be given in marriage by his mother, Mrs. Robey Wilson. The officiating clergyman will be the Rev. Dr. Carver, played by Miss Melle Smith.

Miss Arlene Hanner will be the bride's maid of honor. Bridesmaids are Mrs. Sam Hendrickson and Mrs. Eleanor Waddell. Miss Nancy Clouse will preside at the piano, and Miss Fannie Miller will render two selections, "Oh, Promise Me, Willie," and "Just Before the Wedding, Mother." Miss Nell Carter will appear as the groom's best man. Mrs. Louise Dillingham will act as ring-bearer. Parents of the bride are Mrs. D. J. Eller and Miss Nell Draye. Others in the bridal party are: Mrs. Roy Amons, Mrs. Dolly Pressley, Miss Irene Miller, Miss Bonnie Carter, Miss Dorothy Drake, Mrs. J. F. Minnis and Mrs. Clarence Ladd.

The Fawcett Bible Class is sponsoring a supper Wednesday evening from 6 to 7:30 o'clock. It is hoped this will be well attended, as all proceeds are to apply on the local budget.

Rally Day is due to be observed next Sunday. At the close of the Sunday school hour, members of the Beginners' Class and some of the Junior boys and girls will give a short program. At the evening hour, the play, by Mrs. J. W. Shell, "Train Up a Child," will be given, with the following taking part: Mrs. Robey Wilson, Mrs. Sam Hendrickson, Misses Melle Smith, Nancy Clouse, Adele Biebinger, Polly Gentry, Betty Marlowe, Lorene Moser, Edna Moore, Lola Johnson, Edna Earle Moser, Virginia Lee, Betty Jean Minnis; Messrs. D. J. Eller, James Clouse, Junior Eller, Jack Bolick, Jack Bailey and Milton West.

The nominating committee, whose duty is to present on the third Sunday a slate of officers for the ensuing year, was appointed by Rev. Minnis on Sunday. They are as follows: Mr. E. H. Pratt, chairman, Mrs. E. A. Bolick, Mrs. D. L. West, Mrs. C. B. Baker and Rev. J. S. Williams.

Our Sunday school attendance was good

this week, 109 present. Mrs. Bolick's Beginners are still on the job, with 26 present this week. Mrs. Williams' Junior boys regained their status in amount of collection in the Children's department. The Frances Cunningham Philathea Class rallied again and led in amount of collection in the Adult department. Mr. Eller said the men would have led if the report had been compiled on a percentage basis. A suggestion, Miss Carter.

It was our good pleasure on Sunday to welcome into our church membership the following: Mrs. J. F. Cunningham, Mrs. Richard Hanner, Mrs. Clarence Ladd, Miss Frances Cunningham and Mr. Oscar Barrett. The entire church membership extend a glad hand of fellowship to these friends. The following parents presented their children for baptism at the same service: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hanner, their three children, Richard, Jr., Terrence and Henry David; Mr. and Mrs. Hale Thomas, their little daughter, Myrtle Virginia.

The Junior Christian Endeavor, under the direction of Mrs. E. A. Bolick, presented a musical program for the enjoyment of the other Christian Endeavors on Sunday evening. Mrs. Bolick is doing a splendid bit of work with these Juniors.

Only a few more weeks until conference. Everyone please do all you can to help us be an honor church, and to encourage Mr. Minnis. I know each pastor likes to be proud of his charge, and I am equally sure that none of us would wish Mr. Minnis to be ashamed of the Asheville church. Come on, everybody, do your bit, and a little bit more if you can. M. L. B.

Denton Church, Denton Charge.—Sunday, October 7, our church was favored by a visiting speaker, Rev. Sprigg Harwood, of Baltimore, who is at pesent a student at High Point College. Rev. Harwood preached in the morning and at night in a way that impressed the entire congregation. We hope we will soon have the pleasure of having this wonderful speaker with us again.

Also the Christian Endeavor Society did their bit by presenting the church with money to pay one of the conference claims. A very nice bulletin board which is to be placed in the vestibule of the church was also given.

Mitchell's Grove.—Our revival began the fourth Sunday in September and continued until Friday of that week. Rev. J. D. Williams, of High Point, was our pastor's help. Those that attended were greatly helped by his sermons and I'm sure that they will be long remembered. There were a few that came forward and consecrated their lives to the Master, with one addition to the church.

Our Sunday school roll has gone much higher this year than last. It has reached to 155; this makes about 45 more than last year. I think most of the thanks should go to the Young People's class, as they have been doing some fine work this summer. We hope that they continue.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Sunday, October 7, with Mrs. Annie Matthews, leader. Plans were made for some new curtains for the Sunday school classes.

A Rally Day program is being planned. This will be a week or two late due to the fact that we were unable to get our literature sooner.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Charge.—During the absence of our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, delivered a splendid sermon on "Blood," using as the Scripture lesson the ninth chapter of Hebrews.

The third Sunday in this month Rev. F. W. Paschall will preach for us, at which time the women of the missionary society will give a thank-offering program. The first Sunday in November Mr. Mabry will return for conference and will preach for us, which will be his last appointment.

We are sorry to have to lose Mr. Mabry and family, for we will miss them in our church and community.

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. W. A. Johnson Saturday afternoon, October 20, at 2:30 o'clock.

The report given last Sunday for our Children's Home birthday offering amounted to $46.20. REPORTER.

Shiloh, Shiloh Charge.—Both reporters and people appreciated the letter sent in by our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, in last week's Herald. We, as church members, are always delighted to see news from our home church, but doubly so when our pastor speaks.

On September 16 our pastor delivered a vital message from Exodus 33:15, "And he (Moses) said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." Here are just a few choice bits of the message:

"Man has always been agent through which God works. Man's highest achievement is to do the will of God; it is only real joy of the individual. God is ready to make His will known if we will listen. Some vital things were real in the life of Moses:

"1. The Presence of God. Moses had had an experience when God appeared in the fire on Horeb as he watched his flocks. God was real to Moses. Men have lost vision today.

"2. The Will of God. After seeing God, Moses knew his will, for God said, Go and I'll go with you. It was a great task. Moses obeyed, resigned to Jethro, took his shepherd's staff and went to Egypt to God's will.

"Moses talked with God as a man talks with his friend face to face. So real was God to him that his very face shone. Man is already defeated if God be not with him; but obedience and walking with God always means success."

On October 7, at the 11 o'clock hour, Rev. Mr. Ridge delivered a message from Luke 13:6, "And he came and sought fruit thereon and found none." In many passages of Scripture life is likened unto a tree. Will give just a few thoughts from the sermon.

The tree was not in the vineyard by chance; it was planted there. No man is here by accident. The tree was not to bear fruit for self, but for the owner. No person is to live for self. The tree was expected to bear good fruit. The fruitless tree was in the way. "Why cumbereth it the ground?" A fruitless life is a stumbling block. The tree was given another chance. As a diseased tree needs to be digged about and sprayed, so a fruitless life needs the spraying of the Word and the Holy Spirit.

What are we doing with our lives, our time, and substance, our talents God has given us? We shall all reap harvest of some kind, for what we sow we reap. To bear good fruit, to bear much fruit, Christian, abide in Christ, fellowship with Him, and so make life count.

The C. E. Society gave a service in song Sunday night, which was composed of request numbers. It was very much enjjoyed by a large crowd. We are looking forward to another one not too far in the future.

There will be choir practice each Friday night at Shiloh for an indefinite time. All, both old and young, who can and will try to sing are urged to come.

An interesting and lively council meeting was held on Monday night, October 8. A fine spirit of co-operation was manifested. Remember, every church and Sunday school official is a member. Everyone who is interested in the work of the church is asked to come. The month of October is being observed as tithing month. Will each one remember to give at least some donation before the close of the year. Give as the Lord has prospered you.

Shiloh joins all Methodist Protestants in entire conference of this and other states in sincere sorrow for the passing of one of the most faithful servants, Dr. McCulloch. He truly laid down his life for the cause of Christ, and died laboring in that cause. Great has been his contribution to his beloved church. It is a rather hard blow to have to give up in one year two such men as Drs. McCulloch and Gerringer; but bow in submission to the will of our God, for the God who calls his children home is able to send others to take their places. And so we comfort ourselves in the eternal promises.

We were glad to have present Sunday Mr. Gill Mosely and Mr. Noah Weaver, both of whom have been sick for some time.

At this writing, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Pickett are indisposed, but are improving. Also Mr. Lee Evans is improving and able to come to church.

We were glad to have Floyd and Fred Berrier, sons of W. J. Berrier, back home Sunday. Fred will be with home folks for several days.

Inez and Charles Ridge visited their parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Ridge, Sunday. They returned to High Point College Monday morning. Always glad to have them with us.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Home-Coming day was held at Spring Hill last Sunday with many old friends coming back to their home church. Sunday school was held at 10 o'clock, followed by a special sermon by our pastor, which was well received by all. Dinner was spread on the ground in old picnic style. After enjoying this bountiful meal we assembled in the church to hear Rev. Grant read a short history of our church. This report will appear in the Herald later. Then Hickory Grove choir, the Hedgecock sisters and others entertained us with several songs. A former pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, delivered a wonderful message. We were indeed glad to have him and Mrs. Whitehead with us and invite them to come again.

A burial association was organized with Mr. J. B. Swaim as president; Mrs. Everett Swaim, secretary and treasurer. The directors are John York, Charles Welch, McClean Ceeil, George and Julius Craven. At this writing 22 members have joined, and we expect some more to join in the near future.

The Sunshine Circle and Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Wayne Swaim Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Sunshine Circle is working on a three-act play to be given soon. The play is a rural comedy, "Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick," and promises to be good. We are happy to say that we have a piano in our church and the money from the play will go toward making a payment on the piano.

New Hope.—It has been quite a while since a report has been sent in, but our work is getting along fine and good interest being taken. Last night one of the largest crowds we have had in a long time, which begins to seem like old times at New Hope. Again that love seems to be great among all our people. Rev. Henderson delivered a sermon last Sunday on fifth Sunday night. It seemed like a long time since he was with us. He has been away holding a meeting through August and September, and we did excuse him, but we were glad to have him back and hungry for the good old messages he brings to us. Sunday night his subject was about Daniel purposed in his heart to do the will of God.

Rev. Henderson asked the people to look back over their lives and see if they had kept their vows or not. Better not to make a vow than to make one and break it. That is why we fail to receive the great blessings that God has for us. God has never broken the promise he gave to man. The trouble all lies between us. Look at old Daniel and the faith he had and such a blessing God gave him. Help us children to obey.

We have our Sunday school at the regular hour, 10 o'clock, and prayer meetings on each Sunday night. We have been meeting on Tuesday and Friday nights and learning some new songs.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We have not died, neither have we quit work, but due to the neglect of the reporter you haven't heard from us in a good while, but we hope to do better in the future.

The Ladies' Aid held their regular meeting Sunday afternoon at the church. Their plans are to reorganize their society fourth Sunday this month.

Our faithful pastor is still bringing us good old gospel preaching. On his last appointment, that night he spoke especially to the children, and as he spoke to those little, eager hearts, we older ones feel we gained lots from the service too.

The Sunday school and Ladies' Aid have added beauty to the parsonage recently with a 42-piece set of dishes.

Our C. E. is still having some splendid work. New officers for the C. E. will be elected fourth Sunday night.

Conference is nearly here! Officers for the Sunday school were elected Sunday morning. They are: Superintendent, W. M. Compton; assistant, H. R. McClimon; secretary, Marvin Smith; assistant, Wilson Harrison; pianist, Miss Lucille Davis; assistant, Mrs. A. A. Foster; singing leader, N. N. Smith; assistant, N. G. McClimon.

Teachers for the classes with the exception of the Willing Workers Class, are as follows: Men's Bible Class, E. L. Davis; assistant, B. P. Smith; Ladies' Bible Class, Mrs. R. T. Bennette; assistant, Mrs. N. G. McClimon; Boys' Senior Class, Fred Compton; assistant, Theron Davis; Intermediates, Miss Lucille Davis; assistant, Mrs. H. R. McClimon; Juniors, Miss Lula Pearson; assistant, Mrs. A. A. Foster; primary, Mrs. W. R. Harrison; ;assistant, Mrs. E. L. Davis; Beginners, Miss Kate Poole.

We were deeply saddened in the death of dear Dr. McCulloch. We certainly feel he had fought a good fight and we appreciate his splendid service. Although we had never seen him, we seemed to know him so much through the paper.

Tabernacle-Julian.—Our fourth quarterly conference convened on Wednesday night, October 3. The largest attendance we have had for some time. Indeed, the attendance of our conferences has been increasing all through the year. Dr. Andrews was with us and presided over the conference. We were glad to have our president with us and we believe he did us good. We found our finances in better shape than at the same date one year ago. It is believed that Julian will pay all claims. Tabernacle will meet local interests and we are hoping that all Annual Conference Budget will be met. We have now paid much more on World Service than was paid during the entire of last year. While we are not turning the world upside down, good old Tabernacle and faithful Julian are coming. The salary was set for another year the same as is being paid this year. The vote was for the return of the present pastor for another year. This meets with the great pleasure of pastor and family. We have been here for two years and we have learned to greatly love and appreciate these great and good people. We are to have an adjourned session of the quarterly conference on Monday night, November 5. At this time the alternate delegate will be elected.

On last Friday the ladies of Tabernacle gave a dinner in the dining room of the Huntley-Stockton-Hill Furniture Company of Greensboro, and realized nearly $75. We appreciate the money collected and we thank everyone who patronized the dinner, but that which is appreciated most is the way the ladies responded to the cause with both material and service. There was enough good eats left over to have fed many more. Those who patronized the dinner gave us the good word that it was a good dinner and plenty of it, with the best of service. In my experience I have never seen better response and better work among the ladies of any church. There are many people who have a good word for Tabernacle now who did not know there was such a church before last Friday.

On last Sunday Rally Day was observed at both churches and offerings were taken. At Tabernacle, promotion day was also observed and Sunday school officers for the coming year were installed. At the 11 o'clock hour the fall communion was observed. It was one of the best communion services we have had during the two years just closing. It was indeed beautiful to see so many of our young people gathering around the communion altar.

We are indeed sad because of the going of our dear Dr. McCulloch. Tabernacle has produced a large number of ministers, but none greater and more loved than Dr. McCulloch. A large number of people gathered at our cemetery as his body was being placed under the sod of the church grounds of his youth and the church he loved to his dying day. The people here loved him greatly, but bow in humble submission to the God he served and the God who made it possible for this great man to do so much for his fellowman.

Miss Martha Reynolds is our newly elected reporter and we will be reading the words from her pen in the near future.

MARRIED

Waynick-Yow

At the parsonage, by the writer, August 17, 1934, at 10 a. m., Paul D. Waynick and Miss Esquerido Yow were united in matrimony. Mr. Waynick is connected with the Steele Hardware Company in Gibsonville and is a splendid young man; while his bride has been for the past several years assistant postmaster, which place she filled most efficiently.

We predict for this happy couple the best things and they have a host of friends whose prayers and best wishes follow them into their new home as they have set up housekeeping in Gibsonville.

Edwards-Scott

In the home of the bride's father, H. M. Scott, Burlington, September 21, 1934, at 5 p. m., John W. Edwards and Dorothy Scott were united in marriage by the writer, using the ring ceremony of the Methodist Protestant church.

Mr. Edwards holds a position with the Duke Power Company, Rock Hill, S. C., while Mrs. Edwards has been floor manager for Woolworth in Burlington for some time. Both of them are capable young people and we predict for them success as they go forward together on the journey of life.

After a bountiful repast served to the bride and bridegroom and a few friends they left for their future home in Rock Hill, S. C. Our best wishes and prayers go with them.

Allred-Faucett

Another marriage was celebrated in the parsonage here when Walter F. Allred and Lessie Faucett joined hands and hearts in holy wedlock September 21, 1934, at 7 p. m., the writer officiating, using the ring ceremony of the Methodist Protestant church.

This couple are held in high esteem in the community, Mr. Allred with the May hosiery mills and his bride an industrious and useful young lady in work of the church and community. No more deserving couple could be found anywhere than these two young people, and the blessings of heaven are asked for them by a host of friends.

DR. L. W. GERRINGER

A Tribute From Our Church by Jasper B. Hicks

The Methodist Protestant Church of Henderson is dedicating this service to the memory of Dr. L. W. Gerringer, who for almost three years labored with us and for us.

It is hard for me to express my feelings in representing the membership of our church on this occasion. It is, I know, an honor to attempt to speak the feeling of thankfulness on the part of the congregation for the untiring efforts and for his patience with us in our service of Christ. It is not the honor that I feel at this time, it is rather the responsibility resting on me, for fear that I shall fail to mention the things that he did for this church. I cannot rest with the statement that the task is too big, that he did more for the church than can be said, because that would not be true to him or to myself.

I realize now more than I ever did before something of the feeling of a President of the United States who was making an address at Gettysburg. His task was a big one, upon him rested the responsibility of giving the world the record of the soldiers who fought on that battlefield. From his troubled mind, realizing the magnitude of his task, came the thought that, after all, it was not what he said there but it was rather what those brave men did there. That it was beyond his poor power to add to that record or to take from. With that consolation I know that you will not let your love for the memory of our friend dim because of anything that I may say, or for anything that I may leave unsaid. I wish to turn the pages back and put myself in the place of that other speaker and say: It is not what I say here today but it is rather what he did here in the course of his ministry that you are to remember. It is far beyond my power or desire to add one thing to that record or to take one thing from it. A record that began with his early life, and found good deed after good deed credited up until the record when finally presented was one that would make any one feel proud.

Three years ago, in November, I was your delegate to the High Point Conference. My duty was plain. I had made a thorough inquiry among the membership and had received no objection to the proposed call of Bro. Gerringer as our pastor. I shall always remember his statement after I had outlined the work at the Henderson church and had notified him that our people wanted him. His statement was, "Brother Hicks, that would not be so bad," and in his next words and in a more serious way he said that if we felt that he could be of some help to us and if the conference felt that he could advance the Kingdom of God by coming to Henderson that he would come and give his best. He came—he gave his best—he gave his all for God and the members of this church.

I was closely associated with Brother Gerringer from the day he came to Henderson until his death. I know that he realized, "A charge to keep I have, a God to glorify." I know that he was faithful to that charge and that he discharged every obligation to this church that a minister owes a congregation. We all know that he was inspiration at Sunday school, that he created an atmosphere of worship at church service, that he was pleasant and witty at the banquet table, that he could joke and be joked. That he was interested in and faithful to every organization in the church. We heard him from the pulpit and were lifted up by his sincerity and benefited by his logic. We heard him in that sermon which I shall always remember, when he told us of his hardships in life, told of the many hard places in the way, and in the closing moments of that sermon he said that he could not say after thinking of the hardships of Christ, of the sacrifices of Christ for mankind, that he had ever suffered for Christ.

The thing that we can hold onto at this time is that all is not lost in death. That great news came to the world in the life and death of Jesus Christ. Brother Gerringer told us about that life, he reminded us that there is something for the Christian beyond the grave. That something beyond the grave is what I have in mind now, the same thing was in the mind of the poet when he said:

> "Lives of great men all remind us
> We can make our lives sublime,
> And, departing, leave behind us
> Footprints on the sands of time;
> Footprints that perhaps another,
> Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
> A forlorn, shipwrecked brother,
> Seeing, may take heart again."

We have been privileged, my friends, in having the life of our brother poured out with us and for us. We saw in him the finished preacher, the experienced teacher, the faithful and devoted father and husband. We saw him almost after the hand of death had been placed on his head stand just where I stand now, and beg the members of this church to rededicate their lives to Jesus Christ. We heard him preach as no one else, it seems to me, had ever preached before in our special revival services. It seems clear to me now that the Master who walked along the shores of Galilee was just a little bit nearer, that Brother Gerringer had us by the hand, and that his other hand was pointed toward Heaven, and that he was almost touching the hand of the Master as He stood with his hands extended toward his people.

We saw him in the years of financial stress, when the finances of the church were at a low ebb. We heard from his lips that it was not the loss of money by his congregation that was worrying him, but the loss of morale. That it was not the loss of silver or gold that was tearing at his heart, but the loss of members at church and Sunday school. That it was not the loss of positions, but the loss of champions of Christ. We saw Brother Gerringer carry on when we were discouraged, we saw him stand alone against the crowd of those who were about to lose faith, we saw him at the dawn of a new day with his faith undimmed and his heart and mind ready for work.

Yes, we shall miss Brother Gerringer, shall miss the wisdom of his counsel, shall miss the richness of his experience, shall miss the gentleness of his sympathy, and above all we shall miss the warmth of his personality. We had three years of his services, we praise his memory for the prayers that he uttered for us, for the life that he lived before us, and for the direction that he led us.

No one save the members of his own family could have found it any harder to understand the death of Brother Gerringer than I did. I know that we can't see all the way, we can't understand all the plan of our Father; we only know:

"God never would send you the darkness
If he felt you could bear the light,
But you would not cling to His guiding hand
If the way was always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith
Could you always walk by sight."

We know that Brother Gerringer walked by faith, lived by faith and died in the faith of his Father in Heaven.

We remain to carry on the work which he did for three years. It is our task to hold high the standard he set for us, his life with us, his prayers for us, his example before us is his immortality, and the memory of it is our heritage.

Henderson, N. C., Oct. 7, 1934.

FEDERAL COUNCIL TO LAUNCH NATION-WIDE PEACE CRUSADE

The 25 Protestant denominations affiliated with the Federal Council of Churches have been asked to launch a nation-wide "peace crusade against the war system" next month, it has been announced by Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Federal Council. As a preliminary move the Council has appointed three commissions, one to study the Christian basis of world peace; another to study the problems of peace policies, and the third to study a program for peace education. The three commissions will submit their findings to the National Study Conference on the Churches and World Peace, which meets in Dayton, Ohio, on December 6 and 7.

More definite plans for the crusade will be decided at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Council on September 28. It is expected that the question of securing the support of Jewish and Catholic organizations on a nation-wide scale will also be raised at this meeting.

In an announcement to its member denominations the Federal Council declared: "In view of the gravity of the present world situation, the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America authorizes its department of international justice and good will to launch a peace crusade of the churches for 1934, the primary objective of which will be the enlistment of the Christian forces of the nation in a movement to make the ideals and spirit of Jesus regnant in the relations of nations. The time has come when the churches of America should unitedly and with the utmost moral and spiritual energy attack the war system and work for a world peace system."

NEW FLUID STOPS BLEEDING

After two years of work Dr. Luigi Pancaro of Sudbury, Ontario, has developed a fluid which he claims will stop the flow of blood from a wound whether it be large or small. He demonstrated the effects of his discovery to other doctors by severing the jugular vein of a rabbit and then stopping the flow of blood by application of the fluid. As proof of its practical value he cited a case where it had been used to stop the bleeding after a man had both legs amputated. When serious hemorrhages followed operations it has been used with success by several doctors.—Pathfinder.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

In Memory of Rev. Manie Peebles Chambliss

So sad and sudden was he called,
His death was a shock to all,
But with his trouble God knew best,
And took him home to rest.

God made him a wonderful son
To a mother, admired by young and old;
To her his smile was sunshine,
To her his heart was gold.

He was kind and thoughtful in all his ways;
Upright and just to the end of his days;
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.

Friends and loved ones he left are lonely,
In midst of their labors they are blue;
Ever, always, missing you.

Friend and loved one, who is sleeping,
Not a care upon your brow,
Oh, blame them not for weeping,
For they miss you so much, even now.

However, it's not the number of years one lives,
But how fully one lives them, we know,
In spreading God's kingdom on earth
That gives one a home on Canaan's happy shore.

Dear Father, help us to be true and faithful,
Where sin and strife are abroad in the lands,
Then again, some day, we will meet him
In that eternal home not made with hands.

A FRIEND.

Baity

A vacant chair is in our midst,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in a home
Which never can be filled.

This place was made vacant on the afternoon of September 15 when the death angel from Heaven came to the home of Mrs. Mary Smith Baity to accompany her soul to her celestial home.

"We cannot say, we must not say,
That she is dead. She is just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she is there.
So think of her faring on as dear
In the love of There as the love of here,
Think of her still as the same, and say
She is not dead—she is just away."

Mrs. Baity was one of the oldest members of the Efland Methodist Protestant church, a charter member, having moved her membership here from Chestnut Ridge when the church here was organized. She was a faithful member and regular attendant as long as her health would permit.

In 1883 she was married to Mr. John Bell Baity, also of Efland, who was called to his reward several years ago.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Mays, of Efland, and three sons, Jack, of Efland, Odar, of Salisbury, and Jesse M., of Henderson; 10 grandchildren also survive. One daughter, Ouna, was called "over there" in childhood.

To give up mother always seems so hard, but we would not wish for her to remain here in this world of strife and turmoil after hearing her say, "I'll soon be at rest."

For more than 77 years Mrs. Baity lived, and no more beautiful tribute could be paid anyone than her pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, who had charge of the funeral service paid her. He said "I have never heard anything except good about her." May we so live and emulate her example that we may meet her in that heavenly land when our work here is finished.

Amid a throng of sorrowing relatives and sympathetic friends, her pastor was assisted by Rev. S. F. Nicks of the M. E. Church, in conducting the funeral rites in the Efland M. P. Church on the afternoon of September 18 at 2:30 o'clock. "Abide With Me," "Sweet Bye and Bye," and "Sometime We'll Understand," were used in the service and at the graveside the choir sang, "Asleep in Jesus and "Sleep on, Beloved."

The Philathea class, of which Mrs. Mays is a member, had charge of the beautiful floral tribute. Messrs. Julian, Fred and Charlie Brown, Andrew Lloyd, Ed Murray and Gilbert Smith acted as pallbearers.

She always leaned to watch for us,
Anxious if we were late,
In winter by the window,
In summer by the gate;

And though we mocked her tenderly,
Who had such foolish care,
The long way home would seem more safe
Because she waited there.

Her thoughts were all so full of us—
She never could forget;
And so I think that where she is
She must be watching yet—

Waiting till we come home to her,
Anxious if we are late—
Watching from Heaven's window,
Leaning from Heaven's gate.

A FRIEND.

Harris

Mrs. Sarah Whitaker Harris, a member of Whitaker's Chapel and of the Home Circle of the Enfield's Woman's Auxiliary, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Hodgin, in Enfield, on June 28.

In 1889 she married Rev. Felix Totten, who died in 1898. Several years after Mr. Totten's death she married Rev. W. L. Harris, who died in 1910.

Mrs. Harris was devoted to her home church, Whitaker's Chapel, near which she spent her girlhood and many years of her life.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, that the members of this auxiliary feel a personal loss in the passing of this gentle, sweet spirited woman, and the sympathy of the auxiliary is extended to her devoted daughter and other members of her family;

Second, that a devoted member of her home church has passed away whose place will not easily be filled;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her daughter and to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MISS MARY B. COLLINS,
MRS. MYRA MANN,
MRS. EXUM BELLAMY,
Committee from Enfield Woman's Ruxiliary.

Baity

Mrs. Mary J. Baity passed to her reward September 17th. She lived to be more than 77 years of age.

She joined Chestnut Ridge church in early life. In May, 1905, she transferred her membership to our Efland church, where she remained a faithful member until death. She was one of the charter members of Efland church.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. S. F. Nicks, in Efland church, September 18th. The remains were then placed in the church cemetery. A large congregation was present at these services.

Of her near relatives, three sons, Jesse of Henderson, Adar of Salisbury, Jack of Efland, and one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Mayes of Efland, survive. May God comfort them all.

FRATERNAL MESSENGER WHITEHEAD

Rev. T. J. Whitehead, pastor of the Greensboro West End Church, more than justly filled his responsibility as fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church to the Methodist Episcopal Church assembled in the Blue Ridge Atlantic Conference at Newton on Friday, October 5th. He almost started a revival within the membership of the Conference.

At the close of Mr. Whitehead's message, which had sounded a clarion call for a renewal of "heart-warming Methodism" like that of the founder of Methodism, John Wesley, Bishop Burns, of Boston, who was presiding, arose and said: "Brethren, I've thought all along that this Conference lacked something very much, and I'm certainly happy that our visiting brother has brought it to life in this meeting." The bishop was so moved by the spiritual warmth of the atmosphere that he further stated: "I shall depart from my previously announced theme of my devotional talk for this hour, such departure being prompted by the remarks of Brother Whitehead and the working of the Holy Spirit, and shall speak to you on the topic, "Wanted: Faith in Something."

The new theme was in part an answer to Brother Whitehead's challenge to Methodism to find a vital experience for the individual soul and a practical interpretation of that experience in the application of Jesus' message to our pressing current social problems. Bishop Burns said that we needed a simple creed, a social program for young people, and a serviceable spirit. These three combined in the thought and actions of a minister will make of him a true servant of God.

Rev. C. C. Benton, of Canton, was elected fraternal messenger to our Conference to be held in Grace church next month. After Bishop Burns' message the Conference adjourned for lunch, and Revs. Whitehead and J Elwood Carroll had dinner with the Bishop and his two district superintendents.

While Albemarle and Shiloh stood still last week, Siler City decided she would make her position a little more secure by climbing up a few more pegs. And so there she is, away up there so near the top that she can almost give the shout of victory. Well, that is what it takes to win, just keep on climbing. We also had a lot of other good contributions sent in last week. Some of them came from places where they had already reached the goal, such as Fountain Place in Burlington. You will see by looking at last week's paper that they headed the list with subscriptions. Well, that is mighty fine. We thank all of you whether you sent in a large or a small amount. It all helps to get the paper in the homes of our people, and it helps in meeting the printers' expenses.

And Lebanon in High Point did not sit down after sending in a fine lot of subscriptions two weeks ago. They proved last week that they were still up and running by sending in a payment on subsidy. Good for Lebanon! Go thou and do likewise.

Now let me make the same request here that I am making on the first page of the Herald this week. Do not send money to me, but send it to Methodist Protestant Herald, 1705 Asheboro street. Make checks and money orders to M. P. Herald.

Already I happen to know that there will be some fine things to write about next week. So, come along and help us put this thing across.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Methodist Protestant Herald

Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

PRICE—$2.00 a year, payable in advance.

Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. However, subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers to be continued and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before.

We cannot often supply back numbers.

We acknowledge receipt of money on subscription account by changing the date on the label. If this is not changed within two weeks after your money is forwarded, write us.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Greensboro, N. C.

A VISIT TO MOUNT ZION

The chairman of the Herald committee had the pleasure of accompanying President Andrews to Mount Zion church on the Pinnacle-Mount Zion charge to attend a group meeting on Tuesday of this week. All of the churches on the charge were represented, and there was an earnest group of people present to hear what the visitors had to say.

Mount Zion is one of our outstanding churches in that section of the state. It has a lot of fine people in it. It is also in a wonderful location from the standpoint of beauty. Not more than a couple of miles away is the famous Pilot Mountain, one of the very interesting things in the way of mountains because of the unusual pinnacle which rests so stately at the top. Then there are the Sauratown mountains in the distance which are always enchanting to the lovers of nature.

While at the meeting on Tuesday, several remembered the Herald in a substantial way and before the chairman left he had received the promise of some subsidy money right away.

Getting Out the Herald

Thinking that our people would like to know who is getting out the HERALD since the death of its editor, Dr. J. F. McCulloch, it has occurred to me to open up the windows and let a little light in, in order that you may see the set-up.

Mail that is addressed to THE METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD is opened by the late editor's daughter, Miss Mary C. McCulloch. She is the bookkeeper and naturally takes charge of the cash and enters it on the book. She also enters all subscriptions on the mailing list and keeps it up to date. All matter that is for publication as well as all exchanges coming to the HERALD are put in a box in the printing office. After this is done, then I pass by the box and take out all of these letters and papers and in most cases take them to my study. There I read the articles sent in for publication, in some cases dotting an I and in other cases crossing a T. Sometimes a sentence must be reconstructed. After everything is taken out that might make the article unsafe to print, it is then put where the printers can get hold of it and in a very few minutes, sometimes, it is set up. Already I have found that not all that comes to the paper can be printed. Some of it is from organizations that are advocating certain things that might be good for the country, but not especially interesting in a church paper. Exchanges are read with a view of getting something good out of them to pass on to our people.

Some of the proof in the HERALD office is read by Miss Mary C. and some by the printers, McCulloch and Swain, and their assistants. It might be interesting to our people to know that both of these men are sons of our ministers. Warren McCulloch is a son of the late Dr. J. F. McCulloch, and James Swain is a son of the late Dr. W. E. Swain, who was President of our conference for five years and one of our best preachers. And so this is the process that is gone through in getting the paper ready for print. It is then printed, folded, the edges trimmed, stitched with fine wire, and the labels put on and put in the mail bags and taken to the post office.

What Will the Wets Say About This?

Lieutenant W. J. Croom, division two commander of the state highway patrol, in commenting on the conditions at the state fair at Raleigh, is quoted as saying, "Year before last, in 1932, we arrested 23 drunken drivers at the state fair. Last year we arrested only six. This year, with probably the biggest crowd in state fair history on hand, we made not a single arrest and had not a single wreck, not even a cracked fender. In spite of its size, it was the most orderly crowd I ever saw."

Just Around the Corner

When two Methodist Protestant ministers meet these days, the first question that is asked is, "Do you know that conference is just around the corner?" The other one replies, "Yes, and there is much to be done yet on my charge." While the question and the answer may be amusing to the one on the outside, it is very real to those who know the facts. It is always true that a great many things are left until the last of the year to be done. While this situation will, perhaps, always obtain to a certain extent, it would be fine if we could make ourselves realize that it is easier to do things regularly through the year than to do so much at the end of the year. In college there is a good deal of "cramming" done for examinations. The same principle is used in getting ready for conference that is used in getting ready for examinations.

Sesqui-Centennial of Methodism

Methodists from all parts of the United States and some from other countries assembled in Baltimore last week to celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States. The three larger bodies taking part in the celebration were the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church. We hope to give to our people some impressions of the meeting by one who was there. Several of our ministers from the N. C. conference were in attendance and others wanted to go but were hindered. The reason that Methodist Protestants were there is that we are a part of the great Methodist family and that we descended from that Methodist church that was esablished in 1784.

IT FASCINATED HIM

A young man in India employed in one of the railway offices overheard the remark that the best Book from which to learn the English language was the English Bible. He was immediately possessed by a desire to obtain a copy. Then he set himself to read the Bible in order to improve his knowledge of English. Before long, however, the Book began to grip his attention; it fascinated him; he read it through once, twice, thrice. At length he was convinced that the Christian religion was true and that Christ was able to save him from his sins. He went to see the missionary who tells the story. He was won, like Tatian and Justin Martyr, by devout study of the Holy Scriptures.—Council Fires.

A PLEA FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOL

By J. D. Rogers

The healthy growth and endurance of a nation is no more secure or permanent than the strength of the foundation—the bedrock principle upon which that nation is builded.

Enlightenment by education and inculcation of loyalty and patriotic duty to Constitutional, Democratic Government is the primary essential wherein true freedom of thought and the blessing of liberty, with all their beautiful attributes, are maintained and enjoyed. Furthermore, that which most contributes to the permanence of our Constitution, stability of State, and unfettered, harmonious pursuit of happiness of our people, is the adaptation of education to the form of government under which we live.

This renders manifest that a unified system of education will ever be necessary to the existence and perpetuity of American principles of union, freedom, justice and domestic tranquility.

To whom, to what agency or system, shall be entrusted this grave responsibility of defending and strengthening the foundation upon which rests the very life of liberty and safety of State; what creed, private element or potentate, domestic or foreign, can better protect and preserve the interest of our Government than the Government itself? We believe that by the very nature of our governmental structure, the institution of free public schools under state supervision, strengthened by federal aid, with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet, is the system of education through which the foundation of national existence must be preserved. The grandeur of our art, the achievements of our science, the expansion of our literature, our exalted position among the nations of the world are, for the most part, glorious tributes to the basic principle of education in public schools, for it was there the foundation was laid.

Therefore, the justification of federal assistance to the public school is found in our loyalty to the Stars and Stripes in every thread running through our social, economic and industrial fabric. But more than all this, the public school has stood like a bulwark in defense of the inalienable right of all to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience.

Public schools, desperately, courageously struggling to hold high the already dimmed light of the land, stand weakened and faltering before the powers of darkness and degeneration. Little school houses, hallowed recollection of childhood, as well as the more modern structures, dotting our land like brave sentinels in first line trenches, have been forced to lay down their arms and write across closed doors, "No funds, no funds," yet surrounded by the most abundant wealth and luxury any nation has ever enjoyed.

The evil in neglecting our public schools is sapping and threatening our national life. Let therefore, the sacred responsibilities which have devolved on this generation and on us sink deep into our hearts, and let us apply ourselves without reservation to a prevention of this impending national tragedy, namely, the collapse of our public school system.

It remains, without argument, that education is not confined by geographical lines, nor does it stop at county or state boundaries. It is as broad as our nation. Therefore, its preservation and advancement is clearly the function of our National Government, and we repeat that this duty can best be performed by national representation through a Secretary in the President's Cabinet. But there are yet those who numb and withhold the hand of the National Government, in the cry of "States' Rights." How long shall we continue to be frightened from the paths of duty and protection of the children of the nation by the murmur of the mystical ghost—"States' Rights?" Where does this ghost hide while the national agencies regulate the reindeer industry in Alaska; dictate the price of lumber in Michigan, specify how much cotton may be planted in Louisiana, tell the Iowa farmers how many hogs they may raise, or lend a helping hand to the eradication of the boll weevil in Mississippi?

We contend, none of these above activities are of more importance than the boys and girls of our land. Their cause is our cause, a nation's cause and a righteous cause. Fully conscious of the responsibility their presence thrusts upon us, we cannot remain unmoved. Let us, therefore, persevere more diligently. Let us apply ourselves in proportion to the magnitude of the responsibility in preserving and improving our public school system. Let the public schools keep pace with this age of improvement. Let us continue to develop the resources of the land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, but above all, let us preserve the foundation upon which all these must survive. Let us act under the conviction that these forty-eight states are one great country, with unified interest embodying equal educational opportunity, peace and liberty for all!

WHAT SUPPORTS YOUR CONDUCT?

By Luther K. Long

When an acquaintance has been found guilty of a conspicuously outrageous deed, we are likely to question: How could he have done such a thing? Whatever possessed him to do that? What could have been in his mind at that time?

Many answers, or suggestions, may be given: He was sorely tempted. He must have been greatly provoked. He didn't realize what he was doing. He had not been adequately instructed in such matters. He thought he would gain something from the transaction. He must have needed the money. His appetites and passions got the better of him. He yielded to the devil. It only goes to show how powerful sin is. It is just a case illustrating the depravity of the human heart. He didn't know any better. The home influences had not been good enough. He possessed less character than we had supposed.

In respect to any particular case, these statements are partly true, and partly false. They do not fully explain. Some are based on unreality. The most important things in the list are those that call attention to ignorance, inexperience, under-development and false judgment as to what really is desirable and worth while in a person's conduct and possessions. Emphasis needs to be placed on right teaching and the inculcation of right principles in bringing up the young—such teaching and principles as can be relied on all through life. It is a pernicious idea that after the child has been brought up "strightly"—according to certain standards—he may be left, with confidence, to go his own way. It is essential that the child be given such teachings as will put him, as early as possible, in intelligent possession of himself. Only in that way will his future be assured.

It is more important to inquire into the why of good conduct than into the why of evil conduct. Why do people do right? Why do people live good lives? What are the foundations, the outer props and the inner supports of good character and honorable conduct? These questions are answered in various ways: I believe in God; and He requires me to do these things. The Bible teaches me; and I endeavor to do as it says. My church prescribes this sort of conduct; and I am a loyal member. I follow the teaching and example of my parents. A minister, or a teacher, made a strong impression on me; and I have been different ever since. I do what Jesus would have me do.

These answers and suggestions indicate a desire on the part of a person to find the right way and to do the right thing. But to thoughtful persons in these days those props or supports do not seem as dependable as they once did. As to parents: some of them are so limited in knowledge, so narrow in outlook and so traditional in judgment, that their sons and daughters—wisely or foolishly—decline to accept their leadership. Many ministers and churches—judging from sermons reported and programs set up—are so out of touch with the situation of the people that they are no longer looked to by those who need guidance in living the good life.

It is no longer sufficient to say: Father and mother require such and such conduct. The independent son or daughter asks: What do father and mother know concerning the matter in hand, and what sort of folks are they? The minister and the church are no longer accepted without question. With or without reason people require these authorities to present their credentials and to make good their claims. The Bible itself is best used when it is questioned and allowed to speak for itself. There is no magic about it. Human intelligence had a large part in its composition, and human intelligence must be used in interpreting and applying its contents.

If parents are not always worthy of the authority that used to be accorded them; if the minister and the church often fail to be convincing in the reasons they give to substantiate their requirements and claims of authority; and if we must, as reasonable creatures, accept in the main the conclusions of present-day Christian scholars concerning the authorship, the dates of composition, and the value of the teachings of the various books of the Bible, on what can we base our conduct, and what are the outer props and inner supports and sanctions of worthy character and good conduct?

Wise parents, because they still know God and life and their children, may do as much as parents have ever done to establish the young in the way of life. Ministers and churches, alive to the situation in which they find themselves, are still able to guide their members and families aright. The Bible has not lost its hold. False notions concerning it have handicapped its power. Its teachings have developed in multitudes of people a moral judgment that will not now tolerate interpretations of its supposed positions on many matters. Printing the Bible in such style as to emphasize central truths and eliminate much that is non-essential or misleading will greatly aid readers.

Each individual, in order to stand strong morally, needs to use his conscience, his intelligence, his enlightened moral judgment. God speaks through nature, and men must learn to understand and interpret His message. God speaks through the words and deeds and philosophies of men, and these messages require study to understand and use. The family, the tribe, the nation have had their experiences, and out of these have come ideas and ideals for the benefit of mankind. Uncertainty at times seems distressingly prevalent. We experiment, we fumble, we cut and fit and try to do all sorts of things to improve our situation. We learn to co-operate with others. We gain and lose; at times we are cast down, later we are full of hope. Life is thus a struggle:

Sometimes I'm up,
Sometimes I'm down.
Yes, my Lord.
But my poor soul
Is heavenward bound.
O yes, Lord.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

The Sermon's Tempo

In music, the word "tempo" means the time or speed of a movement. With regard to preaching, likewise, the term refers to the rapidity, the slowness or fastness, of speaking. Some speakers go so slowly that the hearers tend to lose interest between sentences; others vocalize so swiftly the listeners can hardly catch their words. Then, of course, there is the type that seems to use the right combination of speeds so as to give a most pleasing and effective tempo. An address should be rapid enough to keep the audience active in mind and alert, yet slow enough to permit the sentences to carry with full force. Every preacher, I think, has at times certain word combinations that are too important to be hurried over only to be half understood. That tempo should be used that will best carry power and conviction with the message.

Let us make three observations:

First, the beginning of an address should be calm, rather slow, and deliberative. Personally, I find right here a great danger. I find that in the eagerness to get started and to make a good impression at the very outset, I am tempted to speed up in the very beginning. Then when I have gone a paragraph or so I have set such a pace that I can hardly keep up with myself the remainder of the speech. You see when a person starts with great dash and gusto the hearers soon gear up their cars for speed and it is very hard to come back and establish a normal, easy rate of speaking. One had better start slowly and calmly, then as he proceeds he can increase the speed to suit his needs. Rapidity may serve for emphasis. It ought to be conserved, therefore, and drawn upon as the particular point demands it. Lack of haste, too, in the beginning permits the speaker to lay the foundation of the sermon clearly, definitely, so that all may have a vivid understanding of the need for, and nature of, the discussion that is to follow.

Second, different occasions call for different degrees of speed. A memorial address or funeral sermon, for example, should be given more slowly and calmly than speeches that call for resolution and action. The atmosphere or feeling of the service should to some extent determine the matter of tempo. All ministers, I believe, recognize this fact and govern their speaking accordingly.

Third. The last observation is this: Try to control the speed of speaking so as to avoid monotony. After a sermon has been moving about ten or twelve minutes at the same tempo it sounds mechanical. They say that the stopping of the mill will awaken the miller. So here, we soon become accustomed to one tempo and grow listless in its presence, but a speech marked by varying degrees of rapidity will more easily hold the attention. A purposive pause once in a while is very effective. Any given speed soon gets into a "time-rut," so to speak, and tends to weaken in its appeal. A certain warrior used to say to his soldiers: "See that every shot tells." To employ the same idea, we might say, "See that every sentence tells." This can best be done by proper timing of the sermon. Sentences are too important to be swallowed up by the swirling speed of argument. On the other hand, we must talk lively enough to stimulate the interest of the hearers. These observations come out of my own efforts at speaking, and I pass them on with the hope that they may be of value to others.

A MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

To the Ministers of the Methodist Protestant Church,
Dear Brethren:

We have just completed twenty-eight Summer Conference Leadership Training Schools in which 2,994 students completed a week of training for work in the local church. This is 460 more than we had in our schools last summer. Regardless of this large number of students, many of our churches were not represented. Even though your church was represented, there are no doubt many in your church and community who would like to train for more efficient church leadership.

We want to help you develop a local trained leadership for your church; therefore, we are calling your attention to the following opportunities for leadership training:

(1) Information set forth in the following article opens to you a new opportunity to conduct schools and classes, using the First Series Courses of the New Leadership Curriculum.

(2) With an accredited instructor, you can offer courses of the Standard Leadership Training Curriculum.

(3) Leadership Training through correspondence courses of both the New Leadership Curriculum and the standard curriculum may be had through correspondence.

We will be glad to assist you and others of your local church to organize some form of leadership training. One pastor is conducting a class each Sunday morning. Another has a class which meets in the evening once a week. Still others are meeting more often.

Please reserve some Sunday in January for Young People's Day. This day is usually celebrated on the last Sunday in January. Also, watch for an announcement regarding National Regional Young People's Conventions to be held early in the summer of 1935, preceding the Summer Conference Leadership Training Schools.

F. L. Gibbs, Director of Leadership Training.

How the Courses Are Offered

These courses may be taken in any one of the four ways: (1) in a training class, (2) in a worker's conference, (3) in an institute or convention, (4) by individual study. The training class, the worker's conference, and the convention may be for workers in one or more churches. A person who cannot take a course in a group with others can take it by himself through individual study. There is no accredited instructor required.

If You Are Interested

Write to F. L. Gibbs, Director of Leadership Training, 3267 W. Liberty Ave., Room 208, Pittsburgh (16), Penna., requesting an application blank and a copy of Educational Bulletin 501 which describes the First Series Courses. Enclose ten cents in your letter to cover the cost of these items.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

What is the Annual Conference Budget?

The Annual Conference Budget consists of Church Extension, Superannuates, Annual Conference Expenses, Annual Conference Debt, and High Point College. Whenever a church has paid all these claims in full, please report to me at once, as it is then due to go on the Annual Conference Honor Roll.

The churches which have already paid these up to date are: Gibsonville; Siler City; First church, Thomasville; Union Grove church, Orange charge.

Mt. Zion Group Meeting for Pinnacle Charge

This meeting had in it representatives from Pilot, Pinnacle, Shoals, and Mt. Zion churches. It was well attended in both morning and afternoon meetings. Dinner was served on the grounds in great abundance. The attitude of those in attendance was cordial and we believe good was accomplished by it. We are grateful for the assistance of Dr. J. E. Pritchard on the program. Bro. A. L. Hunter, after a service extending through twenty-five years on this charge—not consecutively, but altogether he served the group that long—has decided to retire and will live close to Mt. Zion church. We congratulate him upon the opportunity of serving these people so long and congratulate them upon having the service of one so faithful and true to God and to our church. We wish for him many happy years in his retirement, and for the church greater success in the coming years.

"A Good Conference"

We have heard this phrase many a time; we hear it now as a wish made by some loyal brother or sister in the church. But after all, what really makes a good conference? There are, of course, many things which enter into it and without which it could not be a good conference. Here are some of them:

1. The spirit of brotherhood seen and felt. We shall meet there as brethren and sisters, since the women now come as official members. And as such, there will be no hatred, bickerings, strife; no brother there to misrepresent his brother in any way. We will be there to practice the Golden Rule.

2. To be a good conference there should be good reports from the pastors and delegates. Good revivals, a deeping of the spiritual life of the members of the church, a quickening of interest in all the affairs of the church. There will be unmistakable evidence of such to make a good conference.

3. To be a good conference both pastors and delegates will be there promptly on the day of opening, and regular in their attendance upon the sessions—AND STAY UNTO THE END. There are still those who attend the annual conference who appear to think that the only purpose in its existence is to supply preachers with charges and help the delegates find pastors. Of course this is part of the business of the conference—a most important part of it—but by no means the main business of the conference. It will be a good day for the church when the pastoral charges will give great consideration to the personnel of the delegate to annual conference. It really looks sometimes like no consideration is given this matter at all by some churches. The best equipped, most efficient, the most faithful members of the local churches should be made delegates to the annual conference. It is really useless to send a person there who knows nothing about the church, who in all the years he has been a member of the church has not taken the time to inform himself about the genius of his church government. The conference is not run as a school; it may help some person present to a better knowledge of his church, but he ought not to wait until then to learn.

Let Us Pray

Let us pray that we shall not make any serious mistakes at the coming annual conference. We shall be busy doing many things, and it will be easy for us to blunder. But we do not want to blunder; we want to do the wise, best thing every time we act. In all reports, in all discussions of reports, in the appointment of all committees, the election of all officers, in the appointment of all pastors, etc., I repeat, we want to make no serious mistake. We would like to feel that no mistake will be made; but we shall be happy if we can just keep from making any serious, hurtful mistakes when we act. To this end LET US PRAY that we shall have divine wisdom and guidance.

Connelly Springs Charge, Rev. J. L. Love, Pastor

This is a three-point charge, Shiloh, Shady Grove, and Burke Chapel. The churches are rather far apart. The parsonage is at Shady Grove, only a few miles out of Icard and between Burke and Shiloh.

I visited the three churches at Shiloh at the morning service, Burke in the afternoon, and at Shady Grove at night. The attendance did well at all the churches. There was some confusion at Shiloh growing out of a burial service which was held at the hour of the service there.

This charge needs another church. It would be fine if one can be found at this session of the conference. As the churches now stand, the charge is really too weak financially to support a pastor even in the meagerest fashion. With another church ready to pay as much as either Shady Grove or Shiloh has promised, the condition would be much more favorable.

Brother Love was assigned to this work after Conference adjourned, and while he got a late start, he has done a splendid work. Great revivals were held at both Shiloh and Shady Grove, fifty members have been received into the churches; conditions are so much better at these churches because of the revivals. The young converts are still holding cottage prayer meetings in both communities, thus attesting their abiding interest.

Burke's Chapel has a small membership and was not blessed with a good revival, so this church is about as it has been for several years. But we are looking for a decided improvement in all the affairs of the other churches. The parsonage is a small house and is not yet paid for, but it does afford the pastor a place to live while he labors.

This charge is like some others we have. It has remained for so long without much contact with the annual conference or other churches of the denomination, that it is really surprising that it should have remained faithful through all the years. We think the work is really in the best condition it has been since we have known it, and if it could be strengthened by the addition of just one other church it would be greatly helped.

Youth must carry the burden of coping with the problems of the new frontier. Adults can never do it. Youth must furnish the initiative, individualism, energy, and novelty of thought required. I believe in youth. I have lived with them in the class room for many years. I know them through and through, and on the basis of their knowledge, I am willing to trust the future in their hands.—E. E. Snoddy.

WHAT PRICE MOVIE THRILLS?

By WILLIAM H. SHORT, Director, Motion Picture Research Council

Every adult has vivid recollections of certain dramatic experiences of his childhood. If he were to live to be a thousand years old, he could never forget them. Through the movies the child of today has a thousand experiences as vivid as were these infrequent thrills of the older generations.

One who doubts the exactness of this statement is referred to the proofs heaped up by the twenty psychologists and sociologists of the Payne Fund in their four-year study of the exposure of children to the movies, under the auspices of the Motion Picture Research Council; and to the supplemenatry proofs by Dr. T. P. Homan. The proofs are found in the records of emotional stresses, disturbed sleep and accelerated heartbeat, all of which they were able to measure by means of delicate electrical devices; and in the corroborating testimony of the children themselves.

Measurement of emotional stresses by the galvanometer showed fear reactions of children to be as much as eight times as severe as those of the average adult, and their erotic reactions twice as great.

As to sleep disturbances—"Parents who allow their children to go to a movie should do so with the knowledge that the experience is about as disturbing to sleep patterns as sitting up until midnight or—the drinking of two cups of coffee in the evening." Restlessness of boys was increased 26 per cent on the average and of girls 14 per cent. On this account alone, frequent attendance was considered to be "detrimental to sound health and growth."

The rate of heartbeat, which is normally from 70 to 80 a minute, ran up under the influence of the average movie to 125 and 140, and of a mild thriller to as high as 154. No child was tested with a mystery, fright or horror picture, but the heartbeat of a mature woman selected for her equitable temperament, under the influence of "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu," many times ran up above 150, several times to 168, once to 180 and again to 192. These are two, and two and one-half times the normal heartbeat. The far greater emotional reactions of children, as compared with adults, suggests what their heartbeat would be in response to such a film, and explains their frequent hysteria and vomiting at the movies.

On the basis of a vast mass of testimony given by elementary, high school, college and university students, in movie autobiographies and personal interviews, Blumer concludes: "Motion pictures may play very vividly upon the emotions of the individual; his impulses may be so aroused and his imagery so fixed that for a period of time he is transported out of his normal conduct and is completely subjugated by his impulses."

As long as three days are usually required for a child to regain his normal composure after movie attendance, and sometimes even weeks or months. "In the case of some individuals fear or fright becomes fixed and lasts for a long time," says Dr. W. W. Charters, research director for the Payne Fund. The eminent neurologist, Dr. Frederick Peterson, comments: "The sensational, criminal, and vulgar suggestions of so many pictures are bound to produce a harvest of nervous disorders and moral disintegration.''

Of course the emotional reactions of children to a given stimulus differ at different ages. Children from six to twelve years are most disturbed by scenes of danger, conflict or tragedy, and least by the erotic. Children from twelve to eighteen react less to the danger-horror scenes, and most to the erotic. By the latter, youth from sixteen to eighteen are more disturbed than at any other time of life. The whole complex of emotion grows greater with increasing age and reaches its climax at about eighteen. In all these matters boys and girls are alike.

Perhaps a doubting parent objects: ''My child is not affected in this fashion.'' Dr. Charters, summarizing the evidence, replies: ''It cannot be inferred by a parent sitting beside his quiet child that internal excitement is not occurring as incidents in the screen drama unfold before him.'' It is also found that no ''sweeping generalizations'' can be made from evidence in hand as to the type of film that will cause unfortunate reactions, or the type of child that will experience them.

The facts here recited are far too grave and startling to be dismissed with a wave of the hand. The motion picture drama—the most powerful instrument for instruction, for culture, and for the influencing of conduct that has as yet come into the hand of man—is quite too important to be damned by them.

It is well known by neurologists that there are differences in the effects of emotional stimulations. Emotions of love, friendship, hope, security, and the like calm, strengthen and build up both body and mind. Emotions of lust, fear, anger, horror and the like, in the words of Dr. Peterson, ''are sowing the seeds in the system for future neuroses and psychoses—nervous disorders.'' To play up the one and play down the other surely is not beyond our power.

The present writer believes that the motion picture, while often a curse, is potentially a godsend to the child and that he should see more rather than fewer; but that they should be adapted to his needs by skilled educators and psychologists. Dr. Charters, in the same vein, concludes that ''the problem of the movies and the children is so important and critical that parents, producers, and public must willingly and intelligently co-operate to reach some happy solution'' . . . that a way must be found ''of making the motion picture a beautiful, fascinating, and kindly servant of childhood.''

THE ART OF LISTENING

By Grenville Kleiser

The art of good speaking is of vital importance, but equally so is the art of good listening. The qualifications which go to the production of that rare and delightful being, a good listener, can be acquired through practice.

Essential to good listening is sympathy, or interest in what another is saying. The sincere interest we take in others will beget a like interest in us. Moreover, by this attitude of sympathetic listening we will develop other fine qualities of character denied to the talkative person.

Intelligence is an essential quality of a good listener,—to have an understanding interest in at least a few general subjects. Keen apprehension is the greatest of all stimulants to brilliant conversation. There is pleasure in talking to some one who not only understands and is interested in what we say, but who by questions or brief comments picks up the threads of our thought, and who provides a real flint to our steel.

Patience—and this is within the reach of all—is a marked qualtiy in a good listener. To listen with restraint and politeness to dull or foolish conversation, and to exercise kindly patience towards boastfulness, loquacity and inconsiderateness, is a most desirable acquisition.

It requires practice for a listener to keep his mind firmly fixed on the discourse of a dull companion. He must force himself to listen—despite other allurements—to what that companion is saying; he will try to follow the most devious and long drawn-out detail, and be ready with an apposite remark. By thus learning to listen attentively to a tedious flow of talk, the listener himself gains immeasurably in patience and self-restraint.

To know when to be silent and when to speak; how to repress your feelings and to subordinate yourself to your company; how to curb your natural impatience with stupidity or intolerance; how to check your desire to correct, or protest; to have command of yourself and emotions under all circumstances; these should be your unceasing aim in the attempt to become a good listener.

Probably the best method of learning true silence is the practice of meditation. Not vague meanderings of the mind, but real concentration, directed to some special object, whether actual or ideal. By meditation we can rise to the height of our spiritual and intellectual natures, and as a consequence our conversation will assume new charm and significance.

WHERE NO CHRISTIANS ARE FOUND

A young man in Switzerland, son of a Christian mother, was expressing himself as ''sick and tired of Christians,'' of hearing them or talking to them. So he decided to take a train to a lake where he could be out of their way.

No sooner had the train started than two passengers began an earnest talk about the Bible. ''Oh dear!'' thought the young man, ''I'm not going to stay here.'' As soon as the train stopped he jumped out and got out of their company, only to get in with some old ladies. To his dismay, he found their conversation to be about the Coming of the Lord. He was greatly annoyed, and on reaching the next station he could see the boat. ''Ah, there is the boat,'' said he; and on looking again he saw a number of happy young men and women going on board. ''At last,'' said he, ''I have found what I want.'' But as soon as the steamer had started he found that it was a Christian Sunday school treat. He wandered downstairs to the saloon, where he saw the captain sitting writing.

''Good morning, captain,'' said the young man. ''Where can I go to be rid of them cursed Christians?'' The captain, who was a worldly man, looked up, and with a laugh, said, ''To hell.''

The answer so struck the young man that he could not forget it, and God used it, and now both the captain and the young man are Christians.—Elim Evangel.

OUR STORY PAGE

ALMA VISITS GRANDMA

Alma ran eagerly to meet her daddy. "Oh, oh," she cried, "guess what has happened! It's something lovely."

Mr. Benee laughed and caught Alma up in his arms, for he was tall and strong and loved this little daughter very dearly. "I think you'll have to tell me, for I might guess all day and not hit it at all," he said.

Alma beamed with delight, for that was just what she was hoping her daddy would say. It was such fun to tell him things and to see the pleasure on his face. Alma thought no one had quite such lovely eyes and such a happy smile—unless it were her dear mother.

"I've got an imitation," she said, slowly, to prolong the fun of telling, "an imitation to go to grandma's. She wrote a letter an' says she's back from the beach an' would like to have me come to see her."

Alma's father laughed heartily, and his fine white teeth showed clear back to the gold tooth. She was always watching for that.

"I think you mean an 'invitation,' don't you?" smiled her daddy as he set her down on the top step of the porch. "What does your mother say? If she is willing, I'll take you with me tomorrow, for I have to drive right out past there and can leave you until I return next day and bring you back. I fancy there will be a welcome for me, too. Let's see what mother says. Perhaps she would like to go along, too."

And that was the way it was arranged, and the three of them had a wonderful ride through the lovely country and Mr. Benee and Mrs. Benee stayed for dinner with Grandma Benee, and heard all about her journey to the seashore, and then they went on to the town where Mr. Benee had business, and left the little girl to have a fine time on the farm, as she always did.

There were the calves and chickens and wee lambs to see, and many of Grandma's flower bulbs were just beginning to blossom, for the spring days were getting quite warm. But what amazed the small visitor most of all was a big, beautiful shell with a lovely pearly pink lining. When Alma would hold the shell to her eag, she would hear a roaring sound.

Nora, who helped with the work, said it was the sound of the ocean beating on the shore, just as it used to do when the shell lay on the sands and the surf rolled in day after day.

Alma was quite excited about it, and asked her silvery-haired grandma if she s'posed the sea shell was homesick. Grandma Benee shook her head, and took Alma on her lap. "No, dearie," she assured the little girl. "Some people think that is the sound of the sea, but they are mistaken. When I hold the shell to my ear, I hear a roar, but it isn't the same roar you hear. It is the sound caused by the beat of my heart. And when you listen, you hear the sound caused by the beat of your heart. Just like this. When you speak over the telephone, it isn't the voice that is heard. Little waves are set in motion and the voice is repeated when those little waves strike the delicate little drum of the ear of the person who is listening. When the heart beats, little waves are started, and soon they strike the sides of the inside of the shell.

"When your ball hits the side of the house, it bounces back, and that is just what happens with those little waves. They bounce back from the shell wall and hit the delicate ear drum so fast that we hear that roaring sound—or the noise caused by the beating of your own heart."

Grandma Benee took Alma's own small hand, and held it against the little girl's left side. "Can you feel your heart beating?" she asked. Alma nodded.

"Now listen," and Grandma put the shell to Alma's ear. Alma's eyes sparkled.

"Can God change other things like that, too?" breathed Alma softly.

"Yes, indeed. When you are helpful and obedient, He changes that into happiness for ourselves and others. When the sun shines, He changes the golden warmth and light to other things, and then we are fed with milk and fruit and other good things. And we have clothes and shoes to wear, and wood and coal to keep us warm when the weather is cold. When we think kind things, He changes them into kind acts."

Alma thought intently for several minutes. Then her face brightened as if a sunbeam had fallen across it. "He must love us a big lot to do so much for us, mustn't He? And we ought to do just what He wants us to, oughtn't we? And if we are naughty, we ought to ask Him to please change all the wrong thoughts into right ones, oughtn't we, 'cause He can do it, can't He?"

Grandma Benee held Alma very close. "Yes," she said, "always remember that. I'm sure you will!"

And Alma remembered it so well, that now, although she is grown up, she has never forgotten that visit, nor the sound in the sea shell, nor the talk she and her grandmother had that beautiful spring afternoon.—Light and Life Evangel.

LIFE'S MEANING

Words—time and space, height and depth, light and darkness, joy, sorrow, war, peace, love and hate—mere words that are but faint markings upon the yardstick of existence. How futile to try to fix the metes and bounds of being and span the meaning of it all with such a puny measuring rod.

O, man, most blind, would you glimpse a little of life's significance, cease your feeble mouthings and cast your eyes upon the wordless yet eternally visible evidences of a Divine Plan. Gaze upon that sturdy oak waving its boughs in glad salute to its Maker; see that tiny flower peeping from its grassy slope. Note the everlasting hills beyond the grain-clad prairies. Regard your brooklet singing its song of praise on its course to mother sea. At nightfall gaze upon the celestial glory of stars and planets. Then, in quietness, ponder these things, and say to yourself, if you can, "There is no God!"

Hemmed all about by the wonders and beauties of Nature, open your soul's spiritual eyes to that radiant light forever streaming from the heart of God through His works. Then will you learn somewhat the why and wherefore of life.—John Wilbur Wood.

CAKES FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

Week of October 14, Mt. Carmel (Forsyth).

Week of October 21, Grace, Greensboro.

Week of November 4, Union Ridge, (Forsyth).

Week of November 11. This week is left open so delegates and preachers from a distance may have the opportunity to bring cakes as they come by the Home.

Week of November 18, Fountain Place, Burlington.

I am very grateful for the co-operation the churches have given so far, and thank you all. If there are other churches or organizations that wish to make this weekly contribution to the school lunches of the children. at the Home, please let me know and I will assign a date.

While you are sending cakes, or if you don't send them, remember and respond to Mrs. Dixon's appeal for Octagon Coupons. It is really wonderful what has been done at the Home with these coupons since we first started gathering them. Send them direct to Mrs. A. G. Dixon, care of the Children's Home, High Point, N. C.

MRS. C. W. BATES.
906 Carolina Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.

P. S. A postal from Grace Church saying they cannot supply cakes for October 21, Too late to find someone to take the place. Will some one volunteer?

SHOWERS OF BLESSING

Perhaps the above caption may seem a bit new. At least it does to me. I used to say pounding, but my daughter says I should say shower. So I am saying "shower," but I really think a downpour would be more appropriate. Do you know what I am really talking about? Well, I'll try to explain. On last Friday night about 7:30, just as I had finished caring for my sick hand, I was informed that someone was at front door. I went to meet my old friend and parishioner, Lee Chambliss, of Triplet, Va. I was expecting him, as I had just heard he was in town; but, lo and behold! When I looked out, the whole yard was filled with autos, and the air was filled with friendly voices. I tried to think what all this meant. I stepped out to see what it was all about. Human beings began to rush from every direction and greet me with handshakes and how do you do. Then suggested I would lead them to the kitchen and there the downpour of showers of blessings began, till kitchen floors, tables, dining room tables were all groaning under the heavy load of flour, sugar, coffee, potatoes, apples, oranges, and every variety of canned goods and packages of different kinds. So many and so much that I will not try to name all of them. It looked like my home had been turned into a grocery store of all such varieties of eats as are needed in a home. My! boys! You bet this pastor and family will be living now for a long time. And how happy we are! One man said to me after preaching today, "You sure preached strong like you had had something to eat." I said, "O boy! I had and will have for some time."

Between 40 and 50 of the Pleasant Grove members came and we found several names on packages that couldn't come. They were Clarks, Beasleys, Pains, Kennedys, Hiltons, Veaches, Morrises, Murphys, and a host. I just can't quite call names of all just now. God knows all of them and will greatly reward them.

When I got composed they called on the pastor to make a speech. Bro. Morris led in prayer. This people have been very kind to their pastor and we have enjoyed serving them during this year. May God greatly bless them and the church.

Very truly, your pastor,

H. L. POWELL.

HOME

Sweet home is where our loved ones dwell,
Where heart and hand affections swell;
Where vision sweeps in after years,
Back o'er life's laughter and its tears.

It might be just a cottage small
Surrounded by the hemlock tall,
And guarded by nocturnal hosts
That live at wild sequestered posts.

It may be more—a mansion fair,
Shut in by woodland, here and there,
With meadow green and garden prime
And fallow field at harvest time.

It may be less—a tenant room,
Shorn of the things of life that bloom,
Deprived of all that nature gives,
Yet, in it memory still lives.

Go where the north winds ever blow,
Or south winds coax the flowers to grow;
Or east or west across the foam,
The compass-heart will point to home.

Come back sometime, a homing dove,
To glimpse the place you truly love;
The Home, the Church, the objects dear,
Will rise to draw you ever near.

The whippoorwill, the barnyard fowl,
The mocking-bird, the sylvan owl,
The life, the silence, all in store,
Await to meet you as of yore.

Yet, fond remembrance plays a part
In each and every living heart,
And gives the mind a backward sweep
Through time to Home where memoirs sleep.

GREENSBORO METHODIST PROTESTANT MINISTERS TO MEET

The Greensboro Methodist Protestant Ministers' Association will meet at the St. Paul church hut on next Monday, October 22, at 10:30 o'clock. The program will be a Four Score Years meeting. Rev. G. F. Millaway, one of our honored superannuates, will give reminiscences of 40 years in the pastorate, while Rev. W. M. Howard, the new pastor of Moriah, and who is still a student in the Seminary, will speak on some things he hopes to see accomplished in the next 40 year.

While the name of the association would imply that it is for Greensboro ministers only, yet all M. P. ministers who are within driving distance of Greensboro are invited.

Boys' Clothing for the Fall.

Note above a gift of $10 for boy's clothing from the Golden Rule class, Burlington. Thank you. Ten dollars will outfit a boy for the winter. Who will take a boy? Two big frosts have already been nipping at their toes. We need your help quickly. Thank you and God bless you.

For the Girls

The women have done fine in outfitting most of the girls. Now we find that coats for girls have advanced so much in price that it renders it almost impossible for us to buy winter coats for the girls. We are wondering if in many homes there are not coats which you will for one reason or another discard. If so, please bundle them up and send to us quickly. We can doubtless fit them to some of our girls. These requests require haste. We thank you for your promptness.

Just One Month to Conference

From the day on which this is written to conference is just one month. All churches in the conference, we hope, will be sending us one more offering for this year. Make it a good one. Also plan for Thanksgiving and Harvest Home offerings before you go to conference. Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Gray's Chapel, Randolph Charge.—Our revival meeting began Sunday, September 23, with our pastor preaching a fine sermon in the morning and evening services. Rev. Clay Madison, of High Point, brought us a splendid message in the afternoon. Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Henderson, was our pulpit help. He came to us Monday evening and did the preaching through Friday night. He brought us splendid messages which were enjoyed by all.

Our visible results so far as conversions and accessions were concerned, were not what we had hoped for, but it was by no means a vain effort. We feel there was much good accomplished that will bear fruit later. Nominating committees have been appointed to nominate the church officers for the coming year. They will be elected at the next regular preaching service.

We realize the conference year is drawing to a close. There is much to be done in the next few weks. We are hoping and working that we may have a creditable report at conference this year.

We were made sad by the passing of Mrs. J. F. Hackett, who was loved by her church and community. Mrs. Hackett had a very lovable disposition. She was gentle and had a kind word and smile for everyone she met. We feel that our loss is only her eternal gain.

REPORTER.

Bethesda, State Street, Yadkin College.—Our Yadkin College members tell me the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society are well attended and doing good work. These organizations are conducted jointly by the M. P. and the M. E. people and any others that may wish to co-operate. They meet at such hours that I, as one of the two pastors, cannot attend.

According to custom, the M. E. pastor and I held the special meeting together, this year in the M. E. church as it had been in ours last year. The services were well attended. One conversion.

Bethesda Auxiliary members are using the "Lord's Acre" idea, each encouraging a laying hen to do her best raising biddies, instead of cultivating an acre of land. The reports as to results are not in yet, but the prospect is promising.

Bethesda and State Street churches are testing out a plan of co-operation and mutual helpfulness. A group of State Street workers prepared the Rally Day play, "Train Up a Child," and gave it in the home church on the night of the first Sunday in October and at the preaching hour at Bethesda on the second Sunday. A group of Bethesda people will give the conference drama, A. C. B., Church Extension, Children's Home, etc., in their own church on the fourth Sunday and in State Street church on the night of the first Sunday in November. The expectation is that, in addition to the saving of labor, it will bring about the inter-church visitation so desirable for the cultivation of the spirit of neighborliness between churches.

The auxiliary of State Street will hold thank-offering services Sunday night, October 21. Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., of Asheboro, thank-offering secretary for the branch, will present the interests of auxiliary work.

First Sunday in September was Joash Day for State Street; $100 was the goal; $88.67 was received. First Sunday in October was set as the date to finish up. Fifty-three dollars and eighty-nine cents was the amount put into the box, making $142.56 in all.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—The first Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service our pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery, delivered a very good sermon. At the close of the service the Lord's Supper was observed.

We were very glad to have our pastor's wife attend service last Sunday. She has been sick for quite a while.

Our Sunday school is being held at Bobbitt's Chapel this quarter.

Mrs. E. W. Brewer attended the funeral of her brother at Edenton last Sunday. The church folks wish to express the deepest sympathy to Mrs. Brewer.

We were deeply saddened by the death of Dr. McCulloch.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at this church the first Sunday in November at 2 p. m. Preaching will be at 11 o'clock, then lunch on church grounds and quarterly conference at 2 p. m. We hope all officials will be present.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Flat Rock Charge.—The work of the churches on this charge is moving along as usual. We have had fairly good attendance at all services and a better interest in the work has been shown. The services last Sunday were at Gideon's Grove at 11 a. m. and Flat Rock at 3 p. m. After the service at Gideon's Grove the pastor and family went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson, having had a previous invitation to go to the home for dinner. A good dinner was enjoyed and a brief time was spent with these good people after dinner.

At Flat Rock church we found a slightly smaller congregation than at the previous service. Good attention was given, as was true of the congregation at Gideon's Grove church. The Mission Band of Gideon's Grove church presented the Sunday school with a new piece of furniture in the form of an attendance and offering board. It was presented by the pastor on behalf of the Mission Band, and accepted by Rev. G. A. Middleton, the superintendent, on behalf of the Sunday school.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Wirt Harrison, member of Flat Rock church, is recovering nicely from an operation which she underwent in a Greensboro hospital. She returned to her home over a week ago. Others who remain quite ill at this time are Mrs. D. A. Walker, of Palestine church, and Mrs. Laura Scarlett, of the Gideon's Grove community. We trust these and any others who are sick will have a speedy recovery.

The fourth quarterly conference for Flat Rock Charge will be held at Gideon's Grove church on Saturday, October 27, at 2 p. m. We are looking forward to having a good attendance and finishing the work of the conference year in good shape. Our finances are much behind, but we hope to do much by the time the annual conference meets.

Appointments for next Sunday are as follows: Palestine at 11 a. m. and Bethel at 3 p. m. We are planning to revise the church register at each church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Bro. Henderson preached a wonderfully good sermon for us yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. I thought it was one of the best sermons that I have ever heard. Bro. Henderson seems to get better each time.

We had a large crowd at Sunday school and preaching. We reorganized Sunday school. Mr. Charles Flowe was reelected superintendent; Mr. Buck Joyner, assistant superintendent; Miss Kathleen Fincher, secretary, and Miss Naomi Huneycutt, assistant secretary. All the old teachers were elected to serve another year. Mrs. Jess Hartis is organist and Miss Dorothy Drye, assistant. Mr. Craven is choir leader.

We had a big day at Stallings last Monday. The preachers' district meeting was held. There was a good crowd of preachers present. Most all of the preachers made talks which were interesting. We sure did enjoy having them with us. The Ladies' Aid served dinner at the noon hour. They all seemed to enjoy the dinner. We were sorry that the other preachers couldn't be with us.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. Jack Hargett the first Thursday of this month at 2 o'clock. We read the 13th chapter of St. Matthew as our devotional. Miss Tracy Helms led in prayer. Mrs. Arch McLeod read a good poem, "Make Each Day Better." Mrs. Henderson led in prayer after the poem was read. After our regular business meeting, Mrs. Hargett served delicious refreshments. Mrs. M. L. Stallings dismissed our meeting with prayer.

With best wishes to all the Herald readers.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS, Reporter.

First Church, Albemarle.—On the fifth Sunday of last month our pastor notified the congregation that he would not return to Albemarle. Mr. Anderson stated that he felt that he had done his best while with us for seven years, and that it would be wise for the church as a whole to have a new leader. We regret to know that his going is so near at hand. Mr. Anderson has worked faithfully with his people. He has been through the roughs with us. When we sacrificed, he sacrificed with never a complaint. Our church as a whole feels a deep sadness in his going, but we wish for him the very best that the Methodist Protestant conference has.

The Ladies' Auxiliary has planned a supper to raise funds for the conference claim. This supper will be given in the church dining hall next week. The date has not been definitely decided upon. Everyone is cordially invited.

Our mid-week prayer service, which had been discontinued for some time, was reorganized about six weeks ago. Our attendance has been very encouraging. We have had from 25 to 40 members present at each service. Each member of the church is urged to attend these services, as we feel that they are very helpful.

The promotion day took place the first Sunday in the month. Many changes were made. Two new classes were made on account of some classes being so large. We hope since promotion that everyone is going to strive harder to gain the goal which we have never attained heretofore.

Some three months ago the Ladies' Auxiliary organized a new circle. This circle is called the "Mattie Plyler" Circle. (To those who may not know, Mrs. Plyler is the wife of the late Rev. Arch Plyler). She has worked faithfully in our church and we feel that in doing this we can show to her our appreciation for her untiring service. We now have three active circles which are doing splendid work.

We wish to take this time to express to the people and pastors of our conference our deep regret in the passing of our beloved friend, Dr. McCulloch. REPORTER.

Pensacola Church, Democrat Charge.—We have paid our annual conference claims in full and we are so glad. Your reporter coached and took part in the play, "The Alley Daffodil," which we put on in the school building here, and we took in $23.50. We took a little of this to pay for the play books, lights, etc. We paid the balance due on our annual conference claims and then we turned the remainder over to our pastor to go on his salary. We hope so much we will be able to pay his salary in full before conference. Those who took parts in the play were Althea Rice, Reba Robertson, Virginia Wilson, Lucille Wilson, Kathleen Hensley, Charles Silver, Ted Wilson, Benjamin Wilson, Charles Wilson, Laurence Wilson, and your reporter.

On the first Sunday in last month the McMahan and Silver reunion was held at our church. There was an all-day service with a picnic lunch on the lawn. Everyone reported an enjoyable day.

On the fifth Sunday our Sunday school went in a body to the M. E. church at Windom to an all-day service and picnic lunch there. As we came back through Burnsville, all the Sunday school was treated to ice cream by some of the older members of the Sunday school. Everyone had such a nice time. V. B.

Grace Church.—On last Tuesday evening members of the McCulloch Philathea class went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stone and had a picnic supper before their monthly class meeting. The supper was planned by the class as a surprise to the Stones, who greatly miss the activities of the church life at Grace, having been so closely confined at home since Mr. Stone's illness of a year's duration. It was a real delight to them and their family to have these good friends slip in unawares with the supper all prepared to eat together, everything complete in detail even to the steaming hot coffee. Everybody had a good time together, and those members not present were greatly missed. Mrs. J. F. Dosier, who is teacher of the class, called on Mrs. Stone in the afternoon and stayed on until the others arrived with the supper.

After a bounteous supper and much merriment over the surprise, the ladies went to the living room for their class meeting.

Mrs. E. W. Teague, the president, called class to order. Songs were enjoyed, then Mrs. J. F. Dosier conducted the devotional. Reports of committees were given, which showed that this class does some excellent work in their own quiet way.

A nice box of dresses and all other necessary garments for the girl the class clothes at our Children's Home has recently been sent her for her fall outfit. Miss Mary Wills gave an instructive talk about the program of the Methodist Sesqui-Centennial in Baltimore. A talk by Mr. Stone, encouraging the ladies in their work, was helpful and much appreciated. Some of his favorite songs were sung. After this the meeting adjourned. Several members could not be present, but those in attendance were: Mrs. J. F. Dosier, teacher; Miss Mary Wills, associate teacher; Mrs. E. W. Teague, president; Mrs. Nannie Moore, secretary; Mrs. F. R. Brittain, treasurer; Mrs. J. M. Scarboro, Mrs. Hopkins, Mrs. J. M. Simpson, Miss Harriet Wills, Mrs. R. W. H. Stone, Miss Lois Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Stone, Mr. J. Norman Stone.

Laurel Hill, Fallston Charge.—It has been quite a while since a report has been sent in, but we are still prospering.

On Sunday, October 14, Rev. H. F. Fogleman filled his regular appointment with such an inspiring talk. He talked from two subjecth, "Forsake Evil and Learn to Do Good," and "When the Sacrifice Begins, Music Begins." Lots of good points were brought out. We hope that every sermon will be so inspired that we will take them home, use them every day and make a new 1935—a year for God. At the close of the service there were 29 to partake of the Lord's Supper.

Our Sunday school has made a good improvement for the last two months. We had 81 present Sunday and the offering was $1.33. It was almost double from last year. We are proud of it. Everyone that attends seems to worship in the right spirit, and not "to see and be seen." There are a few people in our community who do not attend Sunday school. We are making it our aim to have everyone come who possibly can. This is our goal. Won't you aid us by lending your prayers.

There were a number of church officers elected Sunday. They were: W. T. Sain, superintendent; Clyde Blanton, assistant superintendent; Mrs. A. E. Brockett, secretary and treasurer; J. W. Brown, Paul Blanton, and Mrs. A. B. Willis, class leaders; W. T. Sain, B. A. Sain, D. H. Sain, Hartsell Sain and A. E. Brockett, trustees; Ellis Bingham, Clyde Blanton, H. P. Sain, Augustus Sain, and A. B. Willis, stewards; Misses Minnie and Juanita Mull, Vangie Willis, and Mrs. Worth Miller, Sunday school teachers.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Thursday evening, October 18, at the home of Mrs. Carrie Sain. Mrs. H. P. Sain is to help her serve. Mrs. Worth Miller has charge of the program this month.

We were very glad to have Paul Blanton back at church with us Sunday. He served as superintendent for several years until taking up work at Morganton. We also enjoyed having other visitors with us Sunday. We give everyone a hearty welcome to attend any of our services and worship with us.

We earnestly ask the prayers of the Herald readers. We need them that we may succeed in trying to uplift the kingdom of God and His righteousness. Laurel Hill joins me in saying, God be with you and keep you in the paths of righteousness.

FLORENCE E. SAIN.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—On second Sunday in October Sunday school was opened by Mr. Randall Fine leading the Scripture lesson. After studying the Sunday school lesson, our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham preached a fine sermon on "The Potter and the Clay." He made it plain to us that we should live so that God could make us a good Christian and be as one of the best vessels for the kingdom of God. After preaching, Mr. Bingham carried Mrs. Bingham, my sister and myself to Mr. George Loftin's, where there was a good dinner prepared. Mr. Bingham could not stay for dinner, as he had to attend a funeral some distance away and did not have time. After the funeral Mr. Bingham came back and carried us near home. It did us good to be in this good home and to have Mr. and Mrs. Loftin and Mrs. Bingham talk of good things. It is inspiring to be with good folks. We sure did enjoy the visit.

Only one more service till conference. Brother Bingham has been with us for about four years and we are expecting him back if it is the Lord's will. Mr. Bingham has been good to us, which we will never forget. Pray for us.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Siler City Charge.—Our pastor, Mr. Isley, was with us the second Sunday evening, but Mr. Leo Pittard, a ministerial student at High Point College, gave us a very helpful and inspiring message. We hope that he will come this way again.

At the close of the service, officers for the coming year were elected, as follows: Sunday school superintendent, W. A. Poe; trustees, D. I. Hinshaw, C. M. Beavers, W. A. Poe; stewards, C. M. Beavers and Miss Willma Dark; class leader, Mrs. W. A. Poe; janitor, Guy Dark; reporter, Fannie Louise Poe.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Poe donated a communion set to the church.

We have a little more than paid pastor's salary, and lack only a few dollars of having all other claims paid in full.

FANNIE LOUISE POE, Reporter.

Graham.—Our Rally Day service was held Sunday morning, October 7. The program was given by members of Miss Gladys Amick's class and Mrs. Don Holt's class. The service was well attended. We had 157 present at Sunday school.

We are happy to report that our pastor is recovering from a tonsilectomy and was able to preach again Sunday. He brought two fine sermons. At the morning service his subject was "The Modern Prodigal," and for the evening service, "Going Back on God."

The musical program for the evening service was prepared by Mrs. Christine McPherson and Miss Blanche Lineus, and consisted of a trio by Mrs. McPherson, Miss Lineus and Miss Lucille Robeson, and two selections by a quartet composed of P. B. Core, John Frederick, J. D. Foust, and J. B. Farrell.

The Socia-quet given in the hut Saturday evening, October 6, was declared a great success. About 150 were present to honor our Sunday school teachers. The guests were welcomed by Don S. Holt. The program of the evening consisted of inspirational singing, toast to the teachers, stunts, readings by Miss Frances Browning, of Burlington, special music by Mrs. Don Holt and Miss Elizabeth Byrd, and the central quartet. The message of the evening was by our good friend, Dr. N. G. Bethea, of Gibsonville. The honored guests were Mrs. Foust Thompson, Mrs. G. K. Stafford, Mrs. S. S. Holt, Mrs. J. Clyde Auman, Mrs. Don Holt, Mrs. M. R. Kirkman, Mrs. A. M. Cook, Misses Emma Foushee, Gladys Amick and Lizabel Foust, J. D. Foust, P. S. Dixon, J. S. Cook, and M. R. Kirkman. REPORTER.

Asheboro.—Our church was saddened at the going of Dr. McCulloch, and we extend our sympathy to his family and relatives. Our loss was his eternal gain, he has fought a good fight and finished his course, henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness.

Rally Day was observed in our church the first Sunday in October. There were 244 present at Sunday school and the offering amounted to $20. At the 11 o'clock hour the play by Mrs. J. W. Shell, "Train Up a Child," was given in a very impressive manner and reflected much credit to all taking a part, as well as the committee, of which Mrs. L. F. Ross was chairman. Following the play, the list of the newly-elected officers of the Sunday school was read by the secretary, and all came forward and were installed in a very impressive service by the pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins. Mr. C. E. Bulla is superintendent for another year, with Mr. John R. Brown assistant, and capable and efficient secretaries and superintendents of the various departments. Mr. Earl Henley's class had 100 per cent present at Sunday school and received a nice Bible. Mrs. Clyde Hendrix and Mr. Robert T. Lloyd's classes came next with 85 per cent present. This Sunday, October 7, being the birthday of the Sunday school superintendent, he was presented with a birthday cake (with 21 candles) by the Sunday school, hoping he would live 21 more years. This was gratefully accepted by Mr. Bulla.

At the evening hour our revival services began with Rev. Raleigh Hunter, of Winston-Salem, doing the preaching. These continued through Friday evening, with a morning and evening service. All who attended the services were greatly blessed and the church revived under the strong and spiritual preaching of Rev. Mr. Hunter. The first Sunday in November has been announced as membership day. Any living among us and have not united with us are invited to do so at this time. We welcome you into our church membership.

Last Sunday there were 239 present at Sunday school with an offering of $26.33. The pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, preached an able sermon at the 11 o'clock hour with the choir rendering a beautiful anthem.

Mr. James Hendrix has contributed greatly to the music recently with several violin selections.

The Philathea class held the September meeting in the home of Miss Lollie Jones, with Mrs. Euclid Auman, Mrs. A. O. Ferree, Misses Beatrice Lowdermilk and Thyre Wright as associate hostesses.

New officers were elected for the coming year. Mrs. Earl Henley was elected president and Miss Enolia Presnell, teacher, with assistants and the various other officers. The class gave a rising vote of thanks in appreciation of the efficient work of the past president, Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., and the teacher, Mrs. Euclid Auman. After an encouraging talk by the pastor, the class enjoyed a social hour with refreshments served by the hostess.

On Friday evening, September 28, in the social room of the church, the Woman's Auxiliary was hostess at a delightful supper to the trustees and stewards of the church. The pastor presided over the meeting. A number of short talks were made by various members present, reports made of the year's work, and further plans outlined by which to finish the conference year in a creditable manner. A most interesting auxiliary meeting was held in the church Monday evening, presided over by the president, Mrs. J. T. Pugh. Rev. N. M. Harrison conducted a helpful devotional service, after which every circle was represented and made splendid reports of the month's work.

Several of our young people are sick at this time.

We were so glad to have Mrs. Amos Winningham back in the church service last Sunday, after an absence of some time on account of sickness and a recent operation in the Randolph Hospital, Inc. Also glad to have a number of our young people who are away in school with us from time to time.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer went back to Duke hospital, Durham, Monday of this week for further observation on her knee, and returned to her home much encouraged over her condition. Her many friends are happy to get this good report as to her condition.

Thank-offering service will be observed the fourth Sunday evening in this month.

First Church, Charlotte.—The first Sunday in October was observed as promotion day in the church school. Special recognition was given to Fred Love, Jr., for having made a perfect attendance record for four years, and to Billy Hollifield for having brought the most new members and visitors during the last quarter.

Officers of the coming year were elected as follows: Superintendent, M. D. Frink; assistant superintendent, John M. Muse; secretary H. G. Garrison; treasurer, Mrs. B. W. Little; senior department superintendent, Mrs. D. A. Horne; intermediate and junior departments, Miss Mary Shaw; primary department, Miss Ruby Stegall; beginners' department, Mrs. W. A. Herrin; cradle roll department, Mrs. A. F. Love.

We had a great service on last Sunday morning. The pastor delivered a powerful message on "Faith or Doubt."

Three members were received into the church, Mrs. H. L. Jones, Miss Maryon Muse and Dennis Deal.

Mrs. G. H. Hendry and Mrs. H. L. Jones were in charge of the evening service, which was a prayer and praise service. The service at the Ham-Ramsey Tabernacle was for men only on this evening and a large crowd of women worshiped with us in this service.

On Monday evening Dr. Ham will speak to women only and the men of the church will hold prayer meeting in our church.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Miss Mary Neal Yandle on Monday evening for a business meeting and social. Officers elected were: President, Miss Gray Stiles; vice president, Miss Thelma Tadlock; secretary, Miss Ruby Stegall; treasurer, Miss Mary Neal Yandle; lookout committee, Louis Garmon, Misses Mary Shaw and Margaret Walter; social committee, Misses Margaret Dellinger, Rachel Tadlock and Woodley Craig; missionary committee, Misses Ruby Stegall, Maryon Muse and Grady Tadlock.

On Sunday evening, October 28, the missionary committee with Miss Ruby Stegall, chairman, will present a program, "Our Own Missionary Heroes." Members of the Woman's Auxiliary will be invited guests.

Piney Grove, Denton Charge.—Taking his text from the 12th verse of the 10th chapter of Corinthians, the Rev. J. T. Bowman filled his regular appointment at Piney Grove church October 14.

Basing his subject upon the well-known words, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." The speaker in a very clear-cut and forceful manner pointed out the weakness and folly of man trusting in his own powers and leaving God in the background.

This message was well received by a very attentive number. This writer agrees with the speaker that if the name of Jesus Christ were lifted high that many of the present evils would vanish.

As the year is drawing to a close too much credit cannot be given our young pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bowman, for the splendid work they did during our revival meeting and for what they have done through the year.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. LETA MORGAN.

Community Church, Thomasville.—The Layman's Fellowship held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening at the Thomasville Bottling Company. At this meeting the five following classes were honor guests of the Fellowship: Baraca class, the Philathea class, the Young Ladies' class, the Young Men's class and the teen-age boys' class. At 6:30 o'clock barbecue was served to those present, after which time a very interesting program of games conducted by the superintendent of the Sunday school, Mr. C. F. Finch, was given. This meeting was said to have been one of the most successful that has been held at the church in some time, with over a hundred members present.

On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service a Rally Day play entitled "Train Up a Child," by Mrs. J. W. Shell, was given by various of the young people of the church. At the close of the play the following young people united with our church: T. J. Gardner, Frank Gardner, Jr., and Sybal Bost.

Also at this service the various departments and classes brought forward their Rally Day offering, which amounted to $25.50 which will apply on our World Service budget.

The various circles of the Woman's Auxiliary will hold their monthly meetings this week. They also serve the Rotarians meals this month.

On the fifth Sunday afternoon the district rally was held at Pleasant Grove. At this meeting Dr. J. D. Williams, of High Point, spoke very interestingly on "Prayer as Essential to Christian Living." Rev. T. G. Madison, of First M. P. church, Thomasville, spoke on the Joash Day, its meaning and purpose. Dr. R. M. Andrews, of High Point, spoke along the line of a person's relationship to the church, all of which were most interesting.

The general attendance of our members at Sunday school and church is improving slowly. We hope that our next report will be better than this and maybe since a record is being kept of the attendance we will all be more regular and punctual, and I feel sure this won't hurt our pastor's feelings.

However, the members of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society are to be commended on their attendance. On last Sunday evening there were 40 present, a gain of 10 over the last report. That's fine, C. E.'s, just keep the good work going!

Friends of Mrs. W. S. Myers will be pleased to learn that she is recovering very nicely. ODESSA MYERS, Reporter.

Asheville.—Our Rally Day program went over well, in spite of all premonitions to the contrary. There was a good crowd present for the performance, and those in the play did beautifully. My sincere thanks to each of them, and especially to our good friend, Jarvis, who was responsible for the stage setting, lights, etc. One never has to worry about a thing when he is in charge of it, for he always thinks of everything. I must not forget to thank Mr. Neville, who "saved the day" (or night, rather) by having an electric plug in his car. What would we do without Mr. Neville!

I do wish all of you could have seen the "Manless Wedding." It was indeed a "howling" success, and quite profitable, too. It brought in $12.30; isn't that fine? The Philatheas are so pleased. They are planning to give another play before conference and it will be worth seeing, too—everything those Philatheas do is worth while.

The Fawcett Bible class certainly had a splendid supper last Wednesday evening. It rained and rained all day, but there was the largest crowd out I've ever known, and the amount made was $15. The members of the class are elated; they are now able to pay the remainder of their pledge. Believe me, everybody is determined to put the Asheville church on the honor roll, and I believe it will be done too. Too bad the food gave out on Wednesday evening or you would have made more, folks. I wonder if the reason was because the aspirant for the title of "the largest preacher in the conference" was our guest. I did not see him eat an extra plate, but one never can tell; we all remember how he always loved to visit in the kitchen when he was our pastor. Maybe that is where your supper went, Aunt Pearl (Mrs. Cunningham had to go home and cook, because there wasn't enough). Laying all jokes aside, we were indeed happy to have Rev. and Mrs. J. Elwood Carroll with us on Wednesday evening. They are always welcome at our church and we hope they will return as often as they can.

The Woman's Auxiliary is to meet this week on Thursday at 3:30 p. m. with Mrs. H. O. Charnock, 45 Montview Drive. A full attendance is expected. Rev. and Mrs. Carroll very graciously consented to take the clothing, which was ready, to the Home for us, thus saving us postage; we have a few more articles which we expect to get off this week.

Our Sunday school continues well. Mrs. Bolick's Beginners are still leading; the Junior girls beat the boys this week in the amount of collection. I do wish that Primary class would lead one Sunday; what about it, Primaries? You certainly have a splendid teacher in the person of Mrs. Robey Wilson, and we are expecting great things from you. Of course, the Philatheas led in the adult department; but the men had the largest per capita average, there being five of them present and 50 cents collection. Hurrah for the men! They always lead in the largest percentage present, too. I feel the men deserve a lot of credit.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavors are planning to have a "tacky" party in the very near future. It is hoped everyone will cooperate with them, as the proceeds are to apply on the church budget too. They have not completed their pledge yet, but they expect to; so do we all, for we certainly want our church to be on the honor roll.

I must not forget to mention the birthdays of last week. Miss Melle Smith and Mr. J. R. Moore celebrated theirs on the same day, October 11. Mrs. Moore's was yesterday, October 14. We wish all of these friends many, many happy returns of the day; and I would like to console Mr. Moore with the thought that the next fifty years will not be so hard; neither will next year be as hard as this in keeping the finance of the church straight. Mr. Moore has certainly done a splendid piece of work as the treasurer of our church this year, and we ought indeed to give him a rising vote of thanks for all he has done. He deserves a lot of praise from all of us.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Rev. R. L. Vickery filled his appointment the first Sunday evening. It was a very inspiring message. As the offering was being taken Mrs. Baldy Green and Miss Elvyn Hawkins beautifully sang "Sweeter as the Years Go By." Mr. Vickery also preached a good sermon Sunday morning. His text was "Jesus Our Example." The Lord's Supper was observed at this service.

Mr. C. F. Hawkins, the class leader, read the 11th chapter of Hebrews for his Scripture reading the first Sunday. He left it for a volunteer to hold it the third Sunday.

We are sorry to note Mr. Jack Hawkins, Mr. Will Pepper, and Bessie Lue Hawkins, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hawkins, have been very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Collum are glad parents of a little girl October 1; also Mr. and Mrs. Georgie Thompson of a little boy October 5.

Miss Mary Virginia Hawkins was the guest of Miss Esther Hawkins Sunday.

We are missing three of our Sunday school pupils who have gone to college, Miss Mary Green to Greenville, N. C.; Alice Mae Glasgow to Raleigh, N. C., and Mr. Leo Pittard to High Point, N. C.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held at Corinth church the first Sunday, November 4, 1934, at 2 o'clock. Please remember, let's try to get our work more to the top for the conference year is almost at a close. Our pastor has only two more appointments at our church. We have learned to think a lot of him and his family.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—There has not been a report from this church since the revival. We had a wonderful meeting. Nine new members were added to the church roll during the revival, twelve members have been added during the whole year. The pastor did the preaching, and delivered some very inspiring sermons.

The conference year is coming to a close before long. Have we done our best for the Lord this year? Let us try harder next year to do more.

The fourth quarterly conference of this charge will be held at Canaan October 31. All official members are urged to be there. Dr. Andrews is to be there and preach at 11 o'clock.

A Rally Day program will be rendered the fourth Sunday evening of this month at this church. REPORTER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Honors were awarded Sunday morning in the Sunday school attendance contest by Dr. Pritchard. There were seven who had made perfect score during the eight months the contest had been running. Those having perfect records were Maud Friddle, Marie Coe, Mrs. Howard R. Neeee, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Sullivan, C. A. Parrish and J. Frank Coble. Those having a perfect record except for one month were J. C. Coe, J. F. Caudle, Howard R. Neece, Clyde Friddle, Leon Bissett, Robert Flemming, Mrs. W. F. Parker, Ruth Youuts and Dennis Curtis. Those being honored were asked to stand and the pastor extended congratulations on behalf of the Sunday school. Dr. Pritchard announced that some social feature was being planned in their honor.

Mrs. J. E. Pritchard and Mrs. James Swain have arranged a very interesting program for the thank-offering service next Sunday evening. Mrs. R. M. Andrews will be the guest speaker. Members of the Business Women's Circle will have charge of the music for the evening. This service will take the place of the regular Sunday evening service.

Church officials will be elected next Sunday morning. The nominating committee, appointed by Dr. Pritchard last Sunday morning, is composed of Mrs. Otis Campbell, Floyd G. Reynolds and Howard R. Neece. The Sunday school officers will also be elected next Sunday. J. C. Coe appointed Mrs. D. E. Curtis, J. A. Cox and James Swain to nominate the Sunday school officers.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at our church on Monday night following the fourth Sunday in this month, which will be October 29.

The board of stewards is greatly rejoiced over the fact that there is enough money at hand to finish paying the second semi-annual installment on the church debt. Calvary church folks have received some very flattering remarks from the Pilot Life Insurance Company for the splendid way in which they have handled the church debt.

Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard and Mrs. H. C. Nickolson, of Mebane, N. C., left Wednesday afternoon for Whitakers to take part in the first district rally there Thursday.

We regret to report that Mrs. T. F. McCulloch remains seriously ill.

Our Woman's Auxiliary met at the hut Monday evening. A very splendid and pleasing report was given by the treasurer, Mrs. Otis Campbell. Circle No. 2 had charge of the program. Mrs. David Glass, our Spiritual Life secretary, read a very fine and helpful letter that she had received from Mrs. J. T. Bowman, the Spiritual Life secretary of the N. C. branch of Woman's Work.

Calvary folks are happy to know that Arthur Fiddler, of High Point, who formerly directed and sang in our church choir, is to be with us and direct our choir for another month. He met with the choir for its rehearsal Wednesday evening.

"Sowing and Reaping" was the theme of our pastor's fine sermon Sunday morning. The text, "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully," was taken from 2 Cor. 9:6. "The more you do for the Kingdom the richer your Christian life will be," said Dr. Pritchard . He was not speaking in terms of dollars and cents. "God is a God of principles, he lays before us the principles of life and if we will follow them we won't have any darkness. The more you put into anything the more you will get out of it. The same is true in any phase of life. A man who works sparingly need not expect to reap bountifully (collect much). The same is just as true in religious life as in factory and field." In closing, our pastor said: "The best way to prove to the world that you have been with Jesus is to be found doing the things Jesus would have you do."

Bethel, Randolph Charge.—Our pastor, Bro. Suits, preached another of his good sermons to us Sunday, October 14. He chose as a text Dan. 6:3. The theme of an "Excellent Spirit" was discussed from the topics of Purpose, Prayer, Faith and Moral Courage. As he brought this great message to us from the life of Daniel and left the challenge before us as individuals, composing the church, we knew it was backed up by his own living and preaching as well as by the word of God. Our church appreciates the privilege of having the truth preached to us in such clear and forceful sermons. We feel, too, that the church will meet the challenges that come to it, and will stand out and declare itself for God better than it would or could have done without having these messages from Bro. Suits.

We find our Sunday school with a new class since Promotion Day October 7. Two more of our young people, Margaret Greeson and Clyde Bullard, are teaching in the Primary and Junior departments. The attendance is better since the special meeting season is over.

Our last quarterly meeting of the year will be held at Bethany church next Saturday, October 20, at 2:30 o'clock. REPORTER.

UPLIFT

Near the dust are the struggles in hardship and strife,
But a glimpse at the stars brings a vision of life
Which renews in the mind all the hopes that are good,
As the realm of the heart yields its fruit as it should;
It lifts man from the depths of depression and gloom
By the beams of God's light, like the lilies that bloom
In their splendor superb, and it slowly displays
Intellectual treasures reflecting from rays.

Gracious treasures of wisdom illumine the mind,
Radiates to the world light for blessing mankind,
Warms the soul of the wayward, reducing the fears,
With the happy assurance that virtues dry tears,
Makes the way more buoyant in movement and thought
For exalting the race to the place it has sought,—
Who is led in this way, with his life for the true,
Surely knows that it shines, like a star, through the blue.

While the darker the night-time the brighter the star,
So the strength of the mind beholds events afar,
Opens up the great highway for others to start
Through unexplored regions, by compass and chart,
Where necessity calls for the uplifted soul
To exalt and to lead to life's pilgrimage goal
In the duties that lie in conquest or estate,—
That's the man of the hour who is truly called great!

In the field of endeavor, whatever the deed,
There is much to be said about how we succeed;
Yet the end of the service along the great way
Is the dramatized setting of each passing day—
It's the uplift, the beacon, the kindly clasped hand,
And a well-balanced will in an honorable stand:
These supremest of virtues in positive guise
Give the man for achievement the life-lasting prize.

To the noble and good, and all others beside,
May the Hand that weighs justice the honors divide;
Then allow in the balance affectionate care
For devoted followers that dwell everywhere.
When the sum of life's duties, and what we have done,
Are assembled for rating, the prize will be won,
In remembrance, in love, in immortal comment,
By the EYE on the STAR, in BENEFICENCE SPENT!

CHURCH FINANCES

These words are written in the light of the fact that I have no long, successful ministry to commend what I shall say. Frankly, I have accumulated little money and few outstanding friends. In a word, I have no accomplishments to which I can point with unusual pride. Nevertheless, I do find people and events very much more friendly toward me today than I did during those prosperous days leading up to the depression during which some of our ministry were getting overpaid salaries and stacking their pantries full of hams, so to speak.

However this may be, let us here briefly restate our present problem in the light of certain recent articles on church finances. One school of thought as recently expressed in these columns would bring our people back to our old method of handing down assessments, the very system under which we accumulated most of our present debts and created on the far end of the line at least the very unfortunate impression that our general church was very much more interested in raising money than in serving people. Frankly, I have no desires leading toward the restoration of this outworn system.

Another school of thought, apparently determined not to be outdone in the field of compulsion, would go still farther and take us back to Old Testament and Levitical code. However, even this is not as easy and simple as it might at first seem. To proceed in this direction brings up more rather than less discussion. Two questions will suffice: Shall we tithe all that we harvest, or shall we make certain and numerous deductions before the tithe comes out? If so, where shall the deductions begin and where shall they end? Question number two: Shall the tithe be forthwith turned over to religious leaders, or shall the tither disburse the money himself as per his private conception of stewardship. Plainly, to press such questions as these could only divide rather than unify the good group about which we speak and whom we so greatly admire. It is always so when we try to put the spirit of the New Testament in the legalism of the Old.

To summarize: Both schools of thought would substitute law for grace in the important field of Christian stewardship, hence the friendship that often obtains between the two schools. The last, if strictly adhered to, would require the people to turn over one-tenth of their income; the first would require the people to pay a certain designated amount regardless of income. They differ only in the source of their authority. One group finds its authority in the legislation of the church, the other group in the legislation of the Old Testament, made of course for another people, under another dispensation.

As for myself, I had rather move forward, following the example of others, and devise a financial system through which the people might with some degree of authority speak for themselves in this very important field of Christian endeavor. Such a system is not only Christian but also Methodist Protestant, and comprehensive enough to include all types of stewardship. If there must be restrictions, then have only these two, that everyone shall at least give something, and that those who spend the money shall learn to live within their income.

The finest defense of this proposed change which I have as yet seen is here requoted from the Methodist Protestant-Recorder, July 13: "The plan may look dangerous, but it is at least democratic. The authority of the administration may seem to be weakened, but the plan will put the responsibility up to those who will at least perform the service. The pressure of the conference may be lightened, but the sense of responsibility will be deepened with the local churches. The new plan may lead the people to a closer study of the needs of the whole church and a more conscientious assumption of the obligations of the entire denomination."

Sponsoring this conviction and entertaining this hope, you can readily understand the joy that filled my heart when I read the following statement which appears near the close of Dr. Bethea's most recent article on church finances. "I am sorry that Brother Fogleman's plan has not been tried out; voted for it, and am hoping that it will be done." This is, to say the least, reassuring.

However, one can hardly read this encouraging declaration without remembering that Dr. Bethea was a member of the last General Conference. Moreover, that he as a member of that body from our conference had in his possession a resolution looking straight toward this proposed change. Yet the resolution nor any substitute therefor was ever presented to the conference. Certainly his enthusiasm for the plan had not at that time at least reached the boiling point. Perhaps recent events have produced a more favorable opinion.

As to the challenge issued in the same article, I can only refer the challenger to the full article from which the three paragraphs were taken, "An Exposition of the Bible," Vol. I, page 378, col. 2. This work comes in seven volumes, and may be secured through our Publishing House, 516 N. Charles St., Baltimore.

This word of caution. There is a growing feeling among some of our people that we already have in our possession the very thing of which I write. This is our greatest delusion. Our present degree of choice in determining budgets comes to us as a concession temporally granted and not as the enunciation of a principle permanently conceded upon which is to rest a new financial order.

BREWERS BOAST OF AIDING "SAFETY" DRIVE

That the organized brewers of the United States are attempting to suppress liquor's mounting part in automobile accidents and fatalities, is asserted in a statement just issued by the American Business Men's Research Foundation, from its headquarters at Seven South Dearborn Street recently.

The secretary of the Foundation's Research Department declares, in common with a host of thoughtful citizens, he was shocked and expressed his amazement when, recently, the National Safety Council belittled the effects of repeal and the re-legalization of the liquor traffic and broadcast their three-fold conclusion that "increased travel, not John Barleycorn, is the chief factor in increase of motor casualties;" that "use of intoxicating liquor can by no stretch of the imagination be looked upon as a major cause of traffic accidents," and that "90 to 95 per cent of all traffic accidents have no taint of liquor at all."

In a nation-wide radio hookup following this statement, the National Safety Council presented in story form a warning against the drinking of "cocktails," "high-balls" or hard liquor" by the motorist, but specifically refrained from any caution regarding beer, wines and other so-called "light" alcoholic beverages.

It now appears, continues the Foundation's statement, that an explanation as to why the National Safety Council in their survey soft-pedaled emphasis of liquor and especially of so-called light wines and beer as a factor in this problem, may be, the just revealed direct relationship of the United States Brewers' Association to the Safety Council's program.

It has just leaked out that C. D. Williams, Secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, has for some time been maintaining rather intimate affiliation on the part of his organization with the National Safety Council. Under the headline, "Brewers Working With National Safety Council," the National Brewers' Journal, Chicago and New York City, just off the press, quotes Secretary C. D. Williams as saying that the United States Brewers' Association is "working in close co-operation with the National Safety Council . . . to let the light of truth in on the causes of motor accidents." The particular interest of the United States Brewers' Association would seem clearly self-evident, as Mr. Williams is further quoted as saying: "It was a gigantic task to run down the number of accidents falsely and mistakenly reported as having been due to intoxication of the driver.

The question naturally arises, can the conclusions of any survey of the relationship of alcohol to motor accidents be considered impartial and dispassionate, when the survey is being carried on "in close co-operation" with the largest and most influential liquor organization in the country?

In refreshing contrast to all this comes, almost simultaneously, the publication of the results of extensive medical investigations of participants in automobile accidents, made by Herman A. Heise, M.D., Pathologist, Columbia Hospital, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, as follows:

"The diagnosis of drunkenness is to a great extent still made through unreliable physical observations.

"There is a direct relationship between the severity of the accidents and the amount of alcohol.

"Increased traffic alone is not the chief cause of week-end accidents. The unmistakable role of alcohol is demonstrated by the tremendous week-end peak in 'alcohol accidents' while the others increased but slightly.

"Considering a person sober as long as he can still walk and talk is responsible for the small value of present day statistics regarding the relationship of alcohol to automobile accidents.

"A preliminary survey of persons injured or killed in auto accidents, suggests that alcohol may be a greater factor in such accidents than statistics indicate, and shows the importance of a nation-wide survey of the relationship of alcohol to automobile accidents."

So far as concerns the large number of automobile accidents investigated at first hand by Dr. Heise and his associates, it was found that alcohol was a factor in more than 62 per cent of the accidents studied, while accidents in which alcohol was a definite factor was responsible for 77 per cent of the injured persons and 57 per cent of those kill.—F. D. L. Squires, Research Secretary, Room 611, 7 South Dearborn St., Chicago.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Thompson

In sad but loving memory of my dear husband, Alson G. Thompson, who departed this life April 30, 1934.

Almost five months have gone since that sad day
My dear husband was called away.
God took him home, it was His will,
But in my heart he liveth still.
Then the memory of that day of sadness!
I had to stand and see you go,
With a breaking heart and tear-dimmed eyes,
That filled my heart with woe.
Oh, how I miss you dear Alson!
Not many see me weep, but many a tear is shed
While others are asleep.
Your smiling face and cheerful ways
Are a treaure to recall.
You had a kind word for each
And died beloved by all.
God knows how much I miss you,
Never shall your memory fade,
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where you are laid.
Faewell, dear Alson, a sad farewell.
The loss to me no tongue can tell.
And when on earth I breathe no more
I hope to meet you on the heavenly shore.

By his loving wife,
MINNIE THOMPSON.

$5,000 FOR HIGH POINT COLLEGE

High Point College has been doing much to help build our Annual Conference. Ministers, laymen and laywomen have been trained there who will serve in our churches now and in the future. We are not able to determine the value of this institution in dollars and cents. But we do know that High Point College is worth many times $5,000 a year to the North Carolina Annual Conference. There is only a short time left before we will all close our year's work. During this closing period let us put forth every effort to see that every charge and church pays its part of the $5,000 to High Point College. Pastors, stewards, members and friends of our college, let us put forth a united effort to meet this obligation in full.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Tommy—No, I thank you.

Auntie—You seem to be suffering from loss of appetite.

Now, folks, get down your Herald of last week and look at it again. Maybe you did not see straight last week, or maybe you just could not believe your eyes. Anyway, I am overwhelmed by the gracious response to my appeals.

Standing at the head of my column, like the pinnacle on Pilot mountain, is Siler City. My, isn't she high up in the air. She is so high up that one of the big Berthas which the Germans used to bombard Paris could hardly reach her. Well, well, I knew Siler could do it, for they are in the habit of doing big things. On that charge are some of the salt of the earth. So, congratulations, Pastor Isley, and every Herald agent on the charge. A thousand times, congratulations!

And that young man, J. W. Braxton, from Mt. Pleasant charge, brought in $20 on subsidy which paid them up in full. Thank you, Brother Braxton, and the Mt. Pleasant people. Of course Pleasant Union is included because they are a part of the charge.

And did you see what Brother Curry brought in from Tabernacle? It was just as much, dollar for dollar, as that brought in by Brother Braxton. Yes, Tabernacle charge is out on subsidy also, and we rejoice and they are rejoicing too.

And don't you forget it, either, that Eden church on Halifax charge is out on subsidy also. Miss Blanche Hardee, one of the best workers down there, sent in the full amount of subsidy from their place. We have a place where we print the names of individual churches that raise their quotas in subscriptions, but so far we have no place for credits for subsidy. Maybe we can find a place. Anyway, Eden has paid hers in good money. And Graham and First church at High Point gave us a great thrill by sending in such big amounts on subscriptions. Thanks, thanks, thanks.

From now until conference, "Say it with subsidy." We need it badly.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

BISHOP MOUZON RAPS "IMMORAL" PICTURES

Movies, liquor, modern dancing and card playing were condemned recently in resolutions and addresses at the annual meeting of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"The most desolating influence that ever swept over the world is the modern motion picture," Bishop E. D. Mouzon, senior prelate of the church, said.

He asked ministers of the conference to carry home with them pledges for church members to sign, condemning and boycotting "salacious" and "immoral" motion pictures.

"The saloon of pre-prohibition days and the saloon of post-repeal days were desolating, but I am about to reach the conclusion that the filthy, lewd, sex-filled pictures shown to our children, stimulating emotions far beyond their years, are the most damning influences that ever swept out of hell," the bishop said.

Church Attendance

Roger Babson, the statistician, is quoted as saying that in the average Protestant church in America today the church attendance is about 30 per cent of the membership of the church. The experiences of those who have kept a record justify the statement of Mr. Babson. These figures ought to alarm us and cause the church to hang its head in shame. In the Epistle to the Hebrews we have this admonition: "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." Jesus set the example for all of us when he went back to Nazareth where he was brought up, "and as his custom was, went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." No better text could be found than this as the foundation for a sermon on church attendance. In most churches today there are a great many vacant pews, and yet some people complain because the minister does not seem to be at his best, or up to the standard, as some would say. How could a man be at his best preaching to empty pews? There is nothing about an empty pew to inspire a man, even though a pew might be a good thing in its place. Pews are put there for the comfort and convenience of the people, not to be looked at by the minister.

If the laymen could only realize how much it means to the minister to see them in the pew, perhaps they would take the matter more seriously of going to church. Ministers, like other folks, are human beings. The things they see affect them just like other folks. They get on the mountain top and down in the valley, just like other folks, except that they are supposed to have more faith than some other people have. The most of us have been taught to believe that the Lord helps the minister in some special way to deliver his message that other people might not know much about. But the people ought to realize that they can help the minister preach by being present and by praying for the minister while he preaches. It would hardly be reasonable to expect God to answer the prayer of the layman in behalf of his minister if the layman had purposely stayed away from the church or had gone off on some pleasure trip for the day.

Moreover, the laymen who stay away from the services of the church are starving their own souls. In the physical world we must have food in order to exist. The same is also true in the spiritual world. The house of the Lord is the place people go to get that spiritual food. The minister works during the week in order that he may feed the flock on the Sabbath day. When the people absent themselves from the church, they are refusing to be fed. Those who grow in grace are the ones who avail themselves of the opportunities of church-going. Of course there are some sick folks who cannot go and usually there is some provision made for them by the minister and the best church folks. Sometimes it is by a visit by the minister or by some of his most spiritually-minded people or by good literature sent by friends. We are not urging the sick folks to go to church. They ought to stay at home in most cases; but we are appealing to the well ones to go and do their duty. Go and get the most out of the services, and pass this on to somebody else. Let nothing that can be avoided keep you away from the Lord's house.

Write It Down

The Methodist Protestant church is rich in the experiences of men and women who have made the church what it is during the last one hundred years. Unfortunately, however, these experiences will largely be lost to posterity shortly unless somebody records these experiences. It might be said that our people have never acquired to any great extent the writing habit. Very few of our people have written books, and we are not insisting here on any one doing that now. But there is a kind of writing that is not expensive and yet would be very helpful to the present and the future generations. That form of writing might be classified as reminiscences. We have a number of men who have served many years in the pastorate and have had varied experiences. Many of these ministers have been associated with laymen and laywomen who have been a tower of strength to the forces of righteousness and to our church. How interesting it would be for some of our people to give us a close-up view of some of these people who have done so much for our church! And how interesting it would be if some of our ministers who have had such rich experiences would write these down, so we could have the benefit of them and so they would not be lost to the next generation. So, brethren— and sisters also,—write, tell us about some of the best things that have happened during your years in the ministry. Let somebody write down his experiences in associating with some of our men of the last generation, such as O. R. Cox, Professors Allen and Martin H. Holt, J. C. Roberts, and a host of others. Let us do it now, for it will not be long until memory will fade, and it will be difficult for us to recall the things we might want to write.

—We are now able to announce that the legal restrictions to the transfer of the Herald from the estate of its former owner, Dr. J. F. McCulloch, have been removed and the paper will be offered to the Annual Conference when it meets in November. In the meantime our people can be assured that money sent in will all be used for the carrying on of the paper.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL

By C. W. Bates

Place—Baltimore. Where the Methodist Episcopal church had its birth one hundred and fifty years ago; where the Methodist Protestant church had its beginning one hundred and ten years ago. The immediate meeting place, the auditorium of the Scottish Rite Temple, given without charge. Other places: the Lyric Theatre, largest auditorium in the city, with a capacity of 3,500 or thereabouts, where, on Wednesday night, our hearts were lifted up as 400 voices sang the oratorio, "The Evangel of the New World," and where, on Friday and Saturday nights, the pageant, "The Spreading Flame," was given. (This latter I did not see, being compelled to return home on Friday afternoon; but I understand it was a magnificent production.) Group meetings were held in the First Methodist Episcopal church, the successor of the Lovely Lane Meeting House in which the Methodist church was organized. For us this church is notable in that on its windows appear the names of Snethen, Stockton, Shinn, and others who were the founders of the Methodist Protestant church. Other meetings were held in St. John's Methodist Protestant church, the successor of the St. John's in which our church was organized, and in the Wilson Memorial M. E. Church, South.

Personnel—Delegates and representatives from all over the world, coming back to Baltimore, not to organize a denomination but to appraise its work and to celebrate its achievements. We were all Methodists without designation of North or South, Episcopal or Protestant. Our own group was well represented. Brethren were there from Indiana and New York, from West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Ohio, Maryland—of course,—and North Carolina.

Program—Methodism discussed from all angles; missionary, educational, evangelistic, historical, social, and theological. Our own men who spoke were on a par with the others. We had no reason to feel ashamed of ourselves, and no one suggested that we ought to be. The larger Methodist bodies, Episcopal, North and South, included us and spoke of "the three major Methodist bodies," without distinction as to size. The high day of the program was the "One Day Union," when certainly we were one in spirit—the heart-warming that belongs to all Methodists of every sort.

Purpose—I have already suggested it: to appraise and to celebrate. When that first conference took place—the Christmas conference at which the Methodist Episcopal church was organized—there were sixty preachers present, and perhaps a hundred others. One hundred and fifty years later, there were 2,000 of us, divided and yet one. They came together to organize a church for the purpose of, as they said, "reforming a continent," and "spread scriptural holiness over these lands." How Methodism has grown since its humble beginnings! But has it grown in power as it has grown in prosperity? Has it lost in zeal as it has gained in numbers? Those were questions that faced us as we sat together. One speaker put it aptly when he said, "What began Methodism must renew Methodism." Oh, for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon us all and each!

Prophecy—What will come out of our gathering together? Union? I frankly do not know. There are a good many obstacles in the way of it, a good many problems to be solved. Those of us who are older may not live to see the day when, organically, "we shall be one." But certainly there will come out of it a larger sense of unity, the unity of a common purpose and a common task. We may live in separate homes,—we have a common father. We have set up our own households, but we claim a common heritage. Those of us who went back to our birthplace saw ourselves as brothers, and that sense of brotherhood will abide. It was good to be there. We have come back to our task with more zeal and enthusiasm for it. We are not a little church, stuck off in one corner; we are the sons and daughters of Wesley, whose parish was the world.

SESQUI-CENTENNIAL OBSERVATIONS

By W. A. Ledford

The Methodist Protestant Herald recently carried a brief reference to the Sesqui-Centennial of American Methodism, explaining that Methodist Protestants were there, and several delegates were from the North Carolina Conference. It was the writer's rare privilege to be present at the first historic session, when Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes called for order; and to remain until Bishop William Newman Ainsworth pronounced the final benediction Saturday noon. It was decidedly one of the most encouraging and inspiring gatherings that I have ever attended. It was epoch-making in results.

The fellowship between the delegates and visitors was delightful. One could meet old friends, and make new ones from the very uttermost parts of the earth. Another rewarding feature was the opportunity to meet with and to hear the leaders of the three larger bodies of Methodism. Most of them were on the program one or more times. The representatives from other countries were helpful in their fellowships and messages. None of us will ever forget the delegate from the United Church of Canada, Dr. T. Albert Moore, and his testimony as to the success of their union experiment. Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, representing English Methodism, made a real contribution to the occasion.

That Methodist Protestants were there, and why, has already been stated, but modesty may keep your delegates from speaking out how well they rendered their part in the entire celebration. The writer does not recall a single session, except the evening Dr. S. Parks Cadman spoke, that some Methodist Protestant was not on the program. It would have made every Methodist Protestant rejoice to hear Rev. Dr. James H. Straughn's paper on "Robert Strawbridge—The Lay Element in Methodism"; Rev. Dr. H. L. Elderdice's scholarly paper entitled "Theological Contributions of Methodism"; and Rev. Dr. John Calvin Broomfield, the President of the General Conference of his church, read the report for the committee on findings, which was made up and signed by himself, Bishop E. H. Hughes, and Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, each representing his own church as chairman of the special committee endeavoring to find a common basis for union of the three larger bodies of Methodism.

The most heartening and encouraging note of the entire celebration was that one touching on the union of the three bodies there officially represented. In fact, we had union there. A stranger looking in on our deliberations and not knowing which branch of Methodism the speakers represented, would in all probability have thought it was one body celebrating its Sesqui-Centennial. If through extended conversations, listening to the many speeches, and witnessing the unanimous votes, when the question of union of the larger branches of Methodism was up, I sensed the feelings of the bodies, I have no hesitation in claiming that the long-hoped-for and needed union is coming soon. These delegates are weary of the nineteen divisions of the family of Wesley, each one representing a child in the Wesley immediate family.

The writer hopes that Bros. Bates, Bethea, Taylor, and B. M. Williams, who were the delegates from the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant church, whom I met, will go more into detail of their impressions of the epoch-making Sesqui-Centennial of American Methodism. One could write a long paper on what took place in the main meetings held in the Scottish Rite Temple, and held there because of ample room furnished free, and of the oratorio, "The Evangel of the New World," and "The Spreading Flame." The oratorio packed the largest theatre in Baltimore, and the pageant, "The Spreading Flame," was rendered in the same building three times. The whole affair proved so popular that at last Methodism got on the front pages of the daily press in a favorable light. It makes the children of Wesley feel like saying, "Hallelujah!"

LAYMEN, THE WORLD NEEDS YOU!

What might not the church do for the world if it could stimulate in its laymen a more aggressive and intelligent interest in its work? A shrewd masculine speaker in a world conference humorously struck off the parody familiar to many of us:

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
You will find each Christian soldier
Represented by his wife.

It is an amusing exaggeration; but, like many a lopsided statement, it rivets the attention on a truth. By and large as you look into the movements today that are working to build the foundations of world peace, to carry forward the world mission of Christianity in Africa and Asia, and to cleanse our national life of its social evils and corrosive vices, you discover that a disproportionate share of the burden is borne by women. This does not mean that they either should or would desire to carry less on their shoulders. It does mean that, if those movements are going to be carried forward to a triumphant issue, the men of our nation and of all nations must throw into the work the strong driving force, the decision, the skills, the technique, and the will to victory which they give to their business and professional life.

There lie before me pictures from the London Times that has just reached Boston showing serried ranks of enthusiastic Fascist youth in Italy marching under the leadership of virile laymen; and thousands of Nazi youth in Germany swinging along with immense verve, with adult laymen going ahead with enthusiastic elan. If we could see the youth of the Komsomol movement in their great demonstrations in Moscow, the same would be true.

What is more, if you penetrate to the Balilla youth clubs of Italy or the Komsomol clubs throughout the U. S. S. R., organized like Anti-God Y. M. C. A.'s, you will find laymen hard at it training, disciplining youth, and firing them with the Fascist faith or with the gospel according to Marx. That is why you will find cells of Communist youth in most of the colleges and even the high schools of Japan and in many parts of China, not to speak of industrial South Africa and Latin America. Laymen give high devotion to these powerful movements, which are substitutes for religion in the lives of millions of youth in the East and in the West.

However great may be our belief in a sane patriotism as an essential loyalty in the life of man and as a real basis for internationalism, we all know that these frantic new totalitarian nationalisms, if carried to their logical climax, spell sooner or later ghastly universal war. Such war tomorrow would be simple race suicide amid loathsome horrors such as would make the last war—as some scientist has said—seem a honeymoon in comparison.

However strong may be our conviction that the passion for the oppressed that was in Marx's heart sprang from the fact that Hosea and Amos were the inspiration of his youth, we know that the world triumph of a Communism rooted in a materialist denial of the spiritual would spell a new slavery for man.

What then? As Nicolas Berdyaev insists, you can only face an integral Communism with an integral Christianity. We can only confront these tremendous world-forces if men are prepared to strip themselves of the garments of easy living and literally wade into the glorious toil of laying the foundations of a worldwide kingdom of God on earth as it is in heaven.

For the total task is colossal. It would be entirely hopeless were it not that the words "I believe in God the Father Almighty" stand for the final reality in the universe. In His providence He rests the issue on the obedience of His children. Such obedience will achieve the impossible. That obedience means that laymen must bring to the work of Christ's kingdom, not only an emotional loyalty, but all their priceless gifts.

What are the gifts of a real leader among laymen? They include executive action, a realistic grasp of actualities, an administrative experience in directing many people toward one achievement, a power of swift, resolute decision, a virile will to victory, a command of material resources directed to moral and spiritual ends, and the special techniques or skills of their specific business or profession. By that I mean, for instance, the acumen and mental precision of the lawyer with his power to define issues and plead for them; the skill of diagnosis of the physician and his authority in recommending a course of action; the habit of handling complex worldwide influences and movements of the merchant; the cool penetration of social and political tendencies of the civil servant; the knowledge of human nature of the head of a department in a great store; the capacity to present facts and ideas both with orderliness and with picturesqueness of the teacher and professor; the persuasive pen of the author and journalist; the sense of beauty in the artist and poet; the sense of constructive strength and of the stresses and strains of the architect and engineer. There is no single gift in all the trades and sciences and in all culture that cannot be and should not be harnessed to this world task.

A recent translation of the New Testament into French has the lovely beatitude, "Heureux les artizans de la paix." "Happy are the artizans of peace." So we really do need the bricklayers and plumbers, the carpenters, road-makers, and bridge-builders of the Kingdom of God.

After all, when we get back to the very cradle of Christianity, we see a layman, the son of a carpenter, leading a group of laymen—master fishermen, a civil servant, and so on—over hill and dale, as He trained them to the world task. And He made no other provision. He left it on their shoulders, with the women who also followed Him. So we can follow the story through from Luke the doctor and Aquila the tentmaker, to Dwight L. Moody the evangelist, Wilfred T. Grenfell the doctor, Sam Higginbottom the missionary to the leper, and John R. Mott the Christian world-statesman.

It is not the layman by himself that will win the world. That calls for the gifts and graces, the lovely devotion and infinitely patient heroism of laywomen; the sustained devotional witness and organizing spiritual leadership of the ministry; and the powers that we have described of the laymen, all fused by a burning devotion to the Lord whose we are, and to the world for which He died.—Basil Mathews, in Zion's Herald.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

Closing the Sermon

Public speakers of a generation ago said a great deal about the "peroration," meaning, of course, the concluding part of the discourse. It appears that they considered the closing of the oration or sermon of particular importance. They wanted every speech to sound completed, well finished. They were eager that the address show no signs of weakening, but, on the other hand, would carry force to the very end, reaching a climax with beauty, power and conviction.

So the conclusion is very important. Many a sermon that opened with power and promise weakens as it runs and finally just frazzles out with a thin, vague, uncertain, unprepared ending. The sermon should, of course, wind up with strength, assurance, and beauty. It should always leave a good taste in the mouth, so to speak. The conclusion of the sermon, no less than the opening, is to show the signs of the artist.

Ministers have several ways of making the peroration effective. Some bring the sermon up to a fine level, summarize or restate the main points, then offer an impressive story as material for the conclusion. This can be made very effective. It has the advantage of concreteness and, therefore, always catches the attention. Then, too, it will serve to clinch the argument. Besides, a good illustrative story usually brings a touching emotional warmth so fitting as the sermon draws to a close. Thus, the wise use of the story is to be recommended as one method of closing the address.

Another fine way to close the sermon is by the use of a poem. Poetry is always appreciated, I believe, and it certainly has merit as material for the peroration. Verse is musical, pleasing to the ear. It is also beautiful. Therefore, it helps meet the requirements for an effective ending. Poetry will give the impression of completeness. It is just on the borderland of sublimity, hence aiding so much in rounding out a discourse which in the case of a sermon usually is followed by a prayer. The transition is so natural and easy from a poem to the prayer it may well be employed. Furthermore, a good religious stanza carries the message of the hour. Of course the poem has to be well chosen; too, the sermon must be brought up to a natural need for the poem. It must appear fitting. But, generally speaking, a good verse or two will add very much at the close of a sermon. It has brevity, beauty, completeness.

Still another manner of ending the sermon is by means of a well worded prose conclusion. Just a paragraph or so of choice language will give an address a powerful ending. The speaker, in this case, must have this conclusion written, using the best selection of words to fit his purpose. He may read this concluding section, or, better still, memorize it. The main thing is that the last few sentences, even only for a minute or two, shall carry positive confidence, sublimity, finish, and beauty.

The peroration is not to be given too hurriedly, else it will lose in impressiveness. The sermon practically over, the listeners are to be "brought back to earth" from the high flights to which the discussion may have carried them. They must be let down gently and not in a storm of excitement. They must follow the sermon to the last word and do so like the appreciative audience lingers on the last note of the good violinist. So it is the business of the speaker to try to carry the audience to the end of the sermon with growing interest as everything converges on his last words. Let these precious words be wise, beautiful, and appropriate.

Any one of the three patterns suggested above will, I am sure, help in accomplishing this, giving the sermon a sense of finish and the audience a feeling of pleasure and edification.

CHINA MISSION ANNIVERSARY

Dear Brother Pastor:

We are being asked to observe in all our churches on November 4 the "Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Our China Mission."

This is a reasonable request and I trust you will grant it. You will find abundant program material in the Methodist Protestant-Recorder of October 5, and in the September number of the Missionary Record. The observance can be made one of special educational and missionary value. Lead your people in special prayer that day for our work in China.

A silver anniversary offering, outside of the Budget, is being asked for our China Mission.

Help the Women in their November Thank Offering. This is one of the General Conference Special Days.

J. C. Broomfield.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Pastors' Report Blanks

These are being mailed out this week for fourth quarterly report. We have put November fifth as the last date for their return. We hope to have them as early as the pastors can return them, but please do not return before time unless you have the information called for.

Changing Pastors

There is a restlessness among some pastors and church members that is unfortunate, which crops out about this time of the year. The feeling arises that because Conference is to meet there is to be a change of pastors, whether or not. They forget that the change is the last resort. The pastor's work is done then he must move on. Both groups are responsible for this.

No Tourists' Bureau

It was never designed by our church fathers that the Stationing Committee of the Annual Conference was to be a tourists' bureau to give a preacher a change of scenes annually for his health. Nor is it a promotion committee to advance the workers to higher salaries and easier fields. All this should be obvious, but seems not to be. The purpose of changing a preacher from one field to another is to place him where he can do his best work. Let that be in the mountains or the sandhills. It may be near the center of our strength or far removed from this center. These matters ought not to be considered by a real minister of the gospel. There was possibly nothing said in the call to service the pastor received as to where he would preach. He was to "Go preach"—the places would open up later. It is very unfortunate for a preacher to form the habit of seeking a charge. It will mean sooner or later his location. If a minister is not in the hands of the Annual Conference he should not be aggrieved if that Conference should fail to place him; since he has taken himself out of its hands. And when the members of a church discover that a pastor is dissatisfied with them, they soon decide that they want him to move. Now it would be just too bad if a pastor should disregard the genius of our conference regulations and become a victim of them. It is quite possible. I have known pastors to spend so much time in looking out for a church for the next year that they failed to do their best work where they were located. It usually happens that way. After all, the churches do not exist for the pastor. The pastor is the servant of the church. If he happens to get something not quite as good as he wants, then let him make it what he would like to see it be. He cannot do this in one year. In fact, there ought not to be any one-year pastors. I mean those who can remain only one year with a pastoral charge. It takes almost that long to find where the people live and to get some of the members to attend the church one time.

Also

If all men were no better judges of a wife than the average church official is of what sort of a preacher he needs for his church, the divorce courts indeed would be jammed. If a preacher appears to be in earnest, that is all the qualification some people require. He may know nothing whatever about how to conduct a worship service, or to preach a sermon or to put over a church program, but since he is in earnest he is our man. I would not discredit earnestness. One who is not really in earnest has no business in the pulpit. But it just takes more than that to make a good pastor.

With others the preacher who can stage the biggest sideshow wins out over all others. But a sideshow is just what it is called—a "side" show—not the main thing. What a church should want in a preacher is that he be truly pious, consecrated to the work; that he love it better than all other work; that he will not spare himself in his labors. If you have a pastor like that and you have something for him to do and you can keep him, my advice is that you forget about this moving business.

And if the restless pastor would take the advice of one who is certainly the friend of every true servant of God; if he has a place to labor where something can be done to advance the cause of Christ and he can do it; you wait until the conference pulls you out of that place to put you where there is a harder task.

Grace Church, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, Pastor

I visited this prospective seat of the Annual Conference at the morning hour of worship last Sunday, A good worship program was put on and the people gave good attention, so that the speaker felt much at home and did indeed enjoy seeing many in the congregation who had sat under his preaching for a decade. The pastor had to attend a funeral service in the afternoon and I had to meet an afternoon engagement, so that I did not have an opportunity of talking over the work here. But from appearances it seems to be doing very well. The pastor is fitting in splendidly and his wife has taken over a group of children for instruction during the worship period which doubtless will grow into a junior congregation before long.

Mt. Carmel Church, Lexington Charge, Rev. C. G. Isley, Pastor

I found a good congregation here. This rural church is quite wide awake and has grown considerably during the present pastorate of Brother Isley. The pastor called for those who had practiced tithing for the past week to come forward and lay their offerings on the table; many came, and we presume the amount they brought was gratifying to the official board. Then one of the leaders staged a surprise to the pastor when he called for a rising vote of all who wanted the return of the present pastor; it was unanimous.

First Church, Lexington, At Night

Here we also found a good attendance. These people are very easy to preach to and are appreciative. This church takes the lead of all the churches in the conference in its place on Honor Roll A-Plus. That is, they have paid in full their allotment for World Service, reached their quota for Herald subscriptions, paid their subsidy assessment, and paid all the claims in the Annual Conference Budget; and beside all this, the pastor is paid in full here. So you see they are entitled to be on this highest honor roll. We congratulate both pastor and people on this achievement. Brother Isley is completing his sixth year here and the sentiment for his return is unabated. The membership growth of these churches has been quite unusual, being at present about three times the size it was six years ago. A splendid record!

Honor Roll "A Plus"

First church, Lexington.

Annual Conference Honor Roll

Gibsonville church; Siler City; Union Grove, Orange charge; Pensacola church.

Fourth Quarterly Conference, Why Not Charge, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, Pastor

All churches were represented in this conference, which was held at Flag Springs. It was a harmonious session. Reports did not indicate that any interest was paid up unless it was assessment for Superannuates. The pastor thinks some others may be paid out.

The conference voted to ask Conference to divide this big work in the following way: New Hope, New Zion, Pleasant Hill and Flag Springs churches to constitute one charge; Love-joy, Macedonia, Seagrove, Fairgrove and Flint Ridge to constitute another charge.

Appointments

October 27—Guilford charge, fourth quarterly conference, 2:30 p.m.

October 27—Kannapolis, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p. m.

October 28—Greer's Chapel, 11 a. m.; Friendship in afternoon, Shiloh Charge.

October 29—Forsyth charge, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p.m.

October 30—First Church, Charlotte, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p. m.

October 31—Canaan, N. Davidson, fourth quarterly conference, 11 a. m.

October 31—First church, Thomasville, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p.m.

November 1—Mecklenburg charge, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p.m.

November 2—Roberta, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p. m.

November 3—Orange Charge at Hebron Church, fourth quarterly conference, 2:30 p.m.

November 4—First church, Asheboro, 11 a.m.

November 5—Pleasant Grove church, fourth quarterly conference, 7:30 p. m.

November 9—Cedar Cliff church, Mt. Hermon charge, fourth quarterly conference at 2:30 p.m.

November 10—Kernersville charge, fourth quarterly conference, 2:30 p.m.

SESQUI-CENTENNIAL REFLECTIONS

By J. C. Broomfield

Anniversaries are occasions for reflection and resolution. They provide new starting points and inspire new confidence.

The celebration of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Organization of Methodism in America is no exception in that regard.

Our reflections make the contrast between the Christmas Conference of 1784, and the Sesqui-Centennial Celebration stand out in bold relief.

There were sixty-three preachers assembled in that conference,—there are tens of thousands of Methodist preachers today.

The members of the Methodist Societies then numbered a few thousand, whereas today Methodists in America are counted by the millions.

Methodism then in its unorganized state was a negligible influence in the life of the Colonies; today it includes one-fourth of the Protestant population in America.

Today it looms large internationally, and its growth and achievements have been phenomenal.

Naturally, as Methodist Protestants, we are thinking of the change that has taken place in the attitude of the "Mother Church" toward the principle of "lay representation" for which the founders of our church contended, and we are rejoicing today in their abundant justification.

The Sesqui-Centennial, however, is not so much an occasion for self-congratulation as it is a time for serious reflection and renewed dedication.

In these days, in a striking way, we will be making Methodist history, and in the process we are under obligation to preserve the continuity of the spirit and objectives that have made Methodism great.

Two things will help in the discharge of that obligation. The first is to recognize clearly the lines along which Methodism has developed, and the second is to sense the spirit of Methodist history.

In seeking to meet the second obligation, we are carried back to that memorable night of May 24, 1738, of which Wesley writes: "In the evening I went very unwillingly to a society in Aldersgate Street, where one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation, and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."

Two years ago it was my privilege to go to London to represent our church in the celebration of the Union of British Methodism. The opening session of the four days' program was held in City Roads Chapel, where John Wesley had preached for many years.

I went to that service expecting to hear "a great deliverance." Here was the building so closely associated with the ministry of Wesley; here was the pulpit from which he preached; here were the marble pillars sent from many lands, indicating the spread of Methodism. Next door was the manse in which Wesley lived, with its famous prayer-room, and a few yards in the rear was the grave in which his body rested. My imagination was stirred, and my mind and heart were expectant. What a setting for a great message!

Instead of hearing such a message, I found a deliberate tarrying. I say "deliberate tarrying," for it was announced on the program that they had come to wait and seek for the "Re-Experience of the Warmed Heart."

It was not difficult for all present to sense the implications of that historic phrase, and to crave in their experience the dynamic that released Wesley and produced Methodism.

What an opportunity the Sesqui-Centennial, wherever observed, provides for a similar seeking of this "Re-Experience"!

Wesley's warmed heart determined his preaching, and his preaching determined the three lines along which Methodism has developed. If we are to preserve the historic continuity to which I have referred our preaching must emphasize these identical lines today. Wesley's preaching in the first place INTERNATIONALIZED RELIGION. Prior to his heart-warming he had learned from reading Henry Scougal's "Life of God in the Soul of Man," that religion was the union of the soul with God, that this union began in the new birth, and that the new birth was a conscious experience on the part of the individual. He recognized these almost revolutionary statements as a protest against the formalism and externalism of the religion of that day; and out of his new experience he went forth to preach a personal experience of God in Christ, and that preaching aroused eighteenth century England.

In our day, when recognized religious leaders are telling us that Christianity is shifting its center of gravity from the inner life of the individual to the social community, and that seeking for the "Re-Experience of the Warmed Heart," is giving way to the quest for God in the collective life of mankind, there is great need for a return to the Wesley emphasis of a personal experience of God in Christ. The testimony of those having a satisfying experience of God has repeatedly called the Church back from her speculations and consequent bewilderment. Wesley's preaching in the second place INTERNATIONALIZED THE SENSE OF CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITY, and prepared the way for the modern missionary movement. Before Carey preached his "deathless sermon," the Wesley's were singing—

My gracious Master, and my Lord,
Assist me to proclaim
To spread through all the earth abroad
The honors of thy name.

This was a new note in Christian hymnology.

The faith of Methodism in her responsibility for world evangelization needs to be re-established.

Standing as we are amid the lessening confusion produced by the Laymen's Report on Missions it would be well for us to return to the Wesley emphasis on our international responsibility for the spread of the gospel.

In the third place Wesley's preaching prepared the way for the new theology of Schleiermacher with its emphasis on the emotional in religion, claiming that religion was not knowing or doing, but feeling.

On this triple basis, provided by the preaching of Wesley, we can build a United Methodism in America, and throughout the world. To this noble task may we dedicate ourselves.

THAT CHURCH REGISTER

Most people have some kind of a hobby and I have been accused of making the church register mine. This I cannot altogether vouch for, but I have seen where this work of our church has been so woefully neglected, and I have seen it to be of such great importance, that I have felt that in some way the matter of keeping a church register should be agitated. Pardon me for saying it, but it seems that a great many of our pastors do not know how to keep a church register, or they do not see enough importance in keeping it to care whether it is cared for or not. I do not mean this as unkind, but I have resorted to these words with the hope of getting some one to take notice. The keeping of a church register is a simple matter if we have the correct idea about it, which is not difficult to learn, and then if we are willing to do just a little work as we go.

I have seen church registers that were in an awful mess where a sufficient amount of work had been done to put them in good shape. The wrong thing had been done with a very unfortunate result. Every pastor should secure the instructions given in the prefaces and explanations of both the old register and the one just published. I mention both because the new book unfortunately does not make some things as clear as does the old. The publishers perhaps thought we should know these things where evidently many of us do not. These should be studied until mastered, which should not mean more than a few minutes of earnest effort. Then if these were followed by our pastors we would have records that we would be proud of instead of having something which we so often speak of with embarrassment and shame. Church registers properly kept would become valuable history and much that is worth while. We as a church may not have all that other churches have, but we do have a good register. I do not believe one can be found that can surpass it. I believe I have been told that Rev. B. F. Benson, D.D., was the author of the old register which was adopted by our General Convention of 1877. The principles there given to us have been retained to this day. This is proof of their value. The original principles have been retained in the new register, only with some valuable improvements added. Having such a valuable register, we pastors should be careful and interested enough to keep it in our churches.

These words are not written with the spirit of criticism, even though it may seem so, but with the hope that as the close of one year and the beginning of another are approaching, it might be found a good time to take new interest, and that these words might move some one in that direction.

I do not propose to set myself up as a criterion, but I have been very much interested in this work and have given to it a great deal of time and effort. Without boasting, I do feel that out of this experience I have learned a great many valuable things about a church register. Should any one be interested and should feel that I could be of any help, I would be glad to serve by correspondence or otherwise.

There are a great many people, both pastors and laymen, who are not interested in this work. That is why I believe it should be agitated until our people do become interested. It is worth while. Geo. L. Curry.

HOW BIG IS A MAN?

A man's no bigger than the way
He treats his fellow man!
This standard has his measure been
Since time itself began!
He's measured not by tithes or creed,
High-sounding though they be,
Nor by the gold that's put aside,
Nor by his sanctity!
He's measured not by social rank,
When character's the test;
Nor by his earthly pomp or show,
Displaying wealth possessed!
He's measured by his justice, right,
His fairness at his play,
His squareness in all dealings made,
His honest, upright way.
These are his measures, ever near
To serve him when they can;
For man's no bigger than the way
He treats his fellow man.

THE FIGHT AGAINST DEMON DRINK MUST GO ON

What does the wet victory in Maine really mean?

Does it sound the knell of the dry cause, or rather, is it an alarm signal whose repercussions should arrest the thought of all good citizens everywhere?

The liquor traffic is making use of every second and of every dollar they can take from the people's pockets to entrench itself more firmly into our politics, industry, labor and social relations.

As if in direct comment upon this situation, comes a recent word from that fearless investigator, writer, and world-renowned reformer, William E. "Pussyfoot" Johnson, who, from the crest of his fifty years' participation in the struggle against liquor, flings out this challenge:

"You ask me if this struggle for prohibition is to continue. Two thousand years of history is the answer. Did the struggle against a great wrong subside when Christ died on the cross?

"Did Washington cry quits at Valley Forge? Did Lincoln take to the brush following the foot races at Bull Run?

"These adverses of the drys in recent months need not surprise anybody, who like a woodpecker, works with his head. Every great war in history has been followed by a slump in efforts for better things. The wars of Napoleon turned Europe into a moral pest house. The Revolutionary War buried its idealism and wallowed in drunkenness and corruption. Our own Civil War resulted in the temporary collapse of most decent things. Every temperance and reform organization that prospered so well before that event, went to smash. Even churches were split asunder. It took ten years of concerted effort to restore the status quo.

"Just so, prohibition of the traffic in debauchery is caught in the backwash of the greatest war in history.

"Missionary efforts, educational enterprises of all sorts throughout the world are mostly on the verge of bankruptcy. Not a single reform movement in the world has made any progress.

"No great wrong in the history of the world has been disposed of except by prohibition. Piracy on the high seas, human slavery, polygamy, public gambling houses, thieving, lotteries, and the whole list of great wrongs have gone down through the operation of prohibition. Not a single evil has ever subsided except through the operation of prohibition laws.

"When the yearning for public order disappears, when a mother's love is transformed to hate, when the Ten Commandments become obsolete, when the Sermon on the Mount is thrown into the waste basket, then this struggle for prohibition of the traffic in debauchery will cease and not till then.

"As there is no end to a circle, just so there will be no abatement of the struggle against drink, the chief cause of misery and suffering on earth for the last 4,000 years."

A TRIP TO WHITAKERS

Last week, in company with Mrs. Pritchard and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson of Mebane, Chairman of Districts in the North Carolina Branch of Women's Work, it was our privilege to journey to the very interesting town of Whitakers, to be present at the rally of the First District, on Thursday. The new highway from Wake Forest to Spring Hope has brought Whitakers almost fifteen miles nearer Greensboro. On arriving there we spent Wednesday night in the hospitable home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Cutchin. On Thursday morning the people began to assemble at the church for the day's program. All the charges in the district were represented except one, and all of the ministers of the district were present except two. The district chariman, Mrs. R. M. Robinson, had worked out a splendid program and it went through just about as planned. All and all, it was a good day. Such meetings are productive of great good. We hope to give our readers a report of the meeting by some of those who were there.

HOW SALVATION ACTED IN EGYPT

While holding meetings in Egypt among some soldiers, Rev. J. Stuart Holden asked a big sergeant in a Highland regiment how he was brought to Christ. His answer was:

"There is a private in our company who was converted in Malta before the regiment came on to Egypt. We gave that fellow an awful time. One night he came in from sentry duty, very tired and wet, and before going to bed he got down to pray. I struck him on the side of the head with my boots, and he just went on with his prayers. Next morning I found my boots beautifully polished by the side of my bed. That was his reply to me. It just broke my heart, and I was saved that day."—Church of Christ Advocate.

OUR STORY PAGE

FAIR AND SQUARE

"I believe that I'm getting ahead, Tom."

"I know you are, Ben. Well, the best man wins, of course."

Although Tom tried to say this heartily, a scowl lurked on his brow. The two boys were piling wood in neat ricks in Grandfather Lane's woodshed, conveying it in handbarrows from the huge pile the hired man had cut in the woodlot. Grandfather had promised a nice prize to the boy whose pile should be highest on Saturday night, and as grandfather was always as good as his word, or a little better, both had striven manfully—on Ben's part, at least, in perfectly friendly rivalry—for the coveted reward.

Up till Saturday noon there was no steady gain on either side; then, slowly but surely, Ben's pile began to grow higher. Ben was pleasantly exhilirated over his success, of course; but Tom was one of those unfortunate lads who cannot accept defeat gracefully, even at the hands of a friend. Since he could not win by fair means, he was not above resorting to underhand methods, as the sequel proved. As it happened, both boys did not always reach the woodshed at the same time. One would be loading his handbarrow at the woodpile while the other would be racking his wood inside the shed. Thus came to Tom his opportunity and temptation. A few sticks at a time were slyly transferred from his brother's pile to his own, while the latter was busy loading up in the wood lot, and presently his rick grew noticeably higher than Ben's. Ben commented on this, still good-naturedly.

"I really thought I was getting the better of you, Tom; but you are gaining on me right along. Believe you'll win the prize yet. What'll you say it's a new sled—a real flyer?"

Tom made no answer. He was almost too ashamed of his actions to face his brother, and yet—a sled! He certainly did want that prize. Already a good snow had fallen, and there was promise of an abundance of "the beautiful" in the immediate future. The hired man only laughed and winked and retorted, "What'd I want to go telling for?" when they asked him if it might be a sled, and then they were sure of it. Saturday night, when grandfather returned from his weekly trip to town, he remarked jovially:

"Well, I must go out and take a look at your woodpiles, youngsters."

"No need of exerting yourself, grandfather," laughed Ben cheerfully; "Tom won out—fair and square!"

Fair and square! Tom started guiltily. He could find nothing to say, but mumbled his thanks when grandfather brought in the fine new red sled, just what he would have picked. He offered Ben the first ride, but the latter shook his head, surprised at his brother's unwonted generosity. "No, thank you, Tom; I must help Grandfather with the chores. Go and have a fine slide. You deserve to, because you won it fair and square."

"There is was again, "fair and square!" How those three little words haunted him! Wherever he went they stared him in the face, rang in his ears. After a while he returned to the house, dragging his new sled behind him. He could find no pleasure in it, though the sliding was fine, and he had long anticipated the first snow. Pleasure that comes through sin, my dear young reader, is never quite satisfactory. Remorse may be smothered for a time, but the zest of an honestly earned happiness is never there.

At supper time it was just as bad, with Grandmother and Cousin Janie and Aunt Emily admiring the new toy and congratulating him upon his success. That night he lay and tossed and stared out at the blinking stars till he could stand the echo of those accusing words, "fair and square," no longer. Then he rose and softly tiptoed to his brother's bedside. Ben's peaceful snore stopped at his pleasing touch.

"What's the matter, Tom? Are you sick?" he inquired, sitting up in alarm.

"No," groaned Tom. "I just couldn't stand it any longer, thinking how dishonest I've been. The sled's yours, Ben. I—cheated—to win it! If I hadn't, you'd have won it—fair and square."

When Grandfather came around and laid his gentle old hand on Tom's shamed head the next day, the boy felt that he had been forgiven.

"After all, my boy," said the old man earnestly, "you won a real victory in this affair—a victory over self—and you won it fair and square."—Publisher Unknown.

THE PUBLICAN AND THE HOTTENTOT

In the family of a Dutch Boer, in the Transvaal, lived a poor, ignorant Hottentot as servant. His life was a hard one, doing constant service without hope of freedom or reward. The Boer, his master, was a man who daily gathered round him his family of five stalwart sons and three daughters, and ere they lay down to rest read to them by the fading light of day a chapter from the Book of books. One day the chapter happened to be the one which contains the parable of the Phariss and the publican. "Two men went up into the temple to pray," sounded forth in the sonorous voice of the Dutch farmer. In a corner of the room sat the Hottentot, his form bent forward in an attitude of eager attention. Poor man! Ignorant and stupid though he was, something had taught him that he had a soul, and that there was a great God of souls, and he had often longed to know how to speak about his soul to that great God. So no wonder that he listened!

"Now I shall learn how to pray," he said to himself. "God, I thank Thee I am not as other men," read on the farmer. "Ah! that's true; I'm worse," whispered the Hottentot. "I fast twice in the week; I give tithes of all that I possess—" continued the farmer. "I don't do that. I can't pray like that. Oh, what shall I do?" cried the poor man to himself. And big tears came up into his eyes as he sat dejected and bowed to the ground.

But soon he heard that the publican "would not lift up so much as his eyes to Heaven—". "That's me!" cried Jacob; "that's me." "Stood afar off—". "That's me!" "But smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me, a sinner." The poor black man jumped up in excitement and left the room; he ran out to the woodshed, and fell on his knees, and there, smiting his dark breast, he pleaded in the words of the publican's prayer, "God be merciful to me, a sinner."

How wonderful to think that this short prayer of seven words suits old and young, rich and poor, black man and white—every one who is sinful, and helpless, and needy.

As you read the publican's story, can you say truthfully to each sentence, "That's me"? Are you looking to God, for Christ's sake, to be merciful to you, a sinner? The publican went down to his house "justified"—that is, forgiven, cleansed, and happy. So may you.—The Messenger of Peace.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Dr. William H. Phelps, editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate (Methodist Episcopal), wrote and published on the cover page of his paper a letter which he called a "heart-cry to President Roosevelt: Give the Poor Kids a Break." From this stirring appeal we take the following paragraphs:

Dear President Roosevelt: It has been claimed by your friends and admitted by your enemies that your advocacy of repeal and the actual campaigning of your postmaster-general were determining factors in the final repeal of prohibition.

You threw the influence of the first citizen of the land for repeal, and out of respect for you, although not without much hesitation, thousands of dry voters accepted your ideas, your promise, and your leadership.

You have tried desperately to pull the nation out of the swamp in which you found us. We honor you for every noble experiment you have launched.

You have tried every known plan to help the farmers.

You have spared no pains to save the country's business.

Your efforts for the unemployed have written a new chapter in brotherhood.

Your plan to control Wall Street gave new courage to thousands of investors.

You have saved the homes of thousands who were about to lose them.

Best of all, when you were wrong, you backed up and made a new start. When the sun burned up the crops, you halted the program of limitation. You are great enough to admit mistakes.

Why not do that very thing on the repeal of prohibition? Isn't it your greatest mistake?

It has brought you only half the expected revenue. Brewers are rolling in new wealth, but you are not getting it.

Bootleggers are as thick as blackberries and as venomous as rattlers.

Traffic accidents have quadrupled, and fatalities have doubled.

The beer gardens are running wild, even in those states that are really trying to force some regulation.

Youth is being demoralized at a rate that startles all who watch the procession.

Last but not least, there are too many children being killed by drinking drivers.

(Here are given examples of children killed by drunken drivers. Any community can supply its own example. The appeal continues:)

Mr. Roosevelt, in the name of the God you worship and the God we worship, give these children of the poor a break!

If these drivers would kill one another, the public would stand for it; but the killing of innocent children goes beyond the limit of endurance.

Repeal you cannot undo in a night, the evil results can never be undone, but there is one thing you can do any hour you choose.

You can go on the air once more and admit that repeal is a mistake and say that you will do what you can to rectify it.

You can call upon the citizenry of our nation to leave every kind of booze alone, and so help to make total abstinence popular.

That would be America's most meaningful and most historic broadcast.

There are devoted men and women who would, like Paul of old, willingly give their lives if you would do this thing and do it now for the sake of the nation's children.

Mr. Roosevelt, rectify your worst mistake and give the kids, the children of the poor, a break!—Selected.

GUARD WELL

If the United States of America is to long continue to be the country our fathers and mothers desired, planned, worked for and fought for it to be, those of us who fully appreciate our country, our Constitution and Declaration of Independence and the principle of the greatest good for the greatest number must, it seems, be ever alert lest those who have desires and agents working to overthrow what has been accomplished for the lasting good of our country and ourselves, should, by some technical titles or terms and fascinating entertainments, charm or bewitch us so successfully that we will all wake up well stung.

The United States of America will always need men with such high principles as George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and the others who so well served our country in the past, in order to continue to be the country our fathers and mothers established and bequeathed unto us.

We must not allow any traducers of our established principles, or traitors, to gain or hold political position. We must not allow anyone, no matter how well schooled they may be in policies, politics and propaganda originating outside of our country, to become masters of our fortunes or fate. We must watch well and guard well.—Albert A. Riggs.

—Midway church on Haw River charge is to be dedicated on next Sunday. We presume that others who are familiar with the history of the church will give us the facts in the case. It remains for us to congratulate the pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, and the people who have helped to make the dedicatory service possible. Dr. Paul S. Kennett, son of the oldest living former pastor of the church, will preach the dedicatory sermon at 11:15 o'clock. Dr. A. G. Dixon, whose father was one of the founders of the church, will dedicate the church. We trust they may have a great day.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

FIRST CHURCH, LEXINGTON, AUXILIARY

The Ladies' Auxiliasy of this church held its last meeting for the conference year Thursday night, October 11, at 7:30 with Mrs. Hattie Isley on Market street.

The president, Mrs. O. F. Johnson, presided over the meeting. The devotional exercises were opened by singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and prayer was offered by Rev. C. G. Isley. Mrs. Lester Koonts read the Scripture lesson from the book of Ruth, after which came the business hour. The auxiliary was glad to have such a good report to turn in, as it did, realizing that this has been a hard year, though we want to state that if it had not been for the untiring work of our auxiliary, we could not have had such a good year together in which the ladies helped in many good causes. At this meeting they had planned to do some church improvement, in which all seemed to be interested. Also they planned to serve a fried chicken supper in the near future, in this way to help bear the expenses of installing water in the church.

The officers for the coming year were as follows: President, Mrs. O. F. Johnson; vice-president, Mrs. Arch Miller; secretary, Mrs. Arvil Walser; treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Cutting; devotional leader, Mrs. L. B. Koonts; reporter, Mrs. Hattie Isley; social committee, Mrs. G. M. Ridenhour, Mrs. Savanna Craven, Mrs. Hattie Isley, Mrs. S. J. Lookabill, and Mrs. A. E. Cutting; flower committee, Mrs. H. C. Koonts and Mrs. J. J. Mallard.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, ice cream and cake were served to the following: Mrs. O. F. Johnson, Mrs. Lester Koonts, Mrs. Arvil Walser, Mrs. A. E. Cutting, Mrs. Savanna Craven, Mrs. G. H. Ridenhour, Mrs. S. J. Lookabill, Miss Wilma Ridenhour, Miss Dorothy Lee Koonts, Lester Koonts, Arvil Walser, Kermit Ridenhour and Rev. C. G. Isley.

The next meeting will be held on November 15, with Mrs. O. F. Johnson at 19 E. Seventh Avenue.

MRS. HATTIE ISLEY, Reporter.

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY NEWS

On Wednesday, October 3, at 2:30 p. m., the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met in the home of Mrs. R. M. Robinson, chairman of woman's work in the first district. Mrs. Robinson had charge of the devotions, using the program as outlined in our devotional book.

Only seven members and one precious jewel were present, but a very interesting and impressive program was carried out. Plans were discussed for putting more money in the auxiiary treasury. Mrs. M. L. Crew and Mrs. Henry Harris read interesting papers. The November meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. T. J. Kee on November 7 at 2:30 p. m. During the social hour Mrs. Robinson served refreshments. Those present report a splendid time.

Thank-offering programs have been put on in all three of the churches on the work with good attendance and average collections. One thing that has impressed me more than anything else is the increased interest that most of the people have shown in these services. As thank-offering secretary for the charge, I want to say it has been a great pleasure to work with these folks. They have co-operated in a fine way and I am going to expect greater things of them along this line in the future.

Those of us in the first district who went to Whitakers October 18 realized a great treat in getting to hear Dr. Pritchard review the study book, and also in listening to Mrs. H. C. Nicholson and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard as they told us about the great work of missions. It was a day of information and inspiration. The only thing that brought sadness to our hearts was the absence of our much loved N. C. Branch president, Mrs. William C. Hammer. Our sympathy and prayers go out to her in her affliction. We are hoping that when the rally is held in Creswell next March that Mrs. Hammer may be one of the speakers.

We are glad to report that Spring Church Charge had the largest delegation present. There were 20 adult members, 2 precious jewels, and one visitor from Spring Church Charge. Whitakers gave us a warm welcome.

We are proud that we still have the honor of furnishing the chairman for the first district in the person of Mrs. R. M. Robinson. Come on, folks, let's all rally to her and make our district a number one district in every way.

MRS. WM. H. NEESE, Cor. Sec'y.

TO HERALD AGENTS

Due to the ill health of the late editor during the last few months, some of the accounts have fallen into arrears. It is necessary to put the accounts into proper shape for the paper to continue under new management. Will those agents who have kept up with the expiration dates of the subscribers among their membership please see those who are in arrears at once, and report to us without delay? We want to pay our bills and the publication of the Herald is figured at cost, so that unpaid accounts will throw the support of the Herald unjustly upon someone else.

We appreciate very much the work of those diligent, self-denying persons, the Herald agents. Their work tells and it will be rewarded when the Lord balances His accounts. THE BOOKKEEPER.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Midway church, 6 cans fruit and vegetables, 2 coats, 2 dresses and 1 pair shoes.

Calvary, Greensboro, 5 cakes for school lunches.

Mt. Carmel, Forsyth, 8 cakes for school lunches.

Before Conference

Please give us one more good offering before conference from every Sunday school in the conference. Just three more Sundays before conference.

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving is just a month ahead, and from its organization the Home has looked to Thanksgiving for great help in its finances. Prepare for Thanksgiving before conference, because there will only be ten days after the adjournment of conference in which to get together the Thanksgiving offering. We thank you for your thought of us, and we confidently look to all our people at Thanksgiving for a liberal offering.

—Mrs. R. M. Andrews, of High Point, delivered a splendid address at the thank-offering service at Calvary church last Sunday evening. An offering of $49 was received.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

First Church, Thomasville. — Our revival meeting was held the second week in September, continuing on through Tuesday night of the third week. We had a good meeting with fine attendance and Dr. Williams of High Point did some mighty good preaching. There were nine conversions and reclamations.

The Men's Fellowship organization sponsored a weiner roast at the home of Mr. I. A. Teague on last Tuesday night, September 9th. The entire church was invited. A large crowd was present to enjoy this outing. The "Eastern Star" Quartette (colored boys), gave special music.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Tom Lloyd September 11th with a good attendance. The service was opened with the song, "I Love to Tell the Story." Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Will Leonard. Mrs. J. C. Lloyd led the prayer. After the business session the meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Alfred Myers November 8th.

Miss Alma Gray, of Emporia, Va., is visiting Mrs. T. G. Madison.

We are glad to report that we have paid in full our A. C. Budget. We expect to pay the World Service soon.

The Minnis Circle is working on the Thank-Offering program. They are giving the play entitled "The Fourth Generation." It will be given the fourth Sunday night in October.

Church officers for the coming year were elected last Sunday morning and will be installed next Sunday.

Grace, Greensboro. — The Woman's Auxiliary met on Monday the 15th of October. It was decided to serve lunch to the Conference on four days—Wednesday to Saturday. As good cafeterias and restaurants are but a few blocks away, it was thought desirable te allow the members of the Conference to secure the evening meal away from the church —thereby providing opportunity for variety, which most pepole prefer.

On Friday evening the Baraca class "staged" a Father and Son banquet, which was greatly enjoyed by the 45 men and boys present. Some of the men had to borrow a boy, and a fine group of youngsters gathered for the occasion. A delightful supper was served by the ladies of the Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. Norman Wills, chairman. Roy Millikan was toastmaster, and the speaker was Mr. Charles W. Phillips, for several years the popular principal of the Greensboro High School, and now director of the Community Chest. His address dealt with the important relationships of life, especially that of father and son. It was effective, and was greatly enjoyed.

Sunday morning President Andrews paid us his official visit. His sermon dealt with the important things that should claim the attention of the church of Christ, in order that it may grow. We realized anew the obligations upon the church, and that it is quite easy to overlook the conditions that must be complied with if we would honor the great Head of the Church, and do the work He has committed to us.

A new feature has been introduced which gives great promise. During the church service, Mrs. Carroll, the talented wife of our pastor, takes charge of the children from three to fourteen years of age, and entertains and instructs them while their parents attend the morning service. The advantages of the plan are obvious; it furnishes to the children something really worth-while, and makes it unnecessary for the parents to rush home after Sunday school in order to take the children. I predict that the Children's Hour, under Mrs. Carroll, will become increasingly popular, and believe that many churches could adopt it with profit to both parents and children.

Mr. Carroll announced that a Day Nursery is in contemplation. When this is inaugurated, it will be no longer necessary for parents to remain away from church in order to "stay with the children," and many parents will no doubt welcome the opporunity to attend the services of the church, who are now unable to do so without great inconvenience.

The Greensboro church: Grace, Calvary, West End, and St. Paul's will constitute the host—or should I say hostess?—to the next Annual Conference, and we are sure that the brethren will bring a blessing to our city, and to the homes which they may bless with their presence. J. N. W.

Randleman Charge.—The most of our reporters have gone on a strike, I suppose. At least they have quit their job, and I thought it would be proper for me to say a few things about the work here. We started our first meeting at Mt. Lebanon the fourth Sunday in July. Brother Edw. Suits of High Point did the preaching, and to say that he did it well is not exaggeration; yet we did not have the visible results that we had hoped for, but the seeds are sown and the harvest will be reaped some time. We held our second meeting at Worthville. Rev. John Allred, pastor of the Christian church of Randleman did the preaching. We had a great meeting with 50 reclamations and conversions. We received 16 members, the M. E. church nine and the Baptist received some. Brother Allred did some effective preaching and it was a great meeting. Our third meeting was at Level Cross, Brother Ashburn did the preaching and he was at his best and it brought results. We had 17 conversions and received 21 into the church—four by certificate. So we feel that great good was done. Our fourth meeting was at New Salem. Rev. M. C. Henderson did the preaching and everybody enjoyed his messages and we had a good meeting with 14 reclaimed, two converted and two joined the church. At the close of the meeting the people of the community loaded the pastor's car with just such things as a preacher and family need to keep soul and body together. May God bless each one and make us a greater blessing.

We enjoyed a red letter day at Mt. Lebanon today in the form of Home Coming Day. We were glad that many of those who had moved away came back and enjoyed the day with us. The Trogdon quartet and the Level Cross choir added to the day's enjoyment by their good singing. The climax of the morning service was a long table in the grove loaded with good things to eat; and the sweet fellowship we had as we broke bread together.

I want to say we surely enjoyed the visit of our friends from Roberta a few weeks ago. Brother E. H. Cochran, his family, mother and Brothers Leroy and Foster. We enjoyed their visit so much; friends, come again.

Another Conference year is almost gone and we will soon meet in Greensboro to give account of our stewardship and may the Spirit of God direct in all the business of the conference and direct in the assignment of every preacher.

JOEL B. TROGDON, Pastor.

Flat Rock Charge.—The service at Palestine church last Sunday morning was largely attended, and the people were very attentive to the sermon. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed for the fourth quarter, meeting the requirement of our church law. An unusually large number of people participated in the communion service.

Last Sunday was the last service at Palestine church for the present conference year, and the stewards of the church paid the balance due on the pastor's salary and a substantial amount on the Annual Conference assessment. This church spent $258.00 on church improvements during the past year.

There was a good attendance at Bethel for the service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. We had as visitor Mrs. J. J. Thomas and grand-daughter, Irma Dell Hargrove, of Burlington, in the service. Irma Dell sang a solo during the service, and also sang at the morning service at Palestine. Mrs. Thomas and grand-daughter were guests of the pastor and family during the week-end.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Gideon's Grove church Saturday afternoon of this week at 2 o'clock.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Flat Rock at 11 a. m., and at Bethany at 3 p. m. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Bethesda, State Street.—We have not sent in a report for several weeks, but are still busy. The second Sunday a group of State street people came up to our church and gave a Rally Day program which was enjoyed by all that were present. Just one more good thought from our pastor to have the churches change programs.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet Thursday night. We are expecting our President, Dr. Andrews to be with us. It is always a delight to have him meet with us.

Mrs. C. L. Wagoner, our good and faithful superintendent for the past eight years has been re-elected for the coming year. He and the newly-elected teachers have started out with another year before them in the Master's vineyard.

The auxiliary is using the Lord's Acre plan with chickens, which at ppresent has netted them the sum of $20.70 with more to follow.

We can hardly realize that we are so close to the end of another conference year. As we look back we ask ourselves, have we done our best for the Master this past year? We have been greatly blessed this year in having for our pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, whom we believe is a real saint of God. He has given us some good thoughts, which, if we will put to practice, will help to make us better men and women. Oh, for more men like some who will fight the battles for many years and then not be tired but rather glad to do service to his Master. We trust he will be spared many more useful years in the work he loves so well.

The first Sunday night Mr. and Mrs. George Berrier from Concord church were with us in prayer meeting. Mr. Berrier being one of our own boys, we are always glad for him to come back to the church of his childhood. He gave use a good talk as he always does which was greatly enjoyed. Come again Brother Berrier you are always welcome. Next Sunday the officers of the church will be elected for the coming year.

MRS. D. D. BRINKLEY, Reporter.

Littleton Charge.—It has been some time since I have reported through the Herald, but we are busy all the time. It is so near the close of the Conference year and there is lots to be done, however, I believe we are going to close better than I thought we could some time back. We are now ready to put a new roof on our church at Corinth, and I think the pastor's salary will be paid and more on the A. C. B. than was paid last year.

The works seems to be in much better condition than when we came here, the attendance has increased throughout the year. We are now having our revival meetingn at our Littleton church and I feel that much good has been done. The church has taken on new life and I believe it will come back and live again. There is some talk of starting a Sunday school here again.

We have had lots of work here for this work has been in a run down condition for several years, and two or three of our churches were almost gone, it seemed to me, when we came here; but they have been revived and now one of them is our second strongest. We feel encouraged with the work, and I firmly believe that in a few years Littleton work will be one of our best rural works, for we have three strong churches in the rural section and our church at Vaughn is working and doing well; also our Littleton church seems to be in much better condition.

We had a glad surprise at the parsonage last Friday night: just before service time we were called from the church and what did we find. Our dining table piled full and more than enough to fill it again in the room of all kinds of good eats. We just pray God's blessings upon each of them and say to each of them, Thank You!

R. L. VICKERY, Pastor.

Welch Memorial.—Last Thursday night our meeting came to a close. Dr. Williams did the preaching, bringing a forceful message each evening.

Rev. Wayne Curtis, of Burlington, led the singing. Bro. Curtis is a splendid young man and helped much by personal work as well as in the singing. The C. E. Society held a prayer meeting each evening just before services. This too was a great help. The meeting was a success, with 17 professions of faith. These were all young people whose lives are yet before them. We had several to join the church by letter.

Sunday we elected officers for the Sunday school, as follows: Superintendent, Odell Brown; assistant superintendent, Roscoe Briley; secretary-treasurer, Floyd Vuncannon; assistant secretary-treasurer, Bud Cashwell; pianist, Mrs. Earl Shoaf; assistant pianist, Mrs. Burris Harrison; choir leader, John Easter; assistant choir leader, W. B. Delk. These will be installed next Sunday morning.

The fourth quarterly conference will be Wednesday night after the fourth Sunday. We are behind some with finances, though in better shape than usual at this time. We have already paid out on some claims and hope to bring others up more yet and expect to pay pastor in full.

We are hoping to have the same pastor another year, as we feel he is the best.

Lebanon.—An efficient reporter keeps the pastor out of the press. That has been the case at Lebanon for the past two years. Mrs. J. W. Thacker has done our reporting so well that there has been but little occasion for the pastor to concern himself with this aspect of the work.

However, there are just a few things that I want to say at this time. Our revival meeting was held during the first ten days of September. Bro. J. C. Madison was our pulpit help. His earnest messages were heard by large congregations from night to night. Bro. Madison has many friends in this church and community, having served here as pastor during his junior and senior years at High Point College.

It is said that we never grow too old to learn. I am not old enough yet to qualify as a witness on that point. I do know, though, that we can keep on learning as the years pile up. For instance, I am just now learning how to have a "birthday." I have been having some for a few years—just calendar birthdays. But a real birthday—well, that's something else, and I didn't know a thing about how to have such a birthday until recently. The people of Lebanon church taught me, and they did it so well that I am decided now to have a birthday every year. To be called home from an after-supper visit and greeted, upon arrival, but a house full of happy folks, singing "Happy Birthday to You," and then to be presented with a large basket, full and running over, of valuable presents, and a whole table full of flowers and fruit, and the traditional "birthday cake"—well, if that does not teach a man how to have a birthday, he's hopeless. It is needess to say that for this most complete and most pleasant surprise I am profoundly grateful.

I advise all pastors to learn how to have a birthday.

We are working hard and unitedly for a good closing of our year's work. On last Sunday night the Woman's Auxiliary rendered a good program in their annual thank-offering service. This week we are holding cottage prayer meetings, and have on a general visitation among our church people. Good programs are in the making for the observance of Rally Day next Sunday. All church officers for the new year have been elected and installed. Our stewards are pressing the finances. Church Extension, Annual Conference Debt, and Herald Subsidy are paid in full. The balance on Annual Conference Debt is pledged by the Young Men's class, and the Rainbow class—young women—will try to pay balance on college allotment. Our Aid Society will pay our total superannuate allotment.

In addition to our efforts to meet our financial obligations for this year, our stewards are planning our financial program for next year. They expect to have everything in readiness so that our financial machinery will begin to operate on the next Sunday after the close of this conference year.

Just at this time we have a number of sick people in our congregation. They have our sympathy and prayers. Our hearts go out in tenderness and sympathy, also, to Bro. and Sister Albert Gross because of the recent passing of their precious little girl, and to Sister B. A. Welborn, whose mother, Mrs. W. N. Manning, passed into the Great Beyond just a few days ago. May God bless, heal, and comfort all of these.

The spiritual condition of our church may be characterized as "average," and our organizations as "functioning normally." We have had an addition of 20 to our church membership this year.

We want to acknowledge our gratitude to our people for their unfailing kindness to us during the year. Hardly a day passes but that we are placed under obligations to them for their thoughtful concern for our welfare. It is a joy to serve them. S. W. TAYLOR.

Asheville.—Our Sunday morning service this week was different from our regular routine. The service was planned by Rev. J. F. Minnis to honor our Sunday school teachers, and was a surprise to them. There was no break between the Sunday school hour and the church hour; the children all remained for the service too. Rev. J. F. Minnis conducted the worship service, after which Mr. D. J. Eller gave a brief history of the beginning of the Sunday school. Then Rev. Mr. Minnis spoke for a few minutes in appreciation of the work done by Sunday school teachers the world over, and most especially our own teachers. The teachers were introduced by Mrs. C. B. Baker; as each one was introduced, he or she went to the platform and was presented with a small token of appreciation from his or her class. When all had been introduced, a pledge of reconsecration was read. This was followed by one verse of the song, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory." Those honored were: Mr. J. A. Hornaday, Fawcett Bible class; Miss Frances S. Cunningham, Philathea class; Rev. J. F. Minnis, Young Men's class; Miss Nancy Clouse, Intermediate Girls; Mr. H. O. Charnock, Intermediate Boys; Mrs. J. S. Williams, Junior Boys; Miss Irene Miller, Junior Girls; Mrs. Robey Wilson, Primaries; Mrs. E. A. Bolick, Beginners.

Mrs. Bolick was accorded a rising vote of thanks for having completed five years' continuous service in the Beginner department.

On Wednesday night of this week we are to have our first "church night," at which time the officers for the ensuing year are to be elected. At the morning service next Sunday these officers will be installed.

The semi-annual thank-offering program of the Woman's Auxiliary will be observed next Sunday evening. The thank-offering secretary is Miss Frances S. Cunningham, and she will be assisted in her program by Miss Nancy Clouse and other members of the auxiliary.

The Woman's Auxiliary met on Thursday at the home of Mrs. H. O. Charnock. In spite of the rain there were 11 members and two visitors present. The women have done wonderfully well this year. We have paid in full our pledge to the local budget and paid in full our pledge to High Point College, and lack only $7 on the pledge to N. C. budget; this we expect to pay in November. It is hoped that the thank-offering program to be held next Sunday will materially reduce the pledge to the World Service budget.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavors are staging a "tacky" party in the Sunday school room at the church Tuesday evening. This party is being planned by Miss Polly Gentry and Miss Betty Marlowe, two of our most faithful Intermediates.

There was a lot of excitement over Miss Nell Carter's report last Sunday; the amount of collection was $7, boosted by a contest between members of the Fawcett Bible class and the Frances Cunningham Philathea class. The Philatheas won by 5 cents; they also led in attendance this week. Mrs. Williams' boys galloped right by the Junior girls this week, and won in amount of collection in their depaprtment. The Young Men's class had four members present with a collection of 60 cents, which again gave them the largest per capita average.

We regret to report that Miss Eula Taylor is confined to her home with a severe cold, and that little Jack Carter is ill with pneumonia. We hope both of these members will soon be able to be out again. Mr. J. W. Boling is still improving, we understand, and we hope he will be able to worship with us again soon.

Not many of our members knew the late Rev. J. F. McCulloch, but we did know of his wonderful work and beautiful Christian life; so, we wish to join the other churches of this and the other conferences in extending our sincere sympathy to the members of his family. M. L. B.

Friendship, Fallston Charge.—The regular church services were held Sunday morning with the pastor using as his subject, "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." The offering for the morning showed that the envelopes were better used than at any time during the year. Forty-five dollars came through the envelopes, while the total of the entire offering was $155.35. One new member, Mrs. Warren Martin, was received by letter from Pleasant Grove Baptist church.

The following church officers were elected for the year: Sunday school superintendent, Gettys Bingham; assistant, Mrs. F. B. Toney; secretary, Ray Wilson; assistant, Wellington Lewis; treasurer, M. W. Wright; choir leader, C. A. Wright; assistant, Fields Toney; pianist, Mrs. Clem Martin; assistant, Miss Nathalie Lackey; stewards, R. A. Bingham, Johnnie Lewis, C. A .Baxter, C. R. Wright; class leaders, J. J. Hayes, Gettys Biugham, Mrs. W. A. Gantt, Mrs. D. L. Martin; church trustees, D. L. Martin, C. A. Wright, H. S. Grigg; parsonage trustees, Ernest Wright, R. L. Leonhardt, D. L. Martin; Herald reporter, Nathalie Lackey.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting last Sunday evening, 41 were present. Wellington Lewis was leader and Miss Edna Wright was chosen for the next one.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. R. A. Bingham, with Miss Eva Wright as leader. Plans were made to give the pageant, "The Fourth Generation," at next meeting, which will be at the church. They plan to invite the Knob Creek Auxiliary to meet with them at their thank-offering service.

Miss Mary E. Young, of High Point College, and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, of Mebane, attended the fifth Sunday rally and took part on the program. They brought with them Misses Cerelda Lackey and Vista Troxeller and guest, Miss Inez Ridge, students at the college, who spent the week-end at home.

Miss Doyle Martiu and Mr. Thelbert Wright, of Brevard College, spent the week-end with their parents. REPORTER.

Graham.—The fourth quarterly conference will convene on Tuesday evening at 7:30, October 30. A full attendance of the officials is desired.

A nominating committee for church officers has been appointed and it is expected that the election will take place next Sunday morning.

Last Sunday was set aside as "Silent Offering Sunday" and from the report of the treasurer the offering will amount to $60 or more. The board of stewards was responsible for this effort. P. B. Core is chairman of the board.

Attendance to both morning and night services has recently increased in number and interest. Due much, I think, to the added interest the members of the choir have taken in the musical part of the worship. Last Sunday evening Mrs. P. H. Amick and Mrs. J. D. Limens were in charge of this service for the Sunday evening service. Next Sunday evening Bro. P. B. Core and J. D. Foust will be in charge.

The pastor is very grateful to all those who manifested their kindness by word or deed during his recent illness. Such fellow-feeling helps to knit hearts closer together. It helped, I am sure, to speed up my recovery. J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Spring Valley Church, Vance Circuit.—We have not reported for some time, but we are still alive and at work. Our Sunday school has been moving along nicely this year, not as many attending as we would like to have, but we hope to gain the absent ones as the Sundays come. Last Sunday we held our special Rally Day program. A nice program was carried out.

Bro. Broom filled his regular appointment yesterday morning with a good congregation. He gave us a splendid sermon which was very helpful and enjoyed by all.

Another conference year has practically gone, and as we come to the close of it, we can look back and see some good things that we have done, although there are so many more that we could do if we would only give a little of our time to the Master, who gave us everything.

Regular election of the church officers for the coming year was held yesterday, as follows: Sunday school superintendent, C. B. Baskett; assistant, Mr. F. G. Hester; class leader, Mrs. H. B. Houghtaling; trustees, E. B. Wiggins, G. B. Harris, Leon Harris, R. E. Britt, Mrs. Lucy Baskett; stewards, C. B. Baskett, chairman, James Ball, George Bartholomew, and Miss Betsy Harris; pianist, Miss Blanche Hester; assistant, Mrs. Robert Wiggins; reporter, Mrs. M. H. Matthews. We are planning to hold an installation service for these new officers at our next service.

Rev. J. W. Braxton, our former pastor, held a ten days' revival for us recently. We were indeed glad to have him with us, and we can see some good results from his hard work while down here.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will meet Thursday night and we hope to have a large number present. Our society has been doing splendid work this year. We have gained some new members almost every month, and all of them are very active.

We have some on our sick list. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Guilford Charge.—There has not been a report from the pastor since the last two revivals. The meeting at Fairfield was the second week in September. Rev. D. R. Williams was the help, and he did his best. The results were not what we had hoped for; the church seems to be revived. Everyone enjoyed having Bro. D. R. and wife in their midst. The fourth Sunday at Mitchell Grove, Dr. Paul S. Kennett, from the High Point College, was with us and gave us two fine messages. Dr. J. D. Williams came on Monday night and was with us the rest of the week. He was fine. There were five converts; one joined the church.

The fourth quarterly conference of the charge will be held next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Hickory Grove. All official members are urged to be there. Dr. R. M. Andrews is to be with us.

The young people of Mitchell Grove Sunday school gave a Rally Day program last Sunday night which was fine. Mrs. Callie Billings and Miss Bessie Cashatt were the leaders in this splendid program.

This conference year is rapidly coming to a close, and I am trusting that this will be the greatest conference yet, and that God in His own way will lead every step that is taken.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
T. A. WILLIAMS.

Kannapolis.—We miss our pastor, Rev. C. P. Morris, very much, but the work of the church is going on very satisfactorily. The attendance has fallen off some, but there is still a great interest being taken and more hoped for. The pulpit is being filled from time to time by visiting ministers, and some splendid messages are being delivered.

We had the pleasure of having Rev. D. D. Nash October 21, who is an evangelist and singer of the Christian conference of the state of Virginia. He is a brother of our efficient reporter, Mrs. D. A. McLaurin. He brought a beautiful message on "The Figure 3." Rev. C. P. Morris in his work with us started devoting from five to ten minutes of the morning worship time to talk to the children, and since he went away we try to continue this, as we feel "our children of today will be men and women of tomorrow." So Mrs. W. T. Kiser made the talk on Sunday, October 21, in the form of a poem entitled "Little Sister and I." The C. E. S. is doing some fine work and study of some very deep subjects under the leadership of Miss Cartner. Bulletin service is still continued with materials and printing by the C. E. S.

We are very sorry to learn of Mrs. J. G. Lisk's recent illness. We hope and pray for her speedy recovery. We feel Mr. and Mrs. Lisk mean much to our church by their cooperation, help and prayer in the past, and trust they may prove more blessings in the future.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene at the church on Saturday, October 28, at which time Dr. R. M. Andrews is expected to be with us. All members of the church conference are urged to be present and any visitors are welcome. "A FRIEND."

Midway, Haw River Ct.—Midway people are rejoicing over the fact that our church will be dedicated next Sunday at 11 o'clock. This church was built some years ago (before the depression), and we have had a hard pull. But thanks be to our pastor, Bro. Trollinger, the members of the church, our neighbors and friends, the debt will be paid off by Sunday. There will be an all-day service, dinner on the grounds. Will invite all who can to come and rejoice with us.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at this place on the afternoon of November 6. Hope all official members can be present.

The conference year is coming to a close. Our pastor, Bro. Trollinger, has filled all his appointments with good sermons, and has been faithful in all his pastoral work. We hope, if it is the Lord's will, that he will be returned for another year.

We still have good attendance at Sunday school, but there are others who should attend. We wish to express our deep regret in the passing of our friend, Dr. McCulloch, and send to his loved ones our sympathy.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We greatly miss our pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, who has entered school in the seminary. But he made plans for his absence and the work is going very much as usual.

Last Sunday the regular appointment at 11 o'clock was filled by Mr. Lee Moser, a ministerial student. He is a member of Belmont church of this charge, and is an acquaintance of many of our people who were very appreciative of the fine sermon which he delivered in an excellent way. His Scripture lesson was Philippians 3:13-21. His subject was "The Upward Road." Showing that the upward road was not always an easy way, but there is a goal at the end toward which we are working, and our purpose in life should be in reaching this goal.

Our pianist, Miss Truth Iseley, furnished two special songs by a group of her music students from Alexander Wilson High school. We were glad to have them and welcome them again.

The first Sunday afternoon of this month, as previously announced, Rev. J. Clyde Auman was to have been with us, but having just had his tonsils removed he was unable to fill the place. Rev. E. L. Ballard, from Mebane, filled the appointment with an inspiring message. Mrs. Ballard worshiped with us also.

Thank-offering service was held the fifth Sunday of September at 7:30. The thank-offering secretary, Mrs. C. C. Holt, had charge of arranging for the program. Mrs. G. F. Holt, president of the auxiliary, conducted the devotional exercises. The speaker for the occasion was Rev. J. E. Carroll. Mr. Carroll made a splendid talk, using as his subject "Ye Are the Light of the World." It was strictly a thank-offering address and was enjoyed by a very large audience. We also had the privilege of meeting Mrs. Carroll, as this was Mr. Carroll's first visit back to our church since his marriage. We hope for them a happy, successful life. We also were glad to have several visitors with us for the service. The collection received amounted to $10.90.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Ben Neese, whose hearts were saddened by the death angel visiting their home last Friday and claiming their only child, Gladys Lee, age seven years. Mr. Mabry was called home to conduct the funeral services, which were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The house was filled to overflowing, which showed the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Neese are held in the community. Mrs. V. S. Garrett, day school teacher of Gladys, had charge of the many flowers, which were carried by her little schoolmates, friends, and cousins. "May God's richest blessing rest on the bereaved parents and relatives."

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold the regular monthly meeting Friday evening, October 26, at 7:30, at the home of the writer.

MRS. L. P. HOLT, Reporter.

Rockingham.—Our revival began here September 24 and closed September 30. Rev. E. A. Bingham did the preaching and did it well. Our people here like Bro. Bingham and he has a welcome here at Rockingham.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet with the Rockingham church on Thursday, November 1, at 2:30 p. m. It is hoped that all the officials will be present and as many church members as possible.

Bro. Ivens Dunn is the delegate for Rockingham charge this year.

The long-looked-for wall in front of the church here is about up and it adds much to the looks of the church and grounds.

On Thursday night, October 4, our people gave us a surprise in the way of a pounding. We thank them, and may God bless them.

Sister Lula Taylor, a member of this church, has been sick for three months or more; remember her in prayer.

We were sorry indeed to hear of our loss of Dr. J. F. McCulloch. A great and good man has gone from us. We shall miss him.

JAMES H. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

Brower's Chapel, Richland Circuit.—Although we have not been reporting much from our church, we haven't been dormant. We have furnished our church with new pews. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Rev. R. L. Hethcox gives us some excellent sermons on every fourth Sunday in each month.

Mrs. A. M. Ragsdale entertained the members of the Brower's Ladies' Aid Thursday at her home. Miss Effie had charge of the devotional, while Mrs. A. M. Ragsdale was program chairman. The meeting was opened with songs and Scripture reading. Many members had interesting readings which were read. After the readings the society organized for the coming year, electing officers as follows: President, Mrs. J. D. Cooper; vice presdent, Mrs. Talmage Bonkemeyer; secretary, Mrs. A. M. Ragsdale; treasurers, Mrs. Zelle Brown, Mrs. Walter Styres; program committee reporter, Miss Effie Brown. Roll was called by Mrs. C. R. Winningham, and 16 members responded. Collection was called for by the treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Winningham. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Zelle Brown on November 1. Mrs. D. E. Henley closed the meeting with prayer. Following the business session a social hour was enjoyed, the hostess serving refreshments with the assistance of Mrs. Earl Vestal and Miss Cleta May Ragsdale and Miss Nannie May Bonkemeyer.

EFFIE BROWER, Reporter.

Friendship, Haw River Charge.—Rev. J. L. Trollinger filled his regular appointment the third Sunday morning at 11:30 o'clock, choosing as his text the 21st verse of the 19th chapter of St. Matthew. This message was well received by a very attentive number. Church officials for the coming year were elected at this service.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society continue to have splendid attendance. On last Sunday night at Christian Endeavor Mr. A. Doyle Early discussed economic conditions of today; the society enjoyed the talk of Mr. Early.

The social and business meeting of the C. E. Society will be held at the home of Miss Josephine Hopkins Saturday night, October 27. All members are urged to be present.

On November 6 at 3 o'clock, quarterly conference will be held at Mispah church.

We have just one more preaching service before Annual Conference, the first Sunday in November. This is annual pay-up day and all members are asked to be present to help Friendship go to Annual Conference with the entire budget paid for the year.

We wish to take this time to express our deep regret in the passing of our beloved friend, Dr. McCulloch. REPORTER.

A DOUBLE WEDDING

A wedding of unusual interest was solemnized on October 14 at Friendship M. P. church at the close of the morning service when Miss Thelma Marie Lanier and Mr. Garland Bayard Snyder, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Walser and Mr. Henry Amos Snyder marched down to the altar and took the vows that united them in holy bonds of matrimony.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Ridge, pastor of the brides and bridegrooms.

These two young couples are members of prominent families of Friendship community, and they are held in high esteem by all who know them.

Amos Snyder is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. B. Snyder, of Lexington, Route 3. Mrs. Snyder is the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Walser.

Garland Snyder is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Snyder, of Route 3. Mrs. Snyder is the attractive daughter of the late W. C. Lanier and Mrs. Lanier, also of Route 3.

The many friends of these popular young people extend congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy life.

Yes, siree! There they are! Two new charges in my place of honor this week, namely, Charlotte and Henderson. Welcome, a thousand times welcome! I knew they could do it and I was expecting them to do it.

Now, pick up your last week's Herald and look at the names of the illustrious ones that sent in goodly sums of money. Of course we are grateful for all but I am going to take the ones that sent in more than one subscription. At the top of the list last week was that illustrious gentleman from Haw River charge by the name of J. L. Trollinger, who sent in $12.00. Next was Mrs. B. W. Little of Charlotte, a daughter of Randolph county, who sent in $7.80. This was followed by contributions of equal amounts by that ever alert Herald agent at Fountain Place, Mrs. J. W. Wright, and that sprightly young man from First Church, Winston-Salem, a member of the Herald Committee and one who is interested in all phases of the conference work, Rev. C. W. Bates. These were followed by contributions from that splendid young attorney, Jasper Hicks at Henderson; Rev. C. B. Way, a former newspaper man—a man who prepares as good copy for the Herald as anybody who writes; Rev. H. F. Fogleman, the wide-awake pastor at Fallston; Rev. J. R. Anderson, who is putting Albemarle on the map, and Mrs. C. B. Welch of Lebanon at High Point who has just been rolling the subscriptions in here for the last few weeks. Well, it's great to be associated with such folks. Thanks, a lot.

,Now look at the report for this week. I know it is going to be good, for the folks down at Whitaker's, in the district meeting last week and the preachers at the Greensboro Methodist Protestant minister's association on Monday were handing in the dollars. Keep it up and 'Say it with Subsidy."

What Shall We Report?

While the new management of the Herald has been holding forth only a few weeks, and may not be for many more weeks, as permanent officials will doubtless be elected by the Annual Conference, it seems wise to try to answer some of the questions of reporters, and especially the new ones, as to what we want them to write. Of course the temporary editor is not infallible, and at the same time he does not pose as an authority on the subject of good reports. But our idea of a good report is that it shall tell something worth-while about the work. But somebody might ask, "What is worth-while?" We think reports should tell enough to let people know what is going on and yet not tell enough to seem tedious. If your pastor preaches a good sermon and people are helped, it might help some to tell somebody else about it. But this is true: in trying to report the different things in his sermon, it will not be possible to make it mean the same to others as it did to the ones who heard it, for the personality of the preacher is absent in the printed page. Lengthy comments on the sermon and scripture readings might be omitted without real loss. As to the length of the report, you will have to be the judge. A good rule would be to say what there is to be said and stop. Reporters should not be offended if their reports should be condensed somewhat in the editor's office. Some times there is ample space for reports, and other times we are crowded. It is better to publish the report while it is fresh, even though some part must be omitted, than to hold it over until it is out of date.

So, reporters, give us the news, whatever you think will be helpful, and if we must trim it a little, then keep in a good frame of mind, and give us another good letter as you have something to write about.

Mrs. T. F. McCulloch Passes

Mrs. Eleanor Coe McCulloch, beloved wife of Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, died at her home yesterday afternoon. She had lived to be 81 years old and had been very active in all good work. The funeral will be held at Calvary Methodist Protestant Church, of which she was a charter member, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. She is survived by her husband and six daughters: Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Burlington, R. F. D.; Mrs. J. Frank Coble, and Misses Velna, Pearl, Mary Wills and Sara, all of Greensboro, and by one sister, Mrs. W. C. Kennett, widow of Rev. W. C. Kennett, also of Greensboro.

An obituary will appear later.

Looking in on a Methodist Conference

Last week it was the privilege of the editor of the Herald to look in several times on the Western N. C. Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held in Greensboro. Thinking that an outsider's view of things might be helpful, it has been decided to use this space this week to record some impressions.

One of the first things to impress us was the very high esteem in which Bishop Paul B. Kern, the presiding officer of the conference, was held. While the Bishop seems to possess the qualities that would make the men under him fall in love with him, it seems to an outsider that there was something more than the personality of the man that appealed to the men. Evidently there was a deep reverence for the office, which, added to the personality of the Bishop, made the men perfectly willing to fall in line with anything that the Bishop suggested. The Bishop had the happy faculty of bringing some pleasantry into the business of the conference which kept the men in a good frame of mind for transacting business. Two illustrations of this will be sufficient. It was explained by the chairman of a committee that one of the young men being admitted on trial had finished his college course except in Latin. The Bishop addressed the chairman of the committee and said, "Do you think it is possible for any man to succeed in this conference without a working knowledge of Latin?" The other incident took place while a young man who had been employed by the conference during part of the year stood up to give a brief report of his work. After the young man had spoken from the balcony of the building the Bishop looked up and said, "Young man, don't you know you ought not to begin to look down on us so early in life?"

While the Bishop was a pleasant man and kept the conference smiling, he did speak in no uncertain tones on the needs of the church today. This need as he sensed it was for spirituality. The Bishop told them plainly that well educated men and fine church buildings and an elaborate ritual would not save the world, but that the blood of Jesus Christ and vital Godliness were the world's only hope.

Another thing which impressed the outsider was the ease and swiftness with which they transacted business. There were no long addresses during the day sessions. When connectional men were recognized it was usually for six minutes. The regular addresses were made at the evening hour in the anniversary of the various boards of the church.

If union is to come to Methodism and if the Episcopacy is to be retained, it is to be devoutly wished by all Methodist Protestants that such Bishops as the one we saw presiding shall preside over all the conferences.

The Fraternal Messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina, Dr. F. W. Paschal, pastor of our First church at Burlington, spoke on Friday morning. There were several Methodist Protestant ministers in the audience while Dr. Paschal was speaking, and no one had cause for embarrassment. On the other hand, all had a feeling that we had made no mistake in electing our representative. Dr. Paschal's address was clear, concise, and to the point. On the union question he stated that he was not opposed to union if it were the will of God and for the glory of God. However, he stated that he had no patience with two ideas that were being advanced in favor of union. The first was concerned with numbers—the bigness of the united church. He reminded his hearers that God had not been dependent on numbers when He wanted to accomplish something. The second had to do with economy. Some people, he said, seemed to think they could get out of paying much to the church if we had union. The address by Dr. Paschal was graciously responded to by Bishop Kern. On the outside, there were many fine things said about our representative.

A beautiful and touching scene occurred on Sunday afternoon when quite a group of men were being ordained. Eight, we believe, were being ordained Deacons and a dozen or more were being ordained Elders. Space was reserved near the front for the men and their families. After Bishop McDowell, of Washington, D. C., had preached a timely sermon, the young men were asked to come and stand around the chancel. After they had all taken their places Bishop Kern said: "Now, if there is any mother of any of these men present today, I am asking that she come and stand at the right hand of her son." A few went forward. Then he asked the wives of the young men to come forward and stand immediately back of their husbands. Quite a goodly number went forward. The service was impressive and dignified, and the men who were being ordained must have realized the significance of such a service. While we cannot speak of all the things we saw and heard, we will say that it was worth a great deal to an outsider to look in on such an assemblage, and we hope to be able to visit another such meeting some time.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE IN MAY

Why do we hold our annual conference so late in the year? Did the custom not begin when most of our pastors were farmers and had to gather their crops before moving? At that time public schools were run in midsummer and in the dead of winter. Another thing was the waiting for the farmers to sell their produce and pay up church dues. Last, we fell into the custom and have not stopped to think that some other season would be better in many ways.

Why not meet in May? We generally have fine weather then. It is a better time for the hosts to entertain. It would not interfere with the school work of pastors' children, as moving could be done immediately after school closes. First of June would not be too late for the industrious ones to start a garden. Still more important, the marketing season of the farmers would be done in the middle of the conference year and eliminate that waiting till the very last of the year to pay out. What do you say? R. C. Stubbins.

KNOWING AND UTILIZING YOURSELF

By Luther K. Long

Do you know yourself up and down, fore and aft? Can you utilize, to the best advantage, all your powers and resources?

If you are acquainted with your powers and possibilities, if you understand all that enters into your makeup, if you can control and direct yourself toward good ends, you may do wonderful things for yourself and be of decided service to your day and generation.

Many people are charged with being double-faced. The fact is that most of us are many-faced. The truth of the matter lies much deeper than the face. According to modern psychologists, we have at least three selves. The late Mary Austin classifies them as follows: "The intuitive self, the deep-self, the immediate-self, these three distinctions are common to all men. Within any one of them there are still to be described and classified many subdivisions; but these three constitute the capital upon which the individual lives."

The old way, among psychologists, was to speak of but two selves—the conscious self and the subconscious self The conscious self is the self in possession of facts, knowledge, experiences, that are present to consciousness or that may be readily recalled. The subconscious self is the self that is beneath consciousness. The things held subconsciously are not lost, but may be brought up into consciousness and used to advantage. The ability to bring up the contents of the subconscious mind is a conspicuous natural gift with some persons. With most people it is a possibility that may be cultivated, profitably developed and used to advantage.

I like better Mrs. Austin's three-fold classification; though I am changing the order in which they are named, making it: The intuitive self, the immediate-self, and the deep-self.

The intuitive-self may be called the animal self, the natural-self, or the self that seeks its own wellbeing and the continuation of its kind without the use of conscious intelligence. The newly-born child instinctively seeks nourishment at its mother's breast. The processes of digesting and assimilating food go on intuitively. The elimination of waste, the action of the heart and lungs, the repair of cuts and scratches and breaks, all go on intuitively, though many times aided by bandages and medical remedies. Many of our actions, at first directed by the mind, eventually become habits and are performed intuitively. Many thoughts, ideas, principles, beliefs, dogmas and attitudes become accepted, settled, and the corresponding actions are performed without conscious reference to anything that has been thought of or taught in any recent time.

The immediate-self comprises all the experiences that come to the individual from the time of his birth up to the hour when the account is taken. All the senses are at work. Day and night, at home and everywhere, something is going on. In the loneliest places, and on the noisiest streets, the immediate-self is conscious of itself and is in contact with a wide range of intimate experiences.

But there is another important self, rich in its heritage and with great possibilties for enriching and strengthening our present and prospective thinking and living. This is the deep-self, sometimes spoken of as the deep-well. Here are stored up the experiences and hopes, the philosophies and aspirations, and the plans and ideals that have come down to us from our ancestors through all the ages.

We are familiar with the handing down of property from one generation to another. Houses and lands, wells and irrigating plants, improved varieties of fruits and grains, together with better machines and methods in agriculture and industry, are parts of our heritage. The members of a new generation live for a time almost entirely on the labors and accumulations of past generations. We are equally dependent on those who have gone before when it comes to our intellectual development. In school we study facts, ideas and philosophies from books, some of which were written many hundreds of years ago. The same thing is true with reference to our moral and spiritual ideals. We are in all things the heirs of the ages.

The art of printing has done tremendous service. Hasn't it also done some harm? Watches and clocks are an advantage. Are they also a disadvantage? Before writing and books came into common use, memory had to be tenacious and accurate. Before watches and clocks, men could determine the hour of the day by looking at the sun; and in dark and stormy days they could fairly well depend on an inner sense of time.

Modern psychology has come to the conclusion that it is possible for people generally to draw more largely on the deep-self, the deep-well, in which are stored the accumulated experiences and feelings and attitudes of past generations. All through the history of the race individual men and women have thus drawn from the past. They are recognized as geniuses. They and their achievements have been regarded not only as out of the ordinary, but also as inexplicable. There was no way of accounting for them. One was, or was not, a genius. A genius was born as such, was not made by any process of education or association, and that was thought to be the only account that could be given of such a person.

According to Mrs. Austin: "Genius is simply the capacity of the immediate-self to make free and unpremeditated use of racial material stored upon the deep-self, as well as of material acquired in the course of individual experience . . . . genius itself being an inborn capacity for utilizing racial experience in meeting immediate exigencies."

"On this basis," continues Mrs. Austin, "genius becomes the most natural thing in the world. Why should not man inherit accumulated capacity for telling stories, as well as accumulated capacity for digesting food? As a matter of fact, he does. The real wonder is not that one man should be a genius, but that every man should not be. Probably if we could get our minds away from the exclusive contemplation of preferred types of inheritance, we should discover that most men have genius of one sort or another. There can be a genius for chess-playing and for chemistry, for sex provocation and for trimming hats. I have a friend who has a genius for cooking. She has had no training and does not know the difference between calories and calomel, but shut her up in an ordinarily equipped kitchen with a totally unfamiliar article of food, and in the course of the morning she will have arrived at the one perfect way of cooking it. This is the way genius, in the presence of its predestined material, works."

We have recognized genius as being manifest chiefly in the field of literature, though the inventive genius has found later recognition, and workers in music, painting, and sculpture also have been given due praise. At the present time new areas have been added to the field of operation. Designers of auto bodies, entertainers, city planners, and such are candidates for honors. On distinctly lower planes are to be found favorites in the fields of false and suggestive radio advertising, pocket picking, bank robbing, and kidnapping.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

A Review

So far in this series of articles on Preaching, I have discussed five topics. Now, after the fashion of teachers, I suggest that we take a review. Let us, then, restate each of the themes I have treated and attempt to gather up and keep in mind whatever of value there was in the articles. I am eager that you learn these "lessons" and bring them to a point of familiarity in your practice. They may be summarized as follows:

1. A Definite Aim for Each Sermon. Locate some specific, vital question that is perplexing the hearts of the hearers and make the sermon answer it. It is good, although not absolutely necessary, to state the subject in the form of a question. If you want the sermon to feel indispensable, raise a question that just must be answered. One minister told me that he took my suggestion from this article when it appeared the first time in the Herald and preached on the subject, "What is the purpose of religion?" with most gratifying results. This, then, is certainly one of the secrets of effective preaching,—single out some live, modern religious problem and make the sermon answer it. Give the sermon something to do!

2. Something to Read. Here I recommended an article by Dr. Fosdick which appeared in the Harper's Magazine of July, 1928. It deals with the technique of preaching. Again I insist that you go to some school or college library or to some city library and spend an hour with this great article.

3. Starting the Sermon. Instead of spending too much time with the background or setting of the text, we suggested that the speaker begin the discourse by reference to some immediate, concrete situation. Avoid opening with long, abstract generalities which are out of the experience of most worshipers and hard to follow. Start with the near and the real and thus engage the natural interest of the hearers from the very beginning.

4. The Sermon's Tempo. Some sermons are too slow; some too fast. Others are of correct speed—"may their tribe increase!" It is especially important that the few opening sentences be calm and deliberative, with time enough between to allow the minds of the audience to get the full meaning of every word. As the sermon advances, more speed is in order. Learn to regulate the tempo so as to stress certain points that need emphasis. Avoid monotony. It is refreshing in the ears of the audience to show variation in tone and tempo. Sentences should have individuality and should be spoken in such a way that this individuality will be felt.

5. Closing the Sermon. In this article we mentioned three ways that have proved effective in closing the sermon. First, we recommended that a touching story be employed just as the sermon is ending. This method has the merit of definiteness, moral message, and feeling. Another method recommended was the use of a poem. Of course a story and poetry both may be used. The main point is that we end the discourse with a sense of finish and fine feeling. Finally, we urged the use of a well-worded paragraph or two to sum up the argument and bring a climax of choice words and sentiments. The closing of the sermon needs particular preparation no less than the opening, and must be marked by assurance, beauty, conviction, and fine feeling.

THEE HAS THE RIGHT ANGLE ON THINGS

Ministers sometimes get "knocks." That is all right. Knocks are necesary to wake them up, to correct their defects, and to lead them to do better work.

Ministers are sometimes handed compliments. That, too, is all right. Compliments strengthen the heart, call attention to one's qualities and achievements that may well be cultivated, and contribute to the joy and efficiency of one's ministry.

Among the compliments I have received, two stand out with special distinction as having been interestingly conceived and graciously delivered.

I was preaching on a Sunday morning in Plymouth Congregational church, Lansing, Michigan. I knew that Dr. C. H. Beal, a former pastor of Plymouth church, was that afternoon to preach the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the Michigan Agricultural College. After the service had started I noticed a group of three or four men coming in and being seated well back in the church. At that distance I did not recognize Dr. Beal. At the close of the service I apologized for not recognizing him and inviting him to share in the service.

"Oh. that is all right," he assured me. "I like to have a chance to sit unrecognized in a congregation and listen to another man preach. You know," he went on, "when a minister announces his text I give him my undivided attention for several minutes. If he makes a good job of it, I stay with him to the end. If he doesn't, I set to work making a sermon of my own on his text. I assure you that this morning I didn't do a thing toward making a sermon."

Recently I have spoken several times in a Quaker church here in Washington, the one Herbert Hoover attended when he was President. Among those who spoke kindly to me was a lady who remarked: "I was much interested in what thee said. I think thee has the right angle on things. I hope thee will come often, and speak."

She used the word "angle" in a discerning way. Much depends on the angle from which one views an incident, an accident, an undertaking, a situation, a problem. Much depends on the angle from which one approaches the solution of difficulties, the relief of distress, the training of the young, the reformation of society. If you can truly say that your minister approaches people and problems, conditions and prospects—as he takes them up in his sermons and in his work in the community—from the right angle, from the right slant, you have a compliment for him well worth delivering. You should hand it to him. LUTHER K. LONG.

OUR POOR DYING CHURCHES

A favorite theme of journals, religious and secular, and of a good many ministers and laymen, as well as non-church members, is the general worthlessness of the churches. Those of us who visit the churches, large and small, know that they fall short of the ideal, but there is another side. Statements made at the meeting of the National Committee for Religious Welfare Recovery the other day have an optimistic trend. Dr. Weber, editor of the Year Book of American Churches, said: "More than 30,000,000 Americans attend services in Protestant and Catholic churches and Jewish synagogues every week. The churches are gaining members at the rate of 750,000 a year. Church buildings have increased sevenfold in number in the last 75 years. The last census showed 232,154 houses of worship in the country, and church debts amount to only 11 per cent of the value of church property." Dr. Kieffer, president of the Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies, asserted that "approximately one-half of the population of the United States is definitely related to some church. While the population of the country increased twenty-two-fold between 1800 and 1934, the church membership in the same period increased eighty-fold." Another leader made this statement: "Religion is not dying. The churches of Protestant, Catholic and Jew are not losing their power to comfort and sustain and guide the people of America. It is not true that the strifes and hatreds and bitter hardships of these recent years have undermined the ancient faith."—Advance.

GOD OUR REFUGE

"When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knewest my path." Psalms 142:3.

These are days of overwhelmed spirits. Our path, wherever it may lie, is beset with difficulties. It is too much to say that our troubles are of God's planning. Our mistakes may have been made because we have not followed closely in the way to which He has pointed us. We may have forgotten to take Him as our Guide. We may have disregarded some of the plain sign-posts to be found in the Word. They have been caused by errors in judgment, though our motives and intentions were of the best. And He lets us pay for our mistakes,—no miracle is performed to save us from their natural results. But that does not mean that He does not love us. And in the day of the overwhelmed spirit, it is good to remember that He knows the path along which we are toiling so laboriously, and He knows where it will lead. Sometime we may be able to look down from some vantage-point, and as we view the path that we have traveled, we shall see how much better it would have been had we followed the plain path in which He would have had us go. But we shall see, too, that no matter how rough the path we chose, in the day of the overwhelmed spirit we were not forgotten, and that, eventually, we would reach the place where it would be light.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Randleman Charge, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, Pastor

I held the fourth quarterly conference at Mt. Lebanon church Tuesday night. There was a splendid attendance, about seventy people present. Special music was furnished by Level Cross and Worthville churches, which added much to the occasion.

The reports were good. There had been 85 professions and 39 accessions to the churches. Worthville had paid all claims except the College, and it was expected this would be paid. Salem had paid Church Extension, A. C. Expenses and A. C. Debt in full. Mt. Lebanon had paid A. C. budget; pastor's salary was not yet paid in full; it looked like it would be. There was strong sentiment for the return of the present pastor and the salary for next year was fixed same as this year.

West Thomasville Charge, Rev. H. W. Bell, Pastor

I held their fourth quarterly conference on Wednesday night. There was large attendance, and good interest was shown in the work of the church. This is one church which makes its reports properly written, and there were many of them. Every society even to the Cradle Roll reported money which had been raised and expended during the year. Pastor's salary was not quite up and there was little yet to be raised on College and World Service, but the pastor is expecting this to be in hand by conference. The people hold their pastor in high esteem, and would be glad to have him return for his sixth year.

State Street Charge, Rev. T. M. Johnson, Pastor

We held the fourth quarterly conference of this charge at Bethesda church Thursday night. There was a very good attendance from each church. Reports showed that good work had been done, especially by State Street church. About $1,400 had been raised and a gift of about $2,700 was to be received in the near future on the church debt. The officials of this church were rather optimistic about the outlook here. I understand that the pastor and other claims will be met here. The treasurer of the Board of Stewards of Bethesda church was absent and we were unable to learn how nearly out this church is on the claims or pastor's salary.

Shiloh Charge, Rev. C. E. Ridge, Pastor

I held the fourth quarterly conference of this charge at Friendship church. Greer's, Shiloh and Friendship churches were represented. The conference was characterized by a spirit of harmony. Shiloh church goes into Honor Roll A-plus and the other churches are expected to pay all claims before conference meets. The salary was increased by $100 for next year and the conference requested the return of the present pastor. Forty-six members have been received during the year, making the total membership 650. There are three unusually good church buildings on this charge, and many of the finest people in all our commonwealth in the membership. They have no parsonage.

Denton Charge, Rev. J. T. Bowman, Pastor

I held this quarterly conference Friday night at the Denton church. Three of the five churches were represented,—Denton, Canaan, and Piney Grove. Denton church expects to pay all claims, and possibly Canaan may pay A. C. claims and pastor's salary. Brother Bowman has been very busy, as is evidenced by his report of having made between 900 and 1,000 visits during the year. The work at Denton is doing unusualy well and bids fair to be able to stand alone as a station in a very short time. Salary was fixed the same as this year and the conference instructed for the return of the present pastor.

Guilford Charge, Rev. T. A. Williams, Pastor

I held this fourth quarterly conference Saturday afternoon. All churches were represented, the business expedited rapidly; good feeling of interest manifested. Pastor's salary for next year fixed same as present year as a minimum; the understanding is that if good conditions continue to improve it will be raised later. Fairfield has paid pastor in full, also annual conference claims, therefore goes on the honor roll. Hickory Grove expects to pay out this week. The other churches were not sure about paying out, but would do their best to do it. All churches, however, had all the annual conference claims except the assessment for College; so Mitchells and Vickery were just behind on this interest on the annual conference budget. There was a unanimous instruction for the return of the present pastor.

Kannapolis Church

I held this conference Saturday night. There was a full representation of the officials present; they have no pastor at this time. The reports showed that the church was about out on all claims, only lacks a part of the World Service to put it on the honor roll A-plus. It goes on the A. C. Honor Roll this week. This is a very active membership and they are now looking forward to a new church building; they are badly in need of it to house their Sunday school. They will be looking for a pastor when the annual conference meets.

Greer's Chapel and Friendship Churches, Shiloh Charge, Rev. C. E. Ridge, Pastor

I visited these churches Sunday. We have an active little group at Greer's and a very good future for a large community church. There is a splendid church building with five Sunday schools and a very good auditorium that will house their congregations for the next decade, possibly. The congregation is sympathetic and easy to preach to. They paid their pastor in full at the close of the service, and only lacks a small amount of paying out all the annual conference claims. This church did something that most any of our rural churches can do. It planted a patch of cotton, between three and four acres, which has yielded hich returns and by which they have been able to pay pastor and claims which it might have been most difficult to do had there been no cotton patch.

We visited Friendship in the afternoon. They have a good church building here, well arranged, brick veneer, and an easy auditorium to speak in. The church here lacks only three or four dollars of paying up Pastor Ridge. It is fine for a group of churches to pay their pastor up two or three weeks before conference meets. It makes everybody feel better. We are expecting Friendship to go on the annual conference honor roll by the end of this week.

Honor Rolls

Those churches which have met all requirements by the church—paid W. S. budget, A. C. budget, Herald Subsidy, Herald subscription quota: First church, Lexington; Shiloh church, Shiloh charge.

Those churches which have met A. C. claims in full: Gibsonville: Siler City; Union Grove, Orange charge; Pensacola church; Calvary church; Kannapolis church; Fairfield church, Guilford charge.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW'S EXPERIENCE WITH TOBACCO

The late Chauncey M. Depew, who lived to the age of 93, and who was daily found at his office until a few months before his death, in his 93rd year, told why he gave up smoking a half century before. When a young man, he labored under the delusion that smoking steadied his nerves, and made them more dependable. He finally made the discovery that he had been under a deception. But here are his own words:

"I used to smoke twenty cigars a day, and continued at it until I became worn out. I did not know what was the matter with me; and physicians to whom I applied did not mention tobacco. I was in the habit of smoking at my desk, and thought I derived material assistance in my work from it. After a time I found I could not do any work without tobacco. My power of concentration was greatly weakened, and I could not think well without a lighted cigar in my mouth.

"One day I bought a cigar, and was puffing it with the feeling of pleasure that is possible only to the devotee. I smoked only a few minutes, and then took it out of my mouth and looked at it. I said to it, 'My friend and bosom companion, you have been dearer to me than gold. To you I have ever been devoted, yet you are the cause of all my ills. You have played me false. The time has come when we must part.'

"I gazed sadly and longingly at the cigar, then threw it into the street. I had been convinced that tobacco was ruining me. I have never smoked from that day to this." This renunciation was not, however, without a struggle. He says, "For three months thereafter I underwent the most awful agony. I never expect to suffer more in this world or the next. I didn't go to any physician or endeavor in any way to palliate my sufferings. Possibly a physician might have given me something to soften the torture. Neither did I break my vow. I had made up my mind that I must forever abandon tobacco or I would be ruined by it.

"At the end of three months my longing for it abated. I gained twenty-five pounds in weight. I slept well for seven or eight hours every night. I have never smoked from that day to this; and while no one knows better than I the pleasures to be derived from tobacco, I am still well content to forget them, knowing their effect."—The Cigarette as a Physician Sees It.

DO WE COUNT OUR BLESSINGS?

Do we count our blessings, day by day?
Do we name them one by one—
Blessings bestowed from early morn
'Til the going down of the sun?

Do we count the blessings of rest and sleep;
To be free from every pain?
Do we spend the strength God gives each day
To the honor of His name?

Do we count the blessing of active limbs;
The gift of hearing and sight;
For sane, right minds and intellect
To judge the wrong from right?

Do we count the blessings of quiet homes,
Where love and happiness reign,
Where oft we hear sweet songs of praise
To our dear Redeemer's name?

Do we count the blessing of daily bread;
The many comforts we share?
Have we learned to cast our every care
On Him who will answer prayer?

Do we count the blessing of being born
In a free and Gospel land,
Where we can worship the Lord our God,
And serve at His command?

Oh! may we count our blessings each day,
And name them one by one—
But the greatest blessing God has given
Is the gift of His dear Son.

OUR STORY PAGE

NEIGHBORS

"Oh, Miss Edgerton!" Tommy was in such a hurry to tell the news that he ran half a block to catch up with the teacher as she entered the school yard, and then was so out of breath he could not do anything but sputter for a minute.

"What is the matter?" asked Miss Edgerton, and she waited until Tommy calmed down.

"Denny Collins broke his leg!" cried Tommy. "He got knocked down by a car yesterday, and they put his leg in a cast, and he has to stay on a couch maybe three weeks!"

"Oh, poor Denny!" exclaimed Miss Edgerton, while the other children added what they had heard to Tommy's story.

"He got bumped and scratched, but not much," said John.

"He'll have to stay all by himself, because his mother's away till five o'clock," put in Annabel.

"He won't have a chance to get the prize, will he, Miss Edgerton?" asked Peter Lowe.

"No, I'm afraid not," Miss Edgerton answered. "It's too bad, for Denny's worked awfully hard. He and you, Peter, and Lucy have stood the highest, so far."

Peter looked at Lucy, and Lucy looked at Peter. But they said nothnig to each other. Both wanted the prize as much as Denny did. It was a year's subscription to the very best magazine for boys and girls, to be given to the one who should make the highest grade for the term in arithmetic. Peter and Lucy were about even then, and Denny was just a bit ahead of them. But if Denny had to miss three weeks——.

"I know I could get it," said Peter to himself; and "I know I could get it," said Lucy to herself. But neither said anything to the other. Peter couldn't keep from thinking, however, about how dreadful it would be to have to stay on a couch or in a chair for three weeks, mostly by yourself, and miss the prize ,too. And Lucy remembered how her arm had hurt the time she fell out of the hammock and broke it. "And I'd just hate not to have even a chance to win!" she thought.

"Peter," said Miss Edgerton in the afternoon, "will you gather up all Denny's books and things? I'm going to ask you to take them to him. Maybe he can study some at home."

"Yes, Ma'am," said Peter, "I'll be glad to." When he had strapped them all together neatly he went to Miss Edgerton's desk. "May I speak to Lucy a minute?" he asked. Miss Edgerton said "Yes." Peter went back to his seat after whispering with Lucy, looking as if something very important indeed had been decided.

After school Miss Edgerton found Peter and Lucy waiting to speak to her, plainly eager and excited about something.

"Miss Edgerton," began Peter, we're going to take Denny's lessons to him every day and help him, you know, so maybe—we thought——"

"If we can explain everything, Miss Edgerton, just like you do, and he works all the problems himself and sends them in to you, we thought maybe he'd have a chance for the prize, anyway," said Lucy.

Miss Edgerton looked amazed. "Of course he would," she said, "but you two—it would lessen your chances, you know. No one else is near you."

"That's all right," Peter declared hastily. "We want him to have a fair chance, and if he wins, why——"

"We'll be glad," said Lucy. "We haven't any broken legs, you see, and Denny's worked so hard he deserves the prize."

"Then that's fine," said Miss Edgerton. "That's a really neighborly thing to do."

How did it turn out? Well, Denny, Peter and Lucy all worked as hard as they could, fair and square, and Denny did win the prize. They had become such good friends over the lessens that the magazine was passed from one to the other each month, and Miss Edgerton said, "It seems to me that you all won the prize."—The Southern Churchman.

WHAT SAMMY FOUND

Sammy was all smiles as he walked down the road.

"Find something?" asked Mr. Crusty.

"Sure," said Sammy, and he walked on smiling.

Old Mr. Cursty said, "I never trusted that boy, and you may be sure he has found somebody's purse with $500 in it, and he won't let anybody know."

Mrs. Lovejoy, who saw Sammy's smile and heard Mr. Crusty's remark, said, "It does me good to see a boy with a smile like that. There are too many folk going around with a grouch."

But Mr. Crusty did not like Sammy's smile. He thought there was something wrong about it. And so when he came to a policeman, he said, "Officer, I am sure there is something wrong. I think you ought to get hold of that boy who has just gone down the street. I think he has picked up a purse that does not belong to him and he won't give it back."

The policeman walked with long strides down the road and soon came up to Sammy and said to him, "I understand you have found something and I want to hear about it."

"Sure," said Sammy, "I'll gladly tell you. I found that I was a sinner and I found that Jesus came to save sinners, and I have let Him save my poor lost soul. I have found Jesus, and Jesus has found me. And He has given me a joy that makes me happy all the time."

The policeman let him go, and Sammy went down the road still smiling. And when Mrs. Loveloy and Mr. Crusty saw him the next morning he was smliing yet.

"Yes, sir," he said to Mr. Custy as they passed, "I found it a good thing to serve Jesus, and I have made up my mind to serve Him as long as I live." And as Sammy walked on he was still smiling.—Author Unknown.

NOT VERY GLAD

"I was glad when they said . . . Let us go unto the house of Jehovah." (Ps. 122:1.) A little girl went to church one Sunday morning, but her parents stayed at home because they were tired. When the little one returned the father asked, "What did ou pastor preach on this morning, dear?" "I don't remember all," said the child, "but I think his text was, 'Many were cold, and a few were frozen.' "—The Sunday School Chronicle.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TABERNACLE LADIES' AUXILIARY

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, after the business meeting, a three-act play entitled "The Fourth Generation" was given. The cast was as follows: Mrs. Launing, a gentlewoman of 65 or 70 whose heart is young and mind alert, Kate Smith; Mrs. Ayers, her daughter, a charming mother with an inquiring mind, Virginia Curry; Betty Ayers, a third generation Christian, beautiful and lovely, Ruth Smith; Bob Ayers, her twin brother (they go through college together), R. L. Jones, Jr.; Mr. Charles Ayers, the father who helps to keep religion alive in his home, Ivey Causey; Phillip Bancroft, who studies in Europe, Joseph Hardin; Barbara Jean, a precious little girl of five, the fourth generation, Johusie Curry.

Act I—In the living room of the Ayers home. They talk it over.

Act II—Same room, slightly changed, three years later. Off to college.

Act III—Eight years later. It's Christmas morning.

After the play the thank-offering was received. Candles were lighted as the offering by circles was brought to the front. Afterwards a plate offering was received.

EETING OF WOMAN'S AUXILIARIES, FIRST DISTRICT

n Thursday, October 18, at 10:30 a. m., he Woman's Auxiliaries of the First District met in Whitakers Church with Mrs. R. M. Robinson, district chairman, presiding. Rev. E. O. Peeler, of Enfield, conducted the morning devotional, our subject for the day being, "Launch Out Into the Deep."

Mrs. Mamie Braswell gave us a most hearty welcome, with the response from Miss Blanche Hardee.

After the routine of business we were indeed fortunate in having Dr. Pritchard review the study book.

A most bountiful lunch was spread in a grove near the church and how we enjoyed that delicious hot coffee provided by the Whitakers Auxiliary.

Brother Joyner, of Greenville Charge, conducted the devotional for the afternoon. We were indeed glad to have Mrs. Nicholson and Mrs. Pritchard speak to us at this time. Their talks were quite encouraging.

The nominating committees' report was read at this time with a unanimous vote to accept it as read. As a result the following officers were elected:

Mrs. R. M. Robinson, district chairman; Mrs. Eli Bellamy, first vice-president; Miss Winnie Burt, second vice-president; Mrs. C. N. Davenport, third vice-president; Mrs. Z. A. Hardee, secretary; Miss Blanche Hardee, Secretary of Literature.

We are proud of our district chairman and feel she is doing a great work, and we want to give her our support in every way possible.

MRS. Z. A. HARDEE, Sec'y.

YOUTH PRAYED

"Oh God," I cried, "I cannot hear
The pathway leading up to Thee.
The doubts of youth have hid the way
As blackest night obscures the day.
God send a spark of faith so true
That it will light the path to you."

"Oh God," I cannot hear
Thy voice that is to some so clear.
The jeers of men have rocked my soul
As ships in dangerous oceans roll.
God, speak to me from sea or land
And give me faith to understand."

'Oh God," I cried, "I cannot feel
Thy presence and Thy care are real.
The years of life I glimpse ahead
As hearts that beat when love is dead.
God, give me just one sign, that I
May know, through faith, that Thou art nigh."

And then, it seemed, from out the night
Of doubt there shown a path of light,
Where stood the Youth of Galilee.
I felt His presence near to me.
I heard Him speaking low and sweet,
And bowed in worship at His feet.

"I am the Way, the Truth," the voice
Said, "Trust. Make Me thy choice.
I am the living Christ, the sign
That God has given for all time."
With faith I closed my eyes in prayer,
I knew youth found its answer there.

FROM PINE RIDGE BOOSTER

In 1919 Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Woodford came to Pine Ridge to build a great work upon the foundation so well laid by Mrs. M. O. Everett. For 15 years they gave of their best to this work. Some of the marvelous things accomplished here are in themselves evidence that God had his man where He wanted him. So oft did he say, "We felt God led us to Pine Ridge." Early in 1934 Dr. Woodford tendered his resignation to the Board of Missions to become effective in May.

And again we heard him say, in all assurance and faith, "We feel God is leading us in leaving Pine Ridge."

At their annual meeting May 17, 1934, this board elected Rev. G. W. Andrew to succeed Dr. Woodford as superintendent of Alvan Drew School. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew came to Pine Ridge in 1922 and for seven of those 12 years have been on the faculty of A. D. S.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. J. E. Diviney, Calvary, Greeusboro, one coat; Mrs. John A. Howard, Great Falls, S. C., 4 coats, 1 dress, 1 cape, and 2 pairs bedroom slippers for girls; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gibson, High Point, N. C., 1 coat, 4 pairs pants and a jumper jacket for boys; Tacoma Park, Md., a box of clothing, games and jigsaw puzzles.

We are grateful for these gifts to aid in the work here. We are also thankful for the good Harvest Home offerings which are on the way.

Clothing for Boys and Coats for Girls

Our boys are still standing in need of clothing. Note above another gift of $10 for boys' clothing. Many of you are going to help. Why not now? Any clothing for boys in your home which can be spared might be bundled up and sent to us by parcel post. It will give comfort here and will be greatly appreciated. We have tried to provide winter coats for our girls every winter since we have been here. How we are to do it this time we cannot tell. The prices on even the cheapest new coats are beyond us. We are getting some in boxes from the people. Please send any good coat you can spare for a girl. It will give service and we will thank you.

Octagon Coupons

We are so frequently asked, Can you still use the coupons? Yes, please keep them coming, just as long as we are here and the Colgate people will redeem them. We hope our people will keep gathering and sending to us these coupons. They help.

Money for the Home

There are just two more Sundays between now and conference. These happen to be the first and second Sundays. The very two Sundays on which the most of our Sunday schools take their monthly offerings for the Home. Make the offerings as large as you

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Midway, Haw River Charge.—The membership and congregation of Midway Church, on Haw River Charge, saw the payment of all outstanding indebtedness against the church building last Sunday morning, and stood with bowed heads and hearts overflowing with happiness, while Dr. A. G. Dixon dedicated the building, following a wonderfully fine sermon by Dr. P. S. Kennett.

We began our pastorate six years ago this November, finding an indebtedness of $2,750 against this beautiful new brick structure which had just been erected at an approximate cost of $9,000. The people saw before them impending clouds, which later proved to be curtailed income. Some of them had apparently gone their limit, others have given some, while others had been unable to help. On that cold second Sunday in November six years ago things did not appear encouraging at Midway.

During the next five years, with all working together, we kept the interest paid, and reduced the principal even during trying years of depression. At the close of the fiscal year 1933 we had paid $1,450 principal and interest, and paid more during the current year. A new day seemed to be dawning for the tobacco farmer, with prices better than for a decade, and our leaders decided the time had come to remove the indebtedness.

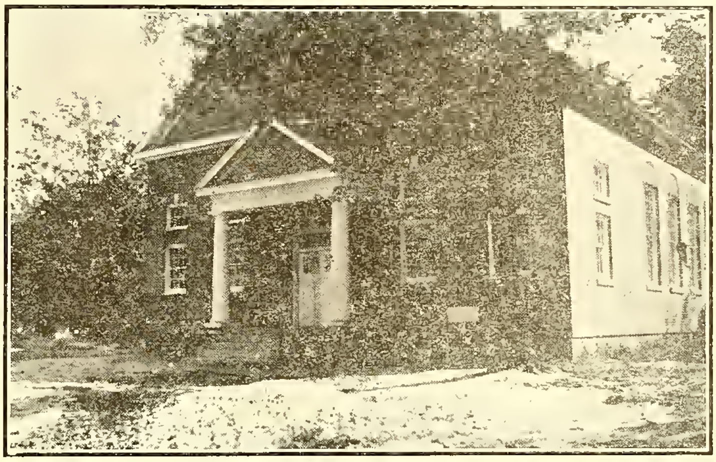
Sunday morning, October 12, we owed $1,857 principal and interest. After the regular worship service, instead of a sermon, we entered into the business of clearing our indebtedness. In exactly 19½ minutes I saw $1,200 placed on the altar of that little country church. During the two weeks following, pastor, members and friends worked towards one common goal, and we won. Last Sunday with the entire burden removed, and no need for a public appeal on the greatest of all days, a happier congregation never gathered in Midway church than came that day.

Since we can not call all names, we call none, for everybody worked, helping to see this thing through. Names for many years familiar to former pastors, others whose names are unknown to these brethren, but familiar and sacred to this pastor—the Heavenly Father knows all, and that is sufficient.

It is safe to say that no congregation or community was more co-operative in such a task than those people in and around Midway. The city folk, influenced by our people doing business with them, rallied to our side. Four denominations besides our own, Presbyterians, Methodist Episcopal and Primitive Baptist worked with us to a common goal, and all sat together in that dedication service last Sunday. Surely a new day of tolerance and co-operation has dawned among the church people of that part of Rockingham county.

Mr. John Dixon, late father of Dr. A. G. Dixon, organized a little Sunday school in the old log schoolhouse, and here Midway church was born, and out of Midway church came Arminius Gray Dixon, to preach in the North Carolina Conference; to direct the denominational program for young people; to serve as president of his conference for five years, and now to give his life for the orphaned and underprivileged child in and through our church. It was most fitting that this beloved and respected son of the church should perform the rites of dedication.

When the second building was needed, and its erection started, Rev. W. F. Kennett was pastor, and since he was not physically able to attend the services last Sunday, it was likewise fitting that his son, Rev. Paul S. Kennett, professor of history at High Point College, should preach the dedicatory sermon.



Midway Church, Haw River Charge

Last, but by no means the least, there sat with us last Sunday the only surviving charter member of the church, Brother Rufus A. Carroll, who will be 90 years of age next January. His presence is always an inspiration to this pastor, but last Sunday that presence was not only an inspiration; it was also a challenge. God grant that we who are younger and stronger shall gladly accept and carry on the burdens Brother Carroll must soon lay down.

In the membership and congregation here are outstanding young people, from whom the Methodist Protestant church will hear more in the days to come. Those valient souls of other days who gave us Midway are living in a better world removed from our sight, but their spirit is living and marching steadfastly on in the lives of sons and daughters of a second and third generation. And as long as that spirit lives, Midway's future is bright and promising.

J. L. TROLLINGER.

First Church, Burlington.—Not having seen a report from our church in some time, and thinking perhaps our newly elected reporter may not yet be ready to take up the work, the writer feels inclined to give a few items of news from Burlington that may show that while we have been silent, we have not been altogether idle.

First church is closing one of its best years. Attendance at the services has been good, finances are in excellent shape, and we have had a gracious revival, with 25 or 30 accessions to the church.

Rev. Frank Shafer, of Morgantown, W. Va., was the help in our meeting, which was held some weeks ago, and he brought unusually fine messages full of gospel truths, and greatly endeared himself to our people. Mrs. Shafer was also with him and she, too, was of much help in the meeting. There were more than 100 professions and reconsecrations, and the church was greatly revived and strengthened.

Our fourth quarterly conference, held on October 10, transacted the usual business, and found that we were practically "paid up" on all claims for the year. We expect this year to have all money in hand to meet every obligation by October 31, something we have not done for a number of years, and thus be ready for conference in this respect two weeks before its meeting. Pastor's salary for the next year was fixed at the same amount as for the past year, namely, $2,000.

A membership meeting was held in the hut on Wednesday evening, October 24, at which time more than 150 sat down to an excellent meal prepared and served by the ladies of the church, after which several matters of business were transacted. By unanimous vote of those present, our delegate, L. A. Braxton, was instructed to ask for the return of Dr. Paschall, who has served so acceptably for the past four years. The trustees, together with a special committee of three, were instructed to investigate the matter of repairs to our building.

Officers for the new year were nominated by a special committee named for the purpose, and reported at the membership meeting. The new officials were installed at the morning service yesterday, prior to which the pastor brought a message especially for the occasion. It was good to see so large a number present to take up the responsibility which had been assigned them. A list of all the officials would take too much space, but several changes were made and quite a number of new folks were given something definite to do. Mr. W. E. Smith was made chairman of the Board of Stewards, and those who know Mr. Smith's ability at this kind of work are sure that he will handle the job in a fine way. Mr. H. W. Wade, the new Sunday school superintendent, is also well qualified for his job, and is already busy making plans for a great year in Sunday school work. Miss Eula Wheeler is the new reporter for the Herald, and is also one who can well handle her job. Space forbids mention of the many others who can, I feel sure, do well with the work committed to them.

On Herald subscriptions this year we have failed to reach the number allotted to our church. We regret this, but it is now too late to remedy it. First church should boast of 100 or more Heralds coming to our members, and we trust that in the new year we shall at least reach the number given to us, and thus get our church into Dr. Pritchard's "raving" Honor Roll.

May we press forward to a still greater year in every way in 1935. A MEMBER.

* * *

Flat Rock Charge.—Our services were attended by the usual number of members and visitors last Sunday. In the morning we were at Flat Rock church. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed for the fourth time this year, meeting the requirement of our church law. The members present participated in the service, including the young boys and girls, the latter in a group. The pastor was asked to secure from members present $33 needed to pay interest on a note of the church, and $23.50 was contributed in a few minutes.

At 3 o'clock we were at Bethany church for the last service there for this conference year. We had some members present for the service who had not been at any previous service this year, owing to distance of their homes from the church. One member present resides in Virginia. The election of church officers was held and the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered for the fourth time this year. The church register was revised, according to the discipline.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at Gideon's Grove church Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to announcement. Representatives were present from all five churches. The business of the conference was transacted in a fine spirit of harmony and progress. The pastor reported 522 pastoral visits during the year; 41 additions; 55 professions; 23 subscriptions secured for the Herald; $82 in special offerings for help in revival meetings; approximately $75 paid on items of the Annual Conference Budget; three churches paid salary in full. Bro. W. E. Johnson, of Flat Rock church, was elected alternate delegate to the Annual Conference. The conference voted unanimously to instruct the delegate, Bro. H. H. Wilson, of Gideon's Grove church, to ask for the return of the pastor for another year. The conference also voted unanimously to fix the salary for next year at $1,100, which is an increase of $100. Sunday school superintendents made good reports of the Sunday schools, with satisfactory work being done. Bethany church reported the organization of a Sunday school during the summer months. The next conference will meet at Flat Rock church in January.

Professor Nance, of Mayodan, is conducting a singing school at Gideon's Grove church, and a class of about 50 persons meets at the church each Monday night for instruction and practice.

The pastor and family have been remembered constantly by members of the different churches with suitable gifts for our dining table. We are very appreciative of all the gifts which have been made and desire to express our thanks to each one. Those making gifts are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Friddle, Mr. and Mrs. Hassel Angel, Mrs. A. C. Swain, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. George Thacker, R. C. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Humphreys, W. E. Norman, Mr and Mrs. D. A. Walker, Mrs. J. W. Flynt and Mrs. J. A. Eller, the last two being neighbors and not members of our church. We appreciate the gift of money, $1 each, from the following: Honston Landreth, J. C. Tucker, Mrs. Archie Lemmons and W. E. Norman.

We are expecting much activity to be manifested among the people here and elsewhere during the remaining two Sundays before the Annual Conference. There are two more appointments for Gideon's Grove church and one more appointment each at Bethel and Flat Rock churches before the Annual Conference meets. Our appointments for next Sunday will be at Bethel church at 11 a. m. and Gideon's Grove church at 3 p. m.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Liberty, Davidson Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, filled his regular appointment the past third Sunday, and also the fourth Sunday. He delivered a really interesting sermon as he always does but improves every time. His subject was "True Conscience as a Guide." Text was Acts 24:16. The attendance was right good. Officers were elected for the coming new year's work, principally the old board of officers. I think the membership of this church will be able to pay up the preacher's salary in full before conference begins. We are very grateful.

We all, I think, appreciate Mr. Bingham as our pastor. Hope to have him back for the new year's work, but submit to God's will. On Saturday before the first Sunday in November, at 2 p. m., 4th quarterly meeting will be held at Chapel Hill.

The Sunday school at this church is doing fine at this time. We extend an invitation to all who wish to attend church service.

Bethesda, State St., Yadkin College.—Last Sunday was a great day for Bethesda. It had been announced four weeks ago as Joash Day. The stewards and members took it seriously, named $200 as a goal, and worked to that end, distributing "Joash" envelopes, talking it up, collecting. When the time arrived to make the deposits, someone suggested the Joash box (made for the purppose of veneer material from a furniture factory and stained) looked like a ballot box. So we played-like we were voting, grown folks, young folks, little folks. No definite statement was made as to just what we were voting for, but presumably it was to pay all claims for the year, for eager inquiry was made as to amount of Annual Conference claims and World Service claims yet unpaid.

When the money was told (as Joash and Jehoida called it, we call it counted), it was found to be $179.07. "Didn't reach the goal," you say. Just wait till you hear from us again. We have a good running start and we haven't stopped.

Officers for the coming year were elected and installed.

The conference drama, Annual Conference expenses, church extension, Children's Home, etc., was presented in a splendid way.

The Bethesda Auxiliary reported to the Quarterly Conference about $20 received from the Lord's Acre hens, and some yet to come in. About $70 have been sent to the general treasurer and $50 paid to tap the power line to get current to light the church. Also the jars for the Children's Home have been filled. It has been decided to meet at the church at 2 p. m. Thanksgiving Day, bringing the jars and such produce as the people feel they can donate to the Home. They are still working on the penny-a-year-of-your-age for the Home.

State Street Auxiliary reported for the year to the Quarterly Conference $307 raiesd by suppers, $113 from other sales, $420 in all.

State Street Christian Endeavor Society elected and installed officers last Sunday evening. Thirteen of the members reported at a recent meeting 566 chapters in the Bible read during a period of eight weeks. Sunday evening, the 21st, a joint meeting between the Junior and Young People's Societies was held, promoting some from the Junior society to the other.

The last preaching service for the year at Yadkin College was on the afternoon of Sunday, the 21st. The members have made contribution to Children's Home, Annual Conference claims including superannuates, and to World Service. They have also contributed liberally, considering their number, to pastor's salary. T. M. JOHNSON.

Whitaker's Church.—The third Sunday night in September the Auxiliary of our church observed the thank-offering service with an appropriate program, which took the place of our monthly devotional meeting, using lighted candles to show the power of unity in an undertaking—just one doing very little but many together doing a great deal. On the 18th of October we had the meeting of the first district with us, which was a very good meeting in attendance and interest; had several of our state officials with us. Those meetings mean so much to us who attend. We are sorry we could not have our much-loved president, Mrs. Hammer, with us. We are enjoying the improved condition of our church since we have our new carpet and choir loft drapery in place. Monday night, October 16, we had our fourth quarterly conference with the Enfield church—good attendance, a fine spirit, and financial part good up to date, pastor's salary overpaid.

Friday night of the past week we had a silver offering and an antique and modern display of quilts, bedspreads and a variety of handwork which was enjoyed right much by those present; but as usual not many took advantage of the opportunity afforded.

We join with others in the sorrow over the loss of our loved editor, who has meant so much to our church in the state and elsewhere. Our sincere sympathy to his dear ones left behind. REPORTER.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference of Anderson charge was held at Fairview church last Saturday afternoon. After the business session, the ladies of Fairview served a bountiful supper.

The doors of the church here will be opened for membership second Sunday.

The Primary class is a busy little class and are doing splendid work. Although they are small in number and age, they are second now in raising means for Sunday school rooms. The Willing Workers class is first. In our last report, in stating the names of the teachers of the classes, the Willing Workers class, for local reasons, had not elected their teacher. Since then they have done so and their teacher is Miss Lottie Harrison; assistant, Miss Romaine Poole.

The funeral and burial of Mr. Sherbet, who was killed in an automobile accident, was a sad scene here third Sunday afternoon. We deeply sympathize with the family in their sorrow.

The Christian Endeavor met Sunday night for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. Service was opened by Scripture and song. Miss Lottie Harrison was appointed chairman, and the officers elected are: President, Miss Hortense Foster; vice president, Miss Lottie Harrison; secretary, Eddie Waddell; assistant, Marehant Davis; treasurer, Miss Kate Poole; pianist, Miss Lucille Davis; assistant, Miss Kate Poole; song leader, Mack Compton; assistant, Marchant Davis; Junior superintendent, Miss Romaine Poole; assistant, Mrs. J. K. Poole; Junior secretary, Miles Compton; assistant, Jerome Harrison.

May we be remembered in your prayers.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—Bro. Grant delivered a very inspiring sermon the fourth Sunday on "Co-operation," his text being taken from the fifth chapter of Nehemiah.

A very interesting program on Rally Day was given last Sunday by the children and young people.

The Woman's Auxiliary has finished paying for the piano they bought on credit about a year ago. The auxiliary is doing a great work.

We are planning to pay the pastor's salary in full in a few days. We are hoping to pay all our claims to the conference before the conference year is over. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—We are still pressing on, trying to wind up a successful year. New officers have been elected and installed at each church. One more appointment at each church will wind up the work for this conference year.

We are expecting Dr. Andrews to be with us next Saturday at Hebron to hold the last quarterly conference.

May God's blessings be upon our Annual Conference. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Mt. Hermon Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference of this charge will be held November 9 at 7:30 p. m. at Cedar Cliff church. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the conference, will preside at this meeting. All church officers are urged to be present and read their reports to the conference.

Since September 24 I have been in Westminster, Md., as a student in the seminary. The work is a great pleasure here. I expect to return to North Carolina this coming Friday to finish up the year's work with the good people of the Mt. Hermon charge. We have regretted to leave these people very much. They have been so good to us and have co-operated in a very fine way in the things we offered while there.

The first Sunday at 11 a. m. I will meet the regular appointment at Friendship; at 3 p. m. at Mt. Hermon. On the second Sunday at 11 a. m., Cedar Cliff; at 7:30. Belmont.

Our hearts were made sad on last Sunday as we returned to Mt. Hermon church to conduct the funeral of little Gladys Neese, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Neese. Her death was a great shock to her parents, neighbors and friends. Her little body was laid to rest in the family plot in the local church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection. May God richly bless these dear parents.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Nichelson mourn with them and their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Giles Nichelson, in the death of their son and husband. Brother Nichelson met his death, we understand, in an automobile accident. May God bless this fine family, who, if our memory serves us right, have had to give up a younger son through an accident near his home. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to those who mourn in the departure of this, the last son of the family. May there be a time when the family will be complete again. L. E. MABRY.

First Church, High Point.—The pastorate of the Rev. J. C. Madison began here on September 16. Judging from the congregations from that time, it would seem that he is a very happy find for this church. Every Sunday looks like college commencement from the size of the congregation, even to the use of the balcony a few times.

His sermons are well thought out, well delivered, and well received. They are practical and pointed. Mr. Madison has the happy faculty of being able to condense a great deal of truth into a few words; his sermons are short.

Another point which other pastors might find advantageous: there are no announcements from the pulpit, except on rare occasions (only two in six weeks). The bulletin carries all the announcements.

The church gave a reception for the new pastor and also entertained the faculty and students of High Point College on the evening of October 12.

On the Sunday following the election of the stewards, trustees and officers of the church, those newly elected were seated in a body in the pews immediately in front of the pulpit. The sermon that day was on Service (though I have forgotten the exact title). After the sermon all those newly elected servants of the church were asked to rise and stand, and pray together a prayer of consecration and dedication, led by the pastor. This was a decidedly effective service.

Mr. A. J. Koonce was re-elected chairman of the senior stewards, and Mr. T. T. Ferree was made chairman of junior stewards. Mr. F. R. Anman was re-elected secretary of stewards; Capt. A. M. Rankin, church treasurer, and Mr. J. B. Spencer, assistant treasurer. The church budget is $13,607, and the every member canvass is to be made on Sunday, November 4, so as not to lose any time with financial obligations at the beginning of the new conference year.

Rally Day was observed in the Sunday school on October 14, at which time Mr. Grover H. Jones made a most interesting address on "The Beginnings of the Sunday School and the Ends Which It Should Seek." Mr. Jones, a High Point lawyer, formerly connected with the juvenile court of the city, was especially fitted to speak on this subject.

Several of the Sunday school departments and teachers gave entertainments to departments and classes in the weeks just preceding Promotion Day.

The semi annual thank-offering, which was observed by the Woman's Auxiliary in September, amounted to $63. The circles of the Auxiliary served meals to the workers in the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. drive in the church dining room each evening of the four-day campaign, and cleared about $150. The next big event for them is a bazaar to be held in the business district of the city on December 13, at which all sorts of merchandise from ready-to-wear clothing to country produce will be for sale. Friends from everywhere are invited to come.

On Sunday, October 28, the central district of Christian Endeavor which comprises several counties held an enthusiastic meeting at this church.

We welcome Mrs. J. F. Moffitt, Mr. William Snotherly, and 28 members of our Children's Home family to our membership.

We are glad to report that Miss Mary Wall, a faithful member of this church, is recovering nicely from an appendectomy.

Members of this church and many former members who read the Herald regret that Mrs. R. T. Pickens, faithful reporter for many years, feels unable to continue this service for her church.

The marriage of Miss Annie Robbins, beautiful and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Robbins, to Mr. E. E. Mendenhall was solemnized at this church on the evening of October 20 at 8 o'clock by the Rev. H. H. Robbins, uncle of the bride, in a beautiful setting of palms, southern smilax, ascension lilies and cathedral candles. The bride entered on the arm of her father, and was attended by a ring bearer, a maid of honor, and four bridesmaids. The groom was attended by his brother as best man, and four groomsmen. The exquisite music for the occasion was rendered by Mrs. W. I. Ward, soprano; Mr. C. S. Gray, tenor; Mrs. Robert Fearing, violinist, and Mr. E. B. Stimson, organist. A brilliant reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robbins followed the church ceremony.

It is with regret that we note the death of Mr. R. D. Bodenhamer of a heart attack Monday, October 29. He attended First church.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—On Sunday morning, October 28, we had Brother A. O. Lindley to preach for us. He delivered a wonderful message on "The Cross," and it was a pleasure to have him with us as he is a former pastor of this charge. After the sermon, the Lord's Supper was observed. Rev. H. L. Isley preached for us the second Sunday night in this month. We greatly miss our pastor, Mr. Mabry, but have enjoyed having these visiting ministers with us.

Ere long the hut which is being built on the Bellemont church grounds will be complete. The Young Men's class has worked faithfully, and their efforts are greatly appreciated by everyone.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Thursday afternoon, October 18, at the home of Miss Carrie Nicholson. Mrs. Clay Holt had charge of the program. After the program, delicious refreshments were served. It was decided that the next meeting would be held with Mrs. E. A. Noah.

The Young Women's class will be entertained at a Hallowe'en party Tuesday night, October 30, at the home of Miss Nannie Coble. Miss Coble and Miss Hallie Loy will act as joint hostesses.

Our community was saddened recently by the death of one of our members, Giles Nicholson. To know him was to love him, and he will be greatly missed in this community as well as in the one where he lived. The large crowd that attended the funeral, and the beautiful floral offering, were proof of the high esteem in which he was held. It is hard to give up one just starting out in life, and especially one with such a lovable disposition and a sunny smile as Giles always had. He made one feel good to be in his presence; but God knows best. We know that our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves to mourn his passing his family and a host of relatives and friends. To these bereaved ones we extend our most heartfelt sympathy, and may God comfort them in their bereavement.

First Church, Lexington.—The revival meeting which began here October 7 came to a close October 16. Rev. J. M. Morgan was the engaged help in this series of meetings and brought us fine gospel messages each evening which were well received. As a result of this meeting there were three conversions and the following united with the church: Dotsy Koontz, Hilda Tesh, Clayton Koontz, by profession of faith, and Hugh McBride by transfer. Although the results were not what we would like to have seen, we feel that much good has been accomplished which will bear fruit later. We extend a hearty welcome to the Rev. Mr. Morgan at all times.

Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, delivered a vital message entitled "Faith." His text, "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things?" was found in Mark 11:28. At the close of the service Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hamilton united with the church by transfer.

The following officers for the ensuing year were elected at the 11 o'clock service: Trustees, C. A. Auman, chairman, C. L. Hedrick, David Brooks, W. C. Gibson, J. C. Russell, J. A. Easter, Henry Gibson, W. T. Walker, Alex Hedrick, W. A. Snider, Clarence Russell; stewards, Phonse Bean, chairman, Paul Wallace, O. F. Johnson, Willie Kimbrell, Glenn Younts, A. E. Cutting, Archie Miller, L. B. Koontz, J. W. McBride, Arvie Parker, Wilford McBride, T. D. Westmoreland, Ray Wallace, H. N. Fine, J. I. Thompson, George Miller, Frank Plott, R. L. Everhart, D. L. Walser, Henry Yates, Lester Yates, W. L. Aaron, David Tesh; ushers, R. L. Everhart, chairman, J. D. Allen, John Hamilton, James McBride, Hugh McBride, Ray Hedrick, Willie Kimbrell, Willie Justice, B. L. Mickey, Henry Gibson, Vestal Yates; class leader, R. L. Everhart; assistant class leader, W. A. Snider; reporter, Margaret Lea Swink; pianist, Lola Mae McCulloch; assistant pianist, Mrs. J. J. Mallard; church secretary, John Hamilton; church treasurer, J. J. Mallard. These officers will be installed next Sunday morning; also the Sunday school officers, who will be elected during the Sunday school period.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of our Annual Conference, was with us Sunday evening and brought us a very helpful message on the subject, "Some Ways the Church Grows." He used for his text John 1:41, 42: "He first findeth his own brother Simon; and said unto him, We have found the Messias, which is being interpreted, the Christ. And he brought him to Jesus." We were glad to have Dr. Andrews with us and hope he will visit us again.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Carmel October 23 at 7:30. A full attendance of officials is urged.

Mr. and Mrs. Phonse Bean announce the birth of a son October 18. He has been named William Claris.

Mr. J. A. Easter is seriously ill at his home on South Main street.

Mrs. T. D. Westmoreland, who has been ill for several weeks, is able to be up.

One of our faithful members, Mrs. Ella Taylor, widow of Ernest Taylor, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Gibson, October 16. Mrs. Taylor had been subject to a weak heart and on Sunday developed pneumonia which resulted in her death. She was born November 8, 1880, thereby making her 53 years of age.

Funeral services were conducted from First church October 18 by Rev. C. G. Isley, assisted by Rev. J. F. Burroughs. Interment was in the city cemetery.

Mrs. Taylor is survived by two daughters, Mrs. R. L. Gibson and Miss Teresa Taylor, of this city; seven grandchildren, one brother, Frank Beck; and two sisters, Mrs. Eugene Coble and Mrs. John Vuncannon, all of near Central Falls.

Haw River Church, Glen Raven Charge.—Rev. J. P. Pegg filled his regular appointment here today. He brought us a fine message. His text was taken from the 22nd chapter of Luke. After the sermon, communion was taken.

This, of course, is our last appointment before conference. This church had all claims paid in full.

After the communion service, the church was called in conference to elect new officers for the coming year. The present board of stewards and trustees were re-eleted. The Sunday school also had its election today. Mr. Charlie Coble was elected superintendent. The church voted unanimously for the return of our present pastor.

The Ladies' Auxiliary gave a supper the 21st. It was quite a success with $35 profit.

Miss Espa Bullard is confined to her bed. She has our deepest sympathy.

T. S. COBLE.

New Hope, Mecklenburg.—Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, was with us in Sunday school at 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock he brought us a gospel message which we all enjoyed very much, the text being found in the 13th verse of the first chapter of Revelation. We are well pleased with our pastor and the good work which he has done around New Hope. When we have a good pastor like the one we now have, it does not seem wise to change. He never complains, even though the load may be heavy. He carries it right on with a smile. We also hope to get him paid up before conference. This ought to be easier to do this year, as the farmers are getting better prices for cotton this year than last year. We should be very thankful for this and always remember where our blessings come from. We have witnessed some sad things in our community recently. Have had three deaths by accident. Mr. Charlie Belk was run over by a car and killed. He was buried Monday a week ago. He was the son of Mr. John Belk and his wife, Jane, familiarly known as Uncle John and Aunt Jane. The sympathy of the community goes out to both of these in the loss of their son.

FAY AYCOTH, Reporter.

Tabernacle, Julian.—On the third Sunday morning the Julian church and Sunday school officers were installed, using the installation service prescribed by our conference. The Tabernacle Sunday school officers were installed on the first Sunday of October and the church officers will be installed the first Sunday of November.

On last Sunday a very impressive thank-offering service was observed at Tabernacle. In order to give the public an idea of the work the ladies are doing, the regular business session of the auxiliary was conducted at the beginning of the service. Then followed the pageant, "The Fourth Generation," rendered by our young people. This pageant brought some very impressive lessons to our people. The ladies of both of our churches are doing work to be greatly appreciated. Because of the help these ladies have rendered, our World Service will be paid in full this year.

The work of repairing Julian church is moving along nicely. The new roof will soon be finished.

On October 16 Miss Sarah Catherine Coble, a devoted Christian and a member of Tabernacle church since childhood, passed to her reward. For a number of years she had been a great sufferer and had not been able to attend church, but she was faithful in her devotions and patient in her suffering, always anxious about someone else. She was a sweet, gentle Christian, one of the best the writer has ever known. GEO. L. CURRY.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—A number from this church attended the fourth quarterly conference for the charge at Laurel Hill Saturday. Mr. Fogleman preached from the text, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door."

At the afternoon session a missionary auxiliary was formed. Mrs. Fields Toney, of Friendship church, was made president; Mrs. Roy Dayberry, of Knob Creek, secretary, and Mrs. Worth Miller, of Laurel Hill, treasurer. As a beginning, $60 a year was pledged to the Branch work.

Mr. Fogleman's report showed that 26 members had joined the churches during the year. Mr. Lester Huss was made alternate delegate. The conference voted unanimously for the return of Mr. Fogleman for another year. The conference also turned down the suggestion that one or two of the churches be added to the Connelly Springs charge.

New officers for Knob Creek church were elected yesterday morning at our regular church service. They are as follows: Sunday school superintendent, L. Leonhardt; assistant superintendent, Quincey Hartman; choir leader, John Queen; organist, Miss Pansy Queen; stewards, C. T. Hartman, Mrs. B. B. Chapman, Mrs. A. J. Jeffers and John Queen; trustees, T. P. Deal, C. T. Hartman and A. J. Jeffers; class leaders, Mrs. B. B. Chapman, Mrs. Quincey Hartman and T. P. Deal; Herald reporter, Ethel Norman.

The Sunday school and church services have been far above the average throughout the year. The church treasurer, Theodore Hartman, reported 19 had used the envelope system duing the year, and that pastor's salary was paid in full.

The Ladies' Circle will meet Wednesday of this week with Mrs. Frank Norman. The Friendship Auxiliary has extended an invitation to the ladies to meet with them at their next meeting.

Mrs. Jess Peeler is seriously ill in the Shelby hospital. We are hoping for her recovery.

Miss Hazel Richards and Ira Hartman, both of our church, were recently married. We wish for them a long and happy life.

Greer's Chapel, Shiloh Charge.—Since our last report we have had several real inspiring sermons by our pastor. Today we had the pleasure of having Dr. Andrews with us, and we feel that the wonderful message he brought was indeed a help to all who heard it. Sickness in the community kept so many of our people away from church, only a few were there to hear him. We hope he will come again soon and find us in a better condition.

Our Sunday school is moving on as usual, still growing in number and in the Spirit, and the church as a whole is doing very well. In the few remaining days until conference we have a little work to do, but we see no reason why we should not come out on top.

We hope our conference will see fit to send our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, back to us again. The church has made progress during this year under his leadership and we feel that we really need him with us for another year.

We have so many on our sick list now. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—Conference is almost here again, and we have much to do in the few remaining days to get our church up to where we would like for her to be at conference.

We appreciate very much the work our pastor has given us this year. Hope we may have him back with us for another year, as we enjoy working with him.

Officers for next year will be elected Sunday morning. H. G. Hargrove, B. S. Cure and Mrs. L. E. Guthrie were appointed to nominate the officers.

Since our last report we have made some improvement on our church building on the outside and have enameled the stove which helps the looks on the inside very much. Hope to get it painted, both inside and out, before long.

On Saturday, October 21, the third rally for this district was held at this church. Was sorry so few of our people attended this meeting. We enjoyed having the people of other churches with us. Hope they may come again.

Our Woman's Auxiliary is not sleeping, for they decided to put on an old-fashioned school commencement, with the help of the men, which did very successfully Saturday evening, October 28, in the Eli Whitney school auditorium. This program was one of clean, wholesome fun and at the same time educational.

Brother N. G. Bethea came down and was our county superintendent. After the exercise he decided to test the ability of his students in arithmetic and geography. We appreciate very much Brother Bethea coming and helping us out in this program. Miss Edith Guthrie was our much loved teacher.

Bethesda.—Our beloved pastor, Rev. James H. Trollinger, of Rockingham, filled his regular appointment the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock. He was accompanied by his wife, also Bro. and Sister Cornell, of Rockingham. Brother Trollinger delivered us a wonderful message. Those present were pointed to the way of the Cross or the old-time altar for real experience of Christian hope and faith. His text was taken from the Old Testament, regarding the rebuilding of the altar by the Prophet Elijah. We hope to see the day come when all of our pastors and preachers will lay the old foundation as it was in those days.

Our Sunday school is doing fine. We had our installation service, both for church and Sunday school, on fourth Sunday. With Rev. J. H. Trollinger as chairman, our fourth quarterly conference meets with Rockingham church November 1. Bethesda hopes to go over the top this year, and we sincerely desire the prayers and co-operation of all churches that stand for Christianity.

Lexington Charge, Mt. Carmel.—The third Sunday afternoon Dr. R. M. Andrews paid us a visit. He preached a very helpful sermon to a large congregation that was enjoyed very much. We are always glad to have our president with us. Mr. H. V. Swicegood gave our pastor a little surprise by asking for a rising vote from all who wanted to see our present pastor returned for his seventh year's work. It was unanimous.

The fourth quarterly conference for Lexington charge was held at Mt. Carmel church on Tuesday night, October 23, with a large attendance of the officials present. All the business was transacted in harmony, Lexington church having a wonderful report. Mt. Carmel was behind with its finances some, although this will be raised before Annual Conference meets. Mr. Westmoreland, of First church, has been elected delegate to Annual Conference, with Mr. R. M. Rowe as alternate. Mr. Westmoreland came to the front and asked for a rising vote from the conference as to the return of Rev. Mr. Isley. It was 100 per cent. We truly hope Annual Conference will see fit to return him.

The members of Mt. Carmel church put on a fried chicken dinner and supper Saturday in Lexington. The proceeds were very pleasing to all, $62.70 being the amount received from the sale. This will be used on the indebtedness of the church. At the close of Sunday school Sunday morning our superintendent made the report of our day's work the previous day and a collection was taken on this debt which brought the amount up to $79.10, leaving only $37 indebtedness. One of the members arose and told them he would pay $10 of that, provided the remaining $27 was raised by the second Sunday of November. We feel sure this will be done and our pastor can go to conference with the church clear of indebtedness. This was his desire at the beginning of the conference year. It may be impossible to have the dedication service before conference, although we are expecting to have it at an early date.

We wish at this time to thank Mr. W. J. Berrier for a donation of $10 on the church debt last week.

The installation service will be held the first Sunday morning and all officials for the ensuing year are urged to be present. The communion service will also be held at this time.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—I have been re-elected reporter. I'll try and fill my place.

Mr. Williams filled his appointment Sunday and delivered a splendid sermon, like he always does.

The business meeting of the church was held the fourth Sunday in October. The church register was revised and the officers for the coming year were all re-elected, with the exception of one or two, including class leaders, trustees, stewards, Sunday school superintendent, church secretary and treasurer, reporter, and pianist. The church officers were installed also.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Hebron church November 3 with Rev. R. M. Andrews present.

A thank-offering service will be given at Chestnut Ridge church November 2, 1934, at 7:30 o'clock. Everyone is cordially invited. Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—We observed Rally Day yesterday at Lebanon. All Sunday school classes, after offerings and records were made, assembled in the main auditorium of the church where an interesting program was carried out. This program, consisting of speeches, readings, and special music, by representatives from all classes, was very inspiring. It gives us hope for a better program of religious activity during the coming year.

At 11 o'clock our pastor, Dr. S. W. Taylor, delivered a very vital and edifying message on the subject, "The First Rally Day in the Christian Church."

Rev. N. M. Harrison, promotional secretary of High Point College, preached an interesting sermon on the subject, "Men Wanted." At this time a quartette composed of Messrs. Burke Asbury and Lee Moser and Misses Margaret Curry and Dorothy Perry, sang, "It Pays to Serve Jesus." Miss Curry, also, sang a pretty solo.

We feel that it should be mentioned, yet, that our women's thank-offering service, held on Sunday night, October 21, was very enjoyable. Mrs. Taylor gave a demonstration with the children of the work they have done during the past six months. It was indeed a demonstration of "something we parents are thankful for. The young ones nowadays, with such splendid opportunities for mental and physical development, are noticeably alert. Those minds are busy with thought. If we, as parents and teachers, do not guide them and keep these thoughts in channels of righteousness, they will wander off into channels of unrighteousness. For the mind is active. It will not be otherwise. Mrs. Taylor's study group has accomplished much in Scripture memory work and in mission study. We are grateful to her for this.

Mrs. W. L. Gnyer, who has been sick, is able to attend church again, we are glad to report.

Mrs. S. E. Montgomery has returned home from Bnrrus Memorial Hospital. We hope she will soon be well.

Mrs. Ida Lambert has been elected new president of the Central District Christian Endeavor Association. She is teacher in our Sunday school and an active Christian Endeavor worker.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Our thank-offering service was held Sunday evening, October 21. A very interesting program, consisting of readings, music and an address, was enjoyed. The program was arranged by Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, who presided during the evening, and Mrs. James Swain. The splendid address on "Thanksgiving" was given by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. The offering amounted to $53.50.

We were delighted to have the Rev. E. W. Fox, pastor of the M. E. Church South at Elkin, N. C., preach for us last Sunday morning. Mr. Fox was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard during the M. E. conference held here last week.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at the hut Monday evening. A splendid year's work was revealed by the reports given. The Woman's Auxiliary reported $1,100 raised during the past year. J. C. Coe, Sunday school superintendent, reported that the Sunday school had experienced a very successful year. It was interesting to see the enthusiasm with which each member present voted for the return, for another year, of our pastor, Dr. J. E. Pritchard.

The election of church officials was held Sunday, October 21, and the election of Sunday school officials was held last Sunday. These officials will be installed the second Sunday morning in November.

Next Sunday will be known as "Loyalty Day" at our church, at which time all church members are asked to come to the church between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock and make their pledges for next year.

The Business Women's Circle realized something over $14 at the oyster supper given at the Huntley-Stockton-Hill tea room last Thursday evening. Their circle will hold its regular monthly business meeting next Monday evening at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Wade Leach, 630 Broad avenue.

Circle No. 2 met Tuesday afternoon with Miss Cozy Whitt, with ten members and two visitors present.

Circles No. 1 and 2 will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. J. A. Cox and Mrs. R. S. Hemphill, respectively.

We are sorry to report that the condition of Mrs. T. F. McCulloch, who has been critically ill for several weeks, remains unchanged.

Mrs. J. E. Pritchard and J. Frank Coble, adult leaders of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, entertained the members of the society at the parsonage Tuesday evening.

Preceding the business meeting of the Dr. J. F. McCulloch class at the hut Tuesday evening, the members enjoyed an oyster supper. Plans were made for the meeting by a committee composed of W. F. Parrish, D. E. Curtis and L. C. Peeler. Assistance was rendered by David Glass. The president, James Swain, presided over the meeting. C. A. Parrish, secretary-treasurer of the class, made his report for the year, showing encouraging progress. The teacher of the class, A. C. Dixon, and others made brief talks. The members decided to add the word "Memorial" to the name of the class, making it the Dr. J. F. McCulloch Memorial Bible Class. Dr. McCulloch was instrumental in organizing the class and taught it as long as his health permitted.

Rehoboth, Creswell Ct.—Some time has passed since we have reported from this work. Everything has been moving on nicely, so far as I know. The pastor, Bro. Bingham, has filled his regular appointments, always giving us good sermons. We all like him and hope to have him return.

I was unable to attend the last quarterly conference, held at Creswell, but I've heard there was a movement on foot for a change of pastors. Now I wish every member could read what Dr. Andrews said in his letter last week. I indorse every word. Surely this is a sad situation when a pastor can't stay more than one year. They hardly get acquainted, as Dr. Andrews said, with all the people. This situation, I hope, can be agreeably settled with all, and there be no change in pastor. Let's all do our very best and be satisfied. Remember the changes in the past and let's not have any more dissatisfaction on part of pastor or people. How very grieved I was to open my paper and see Dr. McCulloch's face, and know he had passed away. I extend my sympathy to all of his loved ones. Our loss is his gain; nevertheless he will be missed.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. White, a little boy. JOSEPH JESSIE, Reporter.

Asheville.—Our "church night" meeting held Wednesday was a success from every standpoint. Everyone seemed to have a good time. Miss Ethel Wilson, Miss Fannie Miller and Mr. Glenn Starnes delighted the group with several musical selections. The group unanimously went on record as favoring the return of Rev. J. F. Minnis, pastor, for 1934-35. We trust this will meet the approval of the stationing committee when conference convenes, for Mr. Minnis has certainly done wonderfully well in the work; we do not wonder that his many friends in India wish him returned. He is a real Christian and a splendid pastor. I notice Dr. Andrews said in his letter this week that there should be no one-year pastors; so, since Mr. Minnis has been with us less than one year, we are expecting to have him with us again. At this meeting, too, Mrs. D. L. West, representing the nominating committee, presented the following slate of officers: Church trustees, J. W. Boling, H. L. Hanner, E. H. Pratt, Mrs. L. M. Joyner; parsonage trustees, Mrs. J. S. Williams, H. O. Charnock, D. J. Eller, Richard Hanner; stewards, J. R. Moore, L. S. Neville, J. O. Barrett, Mrs. E. A. Bolick, Miss Eula Taylor, Mrs. C. B. Baker; treasurer, J. R. Moore; Sunday school superintendent, Miss Frances S. Cunningham; pianist, Miss Nancy Clonse; music director, James H. Bailey; ushers, L. S. Neville, A. H. Thomas, S. D. Hendricson, Junior Eller and James Clonse; communion committee, Mrs. Jane Carter and Mrs. Y. D. Eller; reporter, Mrs. C. B. Baker. The entire slate was elected unanimously.

At the morning service this past Sunday these officers were installed. Mr. Minnis had a most impressive service. Mr. James H. Bailey, newly-elected music director, sang "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." The entire membership expressed themselves as happy in their choice of officials for the ensuing year and pledged their loyal support in all programs.

The Intermediate "tacky party" was a success too. A good time was had by all. Junior Eller received first prize for the tackiest costume; Lola Johnson, second. Mrs. C. B. Baker, Mr. J. R. Moore and Mr. L. S. Neville were on hand to help the young folks have a good time and to eat the refreshments.

At a meeting of the Frances Cunningham Philathea Class, held at the home of Miss Cunningham last Friday evening, the following officers were elected: President, Miss Nell Carter; vice president, Miss Arlene Hanner; secretary, Mrs. Sam Hendricson; treasurer and class reporter, Miss Nelle Smith.

Plans were advanced at this meeting for a carnival to be held Friday evening of this week in the Sunday school room, to which all are most cordially invited. To Mrs. James H. Bailey goes the credit for the carnival idea, and we hope 'twill prove profitable as well as entertaining. The play has been ordered too, and they expect to put that on before conference. This class has certainly done well this year; they have already paid their pledge to the budget, and these other things are extra. Much credit for all this is due to the outgoing president, Mrs. Robey Wilson, and their efficient teacher, Miss Frances S. Cunningham.

We have a new class in Sunday school of which we are very proud, composed of the following first-year Junior boys: Jack Bailey, Jack Carter, and Milton West. To this class went the honor this Sunday of having 100 per cent present and the largest per capita average, beating the Men's class by one-fourth per cent. Mrs. C. B. Baker is at present teaching this class. The Philatheas again led the adult department in the largest attendance and in amount of collection. Mrs. Williams' Junior boys led in amount of collection in their department.

Fourth quarterly conference will be held Wednesday, October 7. We are expecting to announce after that meeting that the Asheville church is "over the top" with its budget. Everything is going on fine and everyone is interested and working hard to raise sufficient funds to pay up all claims. It can be done and we are going to do it.

The Woman's Auxiliary thank-offering program under the direction of Miss Frances Cunningham was very impressive. Miss Eleanor Galphin was the pianist for the evening; Miss Nancy Clonse gave the story of "Mattie," by Rev. F. W. Stephenson, which has been running as a serial in the Missionary Record for some time. Miss Melle Smith gave the Scripture, Miss Arlene Hanner a poem, Mr. Minnis a short appeal for the thank-offering. Rev. J. S. Williams pronounced the benediction. The offering amounted to $10.26.

Mrs. E. A. Bolick, Mrs. J. R. Moore, Miss Polly Gentry, Mrs. C. B. Baker and Mr. H. L. Hanner are all slightly indisposed. We trust they will soon be well again.

The Fawcett Bible Class meeting is scheduled to be held this (Tuesday) evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Minnis, at which time new officers are to be elected. Mr. H. L. Hanner is the present president. This class has also completed its pledge to the church budget. M. L. B.

English St.—An impressive installation service was held Sunday a week ago for our newly-elected officers and teachers. On the past Sunday the following took their places in the Sunday school: W. T. Kennedy, re-elected superintendent; W. L. Elliot, assistant; Miss Myrtle Moore, secretary; Mrs. W. L. Elliot, pianist; Miss Bernice Livengood, Beginners' department; Primary girls, Eva Moore; Primary boys, Mrs. J. S. Loflin; Junior girls, Miss Callie Loflin; Junior boys, J. A. Lee; Intermediate girls, Mrs. C. J. Burton and Miss Pauline Walker; Intermediate boys, Guilford Griffin; Baraca class, John Maughlin; Philathea class, Kathleen Embler; Ladies' Bible class, Mrs. S. A. Setzer; Men's Bible class, J. A. Bowers, and Cradle Roll, Mrs. W. L. Elliot.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held on Friday evening, November 2. A full attendance of the membership is desired, as important matters must be settled and plans made for the coming year. Our pastor reports that we are in the best condition financially that we have been in the three years that he has been pastor. However, all of our claims have not as yet been paid in full. We are planning to close the year's work with a reconsecration service at 11 a. m. on Sunday week instead of the usual preaching service. We are hoping to have a record attendance for these services. REPORTER.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

We are about to observe the 10th anniversary of the opening of High Point College. We are beginning to realize more and more the value of our college to the church, conference, and Kingdom service. As I see it, our Annual Conference has in High Point College its greatest asset. Already it has sent out preachers, teachers, and leaders who are filling responsible places in our communities, our schools, our churches, and our pulpits.

It is my firm belief that High Point College will continue to maintain her high Christian ideals, and measure up to the fond expectations and high ideals of our conference and the church at large. Now everyone knows that our college cannot continue to do its work without our support. We must keep feeding this institution with our prayers, our boys and girls, and our money. Our conference had this in mind when it included in our budget a college assessment of $5,000 for college maintenance and passed it out to the charges.

There are many reasons why we should support this institution, but I will call your attention to just two of them. First, the general board has said to us if North Carolina will raise this $5,000, the board will give us $7,500. We cannot afford to trifle with an offer like this; we must meet this challenge.

Second, our conference does not have a more worthy child to support than High Point College. There is not an item in our budget that is more needful and more worthy than the college assessment. Brethren, preachers, and laymen, let us go after this item in our budget in these few remaining days before conference and get it.

Let us not think of it as a budget assessment, but as an investment in Christian education. C. E. RIDGE.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

Report blanks were mailed out last Friday. If you failed to get yours, when you read this, please notify me, and I will send others.

There has been very little change made in the Statistical Blank except the Financial Blank. This has been pretty largely made over; but it is simpler and ought not to be difficult to fill out. May we ask you again NOT TO COUNT ODD CENTS. If, for instance, you have received $10.40 for Rally Day, put it down $10.00. If you raised $12.60, put it down $13.00. If you don't, the Statistical Secretary will have to. The odd cents can't go into the printed tables without a good deal of extra cost.

Please observe. I should, perhaps, have had new Information Blanks printed. But they cost a good deal, and I have quite a supply on hand. So I am asking you to use the present blanks until the supply is exhausted. But do this: There are two columns, marked 'Spec." "Sup." Those words don't mean anything. Write in one, "Herald Subsidy." In the other, "N. C. C. R. E." (I couldn't typewrite it in the blank I sent without the postage being doubled.)

Please be sure and indicate the number of Journals your charge will want for next year. We were asked last year to pass out slips, or get the folks to indicate in some way, to find out, approximately how many would be needed. We don't want to print more than we need. We do want enough.

And here's hoping you all will have a splendid wind-up for the year's work.

A mimeographed blank will be prepared on which you will report the amount raised for the various items of the Annual Conference Budget. I cannot mail this without extra expense; but it will be placed in your hands at Conference in time for you to hand it in for Honor Roll recognition.

C. W. BATES, Secretary.

P. S.: By the way, don't forget to send me your Journal money if you still owe for them. C. W. B.

DON'T TELL ME

Don't tell me what you will do
When you have time to spare;
Tell me what you did today
To ease a load of care.

Don't tell me what you will give
When your ship comes in from sea;
Tell me what you gave today
A fettered soul to free.

Don't tell me the dreams you have
Of conquests still afar;
Don't say what you hope to be,
But tell me what you are —Grenville Kleiser.

—In the Quarterly Conference at Calvary church Monday evening, Mrs. Howard R. Neese, Calvary's faithful reporter, was elected alternate delegate to conference. Her husband is the regular delegate, so there is the unusual of husband and wife being the delegate and alternate delegate, respectively.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Bennett

Ralph Joseph Bennett, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Bennett, was born on April 17, 1915. On October 15, 1934, after a few days of critical illness, his spirit went back to God who gave it.

Ralph was just a young man and most of life, with its hopes, its possibilities and its aspirations was ahead of him. There are some experiences which at first are not only hard and difficult to bear, but are mystifying and puzzling. Yet there are two things to be kept in mind. First, God never made an error. No injustice can be found in His acts. Second, the happiness of heaven would not be complete without the presence of youth.

Those who knew him best have the conviction that it is well with his soul. This ought to be of great comfort and solace to the parents and other loved ones. This is that which matters most. The most important thing in life or death is the blessed assurance that Jesus is our personal Saviour.

May the God of all peace and comfort sustain and strengthen the loved ones, especially the parents. FRED W. PASCHALL.

Gone But Not Forgotten

In sad and loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs. Ethel King Jenkins, who departed this life two years ago—November 1, 1932.

In humble submission to God who doeth all things well, we render our thanks that such a devoted soul has passed this way, though her life was so short. She lived 26 years, two months and two days.

There is a place in our hearts made vacant that never can be filled.

No one knows how much we miss you,
No one knows the tears we shed,
But in heaven we hope to meet you
Where no farewell words are said.
We often sit and think of you
When all of us are one,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
There is grief that finds no comfort,
There are wounds that cannot heal,
And sorrow buried in our hearts
That words cannot reveal. L. T. KING.

Wright

Wayne Woodrow Wright was born March 31, 1912, and departed this life September 17, 1934, aged 22 years, 5 months, and 17 days.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wright; six brothers, Lloyd, O. D., Willard, Bickett, Bruce, Luther; and two sisters, Margie and Mrs. Web Cook.

Eight years ago he was preceded in death by an infant sister.

He is also survived by his grandfather and grandmother Lambeth and his grandmother Wright.

The funeral was held at Pleasant Grove M. E. church and was conducted by J. T. Bowman, pastor of Denton charge. Interment followed in the Pleasant Grove cemetery.

There are no changes to be made in the percentages at the top of my column this week as against last week. But that does not mean that there was nothing doing all along the line last week. There was something going on. It so happened that the ones in my place of honor did not send in anything, but, my! how the money did come in last week anyway! Now I am going to let Charlotte, Albemarle and Henderson alone this week and I am going to pay my respects to those that sent in more than one subscription last week. At the head of the list, standing up there like a giant, is that stalwart son of Randolph County, L. F. Ferree, of First Church, High Point. What a check he sent in—$17.00. Well, these folks from Randolph are usually mighty good folks, and he is no exception to the rule. Next in the line of march are those two forward-looking young men, Rev. G. L. Curryr, of Tabernacle-Julian Charge, and Rev. C. B. Way, of Flat Rock Charge, who sent in $7.00 each. The quality of the money they sent was just the same as that sent in by Brother Ferree—not quite so much of it. Then, marching along all by himself to the merry tunes that are always in the hearts of folks who do well, is Rev. J. L. Trollinger, of Haw River Circuit, who surely is going some these days, sending in money and paying off church debts and dedicating churches. Then just a little further down the line came Rev. W. M. Howard, the energetic new pastor of Moriah church, who is bringing the money in these days like a veteran. After him comes that other son of Randolph, Rev. C. L. Spencer, of Granville Charge. While Brother Spencer has not made much noise about it this year, he has been sending in something quite frequently. Then we have three in a row, J. J. Mallard, of First Church, Lexington, and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, of Mt. Hermon, and Mrs. Paul Waynick, of Gibsonville. All of these are rapidly becoming our old stand-bys, and we are learning to depend on them for the money. We appreciate also those who sent smaller amounts.

Now for a word about Subsidy. Three persons sent in the full amount of Subsidy that their church was supposed to raise. They are: D. J. Allred, from Worthville; Wesley Jones, of Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge, and O. C. Loy, for Bethesda Church, on Halifax Charge. That is fine! Keep it up—"Say it with Subsidy."

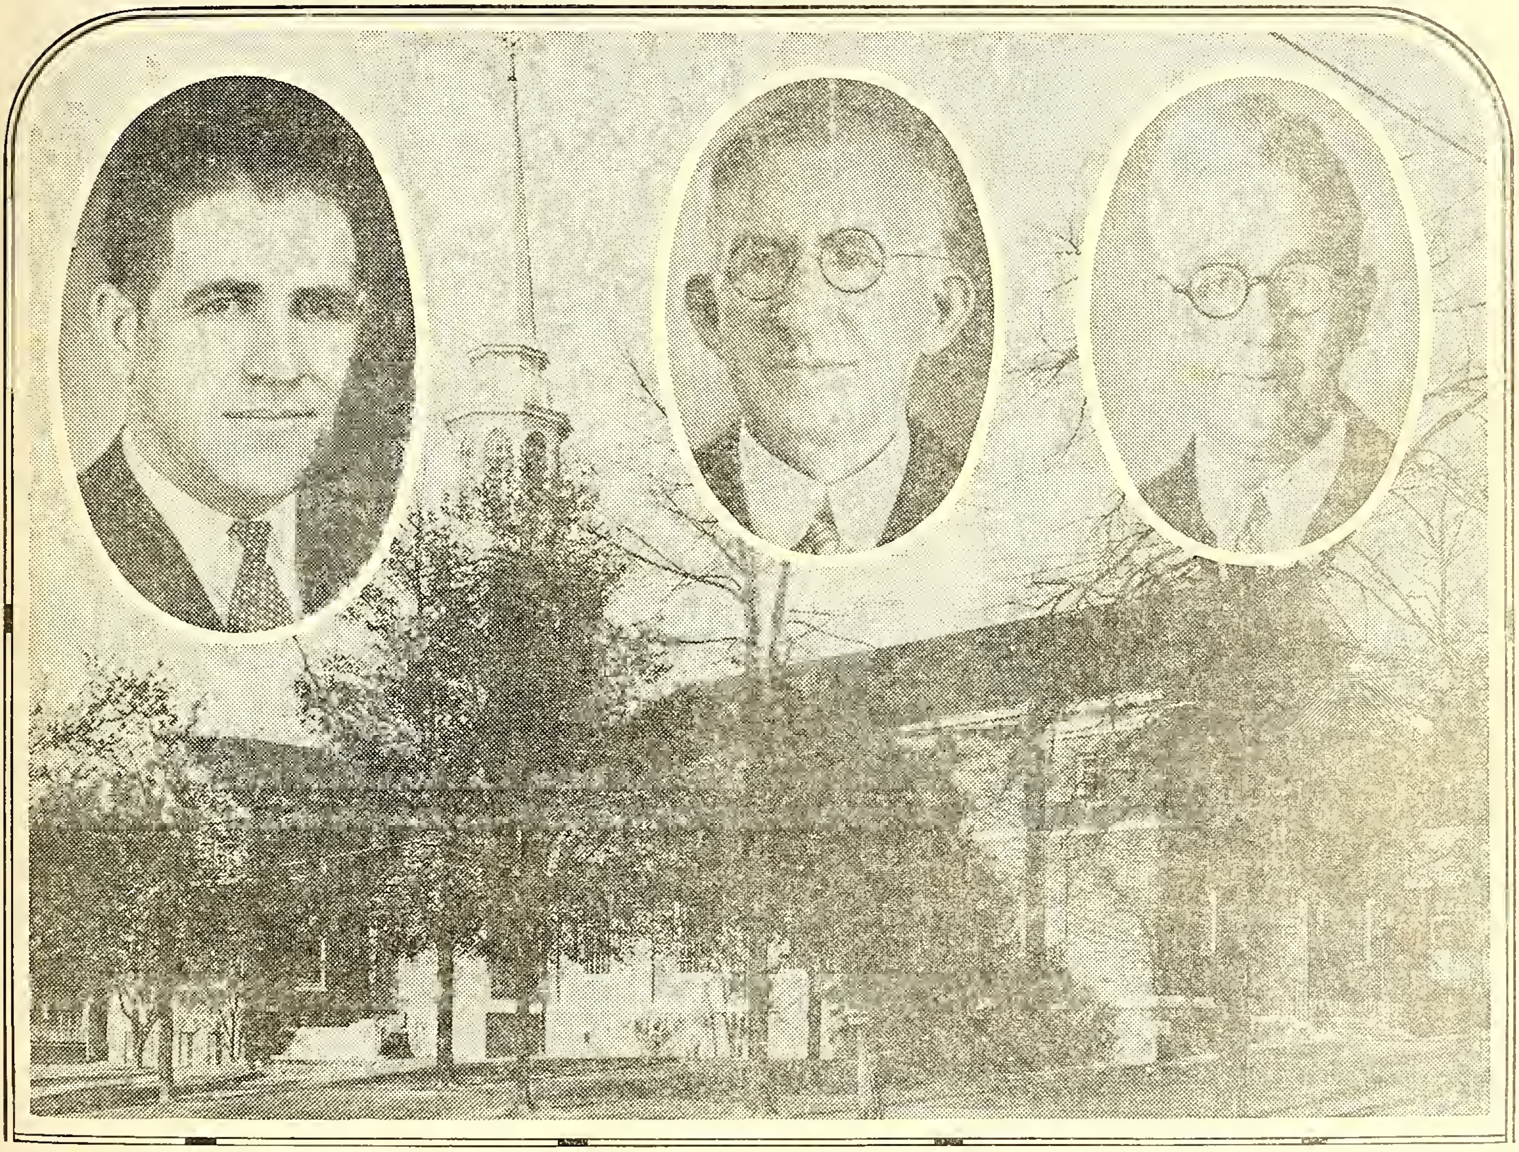
107th Session, North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church Convenes in Grace Church, Greensboro, November 14-19, 1934



Shown here is Grace Methodist Protestant church, at the corner of North Edgeworth and West Gaston streets, Greensboro, where the Annual Conference will meet, Wednesday morning, November 14th, through Monday, the 19th. Above the church at the left is the pastor, Rev. J. E. Carroll; in the center, Rev. R. M. Andrews, D.D., President of the Conference, and at the right, Rev. C. W. Bates, D.D., who is finishing his 19th consecutive year as Conference Secretary.

Grace church is one of the most beautiful churches in Greensboro, and its commodious appointments make it an ideal place for the meeting of such a body as the Annual Conference.

The program, while complete, is made so elastic as to provide for any necessary changes that may arise during the progress of the Conference. Ministers and churches throughout the state are busily engaged in getting matters in shape for what is destined to be the best and busiest Conference session in the last decade. A number of important board and committee meetings will be held prior to the meeting of the Conference proper.

BEING PROBLEM-CONSCIOUS

Dr. T. Ferrier Hulme, delegate from England, speaking at the Baltimore celebration, pointed out the danger of being problem-conscious rather than God-conscious. We look so exclusively at our problems that we see nothing else but these. We become problem-conscious rather than God-conscious. We do not even remember that there is a God who is able to deliver.

How far removed are we from the men of the Bible who saw bushes aflame and heard the voices out of the quaking mount. Problems meant little to them; God was everything. The weakness of many of the books that fill the shelves discuss problems; there is never a hint of a God in whose presence many of the most obstinate problems fade away. Our present weakness is the want of God-consciousness.

Were we to so relate ourselves to God so as to receive all that he has to bestow, a new sense of unity would result and we would become mighty in the pulling down of strongholds. We could face heroically the enemies from which we too often flee.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Forty Years With The Herald

Forty years ago November the 20th Our Church Record, the predecessor of the Methodist Protestant Herald, came from the press for the first time. It can readily be seen that within a few more days the Herald—for it was the same paper all the time—will be forty years old. Forty years! The length of time that Moses spent in the desert. The length of time that the Children of Israel wandered in the wilderness and the length of time that David ruled over Israel.

Let us try to picture some of the changes that have taken place in that period of time. Forty years ago there was not an automobile in the world. The people who could travel in buggies were to be congratulated, while those who could afford a two-horse carriage thought they were in a king's chariot. There were few telephones and no radios at that time. Mail was slow and did not come often. The average family in the country went to town Saturday afternoon to get the mail, which usually consisted of a weekly paper and once in a while a letter from some member of the family who was away from home. In most of our churches there was "preaching" once each month, the minister coming for that service, then moving on to another. At that time we had hardly half a dozen churches in the towns and cities. Only two or three churches in the towns had the all-time services of a pastor, the other town churches being attached to other groups of churches known as circuits. We had no Children's Home, no Bethel Home, no College, and not much money invested in church buildings. At a time like this it took a great deal of courage for a man even to think about establishing a church paper. And to think about establishing one from which he was to derive his own support without any guarantee from the Annual Conference required even more faith. But God has a man for each piece of work and the man whom God used for this work was the late editor of the paper, Dr. J. F. McCulloch. Some months ago the chairman of the Herald committee of the Annual Conference decided to get together the names of the original and continuous readers of the paper and run these names in the Herald to gladden the heart of Dr. McCulloch. But before the fortieth anniversary came around Dr. McCulloch took his departure for the better land. The question came to the new management whether it would be worth much to finish the work of securing the names of these original and continuous readers with the view of publishing the list. After some thought and deliberation, it has been decided to push the work to completion. We are now ready to announce definitely that the list is to be published in the issue of Thursday, November 22.

Quite a few people have notified the present editor during the summer that they belonged in the classification called for. But some of these told it from the rear seat of a car which the editor was driving at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. Others told him in the aisles of crowded churches. Others at other times and places where it was impossible to write it down. Of course no man's mind is sufficient to carry everything, and the only safe way to get your name in the list of the immortals is to drop a postal card to the editor. Of course those who have already written need not write again, as their names are on file.

Now there are two classifications which we want. The first is those who have been readers of the paper since it was started. The other is the home where the paper has been going for the past forty years. For instance, one woman wrote some time ago that the Herald had been going to the home where she lives ever since it was established, first to her late husband while he was a young man and before she came to the home as his wife. Since the death of her husband the paper has been coming to her son, with whom she lives, thus making the forty years that it has gone to that home. In reporting this, you might say the John Doe home or some other name, now occupied by so and so, giving the county or the nearby postoffice or something to identify it.

Now, please remember, the time is short, and what we do we must do quickly. All names ought to be in by Monday, November 19th.

Finishing Up the Conference Year

Before another issue of the Herald reaches our readers, the members of the Annual Conference will have assembled in annual session. The question comes to us all, Have we done our best? In some cases the answer can be unhesitatingly, Yes, while in others it must be painfully, No. It is a very serious thing not to do our best all the time. The amount of time from one session of the conference to the next is one year. It does not take a large number of years to make up the average life of man. So whether we are ministers or laymen, time is precious and we ought to do our best.

From all along the line there come reports indicating that the year is being finished in a creditable manner, many places reporting much better results than were reported a year ago. Let us hope that every pastor may be able to say that this year has been better than the previous year. It might be better and still not be as good as it might be; however, that will reveal some progress. And there is hope for pastors who are still getting better.

Mail Early Next Week

In order that the editor may be at Conference on Wednesday, will you not mail your communications early next week? And please address your communications to M. P. Herald, as mail is delivered to the Herald about three hours earlier than to the editor.

QUARRELSOMENESS

Among the things that believers in Christ should carefully avoid, Paul gives a high place to two, on which he places strong emphasis. "In all that you do," he writes to the Philippian brethren, "avoid discontent and dissension." These two vices—for such they are—have a very close relationship. Without discontent there could be no dissension. How many "church quarrels" would there be if there were no discontent among the members? Of course there are times when discontent is commendable, but in the great majority of cases it is the result, not of just dissatisfaction, but of a contentious spirit. And when that spirit begins to manifest itself in a church, a family, or a community, what a world of mischief it produces! Well may we pray to be delivered from these causes of stumbling.—The Watchman-Examiner.

CULTIVATING AN OMNIVEROUS APPETITE

By Luther K. Long

"I am glad I learned from my parents not to be too finical about my eating." This was said by a young man who had boarded in many places and eaten many sorts of food served in many styles during the twelve years between his leaving home for college and establishing a home of his own. Food was not his master, it was his servant and convenience. He could eat tasty salads and pastry when they were to be had, and he could nourish and satisfy himself on humbler fare, and not so well served, when that was his fate.

This is saying much the same thing as: "The safest plan is to cultivate an omnivorous appetite, so you can't get along on spinach when there isn't any cake."

I well remember going with my mother, at various times while I was still a small boy, to spend the afternoon at different neighbors' homes where we would be invited to remain for supper. I liked mother's cooking. Her bread tasted just right, her butter was properly salted and was of the right shade of yellow, and her brand of milk-gravy couldn't be beaten for smoothness and flavor. I didn't always feel as much confidence in the cooking done by the neighbors, though at Aunt Nancy Ward's I never had any misgiving, but always ate with assurance whatever was set before me.

It required some discipline at home, and some self-mastery on my part as well, to accustom myself to the use of various and sundry sorts of food and cooking. "This will be good for you." "This will make you strong." "This tastes all right if you only think so." "Don't you see that men eat what is put on their plates, and are able to do hard work?" "You will like this when you get used to it; you can't expect to become a man as long as you are such a baby about what you eat." Such were some of the admonitions that worked effectively on my boyish appetite. I am often glad for that discipline.

Food at the table is not the only sphere in which an omnivorous appetite comes in handy. In the course of our lives—it may be from day to day and week to week—we are thrown into contact with a great variety of people. In business, socially, and in our political and religious relations, we meet people who are congenial, interesting, and whose conversation ministers to our enjoyment and improvement. Others are like thorns in the flesh, or a bad odor in the nostrils, or a blot on the otherwise beautiful landscape. Still others just don't seem to be much, utterly undeveloped.

What shall we do about them? Shall we have nothing to do with what some would classify as undesirables? Shall we put up bars and signs forbidding trespassing on our private grounds, and confine our contacts to the group that is personally agreeable? That is the method of some. But does it work well? It satisfies only the person with an ostrich mind, the person who thinks he isolates himself when he hides his head in the sand. He succeeds in making himself disliked, and shutting himself off from what might develop into enjoyable and enriching fellowships.

A much better way is to cultivate an omnivorous appetite for people, many sorts of people. The attitude of homes, schools and churches makes a lot of difference with growing children and young people. To bring them up in liberal-minded groups is to give them a more upstanding attitude and to widen their horizons.

This does not mean that our children are to be turned loose into all sorts of promiscuous contacts with any and all sorts of children; nor does it mean that grown persons are to forego choosing their intimate friends with careful discrimination. As we use intelligence in selecting food—while still cultivating a liberal, even an omnivorous, appetite—so we are to apply suitable tests to the candidates for our friendships, at the same time that we cultivate appreciation of the human qualities of all with whom we come into contact.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

Subjective and Objective Preaching

By subjective preaching we mean the preaching that throws the emphasis upon inner, personal experience, while objective preaching is directed toward realities found outside of man. Subjective preaching has to do with ourselves; objective deals with some values or things apart from our own intimate, personal conditions. The Catholic church has always emphasized the objective type of worship while Protestantism has stressed the subjective. The Catholic worship is directed to God; ours is so often planned, prepared and rendered toward human beings. Since preaching is such a large part of the usual service in our churches, it, too, naturally leans to the subjective side.

There are several dangers about subjective preaching. For one thing, it lacks direction, reaching quality. It tends to turn in on itself, becoming a sort of "ingrowing stir" of our emotions without pointing us to a higher reality. Of course much good can be done through this type of appeal, yet it does stop short of reaching what Sperry calls the "kingdom of ends."

Again, the subjective emphasis may disturb tender, timid, self-conscious minds. The area of inner experience is a delicate and sacred place and should be entered only with great care and delicacy. People who are already worried over their own sad condition may be upset by additional stressing and magnifying of their inner affairs.

This leads me to say, in the third place, that subjective preaching runs into the danger of meeting personal opposition. When you are discussing the needs and conditions of inner states of the soul, you may be out-argued by someone else who knows more about his own soul than you do. Individuals are not alike, and it is risky business to attempt too strict an analysis of another person's inner life. This subjective method has, to be sure, accomplished much good; it stirs our emotions; leads to self-examination, which we at times need. But it should not be employed at the expense of neglecting the objective method. I think we have used the subjective appeal out of all proportion to any other type, hence I am now insisting that we give more attention to the objective appraoch.

1. It points to realities outside of man and thus gives direction to our thoughts and emotions. It saves us from dwelling upon ourselves. The human mind is so made that it is at its best when turned from itself onto some objective goal. Tennyson said he would "follow knowledge like a sinking star," realizing, I think, that the mind is stronger and happier when "following" something outside itself. One writer says that people would enjoy going to church if they did not always have themselves discussed from the pulpit. There is particular reason these days that people have their thoughts turned away from themselves. They already are gloomy and cast down. When a person goes to church, already disgusted with himself, only to hear a long, critical portrayal of his weakness and his failures, he is not likely to be uplifted and refreshed by the experience. We drive many people away by talking about them. If, on the other hand, they hear a sermon, say on God as a Father, they will go away with a wholesome attitude, feeling drawn closer to this Spiritual Reality, affirming anew that life has its beauty and the soul its rightful vision.

2. Objective preaching gives the proper place to Christ. The cross, symbolic of our God, must remain at the very center of all effective preaching, but to hear many of our sermons you would think that man has that central position. Mere services should be directed toward God. Too many of our songs, likewise, are purely subjective, a sort of eulogy to ourselves. In selecting hymns to accompany an objective sermon, we should look for those that direct our thoughts out upon the Eternal rather than in upon our own unworthy selves. Jesus said that if he be lifted up he would draw all men unto himself. Hence it is our business to lift him up, rather than spend our time arguing about abstract and elusive states of the mind we call religious experience. Give the central place to Christ; direct men to him. This can only be done by objective preaching.

3. Even better inner experiences can be attained by the objective method. After all, the best way to inspire the soul is not to come at it directly, but to direct it toward some reality that will command loyalty and admiration. The sight of a general on horseback dashing on ahead of the troops will arouse ten times more heroism in the soldier than a bundle of instructions sent up from the rear on how to be courageous for the fight. The same in religion. We need more examples and fewer orders. The whole thing is this: Fastening our attention upon things that are ends in themselves rather than magnifying mere incidentals produces the noblest feelings and highest impulses the soul ever knows. The best music, art, drama or painting does this. As someone puts it, art achieves the subjective result by the objective method. So if inner experience is what you seek, you will most likely reach it by the wise use of the objective process.

Now, in conclusion, examine your sermons—those you have already preached—and see if they are of the objective type. Let us try to hold out before the hearers things that are ends in themselves. Think of the many subjects bearing upon external realities, such as God, Christ, the Cross, the Church and any number of Bible texts. Today I heard a fine, wholesome sermon on "God's Church Shall Stand." We left the church with a feeling of courage and optimism, unafraid and stronger as we enter upon another week of toil and duty. We are not oppressed and fearful, but inspired by the conviction that the Church, an objective reality, goes marching on, victorious and sure, drawing us on and upward to its own high plane of assurance. When our thoughts are properly objectified, they are also purified.

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

If you, reader, were asked to write down a definition of Christianity, what would be your answer? Doubtless many answers would be in terms of doctrine. It would be quite a difficult task for anyone to write in a few sentences a satisfactory description of our religion.

Some time ago, two sisters met after many years of separation. One of the sisters was concerned much about religion; the other was irritable and selfish. Now it so happened that this latter sister visited in the home of the former for several weeks. When she was about to say good-bye the older sister said, "Well, I want to tell you something, sister. I do not understand your kind of religion, but whatever it is, it makes you much easier to live with."

After all, isn't that a pretty good test of any religion? Some years ago I came across the following statement of Christianity. It is not doctrinal, not theological, but it does express how a Christian should think and act. I submit it because it is something easy to comprehend and decidedly practical:

In the home—it is kindness.
In business—it is honesty.
In society—it is courtesy.
In work—it is fairness.
Toward the unfortunate—it is pity.
Toward the weak—it is help.
Toward wickedness—it is resistance.
Toward the strong—it is trust.
Toward the penitent—it is forgiveness.
Toward the fortunate—it is congratulation.
Toward God—it is reverence and love.—E. A. K., in Christian Sun.

THIRTEEN MISTAKES

1. To attempt to set up your own standards of right and wrong.
2. To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.
3. To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
4. To fail to make allowance for inexperience.
5. To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.
6. Not to yield to unimportant trifles.
7. To look for perfection in our own actions.
8. To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.
9. To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.
10. Not to help everybody, wherever, however, and whenever we can.
11. To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.
12. Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.
13. To estimate by some outside quality when it is that within that makes the man.—Judge McCormick, of San Francisco.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Honor Roll of Churches

Those which have paid all claims, including HERALD subsidy and subscription quotas: First church, Lexington; Shiloh church, Shiloh charge; First church, Burlington; First church, High Point.

These have paid all Annual Conference claims: Gibsonville; Siler City church; Union Grove, Orange charge; Pensacola church; Calvary church; Kannapolis church; Fairfield church, Guilford charge; Flint Ridge church and Hickory Grove church, Liberty charge; Bethel church and Bethany church, Randolph charge; First church, Thomasville; Community church, Thomasville; West End, Thomasville; Hebron and Efland churches, Orange charge; Friendship church; Cedar Cliff, Mt. Hermon charge; State Street and Bethesda churches, State Street charge; Concord church.

North Davidson Charge, Rev. C. L. Grant, Pastor

I held the fourth quarterly conference of this charge at Canaan church on Wednesday. All churches were represented, the business of the church given thoughtful consideration. Union Grove church, which had disbanded, was dropped from the plan of appointments. The pastor's salary was fixed the same as paid by the three churches this year. Bethesda was invited to come back to this charge. The delegate was instruucted to return the present pastor for next year. Forty-one members had been added during the year. All churches were not yet out with annual conference budget, but expected this to be paid in full. Canaan had paid pastor in full for the year.

First Church, Thomasville, Rev. T. G. Madison, Pastor

I held this fourth quarterly conference Wednesday night. Good attendance. Some fine reports were made. Delegate was instructed to ask for return of present pastor. Not all salary was paid; deferred fixing salary for next year until called session of fourth quarterly conference. This church has had a splendid period of growth during the present pastorate, and we hope it shall continue to make progress. All Annual Conference budget paid and HERALD subsidy and subscription quota secured.

Asheboro, First Church, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Pastor

I visited this church Sunday morning. There was a fair sized congregation present, and they gave good attention to the message. This is Pastor Stubbins' fourth year. The church has had a steady growth under his direction; a splendid brick parsonage has been built as one of the evidences of his labors. I found Bro. R. R. Ross cheerful and ready to discuss the church, and especially the Children's Home. It was through his thoughtfulness that a car load of cattle was sent to the Home by the government recently. Mrs. Hammer appeared to be enduring her confinement splendidly, and we hope to see her out again over the conference very soon. Neither of these could attend the church services. We enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. R. R. Ross and his daughter, Miss Esther, sharing with Pastor Stubbins in the noonday meal.

Pleasant Grove Church, Rev. H. L. Powell, Pastor

The attendance at this fourth quarterly conference was affected somewhat by rain, but its harmony was fine. The usual business was transacted promptly. Pastor Powell was requested to return; salary to be fixed at the congregational meeting next Sunday. The general condition of the church is greatly improved and the people are encouraged as they look to the new year.

HONESTY IN LITTLE THINGS

Of course you would do the square thing in a big business deal. If you were cashier in a large bank, your account would be perfectly straight. You would never think of proving false if large sums of money were intrusted to you for investment.

Very well.

But be sure that you are just as conscientious in the very little things that touch your life every day.

You get on a crowded street car. The conductor fails to take up your fare. You ride to your destination. Would you dare get off the car without paying your fare?

Not if you are honest.

You go to the store and buy a half-dozen pencils. When you get home you find that the clerk by mistake let you have a dozen. What are you going to do with that extra six you did not pay for? You will take them straight back and either return them or pay for them and then keep them.

Nothing else would be honest.

If you are not honest in little things, you cannot be trusted with great concerns.

If you are not honest in youth, you are not likely to be honest in middle life and old age.

Be honest.

Be honest in little things.

Be honest in everything.—Kind Words.

WOMEN TO MEET AT CONFERENCE, THURSDAY

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, President of the North Carolina Branch, Women's Work, is asking the women to come to Conference on Thursday of next week and to meet in an informal conference with Miss Bettie Brittingham, the Executive Secretary for Women's Work in the General church, on Thursday afternoon.

OUR STORY PAGE

LITTLE JENNIE BANG

"Bang!" went the front door. Mother jumped, then sighed.

"Bang!" went the back door. Phoebe, the cook, shook an impatient fist.

"Sometime I gwine fix you for dat."

By-and-by Jennie, the little door banger, came in from play and sat down to practice her lesson. But she had no more than started to work when Phoebe came into the room and she banged the door as only a great strong woman could do.

Jennie almost jumped off her chair. Then Phoebe went on out the other door and banged it just as hard as she could. Poor Jennie jumped again.

Then brother Clyde came in and he gave the door a terrible bang. Then he went out the other door and banged it.

Jennie stopped playing. "How can anyone practice a music lesson with everyone banging the doors, I'd like to know?" she cried.

Then sister Marcia came into the room, giving the door another hard bang. She got her work basket from the table and went out again, banging the door still harder.

Poor Jennie was getting nervous. She lost all interest in her lesson. Then she heard Mother coming downstairs. "I will have to ask Mother to make everyone stop being so noisy," she thought.

Then Mother came into the room and "bang" went the door again.

That was too much for poor Jennie, and the tears came into her eyes.

"Oh, Mother!" she cried, "how can I practice with everyone banging doors like that? Why, even you made such a noise that I jumped. I am getting too nervous to practice."

"Why," said Mother, in a surprised voice, "I thought you liked to hear doors banged."

Jennie was too surprised to answer. "You never go through a door without banging it," said Mother.

Jennie looked at Mother. For a moment she did not understand.

"You know you keep us all on edge with your continual banging, and Phoebe, who is very nervous, is threatening to leave the house." Then she went out and left Jennie to her thoughts.

It did not take her long to realize, as she looked back over the past few months, that she had acquired a habit of banging doors and that she had only laughed when the folk had asked her not to do it.

"Oh, my," she said, as she turned to her lesson again, "I didn't know what it was like to have people banging doors all about you. Well, I have banged my last door."—Unknown.

HOW GOD ANSWERED HANNAH'S PRAYER

"Where have you been, Richard?" asked Mother, as Richard came into the room.

"Oh, I've been to see Mrs. White," answered Richard with a smile on his face. "She says she gets lonesome and likes to have me come to see her. She told me she wished that she had a little boy like me."

"Yes, I'm sure I would be very lonesome if I didn't have my little boy, and my girl, too," said Mother, giving both of the children a hug. "Shall I tell you a story about how God answered the prayer of a woman who asked God to give her a little baby boy?"

"Yes, please do," answered Mary and Richard as they pulled their chairs up close to Mother's.

So Mother began:

"There was a woman whose name was Hannah. She had a husband who loved her very dearly. He gave her gifts to show his love to her, but Hannah wasn't happy. She loved her husband, but she had no children and she wanted a baby boy, oh, so much!

"One day Hannah asked God to send her a baby boy. She told God she would give the boy back to Him to serve Him all his life if only He would answer her prayer. After she had prayed, she felt better and was happy again.

"God heard Hannah's prayer and sent her a baby boy. She named him Samuel. Now she was very happy, but she didn't forget her promise to God. When Samuel was still very small, she took him to the priest at the Temple and left him there to serve God. He helped Eli, the priest, in the work around the Temple, and later he became a great Prophet.

Every year Hannah came to see Samuel when she went to the Temple. She made a linen coat for him and brought it with her when she came.

"God remembered Hannah's sacrifice and gave her three more sons and two daughters to make up for the one son she had given to Him."

"Isn't that just like God?" said Richard.

"Yes, dear, it is. God always gives us more than we can ever give Him."—The Pilot.

WHERE LOVE IS

"It must be hard to live in a little home like that," said Helen, who was used to her mansion home on the hill.

The next week her father's car was stalled in front of that little home around the bend on the country road, and they had to stay there for dinner.

"Mother, weren't the children kind to one another?" Helen said afterwards. "They never grumbled a bit at their food, and it was plain bread and butter and potatoes."

Mother and daughter exchanged a glance. Both knew that in their own rich home someone often grumbled at the food. Helen also recalled the quarrel which she had had with her brother.

"I guess it wouldn't be so bad in those little homes if people inside loved one another as they do," she said.

"No, it is better to be poor and to have a heart rich in love, than it is to be ever so rich and have strife and ill will in your heart," replied her mother.—Unknown.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

DISTRICT RALLY

September 30 I attended a district rally at Oak Grove church on Cleveland charge, District No. 14. This district is composed of Fallston, Cleveland, Caroleen, Bess Chapel, Lincolnton and Connelly Springs. A good attendance and very much interest was manifested. Mrs. B. L. Heavner, of Vale, is the very capable chairman. She is interested and is doing for the work, with the assistance of Mrs. H. F. Fogleman, the wide-awake secretary, just the thing that is needed. The program was well planned and carried out, a number taking part. Miss Mary E. Young, of High Point College, spoke, using the T. O. Creed as a basis for her speech, especially emphasizing tithing, both time and talents. [illegible] spoke on organization and tried to specify [illegible] duties of the various officers. Rev. H. F. PROSPERITY

Confidence and Constructiveness,
  Are partners in success;
They work together hopefully,
  In times of storm and stress.

No note they take of dismal doubt,

They labor on consistently,—
  To high ideals are true.

When business seems to be depressed,
  They toil on as before;
With steadfastness they persevere,

HISTORY OF SPRING HILL M. P. CHURCH

The fourth Spring Hill Methodist Protestant church was dedicated May 20, 1934. We have no official record but Spring Hill church was founded, the best we can find by the older people of today, soon after the separation from the M. E. church in 1828, by Rev. William Penn Pickett, Rev. Alson Gray and others. A log church was located on two acres of land which were received from the Rev. Mr. Vestal, who was a Quaker preacher. We have no record of a deed, thereby supposing the deed was destroyed in the court-house fire of the Civil War. The first body to rest in Spring Hill cemetery was Sam Welborn's daughter.

The log church built in 1828 was used for worship and county free school. After the Civil War a small frame church was erected with one door, for worship service and free school likewise. We can find no members of this church living today.

The third church was erected in 1884 and was recognized as a nice country churh of its day. We are proud of the progress of those days. There was a right of way given from the stage road to the church for a private drive for the church from Sam Welborn in 1885. Later Wilson Cecil and wife, Lucy, purchased 40 acres of land from the Welborn estate and at their death gave it to Spring Hill church.

The fourth church was erected in 1928, being an up-to-date country brick church with a great outlook of young people surrounding it. We are hoping by the prayers of the members of this church a greater future than heretofore.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Woman's Auxiliary, New Merkle, Ala., 9 dresses, 8 sheets, 7 pillow cases, 3 sleepers; Mebane, 48 half-gallon cans of fruit and vegetables; Orange Circuit, 138 half-gallon and 38 quart cans fruit and vegetables, 7 bushels sweet potatoes, one-half bushel wheat, 1 peck apples, 2 coats, and some dried apples; Canaan, N. Davidson, 4 bushels sweet potatoes, one quart and one half-gallon can fruit, 2 gallons molasses and one package of clothing; Spring Hill, N. Davidson, 3½ gallons molasses, 10 pounds flour, 5 bushels sweet potatoes, 3 bushels Irish potatoes; 6 pumpkins, and 1 bushel corn; Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson, 1 bushel pears, 5 bushels sweet potatoes, 5 quarts and 5 half-gallon cans of fruit, 2 gallons molasses, 1 bushel corn, 3 pecks Irish potatoes, and 1 package of clothing; Finksburg, Md., 3 towels, 7 washcloths, 20 handkerchiefs, 8 cakes of soap, 1 box dusting powders, and 1 box talcum powders; Kannapolis Auxiliary, 22 dresses, 32 pieces of underwear, 1 pair of slippers, 10 towels, 1 coat and 1 dress.

Our Special Need

We are in need of a goodly number of bed sheets for single beds, regulation size. Also coats for girls and clothing for boys.

Financial Report

Our financial report to conference must be completed on Tuesday, November 13. Money mailed to us on Monday, November 12, will reach us in time for that report. Please mail all money collected for the Home in first and second Sunday offerings not later than Monday, November 12. We need the money, you are anxious for it to get into our report, and so are we.

Thank you and God bless each of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Graham.—The fourth quarterly conference was held last Tuesday night. The members voted for the return of our present pastor for another year. We are hoping the conference will send Rev. Mr. Auman back to us again.

The Lord's Supper was observed at the 11 o'clock service Sunday. At the close of the service the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: Trustees, N. E. Sykes, chairman, W. R. Goley, S. S. Holt, A. N. Neese, W. C. Goley, R. R. Bain, Isaac Holt, J. A. Webster; stewards, P. B. Core, chairman, Mrs. Lawrence Cheek, Mrs. A. M. Cook, Mrs. H. M. Rogers, Mrs. J. D. Lineus, Mrs. Winfield Martin, John Thompson, R. A. Davis; class leaders, J. L. Amick, M. R. Kirkman; pianist, Mrs. Don S. Holt; assistants, Mrs. C. C. Burke, Mrs. Charles Cates; S. S. superintendent, Don S. Holt; assistants, Junius Neese, H. M. Rogers; S. S. secretary, Willard Flintom; assistant, John Anglin; S. S. pianist, Laura Jane Neese.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Monday night, November 12. Circle No. 1 met Monday afternoon with Mrs. S. S. Holt, Circle No. 2 with Mrs. C. H. Love Monday evening, and Circle No. 3 with Miss Gladys Amick Monday evening.

We have not yet paid all our claims, but are still working and hoping to pay up before conference. REPORTER.

Pilot Church, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Charge.—It has been some time since I have reported through the Herald, but we have been very busy for some time.

The first Sunday in October was our annual home-coming day. The weather was fine and one of the largest crowds was present that ever attended our home-comings. Members and friends from around here and from most all nearby towns and cities were here. We are always glad to welcome back our friends and neighbors. The service started with the congregation singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." At 11 o'clock Mr. Frank Llewellyn gave us a very inspiring message on "The World's Progress and Its Relation to the Bible." Dinner was spread on the grounds in picnic style.

The afternoon session was taken up by singing. The Mackey quartet was present and rendered several beautiful selections which were enjoyed by all, and the Mt. Zion choir was present and entertained us with several beautiful hymns. We wish to thank all of these good people who came and helped us to enjoy the day.

Mr. Hunter informed the church that he was resigning from active pastorate on account of failing health. Mr. Hunter has been with us for a long time and will be greatly missed, but we are glad he is settling down near us so he can be with us sometimes at least.

On the third Saturday in October about 80 of the Pilot church Sunday school students motored to the White Sulphur Springs on a picnic trip. We all spread dinner together there beside the river and enjoyed a good social hour talking and eating. We came back by the Flat Rock at Mt. Airy and this was very interesting for the children, as not many of them had ever visited a granite quarry. Everyone seemed to enjoy the day and are looking forward to having many more enjoyable outings together.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers. REPORTER.

Reidsville.—Recently we organized a Senior Christian Endeavor Society in our church. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Lola McCollum; vice president, Mr. Paul York; secretary, Miss Nellie Mitchell; treasurer, Miss Nannie Pegram; reporter, Mrs. Madge Dixon, and pianist, Mrs. Louise Smith.

The first business and social meeting was held at the home of Misses Lola and Effie McCollum. Miss Lola McCollum, president, presided over the meeting. The devotional was led by Dr. George R. Brown. A number of favorite hymns were sung and several committees were appointed. Plans were made for securing literature for the society. Several new members were enrolled.

A Hallowe'en contest was engaged in which afforded much amusement. The guests were then invited to the dining room where a delicious course of refreshments was served, carrying out the Hallowe'en idea.

Our society has a splendid enrollment and we are hoping that we may do things worth while and much good may be accomplished thereby. MADGE T. DIXON, Reporter.

Kernersville Charge.—We are now finishing our first year on the Kernersville Charge; there have been several reports to the Herald this year, however there are many things that have been done that we have not reported. This has been one of the busy years for this pastor. We have found so many things that needed to be done. While we have accomplished many things, we yet see so much that should be done. I have many reasons for believing that this charge will give the pastor a good report to carry to the annual conference next week. The Kernersville church is now completing a fine improvement at the church. A new heating plant is being installed, and as there was no basement we had to make one. This has been done, and we used the new furnace for the first time yesterday, and we hope to dedicate it next Sunday. This improvement is costing about $400, and our Ladies' Aid Society has been of great help to us in paying for the furnace. They have already paid $170 on this account. They held a bazaar and supper recently and made over $100. We have observed their great interest and loyalty this year, for they work with such a determination to succeed that failure is almost impossible with them. May God bless them!

All the other organizations on this charge have done a fine work this year. The Ladies' Aid societies at Pine Grove and at Sandy Ridge are loyal and they have done a good work this year. Pine Grove, Ai, and Kernersville churches have already paid the pastor in full, and are now busy raising the balance on the Annual Conference budget.

We will hold our fourth quarterly conference Saturday this week at 2 p. m. Dr. R. M. Andrews will preside at the conference, and we are expecting all of the official members to be present.

Last Sunday was a good day at Pine Grove church. Since our last service there, the folks had raised the money and had the church painted inside, costing $75, all paid. This is a fine improvement and the Ladies' Aid, the C. E., and Sunday school co-operated in a fine way in helping raise the money to pay for this needed improvement. Pine Grove is one of our best rural churches. O. B. WILLIAMS, Pastor.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Charge.—Brother E. A. Bingham preached a good sermon for us on the third Sunday and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. We were especially glad to see such a large number partake. He preached for us again on the fourth Sunday, this being his last appointment for this conference year. We are hoping he will be sent back for another year and will be disappointed if he is not returned. We have learned to love him and his family. The quarterly conference voted for his return.

Church officials for the new year have been elected. The most of these served the church during the past year. Our Sunday school is good and we hope it will be still better. And it would be better if we could get the people to come. We have Sunday school every Sunday at 10 o'clock and everybody is welcome. Let them come, both young and old, and let us meet and pray and sing together and it will enable us to live better and we will get on a higher plane of Christian living. May the Lord help every one of us to do our duty this year and if we do our duty I believe there will be great things accomplished in the future. LIZZIE CRANFORD, Reporter.

Siler City Charge.—It has not been necessary for the pastor of this charge to do much reporting this year. Our efficient reporters from each church have kept the readers of the Herald informed as to our activities. All organizations are functioning in a normal way. The three Sunday schools are doing good work. It has been said that it should be gratifying when the attendance is larger than the church enrollment. This is true at Siler City and Piney Grove. The Senior C. E. at Siler City is still doing splendidly. A young people's meeting is held at Hope church each third Sunday night just before preaching. Sometimes the meetings are largely attended. We observed all the special days and received offerings for the different causes. We are doing our best to close the year in a successful way.

Revs. B. M. Williams, W. H. Neese, and C. H. Hill have our thanks for their good preaching and splendid work in our revival meetings. We believe that good and lasting impressions were made.

Just recently book racks have been added to the pews at Hope church, and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Poe have donated a communion set to Piney Grove church. We are pleased to report that this charge has raised the quota for Herald subscriptions and paid the subsidy in full. This was made possible because of the splendid Herald agents at each church.

Some of the most loyal Methodist Protestants in the North Carolina Conference are found on Siler City Charge. They stand behind every program of our conference and are willing to co-operate with the pastor in every way. All through the year they have remembered the pastor with fruits and vegetables. Some who are not members of our church have made donations from time to time. It will take too much space to give names. May the Father of us all abundantly bless them.

The visit of Dr. Andrews to this charge some time ago was an inspiration. His messages were helpful to us all. H. L. ISLEY.

Orange Charge.—We were pleased to have Dr. Andrews preside over our fourth quarterly conference, held at Hebron church Saturday, November 3. Some of the reports were especially encouraging. Our problems were freely and frankly discussed, both as to the past and future of this work.

Efland and Hebron churches paid out today (Sunday) in full all items on College and A. C. B. interests. Thirty-three dollars more from Chestnut Ridge will pay the entire charge out. Hope to raise this next Sunday.

We are looking forward now to successfully closing this year's work; meet in annual conference; then enter wholeheartedly into the new year's work. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Shiloh, Shiloh Charge.—Sunday the last preaching service for this conference year was held at Shiloh. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, gave us his last message for the year, using as his text "What I Have Written, I Have Written." After the sermon, the church treasurer read his report, which included not only an account of all money paid out, but also of all money paid in and the exact amount paid by each member. This was indeed an interesting and also a good report. Out of a membership of 344, there were only about 75 who gave nothing. May we give you a brief summary of the year's work:

Pastor's salary, paid by church, $840; World Service, paid by Y. M. W. A. class, $122; college assessment, paid by Sunshine Band class, $36; A. C. expense, paid by Brotherhood class, $30; A. C. debt, paid by Circles Nos. 1 and 3, $18; church extension, paid by Mothers' class No. 1, $15; superannuats, paid by Mothers' class No. 2, $15; Herald subsidy, paid by Circle No. 2, $10.

Shiloh's quota of Herald subscriptions was raised. All incidental expenses are paid to date.

Shiloh church now has 344 members. We have lost four by death this year, namely, Raeford Waitman, Obie Waitman, Joe Byerly, and Mrs. Charlie Mosely. There have been 24 additions.

At the close of the service there was a very impressive installation service for the following officers: Sunday school superintendent, H. A. Leonard; primary department superintendent, Miss Emma Berrier; class leaders, Jeff Berrier, R. B. Sink, Jeff Fritts; treasurer, J. L. Evans; pianist, Miss Mabel Berrier; assistant pianist, Miss Gladys Evans; choir leader, Floyd M. Leonard; church reporter, Miss Mabel Berrier; trustees, Edgar Waitman, Jesse Hill, Levi Evans, F. L. Koonts, C. W. Sink, B. L. Leathermon, A. J. Weaver; stewards, J. L. Evans, Ray Leathermon, Protus Koonts, Wiley Shoaf, A. W. Beck, Ira Koonts, Julius Lanier, Dayton Koonts, Gray Barnhart, Pryor Koonts, W. B. Swicegood, Alvin Sink, D. S. Penninger, J. M. Shoaf, Kyle Sink, Jones Leonard, Hugh Lanning, Dolly Leonard, Bertha Koonts, Carrie Cope, Emma Berrier; ushers, Ray Leathermon, Protus Koonts, Lawrence Evans, Dayton Koonts, Floyd Leatherman.

The church has been painted both inside and outside; beautiful shrubs have been planted around the church. It presents a beautiful appearance. O yes! We have new song books, too.

There will be a union Thanksgiving service for all the community at Shiloh on Thursday night, November 29. Come and be in a good service. There will be a good speaker.

There will be an auxiliary meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Koonts on Friday night. All members of all three circles are urged to be present.

On Monday night the Workers' Council met at the church and had a helpful and interesting session. Very good reports were given from the different departments and classes of church and Sunday school. The Sunday school enrollment has reached 318 with an average attendance of 285 for the past quarter. The church seems to be alive spiritually. One cause of this spiritual life is that each adult or young people's class reported a great percentage of members as daily Bible readers and intercessors. When people partake of the Bread of Life, breathe the atmosphere of prayer and the Holy Spirit, and take the exercise of loving service, growth is inevitable. So may we always abound in the work of the Lord, and grow in grace.

Shiloh unanimously requests the return of our highly esteemed pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge. Shiloh charge has raised the pastor's salary to $1,500.

May next year be a good year for not only Shiloh church, but for all who love the Lord, and may Christ really live in all who profess to be His followers.

Yours in His blessed name,
MRS. WILEY SHOAF, Asst. Reporter.

Thomasville First.—After being "jacked up" about my negligence I will try and report some of our work which I should have written two weeks ago. It is not because nothing has been accomplished.

On the fourth Sunday in October the Men's Bible class held their Rally Day service, which marked their goal of 100 men. They now have their 100 men and had to use the church auditorium for their program. They secured a very fine speaker for the occasion who is known throughout this county, Hon. L. A. Martin, of Lexington, N. C.

We enjoyed the splendid "sermon" he gave us. Also another feature of the program was the "Main Street Orchestra." They played several numbers for us but we were very sorry they could not remain throughout the entire service.

The Minnis Circle gave the thank-offering play the fourth Sunday night in October with a large audience present.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at the church October 31 with Dr. R. M. Andrews presiding. The entire membership present voted for the return of our pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Madison have been with us for five years and their fellowship with us has been sweet. Great good has been accomplished through them. We hope they will return for another year with us.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Alfred Myers last Monday night with a large crowd present despite the rain. The devotional service was led by Mrs. S. R. Westmoreland. Several items of business were discussed, and also reports from different circles. Our treasurer's reports have been very encouraging for the past several months. Our auxiliary is very much alive.

We were glad to welcome to our auxiliary four new members, Mrs. Lee Freedle, Mrs. H. N. Lackey, Mrs. David Watts, and Mrs. Robert Williams. After the business, Mrs. Myers, assisted by Mrs. Theron Everhart, served tempting refreshments. The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. John C. Lloyd in December.

The Men's Bible class will hold their banquet on Thursday night of this week at the Methodist Hut. This promises to be a great event for the men.

Spring Church Charge.—We are now winding up our third year's work on this field. Indications are that the work has steadily gone forward, though perhaps slowly.

This present year we have observed 18 special days. The attendance and interest were good, and in nearly every case the offering was better than last year. The amount raised for superannuates was more than twice the amount raised a year ago.

The organized women of the charge are hereby commended for their loyalty to the larger program of the church.

In our revival meetings quite a large number reconsecrated themselves to Christ. There were 19 conversions, 16 were baptized, and 19 new members were added to the church roll. While these numbers may seem comparatively small for a year's work, I consider it a good harvest, logical result of good, honest effort on the part of all concerned.

In the recent quarterly conference Bro. R. C. Crew was elected alternate. No change in salary promised. The delegate was instructed to ask for the writer's return, subject to the action of the Annual Conference.

The three years spent here have been pleasant and profitable. Friends have multiplied, and friendships have deepened. Whether we go or stay, it is our hope that the spirit of love and good will now existing between the writer's family and the people may continue to be a source of inspiration, comfort, and consolation. WM. H. NEESE.

Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.—We had a large attendance at Sunday school last Sunday with several visitors present. Our Sunday school is growing and we are trusting and praying that it may continue to grow. We open our school with songs of praise at 9:45 each Sunday morning. We were sorry that our good superintendent and wife had to be absent last Sunday on account of sickness.

Our people appreciated the good talk which our pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, gave us last Sunday. We all hope we may have the Rev. Mr. Love and his good wife with us again next year, as they are so much help to us. Mr. Love filled his regular appointment Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, bringing a wonderful message from the text found in 1 Cor. 11:24. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed, the spirit of Christ pervading the entire audience.

The young people of our community have been holding splendid prayer meetings. The service Sunday afternoon was held at the home of Sister Bridges. They also met at the church at 7:30 with Brother Portenburry as the leader of the prayer meeting. There were a number of splendid talks made. We are proud of our young people.

The Ladies' Aid will meet on Friday, November 9, at 7:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Love as the speaker. We feel that the women are much help to the church. We want to do our best for Our Heavenly Father, so that some day we may hear Him say, Well done, thou good and faithful servant.

DOVIE BRASWELL, Reporter.

Asheville.—Everyone had a grand time at the carnival. Some folks have an idea that a Christian must be long-faced—but we don't. We agree with Solomon, who said: "To everything there is a season and a time for every purpose under the heaven—a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance." (Eccl. 3:1, 4). It was worth it all to hear Nancy Clouse calling: "This way to see Blue Beard's wives! Buy your popcorn and candy here! Don't forget to have your fortune told or to see the Chamber of Horrors! Hot dogs, barbecue, and coffee in the booth on your left!" and all the other attractions of the carnival. After all had visited the different booths a variety program was given by the following: Misses Frances Cunningham, Nancy Clouse, Fannie Miller, and Melle Smith, and Messrs. J. H. Bailey and D. J. Eller. Miss Smith, Miss Clouse, Miss Cunningham, and Mrs. J. H. Bailey certainly worked hard to make the carnival the success it was, and we hope you feel repaid for your efforts.

Last week I failed to mention two of our children who were honored the week previously. Little Miss Margaret Ann Wilson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robey Wilson, won a silver cup and $10 in the American Legion Baby Show, and also the health cup in her group. Miss Lola Johnson, one of our Intermediates, was elected president of the student body at Claxton school. We are proud of our children.

The officers of the Senior Christian Endeavor group will be elected on Friday night of this week.

A meeting of the old and new stewards was held immediately after church service last Sunday. All are urged to make a special effort to see all members and encourage them to help financially in clearing up all claims. It must be done, so don't be surprised if you are urged to do a little more than your bit. This is our church, and we all want it to be a growing church; so everyone fall in line and co-operate with your stewards. Let's close the year in fine style. The new stewards were organized at a meeting held at the church on Monday evening, Mr. J. R. Moore being elected as chairman of the board, and Mrs. C. B. Baker being appointed corresponding secretary. Plans are going forward for making the coming year a "banner" year at the Asheville church—your co-operation is solicited.

The fourth quarterly conference will meet on Wednesday evening of this week, at which time the budget recommended by the Board of Stewards for the coming year will be presented and all other business incident to the closing of the fiscal year will be taken up. Prior to this conference, however, a chicken supper, sponsored by the whole church, will be served. The ladies in charge of this supper are Mrs. H. L. Hauner, Mrs. J. R. Moore, and Mrs. Y. D. Eller.

Circle No. 1: Mrs. J. R. Moore, chairman, with Mrs. E. A. Bolick, 23 Magnolia.

Circle No. 2: Mrs. J. F. Minnis, chairman, with Mrs. Minnis, 165 Hillside Street.

Both chairmen reported good attendances and helpful meetings.

The Fawcett Bible class won the attendance record this week. In the adult department the Frances Cunningham Philathea class led in the amount of collections, while in the children's department Mrs. Williams' junior boys gained the honor of the largest collection. The first-year junior boys maintained their record of having the largest per capita collection.

We regret to report that colds are prevalent among our members, but glad to report that none are seriously ill, for which we are thankful. It is strange indeed that both Miss Melle Smith and Mr. L. S. Neville should be on the sick list.

We were glad to have Mrs. W. E. Teague with us on Sunday. Welcome home, Mrs. Teague!

A special musical program will be given on Sunday evening under the direction of Mr. James H. Bailey, and all are cordially invited.

M. L. B.

Efland, Orange.—As we end another conference year we feel that much has been accomplished in our church this year. Of course there is much yet to be done and with the help of our Great Leader we hope to press on untiringly to do our bit to help the great cause.

I will only take space to enumerate a few of the outstanding things our faithful pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, has directed us in doing. The religious survey added to our church and Sunday school a number of new members, besides giving us a better insight to the work to be done at home.

Our church debt has been considerably reduced during the year and plans are now being formulated for a special campaign for this purpose in the near future.

The Ladies' Auxiliary has increased from one circle to three and from a meager handful of faithful workers to include practically all the ladies of our own church and some of other churches. In addition to the annual pledge, a substantial amount has been raised and paid on other claims of the church.

We would not forget the men and their worthy undertakings. The first outstanding event sponsored by the men was their March fish dinner, which was an outstanding event of the year and a great success. This will be repeated on November 10, and we are hoping to have another very pleasant and profitable evening. A nice cook stove was purchased with a part of the proceeds for the church kitchen.

A manless wedding of much interest was enjoyed in the high school auditorium some time ago when Circle No. 2 sponsored the union of two of their members. Space does not permit the names of all attendants, but all who were present thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

Circle No. 3 was entertained by Miss Mable Sykes Monday evening. An interesting program was rendered which included a report from the Concord district meeting by Miss Sykes, and some facts from Rev. E. Lester Ballard's illustrated lecture on his trip to the Holy Lands which was given at Chestnut Ridge church last Friday night by other members.

We were indeed glad when we learned that the fourth quarterly conference which met with the Hebron church Saturday, November 3, voted unanimously for the return of our present pastor. Ten years is a long time for a pastor and people to labor together, and of course there have been trials and disappointments along with the satisfaction and pleasure that we have been afforded, but we feel that the latter by far overbalances the former and that at the end of these ten years our church and the entire work as a whole is much above where Pastor Williams found it. Some of our leading members say that they feel that this has been the best year we have had during the tenure of our present pastor.

Efland is just about paid up on all claims and we are hoping to go on the A-Plus Honor Roll.

As our pastors and Christian workers meet in this great event of our church we pray that they may be directed by a Higher Worker and that much good may be done.

It is needless to say that we want our pastor to return. We would feel lost without him, but in all things we say, "His will, not ours, be done." If it is His will we will be happy to have Brother Williams and his family return to us.

PATTYE J. CRUTCHFIELD, Reporter.

First Church, Lexington.—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, who met his appointment with the Mount Carmel church, the 11 o'clock service was conducted by C. L. Hedrick. His subject was "Grace." The Scripture lesson was the fourth chapter of Hebrews. The sermon subject for the evening service, which was in charge of the pastor, was "Am I Right or Am I Wrong?" His text, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death," was found in the 25th verse of the 16th chapter of Proverbs. At this service Mr. and Mrs. Walter Everhart united with the church by transfer.

Next Sunday evening a thank-offering service will be given under the direction of Mrs. L. B. Koontz.

The following Sunday school officials were elected and installed last Sunday: Superintendent, H. C. Koontz; assistant superintendent, Oscar Koontz; secretary and treasurer, Ernest Hamilton. The Christian Endeavor elected the following officers at a business-social last Tuesday evening: President, Paul Wallace; vice president, Juanita Easter; secretary and treasurer, Margaret Lea Swink; reporter, Ernest Hamilton. Various committees were also appointed.

MARGARET LEA SWINK, Reporter.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The protracted meeting began at Pleasant Hill on Sunday morning, October 21, with the pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, in charge. Three services were held on Sunday. The night sermon was delivered by Rev. Mr. Grant, of the North Davidson charge. Services were held during the week in the afternoon and night with Rev. Mr. Grant delivering the messages, which were very helpful and inspiring. The attendance was very good throughout the series of meetings. The messages were received with much interest and spiritual uplift, and resulted in three professions of faith, with these three additions to our church.

Much grief has come to our church over the loss of one of its members, Mrs. Alice Whitman Beroth, who was an active member in the church. Mrs. Beroth was a friend to all, and will be greatly missed in her church and community. We feel our loss is her eternal gain.

Siler City.—It has been some time since you have heard from us but we have not been idle. All activities of the church have been moving along nicely. Mr. Isley filled his last appointment for this conference year the first Sunday morning. He was at his best and gave us a real gospel message from the text, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." (Rev. 2 and part of 10th verse). The Lord's Supper was administered at this time. Special music was furnished by Miss Verda Shaw Fox, who sang very sweetly "In the Hour of Trial." At the close of the service, officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: Trustees, L. L. Woody, G. F. Siler, J. A. Cooper, W. H. Andrew, and C. H. Fox; stewards, T. L. Smith, W. E. Sharpe, L. L. Wrenn, William Wright, Misses Clata F. Andrew, Sallie Smith, and Mrs. L. L. Woody; treasurer, Mr. W. E. Sharpe; Sunday school superintendent, Mr. L. L. Wrenn; class leaders, Mesdames D. L. Johnson, J. A. Cooper, and Miss Flossie Siler; pianist, Mrs. C. E. Brody; assistant pianist, Miss Minnie Cooper; ushers, Messrs. Irvin Ellington, Charles Stone Woody, Hubert Stone, John Robert Forrester, D. G. Fox, and Cletus Whitehead; reporter, Mrs. J. A. Cooper; janitor, Hubert Stone.

The fourth quarterly conference was held last Wednesday night just after prayer meeting. At this service, Mr. L. L. Wrenn gave a talk on the M. P. churches of the Chatham Circuit for the past 38 years. He told of many happenings and how the several pastors had labored under trying circumstances, yet they never had any intentions of giving up. Many of these good ministers have gone on to their reward but "their works do follow them." This talk was very interesting and everyone present enjoyed it immensely. Every church was well represented at the conference and the reports were very encouraging. The delegate can doubtless go to conference with all claims paid at all the churches. Mr. Isley's report was fine and showed he has not been idle but has been about "the Master's business." Mr. Wrenn, our delegate, was instructed by a unanimous vote to bring Mr. Isley back.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church Tuesday night, October 30, with eleven members and two visitors present. The president conducted the devotionals with Miss Minnie Cooper reading the Scripture and Miss Sallie Smith leading in prayer. After the business the meeting was turned over to the program committee. Circle No. 2, with Miss Sallie Smith leader, gave an interesting program on "Problems Faced on the Mission Fields," with each member taking part. Our auxiliary accepted one of the $25 quilt squares, sent out by the woman's branch, the proceeds going to the hospital in India. We are glad to let others know the $25 has been collected and has been sent to Miss Apple, branch treasurer. "Go thou and do likewise." Our motto is: "We can do things."

Our annual Rally Day was observed the second Sunday night in October. Miss Flossie Siler was leader and had charge of the program, which consisted of songs, recitations, pantomimes and a pageant, "Train Up a Child." The program was good and showed the children had been well trained. Collection amounted to $7.70.

Mr. Evans Stone is home after spending the past year in Richmond, Va., taking a business course.

We were glad to see Mrs. B. E. Fox at church after an absence of three Sundays on account of illness.

First Church, Winston-Salem.—A very interesting and impressive service was held at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday morning by Dr. Bates, which was an installation service. The officers and leaders of the church were installed and their specific duty was pointed out. Dr. Bates preached his sermon from I Corinthians 4:1, a very helpful message it was. If each officer and every member of our church, both young and old, will try a little harder and be a little more determined to reach our goal, there's no reason why we shouldn't end our work as a church more successfully than ever before during the ensuing year.

The Boosters' class, the young people's class of our Sunday school, held a very enjoyable meeting Monday night, with the president, Miss Helen Bates, on Carolina avenue. They hold a meeting each month and plan for their class, as a unit, to grow bigger and better in the church school. It really is a fine class, with a wonderful co-operative spirit, and the accomplishments of this group are splendid.

A few Sundays ago the Sunday school officers were installed. Mr. B. K. Millaway, the retiring superintendent, was hard to let go. He was such a good superintendent and such a noble character until it wasn't hard to hear what he had to say and try one's best to co-operate and carry out his plans for a bigger and better school. The newly acquired superintendent is getting along well, however. This man happens to be Mr. Dick Whitaker, a very devoted and loyal person.

The Woman's Missionary Circles are very active and are accumulating reasonably fast on their budgets for the passing year.

Forsyth.—The fourth quarterly conference was held at Mt. Carmel church Monday night, October 29. In the absence of President Andrews, who had planned to be with us but was unable to do so on account of sickness, Dr. C. W. Bates, pastor of First church, Winston-Salem, presided over the conference.

About 35 official members were present. Encouraging reports were made by the chairmen of the various boards and other officers. The pastor's salary will be paid in full and a good showing will be made on the budgets. The salary was fixed the same as last year and the delegate, W. G. White, was instructed by unanimous vote of the conference to use his influence to have the present pastor returned for another year.

Although the reporters on the charge have done little reporting, I feel that the year has been a very successful one. There has been a net gain in membership of 25. It has been easier to raise the finances than last year, and the general condition of all churches is encouraging.

I wish to thank these good people for the many kindnesses shown us. Also for the fine spirit of co-operation that has been manifested throughout the entire conference year.

R. A. HUNTER.

Flat Rock Charge.—We had a good attendance at Bethel church last Sunday morning for the last service of this conference year. The election of church officers was held and the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed.

The attendance was reduced considerably at Gideon's Grove in the afternoon on account of the funeral services for Mrs. D. A. Walker at Palestine church. We were pleased to have with us at Gideon's Grove church Rev. B. A. Culp, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Winston-Salem, an evangelist of the Blue Ridge-Atlantic conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. He delivered a splendid, inspiring and edifying sermon, using as a basis for the helpful discourse the first three verses of the 23rd Psalm.

Funeral services for Mrs. D. A. Walker, member of Palestine church, were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, attended by one of the largest gatherings ever seen at Palestine church. The pastor was assisted in the services by Rev. J. P. Pegg, of Burlington, a former pastor, and Rev. J. C. Preston, of the Church of Christ, Stokesdale. An obituary will appear elsewhere in the Herald.

The regular monthly meeting of the Mission Band of Gideon's Grove church was held at the parsonage last Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. Paul Parrish directed the program for the meeting. An unusual feature of the meeting was a shower of gifts which the boys and girls composing the organization brought to their leader, Mrs. C. B. Way, who expressed to them her appreciation for each gift. The election of officers for the coming year was held, and the following were elected: Paul Parrish, president; Orelia Friddle, vice president; Eloise Friddle, secretary; Louise Way, treasurer; Mrs. C. B.

Way, leader. There were 29 boys and girls present. There are 34 members of the Mission Band.

Our appointments for next Sunday, at Gideon's Grove at 11 a. m. and at Flat Rock at 3 p. m., will finish the work of the present conference year and the first year of our pastorate on Flat Rock charge. The writer has enjoyed the work of the past year, and has found the people of Flat Rock charge to be very responsive to the general work of our denomination, although many members have not been aroused to a sense of their responsibility in the moral and financial support of the church. We are working on our finances and hope to make a good report to the Annual Conference in Greensboro next week. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Union Chapel, Granville.—The thank-offering program given on second Sunday was enjoyed by all and brought in a collection of $19.

Our young people gave a public program on third Sunday morning, embracing the Precious Jewels, Sunshine Circle and Mission Band. We are proud of our splendid group of girls and boys.

The Missionary Auxiliary met in its regular monthly meeting on Friday night in the home of Mrs. T. A. Stone, with both good attendance and a splendid collection.

Mr. Spencer brought a great message last Sunday morning, as he usually does. We hope the conference will see fit to send him back to us.

The following officers were elerted and installed last Sunday for the coming year: Trustees, S. R. Woodlief, S. V. Floyd, J. W. Floyd, J. F. White, T. A. Stone, T. T. Ellis, W. C. Bobbitt, T. C. Woodlief and Ed Parrish; stewards, C. H. Edwards, Lewis Davis, Eddie Clayton and Miss Elanora Floyd; class leader, Mr. L. T. Mitchell; reporter, Mrs. E. C. Huff; treasurer, R. D. Huff; Sunday school superintendent, R. M. Edwards; assistant Sunday school superintendent, T. C. Woodlief. The teachers and the pianist will be elected at a later date.

MRS. E. C. HUFF, Reporter.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—The officers for the ensuing year were elected at the last two services and are as follows: Sunday school superintendent, Milford Byerly; assistant, Robert Swaim; class leaders, Mrs. Henry Byerly, Mrs. Everett Swaim and Bernice Swaim; board of stewards, George Craven, chairman, Henry Byerly, Colon Haynes, Altha Craven, Catherine Sink, Margaret Swaim and Edith York; junior board of stewards, Clyde Swaim, Daniel Craven, Grace Haynes, Jewell Craven and Clark Haynes; ushers, William Hayworth, Otis Moore, Clyde Swaim, Alfred Swaim; trustees, Jim Collett, Carl Swaim, Richard Byerly, Everett Swaim, Julius Craven and Colon Haynes; reporter, Edith York.

The Ladies' Aid Society and Sunshine Circle will meet with Mrs. Mae Haynes Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

We were glad to have our circuit lay leader, Mr. George Berrier, with us Sunday afternoon, and invite him to come back.

The Sunshine Circle will sponsor a play, "Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick," a three-act comedy, Wednesday evening, November 7, at 8 o'clock at the Junior hall at Mechanicsville. In addition to the play, there will be a recitation, negro dialogue and string music. The play will be given again at Hasty High school Tuesday, November 13, at 8 p. m. We invite the public to attend and enjoy an evening of fun.

EDITH YORK, Reporter.

Siler City.—Although our C. E. Society has not had a report in the Herald in a long time, we have not been idle. We have had very interesting meetings with some outdoor meetings. It seems these were enjoyed best of all. We have had different contests on and we have helped in the programs of the church, such as conducting prayer meeting, helping in Rally Day service, and Sunday school. At our last meeting we elected officers for the coming year, as follows: President, Irvin Ellington; vice president, Hubert Stone; secretary and treasurer, Charles Stone; assistant secretary and treasurer, Berta Mae Andrew; corresponding secretary, Miss Clota F. Andrew; pianist, Verda Shaw Fox; assistant pianist, Minnie Cooper.

We are starting off the new year with new zeal and energy and hope to do better than last. MINNIE COOPER, Reporter.

Randolph Charge.—We are now closing our fourth year as pastor on this charge. The people have remembered us through those years with many tokens of kindness. As the years have come and gone they have brought to the pastor an increased kindness and cooperation from the people of this charge. We are going to close the year with the best report, in some respects, we have had since coming to this charge.

Yesterday we were at Mt. Zion, Mt. Pleasant and Bethany. These churches have paid pastor in full for this year. In addition to pastors salary, Bethany paid Annual Conference claims in full. Mt. Pleasant and Mt. Zion have made several improvements this year. Mt. Pleasant painted their church inside and out and made other improvements at considerable cost. They are planning other improvements in the near future.

Next Sunday we will be at Bethel and Gray's Chapel. Bethel will pay out on pastor's claim and Annual Conference claims. We are expecting the chapel to come out but they are considerably behind at this writing. There is a large membership there and they can raise money without so much work, and in a very short time. The membership at this church has never realized its strength.

SPIRIT OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER SPEAKS

"We Shall Have Waged War in Vain Unless You Wage Peace"

(Clarence R. Athearn, in Zion's Herald)

The tomb of the Unknown Soldier stands in front of the amphitheater in Arlington National Cemetery. Here on Memorial Day and Armistice Day the official commemorative services are held. It has become the custom for the President of the United States to lay a wreath upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier each Armistice Day.

As the guard on watch paces back and forth, he can see, in one direction, across the Potomac River, the Lincoln Memorial, the Washington Monument, and the capitol of the United States. On the other hand, the Virginia hills extend and the cemetery with its 409 oak-crested acres, where more than 40,000 American soldiers lie buried.

On Memorial Day, it is significant that this cemetery unites the North and the South. Today Arlington is the resting-place for both the blue and the gray. The first man to be buried here was a Confederate soldier. One of the most beautiful memorials in the cemetery is the Confederate Monument, erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy as an emblem of a reunited people. Another symbol linking the North and the South is the Arlington Memorial Bridge, which spans the Potomac between the Lincoln Memorial and the Lee Mansion.

All the wars in which our country has participated, including the War of Independence, are represented among these graves. Now the veterans of the World War are being steadily added to the number.

America's Unknown Soldier was buried here November 11, 1921, amidst impressive ceremonies. The body of the unknown dead was brought from France aboard Dewey's flagship, the "Olympia," and lay in state in the rotunda of the capitol before its removal to Arlington. The funeral pageant, led by President Harding and former Presidents Taft and Wilson, was an occasion long to be remembered.

"To do honor at his last resting-place came the greatest soldiers of the age. famous statesmen from other continents, the President, the high judges and legislators of his own country ,and many men who like himself fought for the flag.

"And the tomb which Fate reserved for him is, instead of the narrow cell on the village hillside, one as lasting as that of Rameses and inspiring as Napoleon's."

The monument itself consists of a single block of Colorado marble weighing 72 tons. Three blocks were taken from the quarry before one was found entirely suitable for the purpose.

This imposing memorial tells its story simply: "Here Rests in Honored Glory an American Soldier known but to God." On each side of the tomb are carved three wreaths, which have been interpreted as representing the six major battles of the American Expeditionary Forces in France. Valor, Victory, and Peace—three heroic figures carved on the front panel—symbolize the spirit of the Allies in the war.

The vision of No Man's Land rises before the eyes of those who stand at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and reflect upon its meaning.

> "Who goes there, in the night,
>   Across the storm-swept plain?
> We are the ghosts of a valiant war—
>   A million murdered men!"

So that another generation may reflect, so that man's short memory may not languish and die, this memorial stands immovable from one Armistice Day to another. The unknown dead was a man who, like millions more, was torn from life by the Crime of Civilization, the crime of horror, of gas, of flying heated metal, of blindness, of insane death.

Valor? Victory? Peace? The meaning of the figure representing Valor is described by the artist himself as "the devotion and sacrifice that went with courage to make the cause of righteousness triumphant." The spirit of the Unknown Soldier stands for fidelity to duty and the supreme unselfishness of all who fought under the direction of their great leader, who said, "The right is more precious than peace," and "We die without distinction unless we die the death of sacrifice."

But this nightmare of No Man's Land still haunts us. As we attempt to think realistically and unsentimentally about this war business, a number of agitating questions arise. Is there really any valor in modern warfare? Is not this mowing down of men by machines mere slaughter? Is there anything heroic about gassing a whole population, or infecting a city's water supply with typhoid?

The more we reflect, the more unheroic modern warfare appears. A nation's honor apparently waits upon the strength of its army and navy. Is it not true that nations do not go to war unless assured of being on the winning side?

General Joffre said that it costs 15,000 lives to train a major-general. Does a man become a hero just because he is conscripted, and then an incompetent commander hurls him to death upon on uncut wire, there to hang like a blackberry until he is picked for the honor of Unknown Soldier? How many go into war hoping and praying that the casualties will be to their companions rather than to themselves?

Surely it is the inner attitude of will that counts. How many soldiers wield the bayonet with good will in their hearts toward the enemy? Are valor and hate compatible? Or must the fighter for righteousness be motivated by love? In that case, is not the conscientious objector who is willing to face a firing squad for peace exhibiting the most reasonable valor? It is a question of judgment as to the best way of fighting for righteousness. The Turks spread Mohammedanism by the sword. Jesus spread Christianity by the cross.

Victory? The Allies were warned by Woodrow Wilson that it must be a "peace without victory." Where is the victory? Who are the victors?

Modern warfare has reached such perfection of destruction that no nation can win. War means world disaster, and the conflagration of civilization.

All the rights, of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—for which governments are instituted among men—are destroyed by war. War destroys life. War destroys property. War destroys liberty by the slavery of militarism and taxation.

The largest part of the cost of war must be paid by later generations in the form of increased taxes. At present more than 80 per cent of our national taxes goes to pay for past wars or preparations for future wars. The right to liberty is a sacred right, but by increasing the burdens of taxation, war is sentencing future generations to lives of slavery.

The military expenditures of 61 countries during the last five years reached the immense sum of $4,000,000,000 every year—twenty billion dollars for the five-year period. Prodigious profits prompt the munition-makers to encourage wars. During the three war years 1916-18, the Hercules Powder Company of Delaware paid net profits of $180,000,000. In the same period United States Steel made the huge sum of $621,000,000 net profits. Meanwhile the taxpayers went without food to foot the bill. If this tremendous amount spent all over the world for arms and munitions were expended on constructive, peaceful projects, think what great good could be accomplished in the alleviation of poverty, disease, and misery!

"Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps
and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals and forts."

Victory? Why is enjoying victory, the taxpayers? the unemployed? the profiteers? or the veterans denied their share of the profits in the form of a bonus?

Peace? That it was a "war to end war," and "to make the world safe for democracy," are phrases that now have to face the cynicism of a disillusioned host of fighting men. With the nations still at war, and their selfish economic rivalries still at white heat, the question arises whether the war method is the right method to achieve peace.

Admittedly, the resort to physical force cannot permanently or rightly settle a moral question. Might does not make right. Even Napoleon, exiled on the island of St. Helena, acknowledged that nothing permanent is ever acomplished by force. Woodrow Wilson declared that the World War accomplished nothing permanent, but that the permanent results would be achieved later when the moral forces of the world could be brought to bear upon the issues.

If we are to keep faith with the Unknown Soldier and his comrades, it is for us to be rededicated to the cause for which they died. If they are not to have died in vain, we must continue to fight for peace in new and ever more effective ways. They will have waged war in vain unless we wage peace. We can wage peace by supporting world organizations and agreements looking to the peaceable arbitration of international disputes, such as the League of Nations, the World Court, the Hague Tribunal, and the Briand-Kellogg Pact. We can wage peace by opposing the ever increasing expenditures for our military establishment, and by working for world disarmament. Increasing numbers of students opposing military drill in the colleges are waging peace in a very effective way. We can wage peace by urging the establishment of a Department of Peace in the Federal government, under which the War and Navy departments will be ultimately subordinated. We can contribute to the understanding of this subject by distributing the official pronouncements of the Protestant denominations and the Federal Council of Churches.

If the "peace by peoples" urged by President Roosevelt is not to be a mere empty phrase, it means that the diplomats must keep the peoples out of war, or the people will not follow their leaders into war.

Again above the tomb of the Unknown Soldier appear the ghosts of No Man's Land:

"Who goes there, at the dawn,
Across the sun-swept plain?
We are the hosts of those who swear:
It shall not be again!"

FROM MRS. CUTCHIN

Dear Friends:

It is almost time for another meeting of our Annual Conference, and somehow I feel a desire to say just a few words through our paper, as it is impossible for me to be there in person, but I am so thankful that I can be in spirit.

I don't flatter myself to think that I have been greatly missed in the conference, but I have missed the joy and fellowship of so many of my friends. It was a mountain top experience in my life. I would not have anyone think I have lost interest, neither am I among the dead, but one of the victims of a form of heart trouble that has caused me to give up all things for a while and try to regain strength to take up where I left off. I have not attended my own church here in nearly two and a half years. Has it been easy not to go? I am not rebellious. Probably I needed this to show me that even though I dropped out for a season that God's work would go on. How often I look on at those careless of Kingdom work and wish I had their opportunity. I may never be well but thus far I have been able to endure through His grace, and I would appreciate the prayers of those especially who know me, if they will pray with me that if it is God's will and best for me that I may have the blessed joy and privilege of working for Him again. If not that in my last hours I may truly say there is nothing between me and my Savior.

Our auxiliary has recently made the interior of our church beautiful. It was an undertaking for so few, but there is no telling what God will help us to do if we try, and we have some of the most faithful workers in the world, and I do wish I could help. But there is One who can do far more than we, and we leave them in His keeping.

I hope this will be a wonderful conference, and may God lead in every phase of the work and give them the wisdom to do God's bidding.

If some of my friends ever fiind a time, a word from those we feel are interested in us helps to hold us up. Anyway, pray for me.

I miss so much addressing this to Dr. McCulloch, as I was Herald agent and at one time our church had a paper in every home. I feel that his place will be hard to fill. My sympathy goes out to his loved ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Peeler have brought comfort to my home this year in many ways. Mr. Peeler knew my love of flowers and has been so generous. If conference sees fit to return them to this field, may we do our part in helping them to carry on.

MRS. J. M. CUTCHIN, JR.

Bachelor—I'm willing to try anything once.

Friend—Ah, I see you have never been married.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Nicholson

I lost a friend—and you did, too—in the sudden passing of young Giles Garret Nicholson of Bellemont and Central Falls on last Friday evening.

Giles had just passed his 32nd birthday by one week when his car left the highway and he was called home. He was the youngest of three sons of Mr. Green A. and Mrs. Mattie Nicholson, of Bellemont Church, the oldest boy having died while quite young and the second meeting his death as a young man by the falling of a tree. His wife, formerly Mozelle Rich, and young daughter, Carol Rich, survive of his immediate family. Both his parents and four sisters, as follows, also remain to mourn the passing of their son and brother: Mrs. A. P. Williams, of Graham; Mrs. C. B. Coble, Mrs. E. P. Lowder, and Miss Carrie Nicholson, of near Burlington.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at Bellemont church under the many-colored trees because the large crowd gathered to pay respects to their friend could not begin to get within the church. The service was directed by Revs. J. Elwood Carroll, J. Clyde Auman, and N. N. Fleming. Rev. E. Lester Ballard and Miss Edna Nicholson, of Mebane, directed the choir.

Giles had always loved Bellemont church and the Christian way of life. After 12 years in the U. S. Navy he returned to civilian life and was employed by the Burlington Mills. He loved clean sports, held high his ideals, and worked for God's kingdom as teacher of Sunday school classes, worker in Vacation Church Schools, leader of young people, and superintendent of Sunday school at Central Falls. Truly, all who knew him are losing a friend. J. ELWOOD CARROLL.

Walker

Mrs. Attie Tucker Walker was the daughter of James C. and Mahaley Tucker. She was born July 23, 1880, and passed away November 3, 1934. Her age was 54 years, 3 months and 11 days. On January 11, 1903, she was united in marriage to Daniel A. Walker. To this happy union were born seven children, one having died in infancy. Surviving are the husband, Daniel A. Walker; three sons, Albert, Hubert and D. A. Walker, Jr.; three daughters, Glenola, Helen and Katherine; her mother, Mrs. Mahaley Tucker; five brothers and five sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at Palestine Methodist Protestant church, of which Mrs. Walker had been a member since childhood, Sunday afternoon, November 4, 1934, at 2 o'clock, and were in charge of the writer, assisted by Rev. J. P. Pegg, of Burlington, a former pastor, and Rev. J. C. Preston, of the Church of Christ, Stokesdale. The body was tenderly placed in the church cemetery to await the resurrection.

Mrs. Walker was a devoted wife, a loving mother, a sympathetic friend and a good neighbor. She was not only a member of the church, but was an interested, consecrated, devoted and active member, and her presence at every service was noted except when her health prevented her going to church. It can be truthfully said of her that she loved her pastor and was ever mindful of his needs and welfare. The Walker home has been a "preacher's" home, during the more than a quarter of a century of her married life.

Mrs. Walker was a woman of gentleness, goodness, love, sympathy and consecration to her Lord, to her church, to her pastor and to her family. Her earthly labors have ended; her eternal rest, peace and joy have begun in the heavenly mansion.

C. B. WAY.

Gross

Margaret Mozell Gross, daughter of Bro. and Sister Albert Gross, was born September 23, 1926. She departed this life October 7, 1934. Her age is eight years and 14 days. She is survived by her father and mother, and two brothers, Albert, Jr., and Raymond.

Margaret was a bright, beautiful, and promising child, and her going leaves us sad. But there is much comfort in the assurance that Jesus has taken her to himself, and that the bud that was so promising here will flower into its full beauty and fragrance in the summer land of God.

The funeral service was held in the Friends church at Archdale, where Margaret attended Sunday school, and was in charge of Bro. R. J. Payne, the pastor. He was assisted by Rev. F. L. Conrad, pastor of the Lutheran Church of High Point, and the writer. The many beautiful flowers were typical of the beauty and sweetness of her life, and the large and sympathizing congregation evidenced the high esteem in which the family is held. Interment was in the Lebanon church burying ground.

The bereaved family and relatives have our prayers and sympathy. May the God of all comfort be with them in abounding mercy. S. W. TAYLOR.

Andrew

The Siler City and Bonlee communities were saddened on October 22 when it was learned that Brother W. H. Andrew had passed away from the scenes of this life. William Horace Andrew was born in Chatham county June 3, 1860, making his earthly sojourn more than 74 years. On December 13, 1883, he was united in marriage to Miss Janette Olive Sanders, who was a true helpmeet in every sense of the word; they shared with each other their joys and sorrows, their successes and failures. The home they established was a Christian home where God was honored and the Bible read. They reared six children, all Christians and members of the church, as follows: Mrs. R. R. Brewer, Mrs. J. D. Jones, Mrs. C. C. Wright, C. W. Andrew, Herbert Andrew, and Miss Kara Andrew, who lives at home.

About 57 years ago, on profession of faith, Brother Andrew united with Hope Methodist Protestant church. To this church he was always loyal, holding up the hands of every pastor and standing behind every program of his church. He was not a narrow man. He wanted other denominations to grow and prosper. But he was 100 per cent loyal to his church and denomination. He seemed happiest when actively engaged in Christian work. This characteristic was very marked to the last of his long life of 74 years. And what a beautiful life! How noble in ambition; how consecrated in purpose; how uncomplaining in suffering; how strong in faith; how bright in hope; how fruitful in old age. Brother Andrew had an intense desire to do the whole of his bit for the Kingdom and to do it well. Who can doubt that he accomplished this desire?

In the passing of this good man Hope church has lost one of her pillars. At the time of his death he was chairman of the board of stewards and teacher of the men's class. May his mantle fall on someone else to carry on the work that he so nobly carried on.

The largest throng of people ever seen at Hope church by some was present for the funeral. The writer was assisted in the service by Revs. J. C. Canipe and T. F. Andrew. It took 16 ladies to carry the gorgeous display of flowers. His body was interred in Mother Earth among his ancestors just in the rear of Hope church where he loved to worship.

Brother Andrew's work on earth is finished, and his labors done, and he now wears the crown which the Judge gives to all who love and serve him. A good man has gone to his reward. May the blessings of heaven rest upon his faithful companion and children, who are left behind. H. L. ISLEY.

Foust

Mrs. Marvin Sykes Foust, after a lingering illness during which she received all that loving hands and medical skill could do, passed to her heavenly home September 15, 1934. She was patient and cheerful during her illness, always mindful of the needs of her husband and two little girls.

The Auxiliary and Ladies' Aid of Mebane Methodist Protestant church feel keenly the loss and do hereby resolve:

First, that in her going we have lost a most helpful and active member;

Second, that the sincere sympathy of the entire membership of both organizations be extended to the family;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON,
MRS. GEORGE WYATT,
MRS. D. A. PENDER,
Committee from Mebane Auxiliary and Ladies' Aid.

Honeycutt

Miss Hattie Honeycutt was born in Stanly county near Friendship church on August 10, 1907, and died to the things of this world on October 30, 1934, at the age of 27 years. Last year she spent several months at the sanatorium; the last few months of her life were spent in the home of her stepfather, Jarvis Sides, and with her sisters of the home. Miss Hattie became a Christian in early life and joined Friendship Methodist Protestant church, and was a loyal member until death. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Friendship church. The large number in attendance filled the church; there was beautiful singing, and many beautiful flowers. Bro. Sides and his daughters and all the other members of the family have our sympathy and prayers. O. B. WILLIAMS.

ALBEMARLE	100
CHARLOTTE	92
HENDERSON	75

Now all of you men pull off your hats and stand at attention for five minutes, then let the men and the women and the boys and the girls all give one mighty shout in honor of Albemarle, who is standing up here at the top of my column this week with a percentage that is absolutely perfect. The 100 per cent which they register this week is just as big a hundred as anybody has sent in this year and we all say Three Cheers for Albemarle. And while I am on the subject of Albemarle let me tell you what I told you some time ago, namely, the pastor of Albemarle, Rev. J. R. Anderson, wrote when several months of the Conference year had gone and said it seemed that he could not get subscriptions on the yearly plan and wanted to know something about the workings of the club plan. From that time on, Albemarle has been climbing steadily by getting the papers in bulk and sending in the money, each dollar counting for one-half subscription. So you see what can be done. If you cannot succeed in one way, then try something else. Well, Albemarle church and Brother Anderson, accept my heartiest congratulations on your great achievement. I am sure you are going to be a more enthusiastic church because you have the Herald in your homes to give you informtion each week.

And did you see what Rev. J. L. Trollinger did again last week? He sent in the princely sum of $18.00. For the past month that man has simply rolled the money into the Herald office. If all the Herald agents and the ministers had sent in the money like he has been sending it in we would have so much money around the Herald office we would be walking around the streets with fifty-dollar bills sticking out of our pockets. And Rev. W. D. Reed and Rev. Robert Short let themselves be heard from last week in no uncertain terms. We are glad to greet these brethren. And just think of the subsidy that came in last week! Conference Council of Religious Education, $25.00; Rock Creek church, $1.50; Lebanon, High Point, $5.00; Roberta, $7.50; Mebane, $7.50. That is great.

And now a word about your last chance. Next week is THE END. IT IS THE DEAD LINE. All money turned in on subscriptions by Wednesday noon next wek will count on your quota for this year. So you have one more chance after you see this in print. Some are near the goal and some are far from it. Do your best whether you are far or near.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

What the Year Hath Wrought

Perhaps it would be safe to say that no two conference years are exactly alike. Sometimes there are two that are very similar; but even then there are some differences. It has occurred to us to write some things about the conference year that is closing this week. Of course the president of the Annual Conference, Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., will make his annual report and will review the year's activities much more accurately than we can, because he has the reports from the fields, and, in addition to this, he has been on the grounds and has first-hand information. It is not our intention to try to get in the first word or to say it before he does—the president will have read his report before this is printed—but simply to appraise the year's activities from this end of the line. From our standpoint, it seems that this year has been marked by greater optimism than any year for the past four or five. While business has not improved much in some lines, in others it has been decidedly better. Better prices have prevailed for farm products, and since we are largely a rural people it affects us tremendously. From the reports that have been coming in, it would seem that more money has been raised for church purposes than formerly. Of course we have no way of knowing now just how much has been raised, and we cannot know until the reports are all in and the statistician has tabulated them. But many reports have stated that various items had been paid in full and we shall be disappointed if the totals do not show a considerable increase.

Many people judge a year's work by the kind of revivals that have been held and by the number of professions and additions. And this is an important thing to think about. The great mission of the church is to save sinners. And usually they are not very safely saved unless they join the church. In fact, some ministers, in their report to conference, count professions only in terms of accessions. Our feeling about the matter is that this has not been a year of great revivals. It is true some good reports have come in, indicating that God's power has been manifested in the conversion of souls, but these reports have not been numerous. In a great many cases reporters have said that the results were not what they had hoped for. Wtih these things before us we shall be surprised if any great gain in membership is reported. Then, too, there has been considerable moving on the part of a great many of our people during the depression years, and when they do move they do not always unite with our church when they get to the new place. This makes it hard for us to gain in membership as rapidly as we otherwise would. Still another thing that we must reckon with is the large number who fall by the way and whose names are finally erased from the list. This is indeed tragic, and the General Conference a few years ago changed the law of the church in regard to delinquent members, and yet they are lost to the church. It seems hardly worthwhile to carry their names on the roll if they cannot be made to feel some responsibility for the church. But before leaving the subject of revivals and members, let us ask if the necessity of laying so much stress upon the financial campaigns has not had something to do with our not having more good revivals. This is not said in any spirit of criticism, for we have tried to do our part in pressing the campaigns for finances. On the other hand, it may be that if we were to honor God with our substance more He would pour out on us greater blessings.

But the year closing must go down in history as being one of great activity on the part of the president of the conference. We doubt whether any president has ever worked harder than President Andrews has the past year. In season and out of season, in the regular rounds of visitation of the churches, in group meetings and in every other way possible, he has pushed the work of the president with all possible vigor. If the ingathering is not as great as desired, no one can place the responsibility on the shoulders of the president. He has done more than we require of a president. It has been a custom of long standing for the president to visit the charges, but Dr. Andrews has taken on added responsibilities this year. He has covered the territory from the Albemarle Sound on the east to Asheville on the west, and from the most northern points to the most southern in group meetings. Having been with him on some of these journeys, we want to say that we think the effort is worth all it has cost, and more. It has been an effort to put new life into the officials of the church, and we are sure that much good has been accomplished.

While there have been many unusual things during the year, perhaps the most unusual has been the heavy death rate among the ministers and the wives of ministers. There have been six ministers and seven ministers' wives to pass over the river since we last met in annual session. Early in the year Rev. D. A. Fishel suddenly took his departure. He was followed by Rev. J. W. Hulin, who was superannuated in 1930. Brother Hulin was followed by Rev. C. W. Saunders, the pastor of Rockingham charge. Then suddenly Rev. M. P. Chambliss was stricken. In midsummer Dr. L. W. Gerringer went home after a lingering illness, and finally, on October 1, the soul of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, for forty years editor of this paper, took its departure into the land of rest. The ministers' wives who have passed on are: Mrs. W. E. Swain, Mrs. D. A. Highfill, Mrs. Atlas Ridge, Mrs. A. O. Lindley, Mrs. W. L. Harris, Mrs. T. F. McCulloch and Mrs. George Laughlin. While the conference is poorer, heaven is richer, by far, by the presence of these. The memorial service on Sunday afternoon will, doubtless, have within it more sad hearts than on any other similar service. Obituaries of each of the deceased will be read.

And now, before closing this article, let us say a few words in general about an Annual Conference. While there might be many terms used in describing an Annual Conference, let us say, It is a great institution. It has a great purpose and a great outlook. No one can fully describe a conference—you must be there and experience it. Dr. T. H. Lewis, in one of the last articles he ever wrote, said, "You never heard singing unless you have heard an Annual Conference sing." We are not ancient enough to advocate throwing out at the window all the new books, neither would we discontinue the use of the instrument, but it does seem that the conferences do not sing as joyfully as they did some years ago. It may be we are too much concerned with the technique of the music and have our eyes too much on the one directing it. If so, we would suggest that in the conference this week we dispense with business for a little while and let somebody lead us in singing "On Jordan's Stormy Banks I Stand" and let the conference sing without the instrument and see if it does not produce the same effect in us that it once did, tossing the old hymns.

THE FAMILY AND THE SABBATH

Our religious book—the Bible—puts the family and the Sabbath on the threshold of history. These are our two oldest institutions. God set the solitary in families and he put his sanction on a day of rest and for worship from the very first. Now in these last times the effort of man is to discount that which God has exalted through all the long centuries of civilized life.

Divorce and disregard of all that makes for the purity and the security of the family have come to be our national disgrace. The welfare of the family and the perpetuity of the home, as we have known these through the great years of our history, are now threatened. The laws laid down by God and the lessons taught us by history are pushed aside! The bar of the divorce court takes precedence over the bar of God.

Along with this breakdown of the family comes a fearful disregard of the Holy Sabbath. In America, the World War gave the Sabbath day a body blow, this to be followed by the moral and spiritual collapse of the last decade. Why regard the day of rest and worship, reasons the crowd when the sanctities of life and the things of the spirit are at a discount? Mammon on the throne; God and his laws in the discard!

At present we must use the Sabbath for recreation and for charity. A well intentioned group in one of our cities fosters Sunday movies with the plea that ten per cent of the receipts go to buy milk for needy children. How absurd! Were all the profits to go to the milk fund, such a course could not be justified, much less this sop thrown to the public in the name of charity. Every thoughtful person knows that the proper observance of the Sabbath has done more for childhood than all such ventures in the name of charity. Childhood and the toilers of earth owe more to the Sabbath day than they know. It is nothing short of an outrage to aid in destroying our regard for Sunday, our day of rest and worship, by many of the present-day pleas back of which lie the profit motive in this age of greed.

Sunday baseball and open movies are demanded in the name of the laboring man who cannot get the needed recreation. This, too, in a day of thirty hours a week for labor. Sociologists are disturbed as to what use we are to make of our leisure.

At present, labor has more time than it knows what to do with. In the face of this situation, we are told that there must be Sunday games and open theaters to meet a need—a need that does not exist. Yes, we must get milk for babies and we must amuse the crowds at the price of our Lord's day. Rome, with her games for the crowd and her corn for the poor amused and fed the multitudes, but at last she saw the end of the empire. France set aside the Sabbath in those terribl edays when the streets of Paris ran wiht blood. All that saved England from the horrors of this French Revolution was the Wesleyan revival.

A crusade in America for a spiritual revival and due regard for the laws of God would do more to feed the sick babies and to help labor than all these efforts to replenish a milk fund and to amuse the laboring man by breaking down our respect for the Sabbath day. Trampling upon the sanctities of the marriage vows and disregard for the Sabbath are symptoms of our spiritual collapse.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THANKSGIVING AND THE ORPHAN

To the Citizens of North Carolina:

Imagine yourself left an orphan at a tender age, without a home, with no loving kindred, or means of livelihood, just to drift along with the tide in a world of uncertainty. Well, there are hundreds of little tots in North Carolina today who find themselves in exactly the situation and those in a position to do so should welcome the opportunity to aid in rolling up bountiful offerings for the various orphan homes during the approaching Thanksgiving period.

"The poor ye have always with you.'" It is wisely ordained that it should be so. They need us and we need them. They are an obligation and a blessing. Without human need and human suffering to appeal constantly to the heart of a materialistic world and keep open therein its fountains of love and sympathy, it would harden into stone in a generation, or be eaten out by sordid selfishness and greed. Let us thank Jehovah, then, for the orphans. They help to keep warm and soft and tender our own hearts and the great heart of the world.

Not a single citizen in the state, either male or female, should fail to join in the movement to provide room for helpless orphans in the homes supported by loving generosity. We cannot escape condemnation here or hereafter if, seeing human need, we pass by on the other side like the priest and the Levite, or, if facing manifest duty, we seek, like Pontius Pilate, to shift responsibility to others.

On Thanksgiving Day, the Master expects everyone to do his duty to the orphans, His children, our neighbors—our brethren. Every citizen of the state is admonished to forward the income of a day to the orphanage of his choice. It will be an investment in the mind and heart and soul of an orphan child, or children, with all their infinite capacities for good or evil in the world. PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

GOOD FOR METHODIST PROTESTANTS

The following advice given by the Christian Advocate to the people of the M. E. Church, South, is equally good for Methodist Protestants. Read it.

Methodists, March Breast Forward!

For three years we have been fighting with our backs to the wall. With fear and dismay have we faced the enemy. Filled with gloom and misgivings, as though the day of doom drew near, we have faltered. But we find that God is still in his heaven; that the day has come for us Methodists to take our backs from the wall. The call of this hour is for us to march breast forward sure that the clouds will break. More than three hundred preachers went out from Greensboro this week to face the foe with full assurance of victory.

The back-look has helped us for the coming advance. Those who were able to win in the eighteenth century can win in the twentieth. Hear Dr. Fosdick as he speaks of that day:

"The eighteenth century with its collapse of an old social order, its appalling economic maladjustments and poverty, its rampant immorality and atheism . . . was more like our generation than any period in history. Christians were in despair. Did not their enemies say that Christianity had one foot in the grave and needed only decent obsequies to complete its history? Then came the Wesleys to light a fire that broke into such a conflagration of triumphant faith as the English-speaking world had never known before. Once more came an authentic outbreak of a spiritual life, hope born out of despair. . . . If we Christians were worth our salt we could reproduce that now."

What are we Methodists going to do about it? The sorry preachers and laymen are going to do nothing—they are going to whine on and rail against their lot. But, thank God, there are those who are going to move forward, leaving the sorry crowd behind to be counted out as the victors move on to the conquest. It is time for us Methodists to set about changing things by the power of the gospel of the Son of God. Once we can get rid of the notion that things can be changed by organization and machinery and our troubles can be cured by legislation, we will see the coming of the new heaven and the new earth.

We are writing with the whole of North Carolina Methodism before us. The Methodists of the east have more than two weeks in which to do a marvelous work before they report at Washington. They can gain a vantage point that will send them out from Washington to a wonderful conquest the coming year. High hours are these for all in the flat lands! The men of the west have gone back to their hills with a new light in the eye and a fresh impulse in the heart. It did one good to hear the ring of victory in the voices of these men. Forgetting the defeats of the past, they are moving breast forward, determined to change things by the power divine. They still know something of the spirit of the three-score Methodist itinerants who went out from the Christmas conference in Lovely Lane, Baltimore, to spread scriptural holiness over these lands because they have the hot hearts that link up with Aldersgate Street, London. It will be to the eternal shame of all of us who do not move forward with the good news of salvation.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE MEETS IN GREENSBORO

The Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina convened in Grace church, Greensboro, Wednesday morning, November 14th. As this issue of the HERALD goes to press on Thursday morning, only the first day's business had been transacted, and consequently this report must be limited in its scope.

Perhaps the most important matter handled on the opening day was the election of conference officers for the coming year. Dr. Andrews was re-elected President. Other officers for the year were elected as follows: Dr. C. W. Bates, Winston-Salem, re-elected secretary for the 20th consecutive year; Prof. J. H. Allen, Reidsville, treasurer; Rev. E. G. Cowan, Weaverville, statistician; Rev. J. E. Carroll, Greensboro, historian; Dr. P. S. Kennett, High Point, custodian of the archives, and Rev. J. L. Trollinger, Brown Summit, publicity agent. Bro. J. Norman Wills, prominent layman of Greensboro, was elected lay member of the stationing committee on the first ballot.

The Annual Conference Sermon was delivered at the opening session by Rev. H. Freo Surratt, pastor of Central church, Thomasville. His subject was "Christ's Command and Challenge to the Christian Church," and he brought a forceful message based on the text, Matthew 28:20, in the Moffatt's translation reading, "Go ye into all the world and preach my Gospel to every creature, and teach them to obey all those commands I have laid on you."

Dr. Andrews, in his annual presidential message, reported that the denomination was in splendid condition. Substantial progress had been made all along the line, and the outlook for the future was brighter than it had been for several years.

Last night's session was featured by an illustrated lecture, "The Beginnings of Methodism," which was delivered by Dr. C. W. Bates, assisted by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, of Mebane, who presented the stereopticon views.

The atmosphere of the conference is wholesome, and the entire membership seems hopeful and enthusiastic. It is believed that this session of conference will be one of the best and most progressive in the history of the church.

DRUNKENNESS ARRESTS INCREASE IN NATIONAL CAPITAL

(The Evening Star, Washington, D. C., Sept. 19, 1934)

The number of persons being committed to the District jail for intoxication is approximately 29 per cent greater this year than last, according to figures made public today by Thomas M. Rives, head of the District jail.

Mr. Rives informed the Board of Public Welfare that 9,230 persons were committed during the first eight months of this year, as against 7,164 in the corresponding period last year, an increase of 28.83 per cent.

During the first six months of this year the number was 6,889, against 5,326 for the first six months of last year, an increase of 29.34 per cent.

In July and August the number was 2,341 as compared with 1,838 for the same months last year.

The figures were made public without comment, though dealing with pre-repeal and post-repeal periods.

A FEW SENSIBLE WORDS

The members came together in a somewhat riled state of mind because of certain indelicate, and perhaps not entirely truthful, remarks and insinuations in which President Roosevelt had recently indulged.

Addresses during the opening sessions contained drastic criticisms of the New Deal. Later the spirit became more tolerant, and there was evident a good measure of desire to cooperate with the Government and other agencies in the work of recovery and in finding a way to increase and stabilize the interests and industries of the country.

Nothing was more significant than some of the remarks of Francis M. Law, the president of the association. Mr. Law said:

''Everywhere people are returning to such old habits as thrift, self-denial, hard work, and living within their income.''

For a good while I have realized the importance of these sensible old habits. Our present and recent troubles have been emphasized largely because many people have been wasteful in their ways, self-indulgent, averse to hard work, or so extravagant in their expenditures that their income, however large, was never quite adequate to cover the outgo.

Of course there were other factors responsible, in part, for creating present conditions. The vast increase in machinery and the building up of great corporations not only made possible mass production, but they also, in many cases, squeezed the life out of the small business and producer.

The common people—because there are so many of them—spend, in the aggregate, tremendous sums of money when they have it, making business good. They not only spent what they had, but, in the so-called good times, they spent what they expected to have within the next several months or years. Many of them succumbed to the lure of ''A dollar down and a dollar a week''; ''Drive your car while paying for it''; ''Enjoy your new clothes and jewelry while paying for them.''

This ''Buy now and pay later'' system of financing dies hard. Many of the thousands of people who have recently come to Washington to take positions under the alphabetical combinations of the New Deal are proceeding under the old plan. As soon as possible after arrival they establish themselves as entitled to credit at leading stores. Then they deck themselves out with clothing, and so forth, to be paid for later. Some of them have only short temporary appointment. When they are let out, as many of them are, they are up against it as they try to live here without income, or are compelled to make their way home.

I am not recommending the ''Pay as you go'' system as always the easiest way to follow. It often involves real self-denial. But it is the safest, and, in the end, the most comfortable way of life.

There is, however, legitimate debt. Business enterprises and individuals may legitimately and profitably contract debt. President Law, at a press conference, endeavored to impress it upon business men that they should have more courage to use credit for their advantage. Banks now have much cash on hand that they would be glad to loan on good security.

Here is an opportunity—and, perhaps, a responsibility—for many individuals to combine these two things: Borrowing, in order to make his business more efficient and profitable; and being frugal in his personal expenditures, in order to make his position safe. LUTHER K. LONG.

"WHATSOEVER THINGS ARE HONEST"

By WILLIAM H. SHORT, Director Motion Picture Research Council

''Production (at Hollywood) of a series of six two-reelers stressing the moral that 'crime doesn't pay' '' was announced in the film press of October 6. The implication was that these pictures will be useful contributions to the campaign against crime in which the country is engaged. It has long been a stock defense of crime movies that they stress the eventual ill-fate of the criminal and that this deters from crime. Many have doubted its validity. Until lately no one has known the facts with certainty. The finding of the Payne Fund studies—made at six of our universities through a period of four years—is that crime and delinquency cannot be seriously discouraged in this way and that the idea it can is dangerous and should be abandoned.

In an extensive study of delinquents and criminals, Blumer and his associates were unable to find a single instance ''where an individual was completely deterred from a delinquent career through the influence of motion pictures,'' although innumerable crime pictures had been made with this as a professed purpose. The nearest approach they discovered was a short-lived caution and restraint when criminal careers were shown as unattractive and dangerous, or when punishment for crime was graphically portrayed.

Blumer found, on the contrary, that young delinquents might ignore the punishment shown in a crime picture and get from it only ''new ideas of how to pull a job or fool the police,'' or a keen sense of ''the jolly-go-lucky times'' enjoyed by the gangsters; that instead of thoughts of reform, their minds might be busy with thoughts of how criminals shown in the picture could have avoided their mistakes and successfully ''outwitted the law''; and that punishment shown in a picture frequently caused intense resentment against the law and those who enforced it. In a word, punishment for crime in the movies appears to be even less successful as a deterrent from crime than it has shown itself to be in actual dealing with flesh and blood criminals.

The Payne Fund studies did find pictures that created impulses toward right living in both normal children and delinquents. They were generally pictures that ''play up themes of family affection or religious duty''; pictures like ''Beau Geste,'' ''Abraham Lincoln,'' ''Over the Hill,'' ''Street Angel,'' and ''Little Women,'' not like ''Scarface'' and ''Little Caesar.'' Of several hundred boys who said that at different times motion pictures had made them want to do ''good things,'' only six per cent said that gangster and crime pictures had ever had that effect. In this regard the studies fully justified the confidence that from immemorial experience church and home have learned to place in right example and in appeal to the noblest sentiments of the race.

For fifteen years crime has been the central theme of 27 per cent of feature films; more than four out of five have portrayed some sort of crime; and the entire output has averaged about four crimes to the picture. It seems clear that from this no harvest except one of crime and of crime-tolerance can be obtained. Experienced teachers and parents well know that the power of attention and reasoning of young children is not equal to the task of connecting up the incidents of a long film drama into a connected whole, and of drawing a moral from it; but that the child's mind is busied with the bits of action seen on the screen and that he tends to accept these as "behavior patterns" to be imitated. If children pay any attention to the retribution at the end of the film, it can have little connection in their minds with the wrongdoing shown in the episodes that went before. Readers of the Payne Fund studies likewise know that admiration for the handsome, dashing and suave criminal shown throughout the film story is not overweighed by punishment at the end.

Whether the legend that crime pictures can successfully combat crime grew out of a sincere belief that it was so, or out of a desire to justify Hollywood's preoccupation with crmie, it is now high time that it be exposed and given up.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

The Note of Encouragement

I believe every sermon should have somewhere a note of encouragement. People need encouragement. Occasionally a critical, blistering message is necessary, but ordinarily our listeners are already well acquainted with the sins and ills of the world. They know about poverty, failures, sickness, suffering, crime, gloom and unemployment. Now they are asking: Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there? Folk are listening for a note of encouragement and have a right to hear it. The pulpit must not be primarily a loud speaker for condemning and denouncing evils, but rather a radiant point from which beams the light of hope and inspiration.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson says in that great book on The Building of the Church that people are waiting for someone to come along who can say with Ezekiel, Son of Man, stand upon thy feet! People need new courage and assurance, renewed confidence in themselves and in the current movements making for righteousness.

It is easy enough to criticize. I have found that when I have nothing more to say I can always take refuge in fault-finding. The sins of youth, the waves of crime, unfaithful homes, and the shortcomings of church members—what a tempting field over which to gallop when we, without a constructive message, want to prove the wickedness and depravity of the human race!

All such gloomy denunciations cast a negative influence over the congregation. Even if severe criticisms are perfectly true, it does not follow that they are useful; they are not constructive. When persisted in for a long time, such preaching gives the impression that we are fighting a losing battle; that the religious life is not very victorious, and that, as a matter of course, the forces of unrighteousness are to be found at the center of the stage. To magnify sin is not to remove it!

What is more, the people who are listening to our descriptions of the world's woes are in no position to improve matters. They may agree with us that oppression in industry is bad, that unemployment should be cured, that the nations are spending too much for armaments, but what can they do about it? These people are living in their own little world with its very definite local problems and therefore have need for a message adapted to their situation. The sins of the world may be stupendous and shocking enough, but the worshipers in one of our rural churches are not going to profit much by hearing them exaggerated and denounced. There is little value in preaching to a few Methodist Protestants on the faults of European politicians.

To hear some sermons you would think there is nothing in the world but problems. Yet it is possible to preach a good sermon and never mention the wrongs of life. There are plenty of encouraging themes and numerous reasons for dwelling upon them. Let us consider the matter a bit further:

1. It is a false notion that a sermon is a failure unless it "hits" somebody. A message need not crush some soul in order to be successful. The twenty-third Psalm does not hit anybody, yet it is one of the grandest messages on earth! In fact, people need to be inspired much more than they need to be condemned.

2. Remember that people come to church to share rather than to hear. I have known individuals to go to the place of worship even though their ears were failing so they could no longer hear. They went to share a joyous, sacred fellowship with God and with friends. So, remembering that folk go to church to share something, it becomes our duty to give them something good to share. Newspapers hold before our eyes the awful calamities of life, let the pulpit hold up the good. The scriptures speak of the soul "delighting itself in fatness," finding good things on which to grow and flourish; and the church, the earthly home of the soul, is the particular place where these fine, spiritual, uplifting things are to be found.

3. Make special effort to find encouraging truth. We generally see about what we are looking for. Emerson, writing of the bee, said: "Seeing only what is fair, sipping only what is sweet," and ended the same poem with "Leave the chaff and take the wheat." This is what public speakers can learn to do—give special emphasis to the good for awhile. Preach more often on What is Right with the Church; The Heroes of Faith; The Progress of Goodness; Virtues of the Common Man; God in the Beauties of Nature; Evidences of God's Love to Us; or, in other words, take the song literally and count your many blessings, see what God hath done. If you go to the Bible looking for encouraging materials you will be surprised how much of it you will find. The Psalms are full of it, the Major Prophets waxed eloquent in describing the goodness of Jehovah, and Paul's letters are vibrant with outbursts of praise. "Rejoice evermore." Our hymns, likewise, abound in joy and gladness of the highest type. We have all these good, fine, encouraging things all about us ready to be used in helping to brighten the way for those who seek light and encouragement in our services of worship.

4. The Gospel itself is encouragement. The word "gospel" means "good news." If, therefore, one is preaching the Gospel he is announcing good news, and good news is everywhere encouraging news. This good news tells how God is Love, fatherly yearning for our own welfare more than we yearn for it ourselves. It truly means "God with us," for in Christ have we seen the complete and sublime revelation of the Father. There is no other conception of God like this. The Gospel is also good news from the human point of view, for it places supreme worth upon man. That is real encouraging news. We have never caught the full meaning of what high conception Christ has for human life. To the Master human beings are precious beyond measure. His hope for and estimate of man were so high! If, then, our Savior takes such an extremely encouraging view of people, these same people ought to receive like encouragement at the hands of his ministers. If people are good enough to come to hear us preach, we ought to be good enough not to discourage them, but brighten their lives with optimism and good cheer.

THE SUCCESSION OF THE BURNING HEART

Among the messages of the leaders of the church, given to enrich the celebration of the sesqui-centennial of the Organization of the Methodist Episcopal church, was a word from E. Stanley Jones, of India. The exigencies of our make-up placed the message on the last page of our issue of October 12. We advise our readers to turn to the first column of that page and read in plain type something that ought to have been printed in bold with a border, to properly bring out a notable utterance. It happens that when Stanley Jones writes of anything, that thing flames in the minds of all who read it. Not being able to get away from it, we ask our friends to go back to it.

He calls upon Methodists everywhere, upon Methodist preachers in particular, to continue the "line of the succession of the burning heart."' The Succession of the Burning Heart! Is not this a true apostolic succession of the highest order? It is not obtained by the laying on of hands but is to be attained by laying upon our hearts the burden that weighed upon the souls of Peter and Paul, of Augustine and Luther, of Wesley and Jones. The ordination is by the filling of the Holy Ghost. It comes not by a degree but by enduement. It is a matter of assurance and unction.

The exact spot where the heart of Wesley was strangely warmed is not known with certainty. While Aldersgate Street is a household word in Methodism, the house in Aldersgate Street in which the Moravian Society met on that memorable, that historic and epochal night, May 24, 1738, is a matter of conjecture. A tablet was placed on a branch of the Barclay Bank in 1916 saying that it was the probable site. Recently Mr. Stanley Sowton, of London, found an old Psalter which had been discovered in a loft of a stable standing in the railway yard behind the bank which he is inclined to think may have been the real birthplace of Methodism. There is uncertainty but how suggestive it is! Christ was born in a manger in Bethlehem and was he born again in Methodism in a stable of London?

The sacred places of Christianity are almost all humble and a question mark is on nearly every site. The shrines of Methodism bear the simple name of foundry, sail loft, meeting house or oak tree. The fires of our faith were kindled not on ornate altars in gothic temples but in human hearts. May they forever burn!

"The Succession of the Burning Heart!" This is the name of our holy orders. The ordination comes not by might nor authority, not by the laying on of hands or the appointment to a charge, not by the externals of our ministerial commission but by an essential experience. The thing that will give us place in this holy succession is a heart moved by the Spirit of God, constrained by the love of Christ to an uncalculating consecration of life for the salvation of men. The price of admission to the apostolic company is great but we ought to have the courage to pray for the flame that will fit us for the succession.

Stir me, O stir me, Lord, I care not how,
  But stir my heart in passion for the world.
Stir me to give, to go, but most to pray;
  Stir till the blood-red banner be unfurled
O'er lands that still in deepest darkness lie,
  O'er deserts where no cross is lifted high.
Stir me, O stir me, Lord. Thy heart was stirred
  By love's intensest fire, till Thou didst give Thine only Son, Thy best-beloved One,
  Even to the dreadful crsos, that I might live;
Stir me to give myself so back to Thee
  That Thou canst give Thyself again through me.

THREE DEADLY FOES

Mr. John McDowell, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, at a service in observance of the 190th anniversary of the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, said: "No new social system, economic system or political system apart from the Christian faith, can conquer the three deadly foes which are threatening the life of the nation and the world today, namely, self-will, the desire to be outside the law of obedience; self-interest, the desire to be outside the law of self-sacrifice; self-complacency, the desire to be outside the law of fellowship. To exalt the Christ of the Christian faith in the fulness of His Gospel and the implications of His service is the most effective way of meeting the fundamental and elemental needs of not only the individual, but of the nation and the world. A heart made new in the Christian faith is the best guarantee of peace and power within the nation today."

Dr. McDowell declared we were facing "what must be truly called the supreme moment in human history." "It is the people who rule now, and unless God in Christ rules in and through the people, the end of all our struggles, the goal of all our hopes, and the boast of all our progress will be chaos, and chaos is death." There can be no question among Christians of the truth which Dr. McDowell has proclaimed, but how can it be impressed transformingly upon the public mind? By its demonstration in the lives of Christians.—The United Presbyterian.

OUR STORY PAGE

"BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS"

It was a dark and dismal night, and yet scarcely less dreary inside the little cottage that stood by the wayside than without. Supper had ended—a quiet, uncomfortable meal; for fierce passions were at work in her father's breast, and, while it was so, Amy Brown could not be at rest. She knew the cause; her father had been deeply injured by an unprincipled man in the neighborhood. It was in such a way as not to bring trials to himself—he could have borne that—but the little cottage might have to be sold, and then all he had provided for his only daughter, in case of his death, would be lost to her. The thought of this was unbearable. Supper was over. Amy was washing and putting the room in order. Still her father sat thinking, gloomily, over his wrong. She tried in many ways to turn his thoughts from it, but all in vain. At length he rose and paced up and down the room, with angry, passionate motions. She knew what he was when his evil temper got the mastery, and feared the result. She felt that when his anger had cooled he would be sorry for what he might have done in a moment of passion, and her heart sank within her. Her mother's last request, "Watch over your father, Amy, and try by all means in your power to help him to conquer his evil temper," came to her. She inwardly prayed for strength to do right.

"Where is my hat, Amy?" asked her father.

"It is such a dreary night, father. Listen to the storm. Do not, for my sake, venture out in it; it can do no good."

"Better that, Amy, than the storm within. I must go; do not detain me."

"You may regret it tomorrow, father."

"That is my lookout. Let me alone, Amy; you can do no good."

He was bent on going, then, and she must yield. Oh, for some power stronger than her own to keep him back. His hand was on the door—that once passed, and she dare not think what might happen. Should she speak again, and thus bring his anger upon herself? It was a trying moment; but the asked-for strength was given, and words were put into her mouth. In a low tremulous voice she said:

"Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."

Her father let go the latch, and, sinking into a chair, buried his face in his hands, in deep emotion. Soon the struggle was over. When he lifted up his head, he was calm again.

"Amy," he said, "you have saved me. No words like those could have had such power to turn me back from evil. My mother repeated them to me when I was a child. Her pale face, as she urged me always to bear them in mind, rose up before me as they fell from your lips after so long a time. Had I passed the door just now, I feel that I should not have entered it again as an innocent man. You have thus, through the blessing of God, kept me from the commission of a dreadful crime. Will you not make it your constant prayer that in the future I may not be overcome of my evil temper, but that, through the power of God, I may become a changed man?"

Great thankfulness filled Amy's heart that she had withstood the temptation to remain silent, and had been strengthened to do even the little that she was able to keep back her father from evil.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."—Selected.

CIGARETTES KILLED HIM

"Oh, I wish that God would let me live just long enough to save one hundred cigarette victims. I would ask nothing more."

This was the dying wish of Herbert Secrest, schoolboy of sixteen. The fulfillment of the wish was denied him in life, but it bore fruit a few hours after he breathed his last.

Boys to the number of far more than one hundred who had known Herbert in life, boys who had been members of "the gang" with him, and with him sneaked into unobserved places to smoke, filed past his coffin as he lay in his father's home, and solemnly vowed never again to touch the soul and body-destroying cigarette.

Secrest was a normal boy up to his ninth year. His father is a strict Presbyterian, and all his surroundings were of a wholesome nature. At school he was foremost in his classes. Then he acquired the cigarette habit, taking unusual precautions to prevent the knowledge from reaching his father and mother.

The habit got such a fixed hold on him that he fell behind in his studies and soon gave up school altogether. His father tried to get him to go to work, but he was listless, weak, and couldn't stay at one thing long.

He commenced to grow thin and ill looking and his people thought he was going into a decline. They took him to a farm many miles from town, but even there he managed to get the baneful cigarettes, and he came back no better than he went away.

Then Herbert was compelled to take to his bed, and the doctor came.

"It's cigarettes," the boy whispered to the doctor. "I smoked as many as forty of them in a day. Is there any hope for me?"

The doctor gently told him there was none.

"Then I wish I could see all the fellers and tell them to give up smoking," he said. "I've smoked for seven years. The folks never knew. Now every one will know. I'm just like an elevator whose cable has been cut. I know that I've had the chance to rise, and now I only want to live that I may warn other boys."

Just before he died he called his brother Frank, 13, to his bedside and said: "Frank, I want you to promise that you will never again smoke a cigarette."

The brother tearfully promised.

A post mortem revealed that half his heart had been diseased by the cigarettes he smoked, and that the remaining half was in bad shape.—Selected.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

On last Sunday, November 11, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Cook, of High Point, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They attended the morning preaching service at Lebanon, as is their custom. With them were their two sons, and their wives and children; likewise their four daughters, and their husbands and children—27 in all. Only one grandchild, Mr. Herbert Payne, was absent. He would have been present but for the fact that he is in Oklahoma. Seats were reserved so the family could sit in a group. At the close of the service the pastor invited Brother and Sister Cook to the chancel and presented to them, as the gift of the congregation, a basket of beautiful yellow chrysanthemums. A family buffet dinner was served at the home, the pastor and his family having the honor of being present. In the afternoon Brother and Sister Cook were "at home" to their friends. Many called to extend felicitations.

A golden marriage anniversary is a rare experience and none come to it more worthily than have Brother and Sister Cook. We pray God's richest blessings upon them, and heartily join their many friends in wishing for them continued years of happiness and prosperity. S. W. TAYLOR.

IS IT AN IMPROVEMENT?

When I was a boy the minister would call the congregation to prayer with the words, "Let us pray." This form, I think, must have been in use for hundreds of years, and has been followed until comparatively recently, so far as I know. But now I usually hear "May we pray?" or "Shall we pray?" Is this really a better way? I can see in it a fine spirit of courtesy, yet I have not been able to like it, and I can but wish that the minister, standing before the congregation as God's priest, having the right, with the people, to enter into the Holiest Place, mindful of the dignity and responsibility of his position, may reverently exhort, "Let us pray." But I offer no reason for preferring this form, except that it seems to me to be more fitting. Others may have a good reason for the use of the newer form. Would not an expression from some of the readers of the Herald, all given in the best of spirit, of course, be profitable? OLD TIMER.

LETTER FROM REV. R. I. FARMER

Cambridge, Ohio, Nov. 5, 1934.

The Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D. D.,
Greensboro, N. C.

My Dear Editor:

The Herald columns are the means for us of securing news items, both joyful and grief-producing, from churches and friends in North Carolina. Would there be room for words of greeting, expressions of sympathy and an item of possible historical interest?

We were grieved to learn of the going home of Dr. J. F. McCulloch, the founder and publisher of the Herald. Though not unexpected, we feel that the church militant has lost a greatheart in the person of a minister-editor of unflagging zeal and untiring efforts for Christ and His church. The last issue gave the news of the passing of Mrs. T. F. McCulloch, who was our gracious hostess not many months ago. Both were our friends. To each family we extend Christian sympathy.

Good news, not only from First church, High Point, but from all others in the state makes us happy. Our best wishes and prayers are always extended to our friends in the south. You did much for us, though our contributions to you were ever so small.

Yesterday it was our happy privilege in the Cambridge church to remember, as an annual affair, the birthday of the Rev. F. A. Brown, D. D., who resides in Cleveland, Ohio. He served this church from 1891 to 1895. Today he is 96 years of age. He is believed to be the oldest living Methodist Protestant minister. Can anyone report another whose birthday preceded November 5, 1838?

This event brings a touch with the historic past. Our church divided over the slavery question. But in 1877 the northern and southern sections met separately in Baltimore. On May 11 these separate bodies met at Lombard and Fremont streets, marched two by two to the old Starr M. P. church, where a joyous reunion session was held. It was heralded as the first reunion of dissevered ecclesiasticism after the Civil War. Mr. Editor, I wonder if Dr. Brown, whose birthday we celebrate, may not have linked arms with some brother from the old Tar Heel state. Bassett, in his history, states that one of the North Carolina brethren took his arm and they were at once one in feeling and harmony.

From histories by Bassett and Drinkhouse I learn that in the northern section the oldest member, and the only one born in the 18th century, was one Rev. Peter Laishley, of the Pittsburgh conference (born in England in 1798). The oldest from the southern section, and I believe of the whole convention, was one Hon. B. S. Bibb, of Alabama (born in 1796). Associated with them was our beloved Dr. F. A. Brown, no doubt the oldest living M. P. minister, as well as the only member of that history-making convention now living. If another is known, I should be glad to learn of him.

Our whole church may well pause to honor him whose life God has so signally lengthened and pray divine blessings upon the sunset days of his earthly pilgrimage. What memories must surge in his mind as he recalls his associates — Bassett, Colhouer, Thrapp, Hastings, Bates, Drinkhouse, Benson, Wills, Paris, Pegram, Michaux and many others! R. I. FARMER.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Asheboro.—Our church was delighted to have Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the North Carolina Annual Conference, with us at the 11 o'clock hour the first Sunday. He spoke on "Increased Efficiency of the Church" and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Bow Down Thine Ear." The church officers for the ensuing year were elected at this service. The thank-offering service, with Mrs. W. F. Redding. Jr., in charge, was observed the fourth Sunday evening in October. A pageant, "The Convention of the Thank-Offering Boxes," was splendidly given by members of the Mission Band. Mrs. Redding then gave a very helpful talk on our educational institutions, showing how our money was to be spent. A good offering was received.

There were 244 in Sunday school that morning with an offering of $34.58 for the Children's Home. The Philatheas held the October meeting in the home of Mrs. W. F. Redding, Jr., with Mrs. G. P. Pritchard, Mrs. Bertha Linthicum and Miss Edna Holder as associate hostesses. Mrs. Earl Henley, the new president, presided over the business session. Mrs. L. F. Ross conducted a most helpful devotional service, using as her subject "The Out of Doors." Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses. The circles held interesting meetings in the homes of the members last week with good attendance. The auxiliary meeting is being held tonight, Monday, in the church.

The church and auxiliary are glad to have Mrs. W. F. Redding, Sr., back in the service after an illness of several weeks at her home.

The fourth quarterly conference was held last Thursday evening in the church with a good attendance.

The pastor and other leaders gave splendid reports of the year's work. The financial report was very good indeed, and since has been completed. The conference voted the return of our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins. Pastor's salary for next year was fixed at $1,800. Mrs. Earl Henley was elected alternate delegate to Annual Conference meeting this week in Grace church, Greensboro.

Last Sunday, November 11, was a full day for our church. At the 11 o'clock service holy communion was observed. Clara Jo Lovett, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lovett, was christened. Mrs. A. B. Cox and daughter, Jean, Mr. Earl Henley and Glenn Fox Pugh were received into our church membership. We welcome these into our church. The newly-elected church officers were installed in a very impressive service by the pastor. At the evening service, which was "everybody's night," was a good attendance. There were three-minute talks by leaders of the various organizations in the church, recognition of classes and organizations present, and special music by the choir. All enjoyed the piano number by Lacy Lewis, Jr., and James Hendricks, violon accompanist. Our pastor spoke of the fine fellowship and co-operation of the church members during his four years of labor among us, and of the splendid work this year of the stewards, the chairman and treasurer in raising our budget, of which a report was given at this time.

Our church extends sympathy to Mrs. John Swain and family in the sudden going of her sister, Mrs. Margaret L. Reitzel, of Liberty. Several of our people attended the funeral there Sunday afternoon in the M. P. church. We are hoping for a good conference.

Mrs. Mabel Beach and Mr. W. L. Ward, prominent members of our church, were united in marriage Wednesday morning, November 7, at 10 o'clock, with Rev. R. C. Stubbins officiating.

The nuptials took place at the home of the bride on South Fayetteville street, with the immediate families of the bridal couple being present. After a wedding breakfast the couple left for a ten days' wedding trip to Florida. They will be at home on Sunset avenue, this city.

Mrs. S. F. Thacker, who recently had an operation at Wesley Long hospital, Greensboro, is recovering nicely at the parsonage with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Stubbins. Her little son also had his tonsils removed in this city. LOLLIE JONES, Repoprter.

Union Grove Church, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school reorganized last Sunday and our officers are as follows: Superintendent, Mr. Fleet Madison; assistant superintendent, Mr. Conrad York; secretary and treasurer, Flora Mae Wooten; pianist, Mrs. Conrad York. Our class officers will be elected next Sunday.

Preacher Ferree administered the Lord's Supper last Sunday and filled his last appointment. Mr. Ferree says he isn't coming back on this circuit. We've enjoyed having him with us these past five years and hate to give him up. Wherever he goes we hope him the best of luck.

Our Christian Endeavor is progressing fine.

We ask the prayers of all the Herald readers that our church may become stronger.

FLORA MAE WOOTEN, Reporter.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—It has been some time since we have reported to the paper, but will now give a brief account of some of the things we have been doing.

We held all our special meetings in July, with Bros. Bethea, Madison, and Hunter as help. These brethren all did good work, which was greatly appreciated by pastor and people, and while we didn't have the visible results that we desired, we are very sure that all who attended these services were benefited.

The people have remembered us in many ways during the past year that has not been mentioned through the paper, but every act of kindness has been duly remembered and appreciated, and I trust will be rewarded. Our parsonage also has been nicely painted this year, which adds greatly to the appearance. We want to thank all the different churches on this charge for their co-operation in this matter.

As I now feel that I must lay down the itinerant work, I take this means of thanking the people of this charge for long friendship and help. The friendship has been mutual betwen pastor and family and their people. We want to thank the people on all the other charges that we have been permitted to serve. They have all made it so pleasant for us, and I feel that we have left some very good, substantial friends at each place, and there is a warm place in our hearts for every one of them. I regret very much to lay down the regular work, but it seems the best thing to do. There is one thing for which I am very thankful, and that is, I can't think of anything in all these 42 years that passed between any brother in the conference and myself to cause any unpleasant feelings. This affords me a great deal of comfort. Praying God's richest blessings on the brethren of the conference and the entire church, I am

Your brother in Christ,

A. L. HUNTER.

◆

Mt. Zion, Randolph Charge.—We are very glad to report that our church is doing very well, although the attendance is not as large as it should be.

Our pastor, Rev. Edward Suits, filled his last appointment for this conference year last Sunday evening. He brought us a good message as usual and we are hoping that Mr. Suits will be back to preach to us another year.

Our Sunday school is going along nicely. We have Sunday school every Sunday at 2 o'clock. REPORTER.

Flat Rock Charge.—Our final services for the conference year 1933-1934 last Sunday were well attended, there being larger congregations at Gideon's Grove and Flat Rock churches than at the previous appointments. We held the election of officers at both churches and administered the Lord's Supper at Gideon's Grove church. The church register has been revised at all five churches.

Flat Rock church launched a campaign last Sunday afternoon for contributions to reduce the church debt. Pledges were taken and a good start was made. One pledge of $100 was made on condition that $900 be raised by other members. We have a committee to solicit contributions among the membership of the church and hope their efforts will meet with success.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Flat Rock church met at the parsonage last Saturday afternoon and about 30 members and visitors were present despite a downpour of rain at the time of the meeting. A very interesting program was rendered by different members and visitors. Mrs. J. B. Hargrove and daughter, Erma Dell, of Burlington, and Mrs. Lucy Wall, of Mayodan, were the honor guests. Mrs. Hargrove, who is a sister of Mrs. C. B. Way, made an interesting talk to the meeting. At the close of the program the hostess, Mrs. C. B. Way, was assisted by her sister and others in serving delicious refreshments. Decorated place cards, with chrysanthemums attached, were given as favors. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ira N. Johnson in December.

The pastor and family wish to express their gratitude to the people of Flat Rock charge for all the kindness and numerous acts of assistance rendered during the past year. We have been remembered constantly by members of the different churches. We were taken by surprise last Saturday afternoon when the women of Flat Rock church came to the parsonage for their Ladies' Aid Society meeting. Each one brought gifts for our dining table and pantry, an abundant supply of various articles of food. Among the gifts were two chickens, one prepared for the frying pan, and the other alive. We appreciate very much not only the gifts but the spirit in which they were made.

We appreciate very much the gift of 50 pounds of flour from Rev. G. A. Middleton, of Gideon's Grove church, and a bushel of corn from Bro. J. W. Lawrence, of Flat Rock church.

If and when you read this, the Annual Conference will either be in session or be recorded as history of the activities of the 30,000 Methodist Protestants in North Carolina. May the will of Him whose we are and whom we serve be done in all the deliberations. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Asheville.—Maybe I've been waxing too enthusiastic about the financial conditions in our church; but I always feel that enthusiasm begets enthusiasm. And although we are not, at present, quite up with every claim, yet we do not lack an awful lot and perhaps it will all come in before conference convenes on Wednesday; anyway, I certainly hope and pray so.

We have, on the whole, closed a most successful year. I was one of the number who felt the entire bottom had fallen out of things after last conference, but in many ways the experience has been good for us. We have learned to rely on our own resources, and many members have worked who never did before; consequently there is more interest, and this is good. There have been many worthwhile things done throughout the year and I am sure all who have had a part in doing things are happy in a job well done, and are entertaining the brightest hopes for the future of the Asheville church. No matter what happens at conference, we intend to continue on our way happily.

The supper preceding the fourth quarterly conference was quite a success. Mrs. H. L. Hanner, Mrs. J. R. Moore, Mrs. Y. D. Eller and Mrs. E. A. Bolick and other ladies of the Fawcett Bible Class worked hard to make it the success it was, and we are grateful for their efforts.

Sunday school attendance was off some yesterday, due partially to the "snappy" cold spell which we are now having. Mrs. Robey Wilson's Primaries had the largest attendance of the entire Sunday school. This is the first time the Primaries have led, so we all say, "Hurrah!" The Frances Cunningham Class had the largest collection; the Men's Class the largest per capita collection; Junior girls led in amount of collection in the children's department.

Teachers and other officials are to be elected at the Workers' Council meeting to be held this (Monday) evening at the church. They are to be installed next Sunday morning at 9:45. All are earnestly urged to be present by the new superintendent, Miss Frances S. Cunningham.

We regret to report that Mrs. L. M. Joyner, Mrs. J. S. Williams, Mrs. E. A. Bolick and Miss Lola Johnson are on our sick list this week. We sincerely trust that they will each be well and with us again next Sunday. Miss Hilda Brownlow and Miss Jessie Proffitt substituted for Mrs. Bolick in the Beginners' department this Sunday and Miss Melle Smith for Mrs. Williams in the Junior department.

It was very appropriate that Mr. Minnis' closing sermon should be on the subject of "Peace." The first sermon he preached after he was called here was on peace, and we all truly hope that the ensuing year will be the most peaceful the Asheville church has ever enjoyed.

May we all join earnestly in prayer that this conference may be the best yet, and that all business will be settled satisfactorily to all concerned. M. L. B.

Fountain Place.—I have been elected reporter for Fountain Place church and thought it would be interesting to give a few of the things that have taken place in our work here since the last report some time ago. No fault of the reporter, only she married and moved away.

We have elected officers for the new year and some changes have been made. One of the most important, J. W. Wright takes the place of G. L. Amick as treasurer of the building fund. We are all very much interested in this office because we are anxious to keep our payments going. We have paid $945 this year. We wish to commend our Herald agent for doubling our quota of subscriptions, and we are glad that our subsidy has been paid.

Our auxiliary is about the livest organization we have. They never fail to come to the rescue when funds are needed for any cause.

It is with keen regret that we have to lose our pastor, as he told us in the fourth quarterly conference that he would not return next year. We will be grateful to conference if they will send us a man who will fill the place as well as Brother Bethea.

During the five years he has served us he has never sounded a note of despondency about the heavy burden of debt which is over our building, but has helped us in meeting our payments as well as giving words of good cheer. In giving a resume of the past five years' work, many were astonished at the amount of work that had been done.

If the people of our church knew of the sacrifices that are being made by a few of our folks, I am sure we would have a greater sympathy and more help financially from them.

Mrs. Bethea has proven herself a helper in every way in all the activities of the church. We shall miss her kindly words and helpful example. REPORTER.

The New Church, Cleveland Charge.—Not having had a report from our church in several weeks, and very anxious for our friends to know that we are still doing things up here in this section of the country, I will attempt to give a few items of interest.

For several years the members of Pleasant Hill and Kistlers churches had been discussing consolidation, but no real effort had been put forth until our beloved pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, came to this work. Bro. Troxler, who is a very energetic man and enjoys working for the Master, called a joint meeting of both churches on the first Sunday afternoon in May. Each member present seemed eager to build a new church. A committee was soon appointed, and they began to look for a location. In their search they found Bro. Zemri Kistler ready and willing to give a plot upon which to erect a new church. By the first of August carpenters were at work and the church was soon built.

Now we have a nice brick veneered building with an ample auditorium and eight Sunday school rooms of which we are very grateful. We are glad to say it is almost paid for.

Bro. Troxler filled his first appointment in our new church the first Sunday and delivered a very inspiring sermon. This being the first preaching service, it was made an all-day service with visiting quartets and choirs singing in the afternoon.

Our Sunday school has been growing each Sunday. One of our sister churches, Oak Grove, came over and took part in our Sunday school the first Sunday. We were indeed glad to have them and hope they will come again.

A reorganization of church officials has been made and everyone seems eager to push on in our new church.

The Ladies' Auxiliaries of both churches have been combined and reorganized and interest seems to be growing. REPORTER.

Granville Charge.—We are finishing up the fifth year on this charge, and we will be able to bring up a better report than we have in the last three or four years. We held our fourth quarterly conference on Saturday, November 3. All the reports showed some increase along all lines. T. T. Ellis was elected alternate delegate to the conference.

The conference voted unanimously for the return of the present pastor. We want to thank Mr. Ed Parish for a fine cord of wood and Mr. Blanny Hight for a half ton of good coal. We want to thank others for smaller articles so numerous we will not take space to mention them. C. L. SPENCER.

Concord.—With the close of the conference year here, and as we pause to look back over the progress made, we find Concord church is closing one of its best years. Financially all claims are paid in full with a balance in the treasury, something we have not done for a number of years. An indebtedness of $700 on the Sunday school building has also been cleared, which gives us greater hope of making further improvements in the near future. B. F. Waddell, chairman of the board of stewards, with the faithful members of his board, is largely responsible for this splendid record and the stewards are to be highly commended for their work. A larger furnace was recently installed for auditorium use.

The annual Sunday school report also showed that this organization had an excellent year, with a net gain of 90 members, an average attendance of 297, and all expenses paid with a neat balance in the treasury. Ross Little, our very efficient superintendent, has been re-elected for another year and is already busy making plans for even a better year in 1935. The Young People's Class, with their fine young teacher, Ralph Waddell, has paid off all their indebtedness this year and last Sunday paid $5 on the church budget.

The Woman's Auxiliary, under the leadership of Mrs. L. M. Burris, has been very active and reports show a substantial amount has been raised toward their budget. Our auxiliary received one of the $25 quilt squares, the proceeds to go to aid the hospital in India. Through the efforts of Mrs. C. D. Sides this amount has been collected and sent in to our branch treasurer.

All other organizations are functioning in a normal way, including Ladies' Aid Society, Christian Endeavor societies, and the Junior church.

Officers for the ensuing year have been duly elected and installed. The every member canvass will be made Sunday, November 18, in order that no time be lost with financial obligations at the beginning of the new year. J. A. Burris is delegate to the Annual Conference.

Gihsonville.—In September our reporter went to Richmond to take training in the medical hospital. Since then we have had no report from this church. Since I have been elected reporter, will give some items in regard to the closing of this year's work. Officers have been elected for the new year with very few changes. Those who read the Herald have noticed that our church was placed on the honor roll early in the year for paying all Annual Conference claims. We have paid Herald subsidy but have not reached our goal in subscriptions yet. We will pay as much for World Service as last year.

Our special services leading up to Decision Day were well attended, and on that day a most interesting service was held when an entire class of eleven boys and one girl joined the church. Many say it was the best service they were ever in. This makes 17 that have been received into the church this year.

We regretted very much when our present pastor announced that he would not return another year. Mr. and Mrs. Bethea will be greatly missed in our community, for they have identified themselves with every interest of the church and community for its progress and uplift. We only hope that conference will send us just as good workers in every way. Our prayers and best wishes go with them wherever they go. REPORTER.

Albemarle.—The last few days of the conference year have been very busy ones. With the Ladies' Aid helping the stewards raise the conference claims and the pastor's salary, by serving suppers and other means. The Ladies' Aid has been a great help to the church this year, having raised over $400.

A large number attended the fourth quarterly conference on Wednesday night. All the business transactions were carried on with a happy spirit. At the close of the business J. U. Whitlock made a motion that the conference give Rev. and Mrs. Anderson a rising vote of thanks for their service rendered in the church during their seven years with us.

Sunday being the last Sunday of our conference year was also a full day. The Sunday school was well attended at 9:45. There was a very impressive communion service at 11 o'clock. It was very characteristic of this church for almost the entire audience to take communion. The church was almost filled on Sunday evening to hear the farewell sermon of the pastor. There were a large number of visitors present. To make the sermon more impressive, the pastor based his sermon on Paul's farewell to the Ephesians, using for a text, "Now, brethren, I commend you to God" (Acts 20-32).

The nominating committee of the officers of the church brought in their report, which was unanimously adopted. But for lack of space I cannot name all of the officers.

A farewell party was given Mrs. Anderson last Friday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wagnor. Many useful and beautiful gifts were given the honoree as an appreciation of her work in the church.

With the many other duties of the Ladies' Aid they are very busy now preparing for a Thanksgiving dinner. They invite all their friends to come and take dinner with them. The Mattie Plyler circle held its meeting with Mrs. Ray Williams on Tuesday evening. The Cam Snotherly circle held its meeting with Mrs. C. W. Hatley. And the Lucy Hatley circle met with Mrs. Reece Smith. All the chairmen reported very good meetings.

Two of our faithful members are in the hospital. Mrs. J. R. Johnson is in a Charlotte hospital, while Mrs. Luke Cooke is in a local hospital. We wish for them a quick recovery.

The church regrets very much to lose Rev. Mr. Anderson as pastor. We wish for him a good place for service in the Annual Conference. We believe he will do faithful service in any place assigned him.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Church officers were elected yesterday. They stand as before, and are as follows: Board of stewards, H. R. McClimon, Joe Leonard, H. R. Smith, E. L. Davis, W. R. Harrison and W. M. Compton; church trustees, N. G. McClimon, B. P. Smith, J. K. Poole and Walker Smith (honorary); church clerk, Mrs. N. G. McClimon; church treasurer, Miss Romaine Poole; class leaders, Mrs. J. K. Poole and Mrs. N. G. McClimon; church reporter, Miss Lottie L. Harrison. All elected officers will be installed first preaching Sunday after conference.

We were indeed glad to receive Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Stout into our church as members Sunday night. They came by letter from an M. E. church at Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt McClimon, Mr. B. A. McClimon and Thomas Dillard are visiting relatives in Texas.

Our delegate, Mr. W. M. Compton, goes to conference this week. We sincerely hope the conference will see fit to return to us our faithful pastor, and we desire your prayers that this coming year may be the best for us in history.

Best wishes to one and all.

First Church, Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. Mr. Isley preached at Mt. Carmel the second Sunday afternoon instead of the third because he would be in Annual Conference at this time. He brought us a wonderful sermon on "Faith," using as his text, "And Jesus answering said unto them, Have faith in God."

Perhaps no other church will send their pastor to conference feeling better than Mt. Carmel. The pastor's salary was paid in full, with the church debt paid off. We are very thankful for this. The dedication service will be planned immediately after conference by the pastor. We are expecting Mr. Isley to be returned, although if conference should see fit not to return him we want him to be present for this service, as he has worked so faithfully in clearing away this debt. Six years ago, when Mr. Isley was assigned to this charge, a very small church without Sunday school rooms was in use. Now we have a large auditorium with seven Sunday school rooms. And the best of all, no indebtedness on it.

Mt. Carmel unanimously requests the return of our highly esteemed pastor and his mother for their seventh year's work here. The pastor's salary was raised $100 for the coming year, which brings it up to $1,500 for this charge.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—The second Sunday in December was a busy day. Sunday school was held at 10 o'clock and officers were elected. One joined the church by letter, Mrs. John Owen. We welcome her to the church. Brother E. A. Bingham preached the last sermon for us before conference, and the Lord's Supper was administered to a large number. There was a good crowd out to hear him, which was encouraging. He then installed the officers, which we all should take as a solemn duty and try to do our best. There is something for us all to do. We ought to be willing to do our part. Let us not forget the sick in our neighborhood. Let us pray for them. We are expecting Brother Bingham back for another year; will be disappointed if not. If he comes back, let us try to do our best to help him do the work of the church. Let us help the new preacher, whoever he is. We want to see the church get on a higher plane and do more for the Lord. We would love to see all of the members attend when they can. We expect the new preacher the second Sunday in December. All come out to hear him the first time and don't miss a time if you are well. Wishing all a happy time at conference. ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Mebane.—We have just closed a glorious year, for which we give the good Lord of us all credit and praise.

The year has been a hard one from a financial standpoint. We venture to state that no town of its kind in our conference has been "harder hit" than Mebane. Yet, in the main, the membership has responded nobly to all local church appeals and conference claims. Every claim has been paid and the pastor's salary met in full.

Parenthetically: Pastors who are afraid of not receiving their salary in full will do well to see that assessments and benevolences are paid, and the people will take care of their shepherd's stipend.

Every special day has been observed with offerings commendably large. Also, the Sunday school has contributed its first Sunday offering each month to the Children's Home.

More names on the church register have had to be cancelled this year because of death and transfer than any two years of the previous five. Yet a gain will be reported to the Annual Conference.

All organizations of the church are functioning well under conscientious and competent leadership. The women's organizations, Woman's Auxiliary and Ladies' Aid, are especially to be commended for their splendid work. The Sunday school, with Bro. H. C. Nicholson as superintendent, has done well in the past year, and promises to uphold its high standards during the coming 12 months with Bro. Dewitte Pender as successor to Bro. Nicholson.

Not only have the people made sacrifices to meet the budget in full, but they have been generous in supplying the parsonage with products from their gardens, which has helped the spirits as well as the bodies of the occupants of the parsonage.

Surely no church in the conference is composed of members who are more co-operative with their pastor and more considerate of each other in the work than those of Mebane.

Since the delegate, Bro. Carl E. Sykes, has been instructed to bring the pastor of last year back to this charge from conference, and if it is the will of the stationing committee to comply, he will gladly return for another year. E. LESTER BALLARD.

Palestine Church, Flat Rock Circuit.—The year's work has almost closed. Some things have been done, yet many have not been done. During the year a new roof has been put on the church, a stove put in the church, and a piano put in, which adds lots in warmth and music.

Our pastor, Rev. C. B. Way, has filled all his appointments for this conference year. Pastor Way has given us good sermons and I am sure our people have enjoyed each and everyone he has preached. Pastor Way puts his very best in every sermon he preaches, and it has been a pleasure to know, love and associate with Rev. and Mrs. Way this their first year on Flat Rock Circuit. The fourth quarterly conference voted unanimously for the return of the present pastor, and we are looking for his return. A pastor is God's messenger to his people, and without the help, prayer and co-operation of his members he can make little progress on any field, and may it be the prayer of each member of our church that we will pray, work and co-operate with our pastor in every way we can. Whether he be a new or old pastor, "he will be our pastor."

Best wishes to the Herald.

Liberty.—The members of all the churches on the Liberty Charge have unanimously voted for the return of our highly esteemed pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love. His good wife is also very much loved and is talented and helpful in church work. They make many calls or short visitations among the sick and sorrowing, and keep very busy doing good.

"Seeking Christ" was the subject of Rev. Mr. Love's message the fourth Sunday morning. The Scripture lesson was Mark 1:30-37. This sermon, like all of Mr. Love's sermons, was helpful and inspiring.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Mamie Smith, president, presiding.

Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. B. J. Gregerson at her home for the October meeting. Rev. Fred R. Love led the devotional and Mrs. Love read an interesting paper on "Problems Faced on the Mission Field."

Circle No. 2 met at the home of Mrs. Clyde Jones. Mrs. J. B. York had charge of the program. Mrs. Jones read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. F. A. Shepard read an interesting paper.

Our Christian Endeavor Society met with Miss Pauline Frazier for the regular monthly meeting. After a short business session a social hour was enjoyed.

Paul Shepard Hardin, of Wake Forest College, spent the week-end at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hardin.

Misses Marjorie Elkins, Mary Bowman Shepard and Helen Dameron, of High Point College, spent Sunday with home folks.

Much grief has come to our church in the passing of one of its good members, Mrs. George Reitzel. Mrs. Reitzel was a friend to all, and will be greatly missed. Our hearts are deeply touched with sympathy for the bereaved family. May the God of all comfort be with them in abounding mercy. Heavenly Father, help us to be trustful and faithful until we, too, shall lay down our armor and receive a crown of righteousness.

English Street.—We are glad to report that we are finishing up this year much better than we have in several years. We have not paid everything in full, but have come nearer to it than heretofore. We had two good services Sunday to bring the year to a close. At the morning hour we had a wonderful testimonial service. There was good attendance at both the Sunday school and the preaching services.

Our fourth quarterly conference has been held and it was voted that our present pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, be returned to us if the conference sees fit. At this meeting our new stewards and trustees, as well as several other church officers, were elected. It was decided that the pastor's salary be raised $50.

The Ladies' Aid Society met on last Monday evening and elected their new officers for the coming year. Mrs. C. J. Burton was elected president. They also made several plans for the next month. REPORTER.

Community Church, Thomasville.—At the communion service which was held on Sunday morning, November 4, the choir rendered a very pretty and appropriate anthem, "Bread of the World." In addition to interesting remarks by the pastor, we had the installation of officers for the coming year. We are sorry to state that there was not a hundred per cent attendance of those elected to fill offices, but we do feel sure that the duties will be fulfilled and as successful results will be obtained in the coming year as have been in the past.

At the evening service the ladies of the church rendered a very interesting program of talks and special music in commemoration of the 25th anniversary of China missions. Mrs. J. E. Clodfelter, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, gave "A Message From China to Friends in America." Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Mrs. G. W. Hobbs and Mrs. Jake Seehrest also gave very interesting readings. Miss Lela Maud Boyles, in summation of this program, gave "A Challenge of Young China." Mrs. Charles F. Finch sang a pretty solo entitled "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," and the choir sang a very appropriate anthem.

The Layman's Fellowship held its regular monthly meeting on last Wednesday evening at the church. The ultimate purpose of this meeting was to close up the year's work, which was accomplished successfully. At the close of the business session cakes and cold drinks furnished by Mr. J. W. Boyles were served to those present.

On Thursday evening, November 8, the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Miss Virginia Smith for a social hour. Due to the illness of the superintendent, Mrs. H. F. Surratt, Miss Lela Maude Boyles acted in her place. After the young people enjoyed an hour of play, delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

The fourth quarterly conference met at the church on October 30. Mr. J. W. Boyles was elected delegate to Annual Conference with C. L. Berrier alternate delegate. We are happy to state that this meeting revealed the best financial reports that have been given in some time. It is very gratifying to know that our church is on the Honor Roll financially.

On Tuesday, November 20, there will be a meeting of Young People's Sunday School Conference in Lexington at State Street church. In addition to the exercises of the day, there will be a banquet that evening. We hope our young people will see fit to attend and turn their names in to Odessa Myers and Frank Gardner so that ways might be provided for those who do not already have a way to go.

The various circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held their regular monthly meeting on Monday, November 12. Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. W. L. Burkhart. Circle No. 2 met with Mrs. G. M. Hoggs. The Young Ladies' Circle met at the home of Miss Susie Myers. At this meeting Miss Edith Myers gave up the office of circle chairman and Mrs. Jake Seehrest was elected by the circle to fill this office.

Members of Community Church extend deepest sympathy to Mrs. H. F. Surratt, and hope that she will soon be back with us.

Pleasant Grove Charge.—Another conference year has passed. The things that have been accomplished in the Master's kingdom will take time to tell. Bro. Powell was assigned to our church last Annual Conference. He came under adverse circumstances. In the very beginning he emphasized the fact that by the help of God and co-operation of all we could do great things. A majority of the faithful members pledged to work to this end although we have had a few who have been applying the brakes, which are not needed in the church work. But they are gradually releasing the brake cords and getting behind the load to be pushers. But too late to accomplish just what we would like to have done. May our mistakes only be for a better future.

All special days have been observed by our church by the co-operation of Bro. Powell, Sunday school teachers and scholars. The special collections have been taken and applied to their respective places.

Revival services were held by the pastor and the results reported to the paper before, but we might say the results were exceedingly good. Soon after the revival Pastor Powell gave away to an infected hand and underwent an operation at High Point. After a short vacation he was back at the work wholeheartedly again.

Officers for the Sunday school and church have been elected for the coming year; also C. E. officers. The C. E. is going forward now and are planning for a great year with the help of God.

The fourth quarterly conference was held on November 4 with Dr. Andrews presiding. The weather was bad just before time for the meeting and attendance was not as large as would have been. All members of the conference were present except two. Business was transacted in harmony. The delegate, R. J. Kennedy, was instructed to ask for the return of Bro. Powell for another year. A minimum salary was set on Sunday for the coming year, with as much above this as possible to be raised. In a short summary the harvest has been very good.

CLYDE PAYNE.

Cedar Cliff, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Our church is moving along nicely, and as we come to the close of the year with everything paid up in full, which it has been doing for the past years. We have elected our new officials for the coming year. And they were installed last Sunday.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held at our church last Friday night, November 9, at 7:30 o'clock. We had an unusually large crowd. Dr. Andrews, president of the North Carolina Conference, was with us. We were very glad to have him present. Representatives from each of the four churches on the charge were there to make their reports for the past year.

Rev. G. W. Holmes preached for us the second and fourth Sundays in October in our pastor's place while he was in school in Maryland. Rev. Mabry was back to fill his regular appointment the second Sunday morning. This was his last sermon to us, as he has asked to go back to school. It grieves us very much to know he is leaving us; but the wonderful sermons he has brought will ever remain in our memory. We shall miss him and his family tremendously, but we wish him Godspeed in a better training for the ministry.

Now that we are to get a new preacher we trust that God will send us one as true and faithful as Rev. Mr. Mabry and family have been. BERTHA BOGER, Reporter.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Rev. R. L. Vickery filled his appointment the first Sunday evening and last Sunday morning with inspiring messages. The officers were elected at this service; nearly all hold their same places. Mr. W. W. Hawkins, Jr., will serve as steward in Mr. P. A. Hawkins' place; Mr. Ambrose Pittard as chairman in Mr. Baldy Green's place; Mr. E. B. Pair, class leader. Mr. E. F. Hawkins, who has been faithful for numbers of years as class leader, requested that Mr. E. B. Pair serve as class leader. We know he has put one in who can do good work.

We were glad to have Mr. Roger and Mr. Alfred Carisles from Tabor M. E. church and Mr. Henry Shaw from the Baptist church to worship with us Sunday. Mr. Georgie Thompson was welcomed to our church Sunday by letter.

We were glad to have Mr. Leo Pittard to act as superintendent the first Sunday. He had us singing smiles. We've got a smile more than he can tell to think of him going out from our church as a minister.

Miss Alice May Glasgow, a college student, was at Sunday school the fourth Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter are the glad parents of a little daughter.

Mr. Tommie Hawkins and Mrs. Berta Hawkins are improving after a very ill spell, we are glad to note.

Misses Esther Hawkins and Maggie Hawkins were the guests of Misses Fannie Mae and Elizabeth Hale Sunday.

Miss Mable Cullom was a guest of Miss Eunice Green Sunday.

Mr. R. L. Vickery and two sons were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hawkins Sunday.

Mr. Vickery preached his last sermon Sunday before conference. We wish him back.

MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

First Church, Lexington.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, delivered his last sermon, which was entitled, "What to Do If You Are Left Behind When Jesus Comes," for the year Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. At this service the holy ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered. At the close of the service Rev. Mr. Isley was given a rising vote of thanks for the wonderful work he has done here during the past six years. Sentiment for his return was unanimous. The evening service was in charge of Mrs. L. B. Koontz, thank-offering secretary. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Koontz, followed by prayer by Mrs. H. C. Koontz. Home missions were discussed by Lola Mae McCulloch; foreign missions by Margaret Lea Swink.

Coming as a complete surprise to their many friends was the marriage of Miss Juanita Easter and Mr. Ernest Hamilton. The ceremony was performed November 3 at the parsonage, Rev. Isley, their pastor, officiating. Mrs. Hamilton is the daughter of L. W. Easter and the late Mrs. Easter, of Burlington, but has made her home with her grandmother, Mrs. P. A. Easter, of Lexington. Mr. Hamilton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hamilton, of Lexington. The young couple are at home on South Main street.

Our community was saddened October 25 when it was learned that Mr. J. A. Easter had passed away from the scenes of this life. He was born at Welcome, N. C., August 27, 1860, the son of the late Henry and Caroline Easter. On February 1, 1881, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Hunt, who was a true companion in every sense of the word; they shared with each other their joys and sorrows, their successes and failures. Their home was a Christian home where God was honored. They reared the following children who are all active Christians: F. W. Easter, Burlington; Mrs. T. E. Hauser, High Point; E. H. Easter and Mrs. Elisha Allen, of Lexington; Juanita Easter, of the home. Two children, Jennie and Mrs. L. A. Bean, preceded their father in death.

In early manhood Mr. Easter united with Beulah Reformed church, but about 35 years ago he transferred his membership to First church. In this church he took great interest. As long as his health permitted he served as secretary and treasurer, and at the time of his death was chairman of the board of trustees. He seemed happiest when engaged in Christian work. What a beautiful life has ended. How noble in ambition; how consecrated in purpose; how uncomplaining in suffering; how bright in hope; how fruitful in old age. Mr. Easter had an intense desire to do his share in the kingdom work and to do it well. Who can doubt that he accomplished this desire? May his mantle fall on someone else to carry on the work that he so nobly carried on.

Funeral services were conducted from First church October 26 at 2 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley. Interment followed in the city cemetery. The many beautiful floral offerings and the large concourse of friends show the high esteem in which he was held.

His work on earth is finished, his labors are done, and he wears the crown which God gives those who love and serve him. A good man has gone to rest. May the blessings of heaven abide with his faithful companion and children who are left behind.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF CHILDREN'S HOME

The kind Heavenly Father has guided us and brought us safely to the close of another conference year. There has been only one case of serious illness among us, and only one broken bone. One of our finest boys sustained a broken leg in a soccer game two weeks ago, but is doing well. Abundant blessings have been upon us, and we present to you a report which shows progress.

The Children

We have 108 children, and they are as fine a group, we think, as has been here at any time during our six years of service. So rapidly does the population of the Home change that there are only seven girls and twelve boys here now who were here when we took charge in October, 1928. The health of the children has been good, and only a very few cases have given us anxiety. Those who visit the Home frequently speak of the healthy countenances and active movements of our children.

Drs. S. S. Coe, J. W. Austin, W. L. Jackson, Glenn G. Perry and others have been kind and faithful in looking after the health of all the inmates of the Home without charge. We have also called upon Drs. York, Burrus, Brockman, Flagg, Bonner, Lackey, Saunders and Geddy. And nearly all the dentists in High Point have given freely of their time during the summer to put the children's teeth in good order. Almost any physician or dentist in High Point will give his services free to the Home. We count ourselves fortunate.

All the children are in school at Jamestown except four little ones, who are too young, and two who are in High Point College, a freshman and a junior. Their religious and social advantages are given them by the First church, High Point, the Jamestown school, and the management of the Home. They have their own C. E. meetings, and they enjoy the many outings planned by the church, the school and the Home.

A Change in Management

Some changes have been made in the management of the boys' dormitory. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dixon have moved into a little home six miles away on account of the failing health of Mrs. Dixon, and also because Mr. Dixon needed more rest at night than was possible in a boys' dormitory. He will still superintend the farm and will get his dinner each week-day in the dormitory and get his other meals in his own home. This is done with a reduction in salary sufficient to pay the head matron in that building. That matron at present is our own daughter, Miss Vista Dixon. The other added help in that building is college student help. There are some disadvantages in college student help, but it is fairly satisfactory, and it is certainly saving the Home quite an item in salaries, and is also helping some very worthy young people to get a college training who would find it difficult to get it otherwise.

Gifts in Substance

We have had numerous gifts from the farm, the shop, the loom, the poultry yards and the orchards. Mr. M. C. McDonald made his usual gift of 75 bushels of very fine peaches; Mr. W. F. Grabs, about 30 bushels of apples; friends in Denton, one truckload of lumber. Miss Cleo Harrell helped us to get about 300 gallons of blackberries at a very low cost. Many others have co-operated in community canning, and have gathered canned goods, grain, potatoes and other produce and clothing. Mr. C. F. Finch gave a carload of lime for the farm, and because of his gift Mr. D. S. Coltrane secured a like gift from his company, the Mascot Lime Company of Knoxville, Tenn. The Southern Railway Company donated one-half of the freight. Mr. Fred W. McPherson, of the Sunshine Laundry, High Point, has continued to do all our heavy laundry. Mrs. C. W. Bates, the faithful Children's Home secretary for the N. C. Branch, has helped wonderfully in many ways, and especially by getting cakes donated for school lunches.

Clothing for the Children

The women's and girls' organizations have gladly taken the measurements of our girls, bought the goods and made the school dresses and slips for the girls and sent them to us. This is both a great help to the workers and a financial help to the Home. Several men's organizations and a few individuals have helped with buying the fall clothing for the boys, and will respond more and more to this call as time passes.

Buildings and Grounds

The buildings need some paint and repairs, and we keep hoping that the financial conditions will so improve that this needed work may be done. The broken plastering in both buildings has been repaired, and the entire lower story in the girls' dormitory painted. We have also finished removing all the old double beds from the girls' building, and have replaced them with single beds.

We are continually trying to make more beautiful the grounds, and have succeeded well enough to attract the attention of passers-by. Some High Point men said, during last summer, "The Children's Home has the prettiest grounds of any home in High Point." We hope to get a hedge planted along the road in front of our buildings this season.

A Test of Faith

Last February, in the very coldest spell of weather this section has known for many years, the furnace under the girls' dormitory, after a service of 19 winters, gave completely out. We had no money and we didn't know what to do. After much prayer and thought we decided to put a simple statement of facts in the High Point Enterprise, the Greensboro Daily News, and the church papers. We made no follow-up whatever, but left the matter with God and His people. A local plumber agreed to put in a new furnace at cost, and thus make his donation to the Home, and within six days he had it in and operating. Money kept coming in designated "furnace money" until friends outside of High Point had sent us $110.48, and friends within High Point had sent us $479.70, making a total of $590.18 with which to pay a bill which, when presented, amounted to $585.80, and the bill was paid within 30 days.

The Farm

This has been the hardest season during our stay here to get a good yield from the farm. Though the farmers planted more often, and worked all the harder, the vegetable crop was exceedingly short. But the other crops have done fairly well, so the farmers have made a pretty good showing after all. With the help of a friend, wife and I bought a 100-acre farm near the Sedgefield school, and just ten miles from the Home. We are using it for the Home, and this year it yielded 308 bushels of wheat, about 25 bushels of peas, and about 16 bushels of Irish potatoes. We have sowed 19 acres of it to wheat and 14 acres to barley and oats this fall. It is our purpose to donate the use of that farm to the Home for the present, if you agree.

The farm yielded this year: Pork, 4,170 pounds; beef and veal, 1,219 pounds; eggs, 1,708 dozen; chickens for table use, 224; milk, 13,767 gallons; hay, 117 loads; wheat, 370 bushels; corn, 250 bushels; oats, 96 bushels; cain seed, 40 bushels; sweet potatoes, 230 bushels; Irish potatoes, 50 bushels; 150 gallons of molasses, 25 bushels of peas, 6 tons of corn stover, 50 tons of ensilage, $30 worth of straw, about $500 worth of vegetables, and $58 in cash, making a total value, at the most reasonable prices, of $7,972.70, with about 50 per cent cost and 50 per cent profit to the Home.

We have 4 mules, 17 cows, 14 calves and heifers, 1 bull, 18 hogs for killing, 4 stock hogs, 21 shoats and pigs, and 300 hens. These are worth more than $2,000.

The Hand of Death

We record with sorrow and with a peculiar sense of loss the passing of Dr. S. S. Coe, a member of our board of trustees, and the beloved physician in the Home for nearly 15 years. He gave his services willingly and cheerfully to the Home, and he prided himself in the fact that he had never lost a child by death. He loved the children, and frequently in public places he would get hold of some of them and point them out as "my children." We have missed him and will continue to miss him. On behalf of the children and the trustees, flowers were sent to the home. The entire Children's Home family went in a body to his home on the morning of the day of the funeral.

MARRIED

McClain-Hampton

On October 27, 1934, at the parsonage of the First Methodist church of Concord, Mr. R. H. McClain and Miss Katharine Hampton, of Kannapolis, N. C., were united in matrimony, the writer officiating. The bride is an attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hampton. After the ceremony they left for Washington, D. C., where they will spend a few days. REV. J. M. MORGAN.

Fox-Jones

In a very beautiful setting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones, 1022 West Market street, their younger daughter, Mary Ruth Jones, was united in marriage to William Alton Fox, of Charleston, S. C., on November 3 at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. S. K. Spahr, D. D., and Rev. J. Elwood Carroll.

The bride was escorted by her father and attended by her sister, Mrs. Paul W. Rawlins, as dame of honor. The bridegroom had as best man Peyton Neal. Little Norma White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar White, was ring bearer. Herbert W. Jones, of New York, and W. S. Jones, Jr., brothers of the bride, were the ushers.

Appropriate music was rendered by Mrs. T. O. Wright, of Oak Ridge, who sang "O Promise Me," and William Hunt contributed "Because." Miss Nell Lee Clapp was the accompanist, and also played before the vocal numbers "Melodie," MacDowell, and during the ceremony "Liebestraum," Liszt.

Mrs. Fox is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones, of this city, and Mr. Fox is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fox, also of Greensboro, but who is now located in Charleston, S. C. Mrs. Fox was educated in the Greensboro schools, Greensboro College, and Meredith College. Mr. Fox received his education in California. For a number of years Mrs. Fox has been an active member of Grace church and a regular member of the choir. Her many friends in Greensboro will regret her leaving town, but wish for her every happiness that heaven can send upon two people in the co-operative endeavor of building a fine Christian home.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Thompson

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Cranford Thompson was born September 3, 1862, and departed this life September 18, 1934, aged 72 years and 15 days. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Cranford. On October 9, 1880, she was married to M. L. Thompson, who still survives her. To this union were born five children. One died in infancy and the four who survive are: Mrs. Holmes Reid, Handy; Mrs. Robert Copple, Farmer; Mrs. Lonnie Snyder, Trinity; Miss Blanche Thompson, Denton. She is also survived by ten grandchildren and five great-grandchildren; one brother, Mr. Alson Cranford, and one sister, Mrs. J. C. Lanier.

Mrs. Thompson became a Christian early in childhood and joined Mt. Ebal M. P. church, where she remained a loyal member until her death.

Mrs. Thompson was a devoted companion, a loving mother, and a friend to all who knew her. For some time her suffering has been extremely hard but through it all she had been so patient and had borne it all without a murmur.

In her going a lonely sensation is felt in the home, the church and the community, and a place is vacant that never can be filled, but God has taken this precious one from us; we know that our loss is her eternal gain.

"For such as you, I do believe
Spirits their softest carpets weave,
And spread them out with gracious hand
Wherever you walk, wherever you stand.

"For such as you, of scent and dew,
Spirits their rarest nectar brew,
And where you sit and where you sup
Pour beauty's elixir in your cup.

"For all day long, like other folk,
You bear the burden, wear the yoke,
And yet when I look in your eyes at eve,
You are lovelier than ever, I do believe."
—Hagerdorn.

The funeral was held at Denton M. P. church and was conducted by her pastor, J. T. Bowman, who was assisted by Revs. Bingham and Madison. Interment followed in the Denton cemetery.

Hackett

Sarah Anne Lineberry, the daughter of R. Horace Lineberry and Sally Allred Lineberry, was born April 8, 1862.

In early life she confessed Christ and joined Gray's Chapel M. P. Church, where she remained a faithful member till death.

On March 4th, 1878, she was married to Joseph F. Hackett. This union was blessed with nine children, four of whom preceded their mother to the grave. Surviving are her husband and three sons, Robt. H. and Henry W., of Climax, N. C., and John M. Hackett, of Pleasant Garden, N. C., and two daughters, Mrs. A. G. Garrett, of Pleasant Garden, and Vadie, of the home; one brother, George Lineberry, of Greensboro, N. C., still survives, together with 14 grandchildren.

She was faithful in her attendance at church as long as health permitted. Her spirit was cheerful; and she has been a help to many beyond her own family. During the six months' affliction she bravely bore her suffering in patience. She said to her loved ones while speaking of death: "I'm ready to go. I am going to Heaven."

On September 29, 1934, her spirit went back to God, after she had lived here 72 years, five months and 21 days.

Her funeral services were conducted at Gray's Chapel on September 30 by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and the writer.

May God's grace sustain those who feel most keenly the loss of this good woman.

A. O. LINDLEY.

Beroth

Mrs. Alice Whitman Beroth, 36, wife of E. E. Beroth, of Vienna township, near Pfafftown, died at a local hospital at 5:40 o'clock Wednesday morning, October 31. She had been ill since last Thursday. The deceased was born July 3, 1898, daughter of the late J. W. and Florence Conrad Whitman. She was a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant church, being converted at the early age of 12 years, was active in church work, particularly in the Woman's Auxiliary. We measure her good deeds by the life she lived. She was married to Mr. E. E. Beroth October 25, 1924. Surviving are her husband; two sons, Eugene and Jack Beroth; one daughter, Joan; one brother, R. J. Whitman, of Pfafftown; two sisters, Miss Lillie Whitman and Mrs. C. E. Holder, of Tobaccoville. Funeral services were conducted from the home of her father-in-law, B. M. Beroth, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock by her pastor, D. R. Williams, assisted by Rev. J. Kenneth Pfohl. Interment was in Pleasant Hill cemetery, under a mound of beautiful flowers. May God's rich blessings rest upon the bereaved, and His spirit comfort them in their sorrow. D. R. WILLIAMS.

Foust

Mrs. Marvin Sykes Foust was born December 22, 1901, the only daughter of Alonzo G. and Elizabeth Sykes, of the Hebron section, Orange county.

In girlhood she gave her heart to Christ and united with the Hebron Methodist Protestant Church, transferring her membership to the Mebane church October 26, 1924, under the pastorate of Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D.

On May 3, 1922, she was united in marriage to James E. Fousst, of Mebane, to which union were born two daughters, Marion Elizabeth and Annie June.

About the first hour after midnight Saturday, September 15, 1934, when nearly all of those interested in her were peacefully sleeping, she, too, slept on, but never to awaken again in this world of mortal strife. Surviving are her faithful husband and darling daughters.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Dr. T. M. Johnson, at the Mebane M. P. church, Sunday afternoon, September 16, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. The elaborate array of lovely floral designs was indicative of the high esteem in which she was held by the church, to which she was so loyal when health permitted, and by her many sorrowing friends and kind-hearted neighbors.

Her brief life was well spent in faithful service for her Master, in deep devotion to her family, and in noble influence to all. Her last weeks were composed of days of suffering and apprehension, yet she bore it as one whose life is hid with Christ in God. The memory of her faithfulness to that which was good and true and right will linger in the minds of those who knew her best and associated with her most.

E. LESTER BALLARD.

Hutchens

Mrs. Hester Frances Hutchens, aged 43, wife of John W. Hutchens, of East Bend, Route 2, passed away Thursday night, October 25, at 8:20 o'clock at a local hospital, following an operation. She had been ill for only one day.

She was born at East Bend, a daughter of J. W. and Mollie Scales Baker, and spent most of her life in and near East Bend. She was a member of Union Hill Methodist Protestant church and was well known throughout that section of Yadkin county. Surviving are the husband; one son, Edgar Vernon Hutchens; two stepsons, Fred and Otis Hutchens, of East Bend; one stepdaughter, Mrs. H. D. Cann, of Winston-Salem; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baker, of East Bend; one brother, John Baker, of East Bend; and five sisters, Mrs. Sebina Ring, Mrs. John Lane, Mrs. Tom Johnson and Mrs. H. H. Scott, of East Bend, and Mrs. Floyd Davis, of Renton, Wash. Her funeral was conducted Sunday afternoon, October 28, and her body laid to rest in the Union Hill cemetery. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the aged parents and relatives. D. R. WILLIAMS.

Finances

With the help of the president of the Annual Conference, the president of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary and others, a well-organized campaign for funds for the Home was put on in the conference during March. The one feature of the campaign, which was followed more closely than any others, was the request to double the regular monthly offerings. So there is no way of telling the exact amount yielded by the effort, but it was about $1,000.

Then, just preceding the Children's Home Day, September 13, the executive committee of the N. C. Branch appointed Mrs. R. M. Andrews to lead in a very unique campaign, asking all Methodist Protestants and their friends to contribute an amount equal to a penny per year for the number of the years of their ages. This has yielded $2,090.14. So the financial condition of the Home is in better condition at this time than at this time last year. It would have been a great deal better than it is if it had not been for the big slump in offerings during the summer.

A full financial statement will be made to the Annual Conference on Friday.

With thanksgiving to God, and with great appreciation to His people who have helped to put across the best year yet in service through the Children's Home, I am,

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

Did you ever see anything like it! What a pity I had to wait until the last minute to do my ravings this week, so that I do not have time to say what I ought to say. But this is the final week of this year's set-up and I was to give credit before the old forms are torn down.

During the war, when fuel was scarce and high, a man ordered two loads of wood, one for the office and the other for the house. Presently a colored driver presented the bill for two loads of wood. The man said, "Why, you have not delivered more than one yet, have you?" The colored man said, "Ise a-haulin' two loads in one." Well, I am not only raving over two but four. To begin with, there is Charlotte who went over the top last week. Hats off to Charlotte and to the Herald agent who trampled down all opposition and reached the top. I knew she could do it, for she is a first cousin of mine. That is saying something, isn't it?

Right after Charlotte comes that young man from Haw River charge, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, who in the past month has turned the world upside down so far as getting subscriptions is concerned. Great for Haw River! He has pointed the way for a better day for the Herald.

Onward, march! Listen to the hosts from First Church, High Point, with L. F. Ferree leading. That simply is great. They can always be depended on, and I just knew they could do it. For years they have been among the most loyal supporters of the Herald, and we take off our hats to them.

And last comes Enfield with Mrs. Barnhill as the Herald agent and Rev. E. O. Peeler as the "back stander and pusher." Anyway, whoever is responsible for it, somebody has sent in the money and the charge is over the top. Well, that is great! And what a quartette it is.

And now for another charge that does not get on the Honor Roll. Fountain Place and Gibsonville are two charges served by the same pastor, Dr. N. G. Bethea. Gibsonville did not reach the goal, but Fountain Place went so far beyond their goal that they made up for the lack of Gibsonville, so the number sent in from the two charges that Brother Bethea serves is more than the combined quotas of the two charges. Well, what a pity I cannot give further credit.

And now, before I say farewell for the year, let me say if I had on a hundred hats I would take all of them off in honor of these Herald agents and pastors who have done such valiant work. It reveals to us what can be done. And now I must say good-bye for this conference year. Blessings on your heads. Thanks, thanks, thanks.

The Annual Conference Buys the Herald

On Saturday morning, November 17, the North Carolina Annual Conference, in session in Grace Methodist Protestant church in Greensboro, N. C., adopted a committee report recommending that the conference purchase from McCulloch and Swain, the printers of the HERALD, the good name of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, together with the mailing list thereof, the same having been transferred by the Clerk of the Superior Court of Guilford County to McCulloch and Swain from the estate of Rev. J. F. McCulloch, deceased. The conference agrees to send the paper to all persons who have paid for the paper to the estate of Dr. McCulloch, until such time as the subscription expires, and by the terms of the agreement the conference has the right to all money paid in on subscriptions that are in arrears, after the time that the transfer is made from McCulloch and Swain to the Annual Conference. The conference accepted also, as a moral obligation, the deficit incurred in the printing of the paper since 1930, while the paper was owned by Dr. J. F. McCulloch, and voted to establish a Dr. J. F. McCulloch Memorial Fund, by which it is hoped to raise the amount of the debt to the printers. A committee consisting of Dr. C. W. Bates, Dr. R. M. Andrews and Mr. J. G. Rogers was appointed to have charge of the raising of the memorial fund. This committee will be heard from at an early date.

It is the plan now for the transfer of the paper to the Annual Conference to be made the last of this week. The issue of the paper this week is by the authority of McCulloch and Swain, but it is hoped that next week it can be by the authority of the Annual Conference.

The same HERALD committee that directed the work of the HERALD for the Annual Conference last year was elected to head it up again this year. The conference elected the writer of this article as the editor of the paper and he will work with the committee. No radical changes in the makeup of the paper are contemplated at this time. Since the editor has been elected by the Annual Conference to work without any financial compensation, not even the ink for his fountain pen nor the ribbons for his typewriter being promised, he feels that it is but reasonable that he should have the co-operation of all concerned in making the paper a success. Already the question has come up whether pastors and HERALD agents are to get their papers free for the work they do. Since the conference fixed the price of the paper and since the editor is to work a whole year for nothing, it does not seem reasonable that he would look with much favor on the proposition of paying people for the assistance which they may render from time to time in getting subscriptions. If the paper is to succeed at all, it will succeed because people love it and take an interest in its success. It is to be a conference organ, devoted to the upbuilding of the Methodist Protestant church, and at the same time the paper wishes to assist in every worthy enterprise which has for its object the making of Christian character and a better world.

There are many more things which the new editor might say, but he will refrain now. J. E. PRITCHARD.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Last week the HERALD could give only a few brief items from the Annual Conference and these were the happenings of the first day. This included the opening exercises, the preaching of the conference sermon, the election of officers and some special committees.

In this issue of the paper we want to give several of the highlights of the session, so that our people may know what took place without having to wait for the conference journal.

The session on Wednesday evening was in commemoration of the founding of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America one hundred and fifty years ago. Dr. C. W. Bates, who attended the sesqui-centennial meeting in Baltimore, Md., a few weeks ago, gave an illustrated lecture.

On Thursday morning the outstanding business of the conference was the submission of the reports of the pastors. For the past several years pastors have not read their reports in open conference, but have simply handed them in to the proper committees for tabulation. This year the statistical secretary was not able to report before the conference adjourned. We trust he will give a copy of his report to the HERALD when it is finished.

Thursday afternoon the conference was not in session, in order that the time might be given over for committee work. But the women of the church throughout the state had been invited to come together for an informal conference with Miss Brittingham, the associate secretary of the Board of Missions. At the evening hour of the same day the service was given over to the women's work. Mrs. J. M. Millikan, the vice president of the N. C. Branch, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who has been kept at home since early in August on account of an injury from a fall. One of the pleasing features of the service was the devotional service in charge of Mrs. J. Elwood Carroll, wife of the pastor of Grace church. This was Mrs. Carroll's first appearance before any large group of Methodist Protestants in this state, but all were very favorably impressed. The addresses of the evening were delivered by Miss Brittingham and Rev. J. F. Minnis. Miss Brittingham spoke of our work in Japan and China and Mr. Minnis discussed the India work.

Friday morning was given over to addresses, first in the interest of our Children's Home. Mr. Dixon made his annual report which indicated progress. He reported that there are now 108 children in the Home, that the indebtedness had been considerably reduced during the year. He also appealed for a liberal Thanksgiving offering for the Home this year. He then presented Mr. O. V. Woosley, superintendent of the Children's Home, run by the M. E. Church, South, at Winston-Salem, who delivered a strong address on the denomination's obligation to support orphan children.

Following the Children's Home hour, next on the program was the Fraternal Messenger's Hour. Rev. C. M. Pickens, presiding elder of the Winston-Salem district of the M. E. Church, South, brought a strong message. He was followed by Rev. B. A. Culp, representing the Methodist Episcopal church. In the Friday morning service also the conference listened to a splendid address by Dr. R. L. Shipley, editor of the Methodist Protestant Recorder of Baltimore. Dr. Shipley paid a glowing tribute to the late Dr. J. F. McCulloch, founder of the HERALD, and rather startled his audience by saying that the best paper for North Carolina Methodist Protestants was the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. He said that if we could take only one, then take the HERALD, but if we could take two, then take the HERALD and the Recorder. Following this address, Dr. G. W. Haddaway, secretary of the Board of Missions, spoke, giving an account of the work of the board.

The afternoon session of the conference on Friday was moved to High Point College to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the founding of the college. Dr. G. I. Humphries, president of the college, presided. The first part of the program was devoted to the historical side of the college. Dr. R. M. Andrews spoke of the labors of Dr. McCulloch in the interest of a college. The editor read a paper on the promotional work for the college from 1919 to 1930. Rev. N. M. Harrison reviewed the work of the college during the administration of Dr. Humphries. Addresses were made also by Mr. J. Norman Wills, Dr. T. M. Johnson, Mr. H. A. Millis, Mr. Wilbur Hutchins, Dr. F. W. Paschall, Mrs. D. S Coltrane and Mr. H. A. Coble. Following this meeting the Board of Education went into executive session. While the board was holding its annual meeting, a newly created college committee was meeting also, most of the members of the Board of Education and the committee remaining for supper at the college as the guests of Dr. Humphries.

Friday evening's session was devoted to the work of the Laymen's Fellowship of the conference. Mr. J. G. Rogers, of Denton, president of the organization, presided, and gave his annual report, which report showed that a good deal of work had been done during the year. Addresses were made by Mr. F. G. Hammer, of Gibsonville, and Mr. C. W. Phillips, of Greensboro. Officers were elected for the coming year, the ones serving for the past year being continued in office with some additional ones also.

A good part of the Saturday morning session was taken up with a discussion of the report of the HERALD committee. The conference seemed to be a unit on the matter of continuing the HERALD, but there was some division of opinion as to the best method of financing it. But during the discussions the conference seemed to see the wisdom of accepting the report of a committee which had had weeks in which to study the matter rather than to try to substitute anything that had not been thoroughly thought out, so the report was adopted and the HERALD is to be bought and run as a conference organ.

Saturday afternoon was spent largely in discussing committee reports. There was no evening session Saturday.

Quite a number of ministers were sent out to the various pulpits of the city of Greensboro for the Sunday services. At the 11 o'clock service at the conference church the ordination sermon was preached by Dr. F. W. Paschall, pastor of our First church, Burlington. The editor did not get to hear this sermon, but it was highly spoken of. Following the ordination sermon, Rev. J. C. Madison, pastor of our First church, High Point, and Rev. L. E. Mabry, who for the past few years has served Mt. Hermon circuit, but who is now a student in the Westminster Theological Seminary, were ordained elder, the president of the conference, Rev. R. M. Andrews, D. D., being assisted in the ordination service by Dr. A. G. Dixon and Dr. S. W. Taylor, both former presidents of the conference.

The memorial service Sunday afternoon was largely attended and was unusual in that the number to be honored was so large, six ministers and the wives or widows of seven ministers having passed away since last conference. The ministers were: Rev. D. Fishel, Rev. J. W. Hulin, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, Rev. C. W. Saunders, Dr. L. W. Gerringer and Dr. J. F. McCulloch. The wives or widows were: Mrs. W. E. Swain, Mrs. D. A. Highfill, Mrs. Atlas Ridge, Mrs. A. O. Lindley, Mrs. W. L. Harris, Mrs. T. F. McCulloch and Mrs. George Laughlin. Space will not permit us to say more than that these all labored earnestly and the world is better because they lived and served. The obituaries of these persons will be published in the conference journal.

The Sunday evening service was under the direction of the Conference Council of Religious Education, and was presided over by Rev. T. J. Whitehead, president of the Council. A pleasing feature was the singing by the combined young people's choirs of West End and Calvary churches, directed by Rev. E. L. Ballard. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, the director of Leadership Training of the Board of Christian Education. Following the address Rev. Paul Warner, a missionary to Japan, now home on furlough, showed the most beautiful and inspiring pictures of our mission work in Japan that we have yet seen.

Monday morning was devoted strictly to business. If a man tried to make a speech, he immediately felt that the conference did not want to hear him. Committee reports were considered and usually adopted in short order. The conference adopted a strong resolution against war, written by Mr. L. L. Wrenn, of Siler City. It also adopted resolutions at some time during the session condemning the legalized liquor traffic and opposed the repeal of the Turlington act in North Carolina. It also passed resolutions condemning marriages where promoters charge an admission fee. The popular mock marriage, such as the manless and womanless weddings, was soundly threshed, one man saying it was just as appropriate to have a mock communion service as a mock marriage, as both marriage and communion were ordained of God.

As the noon hour approached on Monday, it was seen that the conference was getting anxious to hear the report of the stationing committee, which consisted of President Andrews and Mr. J. Norman Wills. Finally, the committee appeared. Those who were sitting with an alphabetical list of the charges with pen in hand to take it down were thrown into consternation and bewilderment when the committee departed from the alphabetical arrangements and read the list by districts. Following the reading of the appointments the conference adjourned.

And now for just a few additional highlights. Dr. Broomfield, the president of the General Conference, thrilled the conference by his description of the general church as he sees it today. He stated that two things are making a new M. P. church. The first he attributed to the fine work of the women and the other to the great work of our own F. L. Gibbs in his work for Leadership Training. Dr. F. W. Stephenson, executive secretary of the department of institutions in the Board of Christian Education, also thrilled the conference with the declaration that the whole church stands in amazement at the achievement of High Point College.

All in all, the conference was great. There was fine weather, fine fellowship, a fine spirit prevailed, and everything went off smoothly. Grace church and the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, excelled in their efforts to make the stay of the conference pleasant. West End, Calvary and St. Paul did their part also in entertaining.

And now with a report of the nominating committee, the boundary committee, the budget council and the stationing committee we leave you to guess the rest.

Changes in Boundaries

Changes in the arrangement of certain charges were made during the closing hours of the Saturday afternoon session in order to better arrange for pastoral supply. The most important changes were that Love Joy, Seagrove, Macedonia, Fair Grove and Flint Hill were detached from Why Not charge and will hereafter be known as Sea Grove-Love Joy charge. Cid and Pine Grove churches were taken from the Denton charge and attached to Why Not. Pensacola, in Yancey county, was detached from the Democrat charge, and is made a station known as Pensacola.

The South Winston church has been attached to Kernersville and the new charge is to be called Kernersville-South Winston. The West Thomasville and English Street church in High Point are to be combined in a new charge designated as West Thomasville-English Street. The Brown Summit church, formerly attached to the old Haw River circuit, is set apart as a station. Bess Chapel church is detached from the Bess-Caroleen charge and is returned to its former standing as a station. Shady Grove is taken from Midway and is to be called Shady Grove station. A new church recently organized at China Grove was received, attached to Spencer, the present grouping to be called Spencer-China Grove. The church at Pageland, S. C., is removed from Mecklenburg charge and attached to Rockingham.

The conference concurred in the action of the North Davidson quarterly conference and dropped Union Grove church from the plan of appointments.

Report of Nomination Committee

Upon the adoption of the report of the nominations committee, the following special and standing committees were elected:

Conference Trustees—Minister, George R. Brown; layman, L. L. Wrenn.

Board of Church Extension—W. L. Ward and L. M. Foust.

Methodist Co-operation—L. F. Ross and Dr. S. W. Taylor.

Trustees of President's Parsonage—J. M. Millikan, J. Norman Wills, Dr. T. M. Johnson, E. L. Douglas, F. R. Stout.

Committee on Stewardship—Ministers, H. F. Fogleman, Dr. N. G. Bethea; layman, J. G. Rodgers.

Evangelism—Revs. G. H. Hendry, C. G. Isley and J. L. Trollinger.

Rural Church—Ministers, J. W. Braxton, J. T. Bowman, E. A. Bingham; laymen, R. P. Butler and T. C. Bumgardner.

Standing District Committee—Ministers, Dr. T. M. Johnson, H. L. Isley, R. A. Hunter; laymen, H. M. Scott, T. S. Coble and I. A. Teague.

Advisory to the President—Composed of ministers, A. G. Dixon, J. D. Williams, J. E. Pritchard, R. C. Stubbins, George R. Brown.

Nominating Committee for 1935—Composed of ministers, George L. Curry, H. F. Surratt and O. C. Loy.

Commission on Financial Recommendations—Revs. R. M. Andrews, G. I. Humphries, J. E. Pritchard, A. G. Dixon, T. M. Johnson, T. J. Whitehead and W. L. Ward.

To Audit the Treasurer's Books—E. L. Somers and C. J. Roberts.

To Send Messages of Greetings

Since it was agreed by the commission on Methodist cooperation that no fraternal messenger will be exchanged until the conferences of 1936, Dr. C. W. Bates, secretary of the conference, was instructed to send a message of greetings to the North Carolina conference and the Western North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South. The fraternal messenger to the Blue Ridge-Atlantic conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be Rev. G. H. Hendry.

Rev. T. Glenn Madison was elected to preach the annual conference sermon on the opening day of the 1935 conference, and Dr. N. G. Bethea will preach the ordination sermon.

College Trustees

The board of trustees of High Point College were elected for the terms indicated: 1935—J. E. Pritchard, D. D., R. M. Cox, Dr. J. H. Cutchin, Frank Wineski and W. F. Hunsucker. 1936—J. D. Williams, D. D., J. M. Millikan, J. Norman Wills, Dr. J. T. Burrus, F. Logan Porter. 1937—Rev. J. C. Auman, C. F. Finch, W. L. Ward, H. A. Millis, G. H. Kearns. 1938—Rev. N. M. Harrison, C. C. Robins, J. S. Picket, R. T. Amos, O. A. Kirkman. 1939—S. W. Taylor, D. D., L. F. Ross, Mrs. M. J. Wrenn, R. O. Lindsay, Capt. A. M. Rankin. For tenure of present office—R. M. Andrews, D. D., president of the North Carolina Annual Conference; G. I. Humphries, president of High Point College.

WHAT A HERITAGE!

"Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage forever: for they are the rejoicing of my heart." (Ps. 119:111).

What a heritage, what an estate to possess are these testimonies of God! And the one who makes them the rejoicing of his heart can make many rich. Think of the comfort of the Scriptures for those who are in sorrow, the encouragement that they give to those who are like to faint in the way; think of the grace, the love and the unfailing compassion of the God who is revealed to us in them. "They testify of me," said our Lord, and in them are the things concerning Himself.

And these testimonies are given to us as our heritage. God's testimonies, whether in Creation, or in His providential dealings with us, or most of all in His Word, are given to us as our heritage. What wealth is ours; pray let us not neglect it, let us prize it; let us make these testimonies the joy of our lives, then shall we boast in God through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Scripture Truth.

A Wednesday Herald Next Week

In keeping with the custom of many years' standing, the Herald will be printed Wednesday of next week, November 28, instead of Thursday. This change in publication date will apply to next week only, and is made in order that the employees of the Herald office may enjoy Thanksgiving Day as a holiday.

All articles for publication next week should be forwarded one day earlier than usual.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Greetings

I am glad to be your leader in promoting the work of the Annual Conference for this year. While it was not always smooth in the year just closed, I have received from you courteous treatment and a respectful hearing as I have gone among the churches. We have made a start in our efforts at recovery. Of course in finances the churches will hardly go faster than the economic conditions improve; so we must of necessity wait on them, still we are confident that our people are in a better state of mind to support the work of the conference financially than they were last year. We are hoping and praying for larger ingatherings, for a more general revival of religion in our church, and for a hearty co-operation in the projects the conference will seek to further.

We are seeking to induce more of our people to become students of the Bible; searching the Scriptures daily that they may know the mind of the Master. We would like for our people to co-operate with us in this forming groups who pledge to read the Bible daily. In like manner we want to enlarge the number of personal workers in every church,—those who try daily to win some one to Christ.

I shall be glad to go wherever I am needed by pastors and people to hold conferences, to proeach, or for consultation about improtant matters relating to the church.

A. C. Expenses Increased

A mistake was made last year in working out the amount for this interest, so it is necessary to increase it some. See the table elsewhere in this issue for the amounts your church or charge should pay to the A. C. Budgets this year.

Conference adjourned to meet next year on November 6th, but no place for this meeting was decided upon.

Cordially yours,

R. M. Andrews, President.

THE URGENCY OF PRAYER

It is no loss of time to pray. Many think it chiefly or wholly lost time. They are so full of business, they say, and assume that prayer will spoil their business. I tell you that your business, if it be of such sort as ought to be done at all, will go all the better for much prayer. Get time somehow, by almost any imaginable sacrifice, sooner than forego prayer.

Are you studying? It is no loss of time to pray, as I know very well by my own experience. If I am to preach, with only two hours for preparation, I give one hour to prayer.—Charles G. Finney.

THE NEW EDITOR OF THE HERALD

This is to introduce to you Rev. J. E. Pritchard, D.D., the present Editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald. He was elected at the last Annual Conference for the present conference year.

Dr. Pritchard has already got "ink on his fingers" in the editor's sanctum, and has proven by other tokens than his ability to make his mark that he can edit this conference organ. We predict for him a hearty co-operation on the part of the present subscribers in keeping their subscriptions paid up to date, and we believe that there shall be many new names go into the galley carrying the mailing list of the Herald before the year shall close.

Dr. Pritchard is doing the work of two men: pastor of Calvary church—a growing congregation in a progressive city where a man must be "on his toes" all the time to keep his church living up to a modern program; and he is also now editing for us the Herald. This in itself is a job for a man with talent for that kind of work. We must not make his burdens heavier; we must co-operate with him. We must pray for him, encourage him by word and by deed. Be sure to make a big effort to get renewals and new subscribers to start the work off this conference year. Remember, too, that he is doing this extra work without one single dollar of pay. Who else is doing so much for our church in the North Carolina Annual Conference?

R. M. Andrews, President.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

Keeping Christ at the Center

It is very easy, I find, to branch off this way and that in search of sermonic material, leaving Christ, our only real message, in the background. Dr. Nabers tells of a minister who went into his pulpit one Sunday morning and found there a note which read: "Sir, we would see Jesus." This set the preacher thinking. He reviewed his most recent sermons, to discover that he had discussed social questions, current events, economic theories, and similar subjects. But now his method changed. He gave Christ the central place. After several weeks he found another little note on the pulpit. This time it read: "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord."

I used to hear ministers say a good deal about "hiding behind the Cross." The more I study preaching the more I realize what they meant. Eloquence and scholarship are fine things, but they can never reach the soul nor build up a Christian congregation. The pastor soon finds that he needs an authority—something that is absolute and final. His words begin to sound hollow, empty, and fruitless; and so he seeks something to preach that really matters. Not that what he is saying is not true, but rather that it comes to sound superfluous, not imperative and indispensable. And in this state of mind his only refuge is the Cross. Nothing will so encourage, strengthen, and nerve him on so much as to see things through the eyes of Jesus; to realize that Christ is the authority, the one who is really to be heard and not himself. So unless one does hide behind the Cross his preaching is likely to be scattered, non-compelling and ineffective. Christ is His own greatest argument; keep Him in the center and your appeal will be more fruitful.

Four principles follow this general statement:

1. Make abundant use of the Bible. Unless people hear the Bible read and explained at the church, they are not, these days, likely to hear it at all. We need the Scriptures; give us a thorough supply of it on Sundays. Many sermons would be just as appropriate before the Rotary Club, at the banquet table, or in the sociology class-room. Such discourses are doubtless true and good, but they are just leaving Christ out of it, and regardless of how true they are, they are a bit out of place at worship, and are not in class with the pure Gospel. I am very fond of literature, history and social science, but I want to hear much of the Bible on Sundays.

2. Even a short sermon with Christ at the center is worth more than a long, laborious discussion of general matters. The Gospel is powerful; it does not take much of it to go a long way. Remember, the world through wisdom knew not God; it can never so know Him, and there is no use trying to pile up human argument enough to equal even a short portrayal of Christ's redeeming love. Evidently, Peter preached a most powerful sermon at Pentecost, but according to the Bible account, he merely recited the history of the Jews which culminated in the Crucifixion of the Messiah—but it did culminate in the Crucified Christ, which amazing fact gave the sermon its power. Do not insist that people hear you; insist that they hear Chrst, then be sure to give them a good chance to hear Him!

3. But merely repeating the name of Christ in the pulpit does not necessarily mean that one is preaching Christ. On the other hand, one may be putting Him at the center with hardly a reference to His name. The very attitude, the reverence, the manner of the minister may tell something of the place Christ holds in his preaching. The audience can usually tell whether the sermon is God-centered or not without being told. Especially is this true when the service follows closely the teachings of Christ, and is permeated by the right spirit.

4. "What would Jesus do?" If before delivering the sermon, the speaker would ask himself this question, the results would be far better. The preacher is among us speaking in the place of Christ—uttering the very words he believes the Master would have him utter. So, I say it would certainly tend to season and spiritualize the message if the messenger would ask himself frequently, What would Jesus say? Had I asked myself this question on the verge of every service, and had I faithfully obeyed its answer, I would have had fewer blunders to regret and my hearers might have enjoyed something more like a spiritual blessing. No words are equal to the words of the Divine! no message is like His. As the song says, "And run not before him whatever betide." When the preacher gets to running before Him, people see the preacher instead of the Savior. This is, of course, reversing the proper order. Christ is to be seen, and the best thing any preacher can do is to assist people in their effort to see Him.

I know all this is easier said than done. I have tried it. But any pastor will soon find that it pays to do the best he can to keep Christ at the center.

Several years ago (May, 1928) the Expositor magazine carried an article by a famous minister, now retired from active work. He was telling some of the things he would do and not do if he could go over his pastoral experience again. Two of the things he said he would not do were: First, he would not try to be a policeman, spending his valuable time agonizing over law-enforcement and lotteries. This, he said, was the duty of the city and state. A second thing he would not do, he said, was to turn his church into a club house. Social life is important, but the spiritual life is more so. Throughout the whole article the man was affirming just what we started out to show, namely, Christ must be kept at the center of all effective and satisfactory preaching.

UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY

The American Bible Society has set aside Sunday, December 9, as Universal Bible Sunday as the 400th anniversary of the publication of Martin Luther's Translation of the Bible. The address prepared under the auspices of the American Bible Society is by Rev. Abdel Ross, D.D., Professor of Church History, Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., a few paragraphs from which are:

"In Luther's day the times were ripe for a new stage in this process of 'unbabeling Babel' by translating the Bible. It was the sixteenth century. Christianity had spread over western Europe and was numbering its adherents there by the scores of millions. The crusades had taken place. They had stirred Europe profoundly. The Renaissance had done its great work of intellectual enlightenment in the upper classes. The printing press had come. Every department of human interest was astir. Out of the confusion that had resulted from the invasion and settlement of vast tribes from the East and their mixture with Roman civilization, modern nationalities were beginning to crystalize.

"Modern languages were about to take form. But the official language of the church was Latin. Wherever the Romans carried Christianity, the Vulgate was read in the church, and, by educated people, at home. This was the Latin translation completed by St. Jerome in 405. Its text had become corrupt in the eleven centuries that had elapsed since it had been made, and even so, only the official class could read it. So at the beginning of the sixteenth century there was a loud call for a new Pentecost, a new outpouring of the Holy Spirit through the Scriptures, that would enable the Christians of the western nations to declare: 'We hear them speaking in our tongues the mighty works of God.'

"Such was the call of the times. Luther's translation was by no means the first effort to meet this crying need. For more than three centuries before Luther such efforts had been made. In the first six centuries of Christian history the Bible had become known in eight distinct languages. But in the three centuries just preceding the Reformation, when modern European tongues began to evolve, we can count more than a dozen new languages through which the Bible writers spoke. Prominent among these was the English of Wiclif, just a hundred years before Luther was born. When the printing press appeared, about 1450, fresh translations were attempted almost everywhere. In Germany, more than forty different types of translation can be counted. Before Luther became a Reformer, at least fourteen editions of the whole Bible were printed in High German and three or four in Low German, besides many more editions of the New Testament and the Psalms alone. It is clear that the Bible was on the way to become the book of the people.

"But these earlier translations did not fully meet the need. They were always very faulty and inaccurate. None of them was based on the original languages of the Bible. All of them were translations of the Vulgate with its corrupted text. The translators were usually more zealous than knowing. They did not know Latin well. Their own languages were in a state of transition and flux, and it required genuine linguistic genius to master any of them. Out of veneration for the ancient official text, they generally translated word for word. The result was never satisfactory, often unintelligible in this 'Latinized' idiom, and sometimes even grotesque.

"The official church never encouraged these efforts to translate the Bible into the language of the people. Repeatedly the medieval church forbade laymen to read the Scriptures even in the Vulgate, and especially in the vernacular translations. That was one reason why none of these earlier versions gave the names of their writers. But education was spreading. Discontent was increasing. And there had grown up a vast body of piety that was unconcerned or dissatisfied with the official church. It claimed the right to examine and judge for itself. It demanded and it received the Holy Scriptures in the language that the people could understand."

WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?

James 4:14

By J. E. P.

What is your life, is a searching question. Some people would be compelled to blush if the question were to be put to them. Others could look you straight in the eye and say, My life is an open book. It is a fine thing for our lives to speak for themselves. And whether they are good or bad, in a sense they do speak for themselves. But I like to think of those noble lives who have been a blessing to humanity as speaking for themselves. Such lives need no praise. When physical life goes out, those who have lived noble lives wlil not need a long eulogy. What we have been will speak more eloquently than anything that anybody could say about us. The question before us was asked by the most practical man of the New Testament. And he asked it for the purpose of emphasizing the frailty of man. And the answer which he gives to his own question is brief and to the point. He says our lives are as a vapor that appeareth for a little while and then vanisheth away. He was warning people against taking too much for granted. He was urging men to say if it be the will of the Lord we shall do so. Making St. James' question ours, let us ask ourselves the question, What is our life? Without seeming to be unduly pessimistic, I would say that it is a brief span. All men who have ever lived have had to admit that much. When Pharaoh asked Jacob how old he was, Jacob said, "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been." People who have reached middle life or more can recall how that as children they tried to imagine how long life would be. But, alas, how quickly it goes by.

But there is another side to life that I want us to think about at this time, namely, that life is just about what we make it. The colored minister was not far from the truth when he said, "God hath ordained you to eternal life and the devil has ordained you to eternal death and whichever way you vote decides the matter." In this I am not leaving God out of the picture, for God is there all the time. Wherever there is need for new strength, new courage, new determination, new zeal, new effort, God is always there. And if it were necessary he would send a multitude of angels to our relief. He has already done far more for us than we have yet comprehended. St. Paul was a great scholar and had a great vocabulary, but there was one time when he was so overwhelmed with a sense of the presence of God in our lives and with what God has done for us that he cried out, "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for those who love him." Yes, God has done his work, now the responsibility is ours. Ours to make it a success or a failure. Ours to be a saint or a demon, ours to be a blessing or a curse, ours to decide our own destiny. It is ours to decide whether we will be an asset or a liability to the rest of humanity.

Another thing about this mysterious thing called life is that it is capable of endless development. What is the limit of life, do you ask? There is no limit, there are no bounds. Listen to what the Psalmist says in the eighth Psalm: "What is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet. All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowls of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the sea."

Still another thing about life is that nobody can measure the influence of just one man. Who could calculate the value to this world of Moses? The best lawyers tell us that Moses has profoundly influenced every court in the civilized world. What a thrill has come to many a man when he was halting between two opinions when he remembered the inspiring words of Caleb and Joshua when they said, "Let us go up and possess the land, for we be able to overcome it." Who could tell us what this world would be like today had St. Paul never lived? Suppose he had not caught the missionary spirit or had been disobedient to the heavenly vision while on the road to Damascus. Who knows whether the gospel would have come to us or not? If Paul had not been a missionary he could not have preached the gospel in Rome, and who knows whether it ever would have come to Western Europe? William Jennings Bryan never reached the goal set for him by his friends, namely, to be president of the United States, but his influence has reached to every nook and corner of our country. The clean life that he lived, the high and noble thinking that he did will continue to be a blessing to this nation as long as it shall last. And the best thing about it is that a man's influence does not stop with death, for as he touches some other life, that life touches someone else, and on down to the end of time. It is great to live.

And finally, it is not a question how long is your life here, but how well do you live it. John the Baptist did not live to be old, but his life counted for righteousness. Christ was crucified when he was only thirty-three, but he has made a new world. And many men in the intervening years between the time of Christ and our day, as well as many of our own acquaintances and associates, have fallen before the great foe, Death, but while they fell they were not conquered. Their influence lives. The Book of Joshua tells us that Israel served the Lord all the days of Joshua and all the days of the elders that out-lived Joshua and who remembered the things which he did.

But for your life to count as the lives of others have counted for righteousness you will have to determine that it shall be so. Our lives and our conduct must be independent of the actions of others. We must stand for something regardless of what the multitude does. The man who goes with the crowd to do evil will never bless the world. What is your life? It is a great opportunity and it is a great responsibility.

LIVING THE WAY WE PRAY

I knelt to pray when day was done,
And prayed: "O Lord, bless every one;
Lift from each saddened heart the pain,
And let the sick be well again."
And then I woke another day
And carelessly went on my way.
The whole day long I did not try
To wipe a tear from any eye;
I did not try to share the load
Of any brother on the road;
I did not even go to see
The sick man just next door to me.
Yet once again, when day was done,
I prayed: "O Lord, bless every one."
But, as I prayed, into my ear
There came a voice that whispered clear:
"Pause, hypocrite, before you pray;
Whom have you tried to bless today?
God's sweetest blessings always go
By hands that serve Him here below."
And then I hid my face and cried,
"Forgive me, God, for I have lied;
Let me but live another day
And I will live the way I pray."

A TIME TO PRAISE

One day Gypsy Smith went to visit an old gypsy aunt, who had cared for him after his mother's earthly death, and who was lying on her deathbed. "Auntie," said he, as he entered the gypsy wagon, "shall I kneel down and ask God to bless you?" But the woman replied, "No, my boy; kneel down and thank God because He has blessed me."—Selected.

ORIGINAL AND CONTINUOUS READERS OF THE HERALD

For the past several months we have been asking those who have been taking or reading our church paper ever since it was started, first under the name Our Church Record, and later, METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, to send in their names for publication. The original idea was to present these in some attractive form to Dr. McCulloch, but before the 40th anniversary of the paper came around Dr. McCulloch passed away. We are running the names anyway, thinking it will be a matter of concern to a large number of people.

There are two classifications which we have been calling for. The first consists of those who have had access to the paper all these years, and the second is the identification of the homes where the paper has gone continuously since it was started. Well, here they are:

J. A. Causey, Greensboro, Rt. 4, who says he was the first paid subscriber; Rev. W. F. Kennett, Greensboro; W. N. Pegram, High Point; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Smith, Mebane; J. A. Gunn, Lakeland, Florida; Mrs. Fannie Barns Glasgow, Winston-Salem; Dwight Davidson, Gibsonville; Dr. T. M. Johnson, Lexington; Mrs. R. G. Hornaday, Burlington; Rev. H. S. B. Thompson, Halifax, R.F.D.; Miss Mary Young, High Point; Mrs. S. W. Taylor, High Point; Rev. C. H. Whitaker, Winston-Salem; Rev. G. W. Holmes, Graham, R.F.D.; Mrs. J. E. Welborne, High Point; W. C. Shepherd, Mrs. W. C. Shepherd, C. A. Shepherd, Mrs. F. A. Shepherd, Miss Bertine Shepherd, Liberty; Miss Xannie Stowe, High Point; Mrs. A. H. Guire, Lenoir: Mrs. O. O. Young, Henderson; D. T. Gaster, Randleman, Route 2; W. P. Pickett, Liberty, Rt. 1; Mrs. J. H. Moton, High Point; Mrs. Alice Whitehead, Enfield; Mrs. C. T. Luck, Seagrove, R.F.D.; Rev. George Laughlin, Cedar Falls; Misses Mary and Harriett Wills, Greensboro; J. Norman Wills, Greensboro; Richard B. Hunter, Areola; J. Newlin Thompson, Graham, Rt. 2; S. A. Alexander, Liberty; Mrs. Kate Harris Kime, Miami, Florida; J. M. Davis, High Point; Mrs. J. W. Magee, Pleasant Hill; Miss Lelia Kirkman, Pleasant Garden; Miss Mollie Wheeless, Whitakers; Mrs. John W. Moore, Greensboro; Prof. H. C. Stout, Burlington; Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, Hillsboro; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Barker, Randleman; T. T. Stafford, Burlington; Mrs. Sallie Cherry Davenport, Creswell; Rev. B. M. Williams, Efland; Miss Bell Causey, Greensboro, Rt. 4; Rev. T. F. McCulloch and Family, Greensboro; Mrs. W. C. Kennett, Greensboro; Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane.

We have been informed that the HERALD has gone to the following homes ever since it was started: The G. R. Johnson place, near Burlington, later known as the Washington Johnson home, and now occupied by his son, Norman Johnson; the Hunter Satterwhite place near Henderson, now occupied by Misses Annie and Rosa S.; the L. C. Hine home near Winston-Salem; the Monroe Hunter home, near Winston-Salem, now occupied by his daughter, Mrs. E. F. Kiger; the W. D. Kirkman home near Pleasant Garden, now occupied by Miss Lelia Kirkman.

This completes the list that has been sent in. Later we hope to print some of the letters that have been sent.

Before closing, let the editor say that he too has been a reader of the HERALD ever since it started.

OUR STORY PAGE

CURED BY A DOG

A farmer was one day standing beside his wagon in a market town. Many who passed noticed his happy, smiling face, his well-fed horses, and the fine, fresh vegetables with which the wagon was loaded.

They also noticed the farmer's dog, a beautiful Newfoundland, with a jet-black coat and a white patch on his breast. There were a few white hairs on his head, and anyone could see that the dog was no longer young. He was very quiet and gentle, and loved children to pat and stroke his curly hair. But every time a man who had been drinking came near the wagon the dog would snarl, show his white teeth, and growl angrily.

A gentleman who noticed this said to the farmer: "Your dog seems to have no love for strong drink; he has growled each time anyone the worse for liquor has passed. Is he a temperance dog?" he added, laughing.

"That he is, and no mistake," said the farmer, "and a temperance preacher, too. I could tell you something about old Carlo's preaching, if you cared to hear it," he went on, patting the dog's head.

"Please do. I should like to hear it, as I am a teetotaler myself," was the answer.

"Well, a good many years ago this dog belonged to a young farmer called Jimmy Stone. Jimmy bought him from a tinker who used to drink a good deal, and when tipsy, often treated him cruelly, hitting him with a hammer and even burning him with the soldering iron. The dog soon grew fond of Jimmy, and Jimmy was mighty fond of his four-legged friend.

"One day Jimmy went to town, and foolishly had too much to drink. When he returned home, Carlo came running out to greet him, but, as soon as he got close to him he stopped, snarled savagely, and went back to his kennel. Jimmy followed him and tried to pat him, but the dog growled so threateningly that it was easy to see he was best left alone.

"Next day Carlo was as good-tempered as ever, and for weeks was as well-behaved as possible.

"When Jimmy went to town again and returned in the evening, Carlo ran out to meet him, but again, smelling the liquor, he growled and ran to the back of the yard. For two days Carlo kept away from his master, and spent the time lying in an outhouse.

"Jimmy began thinking! Carlo was ashamed of him, that is what it meant. All day long this thought worried Jim, until he began to feel ashamed of himself! The end of it all was that he made up his mind to leave the drink alone altogether, and after that he and the dog were best of friends."

"What became of Jimmy, and how did you come to own the dog?" asked the stranger, who had been much interested in the story.

"Oh, well, you see, I'm Jimmy," the farmer replied with a smile. "I have Carlo to thank that I have now a farm of my own instead of being just a farm worker. He taught me that a tipsy man is not fit company for even a dog, and I never forgot the lesson. I began to save money I had formerly spent on drink; now I own a decent farm, and my prospects are good. But he still remembers the tinker who treated him so badly, and still growls when he sees a drunken man, don't you, Carlo, old man?"

Then, mounting his wagon, with a cheery "Good day, sir," the farmer drove off.—The Advance.

HOW HATTIE BECAME A CHRISTIAN

She was only nine years old. I had been preaching to the children. At the close of the meeting Hattie came to me and said:

"I do want to be a Christian; how can I be?" and the anxious look in her great brown eyes assured me she was in earnest.

"Hattie, are you a sinner?"

"Oh, yes; I am a very wicked girl!"

"What! Such a little girl as you a sinner? How can that be?"

The tears could be kept back no longer, and she sobbed as though her heart were broken.

"I am so wicked!"

"Hattie, what did Jesus come into the world for?"

"To save sinners," came the answer between two great sobs.

"Then if you are a sinner He came to save you, did He not?"

"Will He save me?" she asked.

"Yes, Hattie; Jesus is waiting to save you now. Will you go home and give yourself to Him to be saved?"

"I'll try," she replied.

The next afternoon Hattie was present at the children's meeting, but her sad little face showed that the question was still undecided. She came to me and I said:

"Well, Hattie, did you give yourself to Jesus?"

"I tried to, but I don't feel any better. I asked Jesus to take me, but I don't know whether He did or not."

I said to her:

"I think I know what is the trouble"; and as her face was turned so eagerly to mine, seeking earnestly the light, I added: "You gave yourself to Jesus, and then took yourself right back again."

"Yes, that's just what I did," said Hattie, as the truth flashed upon her.

"Well, is that the way to do? Isn't it best to give yourself to Him, and just trust Him to save you? Will you do that and when?"

"Oh, now—this moment!" and dropping upon her knees, she said, "Jesus, I am a sinner, and I give myself to You, and I'll never take myself back again as long as I live."

That was all she could do, and when she arose there was a new light in her heart; and today Hattie is one of the most joyous and earnest and useful little Christians in all the wide, wide world.

Will my readers do as Hattie did?—Young Reaper.

Personal Poems

By GRENVILLE KLEISER

THANKFULNESS

I'm thankful for the dawn of day,
For useful work and buoyant play;
I'm thankful for the faith of friends,
For humble heart that condescends.

I'm thankful for the trees and flowers,
For sapphire seas and cooling showers;
I'm thankful for the world of books,
For chanting birds and purling brooks.

I'm thankful for the sun at noon,
For silent stars and crescent moon;
I'm thankful for the gift of prayer,
For blessings I can freely share.

I'm thankful for the right to live,
For daily chance to serve and give;
I'm thankful most to God above
For his protecting, perfect love.

DIVINE LOVE HEALS

Love is unselfish,
Seeks not its own,
Blesses the multitude,
Labors alone.

Love grows by exercise,
Knows what to do,
Works with serenity,
Smiles upon you.

Love still begets love,
Stops evil's tongue,
Fills life with happiness,
Keeps the heart young.

Love is a healing power,
Balm for the soul,
Humbly it waits and serves;
Love makes you whole.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE

No matter how dark
Or bleak the day,
And dismal times
Seem prone to stay—
  It might be worse.

If you're depressed
Or sore afraid,
And business men
Are quite dismayed—
  It might be worse.

If you should suffer
Serious loss,
And have to bear
A heavy cross—
  It might be worse.

So if in life
Some joys you miss,
Through ups and downs
Remember this:
  It might be worse.

QUESTIONS

Do you sit all day repining:
Is your disposition blue?
Are you nervous and impatient?
Think the world unjust to you?

Are you prone to talk depression?
Do you tend to criticize?
Are you much inclined to worry?
Do you look for sullen skies?

Are you grateful for your blessings?
Do you give all that you should?
Is your work a daily pleasure?
Are you gentle, kind and good?

Do you fill a part that's noble?
Have you words of praise to say?
Is your life aflame with service?
Were you true to God today?

I MIGHT HAVE BEEN

I might have been a merchant,
If on profits I'd been bent,
With chains of stores to oversee
As ruling president.

I might have been a doctor
If I had planned to be,
A man of old-school kindly type
That patients like to see

I might have been a lawyer,
If I had been inclined,
Trained in the art of eloquence
To sway the jury's mind.

I might have been so many things
And soared aloft like birds;
But I am what I wished to be,
A gardener in words.

WATCH YOUR WORDS

A careless word
  May kindle strife;
A cruel word
  May wreck a life.

A bitter word
  May hate instill;
A brutal word
  May smite and kill.

A gracious word
  May smooth the way;
A joyous word
  May light the day.

A timely word
  May lessen stress;
A loving word
  May heal and bless.

DO IT TODAY

Wear today a cheerful face
In everything you do;
The sunshine that you radiate
Will shine right back to you.

Speak today a word of hope
To someone in distress;
For when you lift another's load
You make your burden less.

Do today a gracious deed
And do it with a smile;
It is little daily acts like these
That make your life worthwhile.

BE STILL!

Peace, be still! Obedient be.
  Seek to do God's will;
Dwell within His love today,
  Hear His Peace, be still.

Peace, be still! Be confident,
  Sorrow not nor fear;
Walk in sweet serenity,
  Know that He is here.

Peace, be still! Courageous be.
  Listen to His call;
Rest in peace and quietness,
  Know that God is All.

IT PLEASES ME

It pleases me to know
That I can do the work
God gives me now to do
With no desire to shirk.

It pleases me to know
That I can freely give
A part of what I have
To help another live.

It pleases me to know
However rough the road
That Christ is always near
To help me bear the load.

THANK GOD

Thank God for dawn,
  The songs of birds,
Awakening earth,
  And browsing herds.

Thank God for work,
  And well-filled day,
The power to serve,
  And joyous way.

Thank God for friends
  And fireside talks,
Inspiring books,
  And pleasant walks.

Thank God for night
  And silence deep,
Protecting love
  And peaceful sleep.

OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Dear Brethren and Friends:

We are just home from conference, tired and worn, as are all others who attended all the sessions. We have in hand a few items of cash and clothing which are not yet listed in our day book. So we are asking the privilege of making report of that next week.

Some days ago we received 49 half-gallon cans of fruit and vegetables from Pine Grove on Kernersville. This should have been reported sooner. During conference the ladies of Midland brought us 11 cakes, and the ladies of Fountain Place 12 cakes for school lunches. These gifts greatly help and are also greatly appreciated.

Honor Roll of Churches Contributing to the Children's Home

The following churches have sent 12 or more offerings to the Children's Home this year. It has not been easy to make up this honor roll, because call has been made this year for three special offerings—Thanksgiving, the March campaign, and Children's Home Day—and several churches responded to each call. Then, too, Sunday school classes and Christian Endeavor Societies in some of our churches send regular monthly offerings, and we are here reporting the total number of the offerings made. It is also true that some churches take a regular monthly offering, but those responsible for sending them in do not do it regularly, and do not designate that it is for two or more months when they do send it.

Gibsonville sent 39 offerings; Pleasant Grove, 27; Glen Raven, 24; Henderson, Kannapolis, Mt. Pleasant on Mt. Pleasant, Siler City, and Efland, 17; Concord, First church of Burlington, First church of High Point, Mt. Hermon on Mt. Hermon, 16; Asheboro, Caroleen, Charlotte, Denton, Friendship on Fallston, Calvary, Grace church, Mebane, Mt. Lebanon on Randleman, Shiloh on Shiloh, Hope on Siler City, Tabernacle on Tabernacle, and Whitakers, 15; Sapling Ridge and Center on Alamance, Fountain Place, Whitaker's Chapel on Enfield, Hickory Ridge, Maple Springs and Mt. Carmel on Forsyth, Graham, Union Chapel on Granville, Lebanon, Welch Memorial, State Street and Bethesda on State Street, Liberty, Mt. Pleasant on Mt. Pleasant, Pleasant Hill and Spring church on Spring church, First church of Thomasville, and First church of Winston-Salem, 14; Fairfield and Hickory Grove on Guilford, Brown Summit and Fair Grove on Haw River, Shiloh on Liberty, Moriah, Bellemont and Friendship on Mt. Hermon, Mt. Pleasant on North Davidson, Worthville, Bethany on Randolph, Friendship on Shiloh, Community church, New Hope on Vance, and Rehoboth on Granville, 13; Asheville, Friendship Station, Haw River on Glen Raven, St. Paul, Friendship and Midway on Haw River, New Hope on Mecklenburg, Union Chapel on Mocksville, Hebron on Orange, Concord on Saxapahaw, Mt. Zion on Weaverville, and Rehoboth on Granville, 12.

Besides the above honor roll, nine churches have sent 10 offerings; 10 churches, 9; 9 churches, 8; 8 churches, 7; 10 churches, 6; 9 churches, 5; 8 churches, 4; 17 churches, 3; 15 churches, 2; 23 churches, 1.

This shows that 190 churches contributed to the Children's Home during the year, leaving only about 30 churches not contributing.

If all offerings had been sent in regularly each month, more churches might have been on this honor roll.

Financial Statement of All Cash Receipts

The Duke Endowment	$ 2,246.80
Churches, Sunday schools, and C. E. Societies	7,328.84
N. C. Branch, Woman's Auxiliary	1,424.90
Special campaign in March	1,000.00
Children's Home Day, special	2,090.14
The Farm	58.00
Sale of junk and old clothing	46.09
Refund on gasoline	52.10
High Point civic orders, on new furnace	310.75
Interest	191.10
Octagon coupons	144.43
The Lucelia Fuller legacy	500.00
Returned from N. C. Bank	7.40
Friends and relatives of children	1,402.58
A. M. Rankin, Treasurer	1,975.00
Total receipts	$18,778.13
Balance October, 1933	550.35
Grand total	$19,328.48

This is decidedly the best showing that has been made in the finances of the Home since 1929, and a great deal of the financial strain has been lifted. If this rate is kept up for about two years more, the finances will be in fine shape.

With praises to the dear Heavenly Father, and with profound gratitude to all His people who have helped to put across the very best year yet in service for dependent children through our Children's Home, this report is respectfully submitted.

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

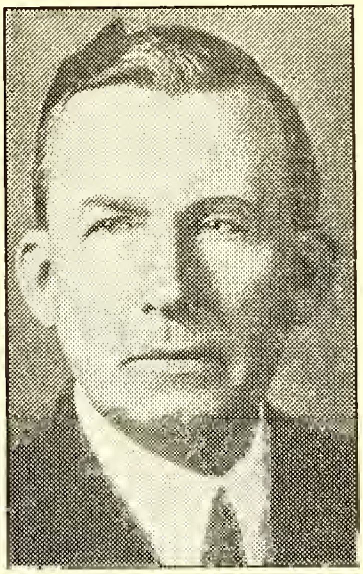
—On Tuesday morning of this week the Greensboro Daily News carried a picture of several of the superannuated ministers of the conference. Those whose pictures were shown are: Revs. W. F. Kennett, T. F. McCulloch, W. M. Pike, G. F. Millaway, E. G. Lowdermilk, C. H. Whitaker, G. W. Holmes, W. F. Ashburn, H. S. B. Thompson and A. L. Hunter.

Edits M. P. Herald



REV. J. E. PRITCHARD, D. D.

Dr. Pritchard, who was the unanimous choice of the recent Annual Conference to succeed Dr. J. F. McCulloch as editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald, is experienced in editorial work. For the past few months he has been in active charge of the Herald.

THANKSGIVING FOR THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Our Thanksgiving letter this year went out ahead of conference, and in that letter we made special plea to the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Children's Home secretaries that they co-operate in securing the best possible Thanksgiving offering for the Home. Let others join these workers in each local church and help to secure a good offering from your church.

Three Things to Steers

1. All citizens in North Carolina who have an income are asked to contribute as much as one day's income to the children's home of their choice.

2. There is an increased price for produce these days, especially tobacco and cotton. Share that increased income with the little ones in your children's home.

3. Give every one in your community a chance to make an offering as an expression of gratitude to God for His daily blessings.

Harvest Home Offerings

Many Harvest Home offerings have already been received. We have word that many more are on the way. We greatly appreciate this, and only ask that you send them to us if you can. If not, then please let us know when to send and we will send our old farm truck for the produce. Please put in all the grain and Irish potatoes you can. We thank you, and we shall be praying that the dear Father will give to you and yours a very happy Thanksgiving day.

Yours in His blessed service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Welch Memorial Church, High Point.—The fourth quarterly conference was held on November 7 and a splendid year's work was revealed by the reports given. The group unanimously went on record as favoring the return of Dr. J. D. Williams, pastor, for 1934-35. We appreciate very much the service rendered us this year.

The election of church officials was held on October 28. These officers were installed November 11 at the 11 o'clock service, and an impressive installation service was held.

Our thank-offering service was held Sunday evening, November 11. A very interesting program was presented. We had the pleasure of having with us Oscar Easter, a ministerial student of High Point College, who delivered the evening address. We also had the pleasure of having a quartet from High Point College sing for us.

An elaborate program was carried out on the home-coming Armistice occasion, sponsored by the Baraca class, with Dennis G. Brummitt, of Raleigh, attorney-general; Major Bruce Craven, of Trinity; Judge Lewis E. Teague, of High Point, as speakers for the occasion.

The program also included special music by the Davis concert orchestra, W. W. Frye, the Chisholm sisters of Thomasville, and Dick Hartman and his Crazy Tennessee Ramblers. Dr. J. D. Williams, pastor, was in charge of the program. The church was filled to overflowing. REPORTER.

Henderson.—We are very proud of our church, having paid all of its obligations in full to the conference, and to its local work for the past conference year, and sent its pastor up to Greensboro with a perfect record in that respect. Henry T. Powell is representing our church at conference.

The return of Rev. L. R. Medlin as pastor for the coming year is expected by the congregation when the conference is over. He has been serving as pastor since the death of the late Dr. L. W. Gerringer several months ago.

The following officers were elected to serve the next conference year: Board of trustees, G. B. Harris, L. R. Gooch, S. R. Harris, Sr., S. R. Harris, Jr., J. B. Hicks, W. H. Grissom, J. B. Fox, E. C. Kittrell, W. R. Vaughan, C. L. Finch and Eugene Faulkner; board of stewards, Henry Powell, C M. Hight, J. B. Burchette, W. B. Hight, R. W. Dixon, George G. Wilson, E. O. Falkner, W. R. Trogden; class leaders, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, Miss Lucy Taylor, C. N. Kalstrum, J. M. Baity; ushers, Henry Hight, chairman, W. R. Trogden, E. O. Paulkner, Robert Boyd, C. F. Tankersley, Jr., Maurice Allen, J. B. Burchette, Lueco Harris, T. T. Powell; reporters, Misses Clarice Grissom, Florence Falkner, Mable Hayes and Louise Powell; treasurer, J. B. Hicks; assistant treasurer, E. C. Kittrell; organist, Mrs. S. R. Watson; choir director, Miss Elizabeth Fox; Sunday school officers: superintendent, E. O. Falkner; assistant superintendent, J. M. Baity; secretary, R. W. Dixon; assistant secretary, W. R. Trogden; pianist, Mrs. Clifton Finch; assistant pianist, Miss Josephine Martin; committee on worship, Misses Mable Hayes, Louise Powell; superintendent primary department, Miss Florence Falkner; superintendent home department, Mrs. R. D. Starkey; director of music, Miss Maxine Taylor.

The circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met last Monday as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. M. Baity, chairman, met with Mrs. S. R. Watson; Circle No. 2, Mrs. W. H. Grissom, chairman, met with Mrs. J. B. Satterwhite; Circle No. 4, Miss Alice Faulkner, chairman, met with Miss Faulkner. The Young Girls' Club and the small children had their meeting on Tuesday.

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville Charge.—We are glad to report that we are having a thriving Sunday school with Mrs. Vistula Woodall as superintendent, who with her untiring service has been an inspiration to us all. Our Sunday school is now making a monthly contribution to the M. P. Children's Home. However small, we are glad to be able to help some with that great work.

Our pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, held his regular appointment at Clark's Chapel on Sunday morning, November 11, taking his text from the third chapter of Hebrews, 7th to 19th verse. He gave us a very inspiring message, which was especially touching, as it was his last service with us before leaving for conference. May God bless him in his work wherever he may be.

On October 31 Bro. Cowan conducted the funeral service at Clark's Chapel for Mrs. Loretta Eller, of Weaverville, age 75, widow of Albert Eller, who died on October 30 at her home after a long illness. She was the oldest member of our church, and one of the most loyal and beloved. Though for years she hadn't been able to attend church, we knew she was with us in her prayers and interest. We shall miss her, yet we shall not grieve, for we feel that she has gone where there is no sickness nor sorrow.

Shiloh Church, Shiloh Charge.—Another conference year has ended at Shiloh. What has been done is done forever, and what has been left undone is still undone. Rev. C. E. Ridge has completed his first year's work with these people. The year just ended has proved to be the best year financially of any year probably in the history of the church. It seems that every organization has also shown signs of spiritual growth. Since the spiritual side of any church is most important, we feel that Shiloh is alive for Christ.

And now that the conference has ended we are proud to announce the return of our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge. We are hoping that as we begin another year together that we all may have a greater determination, by the help of God, to make the incoming year even better for the cause of Christ.

The monthly prayer service will be conducted neyt Sunday, November 25, by the C. E. Society.

The annual union Thanksgiving service, which is conducted jointly by the Reeds Baptist, Reeds M. E. and Shiloh M. P. churches, will be held at Shiloh church on Wednesday night, November 28, instead of Thursday, as had previously been announced.

We ask an interest in the prayers of every Christian reader that God may bless all His people who are trying to carry on the work of His kingdom during the incoming year.

Asheville.—We are very happy in the "Land of the Sky." All is going fine, and we are going forward into the new year with great determination and happy anticipations. We are most grateful that the Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis are to be with us another year, for they have both endeared themselves to us and we should have been greatly disappointed had they not returned.

The report of last week was written somewhat hurriedly, and in consequence some things were omitted that should have been told. At the fourth quarterly conference two cheer leaders were elected, as follows, Miss Franes S. Cunningham and Miss Nelle Carter. The following Senior Christian Endeavor officers were elected: President, Miss Nancy Clouse; vice president, D. Jarvis Eller; secretary, Mrs. Joe Davis; treasurer, Miss Gertrude Bryson.

The installation of these officers will be held at 6:45 next Sunday evening, with Rev. J. F. Minnis in charge.

At the Workers' Council meeting held last Monday evening Dr. Robey Wilson was elected assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. Mrs. C. B. Baker was re-elected as superintendent of the children's department, and Miss Nelle Carter was re-elected as secretary-treasurer. Miss Frances S. Cunningham, newly elected superintendent of the Sunday school, presided over the meeting and also conducted the installation of officers and teachers which was held last Sunday at the Sunday school hour.

Our Sunday school attendance this week was very good. Mrs. Robey Wilson's Primary class again led the entire school in attendance. Good for the Primaries! Mrs. Wilson is a splendid teacher and has her class going fine. Miss Irene Miller's Junior girls led the children's department in collections. We are mighty proud of Miss Miller and Mrs. Wilson, for both are new teachers and are doing so well. The Philatheas, of course, led the entire Sunday school in amount of collection. The first year Junior Boys' class had the largest per capita offering and were 100 per cent present. Our Sunday school is doing fine and we feel that we are approaching one of the best years we have ever had.

We were pleased to welcome Mrs. Bolick back on Sunday, for we miss her when she is away. Mrs. Joyner is still confined to her home on account of a bruised foot. Mrs. M. P. Taylor has been sick during the past week, and several members of Mrs. H. O. Charnock's family have colds. Little Jimmie Minnis was quite ill during the past week, but is now better, for which we are very thankful.

The Woman's Auxiliary met Thursday of last week at the home of Mrs. H. L. Hanner, 48 Soco street. There were very few present, due to illness and to some being out of town, but the meeting was a helpful one. Miss Frances S. Cunningham led the devotionals; Mrs. C. B. Baker reviewed the first three chapters of the foreign study book and presided over the business session of the meeting, after which the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Mr. J. R. Moore and Mr. D. J. Eller were in Grensboro this past week, and are loud in their praises of the Greensboro folk. We are glad to learn from them that the Rev. J. E. Pritchard is to edit the Methodist Protestant Herald, for he has done so well during the past year that we are sure that this year will be a banner one for the Herald. Let's all get behind him and put a Herald in every Methodist Protestant home in North Carolina. We could wish that the subscription price might be one dollar instead of two dollars, as it is believed that more would be able to subscribe at that rate.

We again express our sincere appreciation to the conference for returning the Rev. J. F. Minnis to the Asheville church, and our gratitude is also expressed to Mr. D. Jarvis Eller for his fine work as our delegate to the conference.

Weavers Chapel, Littleton Charge.—The work at Weavers Chapel is running along pretty good now. Our Sunday school attendance was fine yesterday, as weather was good. We are planning to have a Christmas tree during the Christmas holidays, and the children, even the grown-ups, seem so interested in the thought of a tree, even if it is quite a while off. We are having prayer service every Sunday night, with good attendance. Trust that much good may be accomplished in our meeting.

Our pastor, R. L. Vickery, was away at conference yesterday and couldn't fill his regular appointment, and we missed him very much, as he always has a good message for us. If it is the Lord's will and Bro. Vickery's desire, we do hope the conference will see fit to return him to us, for he has done lots of good work this year in spite of all the trouble and sickness he has had in his family.

We are glad to report that one of our members, Mrs. D. G. Dickens, who has been in Roanoke Rapids hospital for the past two weeks, has taken her operation and is now doing fine, expecting to return home the latter part of this week. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—Having been reassigned to Orange charge, I wish to make the following announcement:

Thanpsgiving services will be held as follows: Hebron and Chestnut Ridge, fourth Sunday; Union Grove, Thanksgiving Day, 11 a. m.; Efland, 7:30 p. m., the same day.

At all of these services offerings will be taken for our Children's Home.

Bethesda-State Street-Yadkin College. — It may be of interest to the readers of the Herald to know the financial record of this charge for the year just closed. World Service, figured 25 per cent above the amount paid last year, was slightly overpaid, as also all North Carolina claims and pastor's salary were overpaid by small amounts. That is, the total of all North Carolina claims was slightly overpaid. Each item of these claims was fully paid.

In addition, Bethesda church paid $63 as improvement—tapping the power line to furnish current to light the church.

State Street church paid balance on street pavement assessment of $646, reduced the building fund debt in the sum of $2,000. These two amounts and $50 interest on the $2,000, totaling $2,696, were donated by one member on condition the other members and friends would raise $1,786 to cover current expenses, insurance, interest, etc., which the church did, making a total of $4,482 raised by State Street church last year. This does not include State Street's part of World Service and North Carolina claims, which were paid in full. T. M. JOHNSON.

Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.—There were 70 persons present in Sunday school on November 18. The subject of our lesson that day was "Taking Pride in Good Work." The birthday offering amounted to $2.94. "Nothing But the Blood of Jesus" was used as the closing song. We were very sorry that Mrs. Claud Akius, our regular organist and one of our best teachers, was absent. Mrs. Grace Hill, also one of our good teachers, was absent, much to the regret of all present.

We sincerely trust that Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Love may be returned to us for another year, for we truly believe Brother Love will hear those comforting words some day, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

—Rev. G. F. Millaway, who conducted the devotions on the last morning of conference, startled his audience by giving the Scripture lesson from memory rather than by reading it from the book. Very few men are able to do that.

FATHER GRUMBLE—A FOLK-SONG

(Edited by Luther K. Long)

It is an old custom for men to speak, in the family and among friends, concerning their hard and heavy work, their laborious days. Then they turn toward their wives and give them a sly dig to the effect that, while the women putter about all day, they really do but little work compared with the efficient man of the house. This, in various forms, circulates among jokers. The idea gets itself treated in folk-songs. In these the tables are turned against the men. The old folk-song, "Father Grumble," is a good one. I have found seven versions of it. They vary considerably both in materials and in the completeness of their construction. I am combining here the essentials in all seven, making such verbal changes as seem advisable and arranging the stanzas in a progressive order.

Old Grumble swore by the light of the moon,
And the green leaves on the tree,
That he could do more work in a day
Than his wife could do in three.

'So be it! So be it!" the good wife said;
"But this you must allow,
That you will work in the house today,
And I'll go follow the plow.

"And you must milk the pretty brown cow,
For fear she might go dry;
And you must feed the little pigs
That live in yonder sty.

"And you must watch the speckled hen,
For fear she lay astray;
And you must wind the bobbin of yarn
That I spun yesterday."

The good wife took the staff in her hand
And went to follow the plow;
Old Grumble took the shining pail
And went to milk the cow.

But Teeny she hinched, and Teeny she flinched,
And Teeny she turned up her nose;
And she gave the old man such a kick on the shin
That the blood ran down to his toes.

"Whoa, Teeny! Soa, Teeny! My pretty brown cow, Stand still! Stand still!
If ever I try to milk you again,
It will be against my will."

He went to feed the little pigs
That live in yonder sty:
The old sow ran between his legs
And threw him in the mire.

He went to watch the speckled hen,
For fear she'd lay astray;
And forgot to wind the bobbin of yarn
His wife spun yesterday.

The dinner to get, the table to set,
The bed to make up smooth;
The house to sweep, the bread to knead,
Too much for him, in truth.

And when the old woman came home at night,
He said he could plainly see
His wife could do more work in a day
Than he could do in three.

And when he saw how well she'd plowed,
And made the furrows even,
He said: "My wife can do more work in a day
Than I can do in seven."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Chambliss

Rosa Ann, wife of Joseph H. Chambliss, was born January 11, 1858, and died October 24, 1934, aged 76 years. She leaves to mourn her departure E. W., W. J., E. L. and L. L. Chambliss, sons, one son preceding her to the grave, Rev. Mauie Chambliss, pastor of Moriah church, who died this year; also Mrs. L. R. Pearson and Mrs. R. O. Carpenter, both of Roanoke Rapids, N. C.; Mrs. R. C. Weaver, of Triplet, Va.; six great-grandchildren and 33 grandchildren.

There's a beautiful city called Heaven,
  That God has prepared for His own, where His
Children all through the ages bask in the Sunshine around the white throne.

Our loved ones have gone to that city,
  Our friends are gathering there too.
We shall meet them all yonder
  In a land so holy and fair.

They know of no tears in that city,
  Up there we shall never grow old;
No parting from loved ones up yonder,
  And no sorrow there, we are told.

No sickness causes death in Heaven,
  None there but God's chosen and blest;
And when our life's work is ended,
  We shall go to that Heaven of rest.

McCulloch

Eleanor Coe McCulloch, daughter of the late Wesley A. and Martitia Wood Coe, and beloved wife of Rev. T. F. McCulloch, was born near Greensboro, N. C., August 1, 1853, and departed this life at her home in Greensboro, N. C., on October 31, 1934, having passed her eighty-first birthday.

In November, 1873, she was united in marriage with Rev. T. F. McCulloch, which happy relationship continued for 61 years.

Mrs. McCulloch was born into a Methodist Protestant home, her people being among the founders of the church. Being brought up to love the church, it was not difficult for her to adjust herself to the life of an itinerant minister. This fact helped her tremendously in making her a minister's wife that was greatly loved wherever she lived. Some people have the happy faculty of making friends, but do not always hold them. She both made friends and retained them. One of the most eloquent tributes to her fine and useful life was to see the anxiety on the part of those who had known her in other places, during her sickness, and to see the tears which they shed after she passed away. Surely her life had touched theirs in a way that they could not forget.

As a member of Calvary church, she was loyal, devoted and dependable. She was a charter member of the church and had always loved it dearly. She was not a woman to put herself forward in seeking offices or of taking the lead, but she was of the quiet, cultured type that had good judgment as to what was best for the church, and when her mind was made up as to what was best she was willing to follow the leadership of others in bringing this about.

Splendid as were her traits as a minister's wife, useful as was her life in the local church, cultured as she was in mingling with those round about her, and as sympathetic as she was toward the suffering and the sad, the place where she excelled most of all was in her own home. Here she was so queenly in her bearing that it was always a pleasure for people to go there. Somehow she knew perfectly how to create that homelike spirit that it was a benediction to be in her home. The description which the sacred writer gives of the virtuous woman as found in the last chapter of the book of Proverbs eminently fitted her life. Surely her husband could trust in her, and her children arise up and call her blessed.

On Friday afternoon, November 2, the funeral was held in Calvary church and was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the conference, and by Dr. J. D. Williams, who for many years had been a friend of the family. And then, just as the sun was casting its shadows from the west, near the close of a beautiful day, symbolic of the life she had lived, her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Tabernacle M. P. church.

Mrs. McCulloch is survived by her husband, the Rev. T. F. McCulloch, who is an honored superannuate of the N. C. Annual Conference; six daughters, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Burlington, Rural Route; Mrs. J. Frank Coble, of Greensboro, and Misses Velma, Pearl, Mary Wills and Sara McCulloch, of Greensboro, and by one sister, Mrs. W. C. Kennett, also of Greensboro.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Andrew

It is with deep sorrow that the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Hope M. P. church, of Bonlee, N. C., record the passing of one of our faithful honorary members in the person of Mr. W. H. Andrew.

Our hearts are saddened and we are grieved at this loss, for we remember his faithfulness and loyalty to our work for the Master and he was ever ready to aid in our mission work and other causes in the church work, a faithful attendant in the services of the house of God. When things looked discouraging, he would smile and encourage us to "not be weary in well doing but to press forward," and by this example we worked with more zeal and by this and other acts of never-tiring faith we feel his life memory should become a living memorial in us who remain to carry on in his place.

In his passing we've not only lost an ever-ready helper for our auxiliary, but a faithful Sunday school worker and a substantial pillar of our church. He taught us by the life he lived that it is not all of life to live nor all of death to die. Therefore, be it resolved, that this auxiliary hold him in loving memory, knowing that the passing of Bro. Andrew is an affliction incapable of consolation otherwise than by humble faith in the Omnipotent One, who is "too wise to err, too good to be unkind." Be it also resolved, that our sincere sympathy be expressed to the dear devoted wife, loving daughters and sons and relatives and friends. We pray that the Divine Comforter and Loving Heavenly Father may sustain them as they bow humbly in submission to His will, and find companionship divine for their earthly loneliness. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Missionary Record and a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. DAN T. VESTAL, Pres.,
MRS. R. G. HENRY,
MRS. MARK H. BREWER, Committee.

Fox

After an illness of a year, Mrs. Margaret Pirie Fox, wife of John B. Fox, of 240 Chavasse avenue, Henderson, N. C., died at 9:50 o'clock Tuesday night, November 13, 1934, in a Raleigh hospital, where she had been undergoing treatment for the past 11 months. She was 55 years old, having been born in Vance county February 7, 1879. A complication of diseases was given as the cause of death.

The funeral was held from the home at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, with interment in Elmwood cemetery. Rev. L. R. Medlin, present pastor, was in charge of the funeral.

Mrs. Fox is survived by her husband, and by three children, Miss Eliabeth Fox and J. B. Fox, of Henderson, and Henry Fox, of Rock Hill, S. C.; also three brothers, Charlio Pirie, of Henderson; J. S. Pirie, of Hammond, Ind., and T. E. Pirie, of Louisville, Ky., and one sister, Mrs. Emily Reavis, of Henderson.

The deceased was the daughter of Henry Pirie, native of Scotland, who came to this country in early life, and Margaret Mahoney Pirie, native of Ireland. Both have been dead many years.

Mrs. Fox was a member of the Methodist Protestant church of Henderson 43 years, having affiliated with the congregation in childhood. Both she and members of her family have been active in the work of the church. She was known to a host of friends and held in the highest esteem by them.

  A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in a home
  Which never can be filled.

This place was made vacant on the evening of November 3, 1934, when the death angel from heaven came to the home of Mrs. Attie Tucker Walker to accompany her soul to her heavenly home.

"We cannot say, we must not say,
That she is dead. She is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she is there.
So think of her faring on as dear
In the love of there as the love of here.
Think of her still as the same and say
She is not dead—she is just away."

Mrs. Attie Tucker Walker was one of the dearest and sweetest members of Palestine church, always ready to help in every way she could, standing by her pastor at all times, always in her place at church when her health would permit, and I can truly say Palestine church has lost one of its very best members. Her funeral was held at Palestine Sunday afternoon by her pastor, Rev. C. B. Way; her former pastor, Rev. J. P. Pegg, and a friend of her family, Rev. J. C. Preston, and she was tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery.

GRACE R. TUCKER.

MARRIED

Stowe-Watlington

J. Baxter Stowe and Miss Kirk Watlington, both of Greensboro, were united in marriage at the First Methodist Protestant church Monday morning at 11 o'clock, the pastor, Dr. C. W. Bates, performing the ceremony. Only the necessary witnesses were present. The bridegroom is a member of Calvary Methodist Protestant church, of which Dr. Bates was formerly pastor. After a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Stowe will be at home in Greensboro.—Twin City Sentinel.

Barrier-Vance

The Grace parsonage on North Edgeworth street was the scene of a quiet wedding on Monday evening, October 29, when Miss Dorothy Alene Vance and Hubert Lane Barrier, both of High Point, were united in marriage. Rev. J. Elwood Carroll officiated.

Mrs. Barrier is the older daughter of Mrs. C. W. and the late C. W. Vance, of High Point. Mr. Barrier is the son of Mr. L. A. and Mrs. Luna M. Barrier, also of High Point. Both young people were educated in the High Point city schools. They will be at home at 506 Montlieu avenue, High Point. For this young couple the many joys of life are expressed.

Von Kenyon-Waynick

Von Kenyon, Jr., and Miss Minerva Waynick were united in marriage at the Grace church parsonage on Friday, November 2, at 6 o'clock. Rev. J. Elwood Carroll performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends.

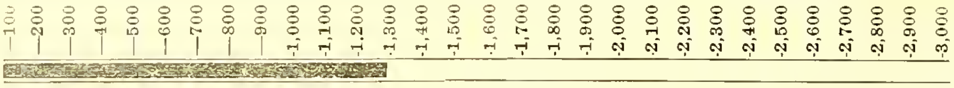
Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon are both of Greensboro, Mr. Kenyon the son of Van and Irene Kenyon, and Mrs. Kenyon the daughter of D. L. and Alice Waynick. They will make their home here. They are active in College Place M. E. Church, South.

REV. A. L. HUNTER SUPERANNUATED

One of the most impressive moments during the conference was when Rev. A. L. Hunter was presented for the superannuate relationship to the Annual Conference. The presentation speech was made by the editor of the Herald and the motion was seconded by Rev. N. G. Bethea. Brother Hunter entered the conference in 1889 and with the exception of three years has served continuously ever since, making forty-two years of active work.

As he lays down the work he can do so feeling that he has the love and esteem not only of the people that he has served but of all the members of the conference. He will build a house near Mt. Zion church, near Pinnacle, and will make this his home.

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIBERS



YOUR CO-OPERATION IS NEEDED TO INCREASE THE LENGTH OF THIS BLACK LINE

Herald Directing Committee: J. E. Pritchard, chairman; C. W. Bates, E. L. Douglas.

Two weeks ago I told you to send in your money for the issue of the Herald last week and get your final credits for the year. At that time I thought the old quotas would be destroyed with last week's issue; however, the conference did not take over the paper early enough for the new management to take charge until the new week had started, so the old quotas are standing this week and all money coming in in time to be acknowledged in this week's paper will be a credit on your last year's quota. As the bookkeeping is not yet under my jurisdiction I shall have to do one of two things, go down to Dr. McCulloch's home to see the list or run my letter this week without the usual percentages at the top of the page. As time is precious, I will do the latter. If any charge has reached its goal this week I will try to have something to say about it next week. Next week new quotas will be run and all money coming in after this issue is printed will go in the new quotas.

While I do not have the list before me, I do know that quite a lot of money has been turned in to be credited in this week's paper. A great deal was handed to me at conference and I am sure amounts were sent in the mails. Anyway, we are grateful for all that came in. Any amount sent in over and above the amount necessary to print this week's issue will be applied on the printing deficit. After this week the money coming in for the Herald will be used for printing the Herald from this time on and the special committee appointed to raise the deficit will handle that matter. As the conference bought the mailing list just as it is and obligated itself to send the paper to those who have paid in advance, so all back dues will belong to the new management also. So send your money to Methodist Protestant Herald and the new management will give you credit.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

VOLUME XLI GREENSBORO, N. C., NOVEMBER 29, 1934 NUMBER 3

By Authority of the Annual Conference

For almost forty years the Methodist Protestant Herald was issued each week by authority of its owner, the late Dr. J. F. McCulloch. For a few weeks following Dr. McCulloch's death on October 1, the paper was issued by authority of the administrator of Dr. McCulloch's estate. Then the paper was sold to McCulloch & Swain, who had been printing it for the past several years, and for a few weeks it was issued by authority of McCulloch & Swain. On Friday morning, November 23, 1934, the paper was sold by McCulloch & Swain to the trustees of the North Carolina Annual Conference and their successors, the Annual Conference having voted on November 17, 1934, to purchase the paper. This week's issue is by authority of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. Now that the Annual Conference, for the first time, has a paper which it can call its own, the question is, What shall we do with it? How shall we support it? In the issue of last week, we stated that no radical changes in the makeup of the paper were contemplated. While this is true, it is perfectly in order for people to make suggestions for the betterment of the paper. And let the new editor state here that he welcomes ideas for the improvement of the paper. We are carrying an article this week from one who wants a People's Forum where people can express themselves about many things. Perhaps there is merit in this, provided people will use moderation in expressing themselves. It goes without saying that the editor will not be able to agree with the opinion of everybody who might write. The fact that an article is printed does not mean that the editor does agree with all the ideas expressed, but too many otherwise good articles would go into the wastebasket if nothing were printed except that with which the editor agrees in every particular.

While you are thinking and writing about what you want to see in the paper, let the editor say a few things about what he would like to see. As he sees it, the paper ought to carry as much information about every conference program as possible. Now that it belongs to the conference, surely, the conference ought to use it. And the space will be available. But others besides the editor will have to do some of the writing. It is not to be expected that the editor is to do everybody's work for them. Those charged with the responsibility of promoting certain interests will do well to keep the people informed about what has been committed unto them. We shall be glad to have all the news that is necessary about High Point College, the Children's Home, Bethel Home, the Women's Work, Church Extension, the Conference Council of Religious Education, and any other activities of the church. While the paper is a conference organ, we want to include news of the General Church—news about our missionaries both in the home land and in the foreign field. Already we have entered into an agreement with the Associate Secretary of the Board of Missions whereby she is to furnish us missionary news.

While we have mentioned by name various organizations that are to furnish us news, we do not mean to leave out the pastors and local church reporters. They are our regular standbys. The one thing that has always been outstanding about the Herald has been the large number of letters from the pastors and people. This has made it seem like a letter from home, and some people have taken the paper largely because of this feature. So, instead of having less, we want more of this. A reporter should be elected or appointed at every church. But pastors ought not depend exclusively upon reporters. Pastors, themselves, should tell us from time to time what they are doing and how they are getting along. If you have succeeded in doing something that is worth while, do not be afraid to tell us about it. It may help some one else to put across something. Then, we want articles of a general nature on various topics. We shall be glad to have reminiscences as well as matters historical. If there is need for it we might have a weekly discussion of the Sunday school lesson. Of course, our Sunday school literature is prepared by experts, and the most of our people have access to the quarterlies and the teachers' journals; however, there may be a real need for a practical discussion of the lesson each week, and if there is, the editor already has some one in mind for this department.

While the editor has indicated some things he would like to see in the paper, let him say here that he does not expect to shape the policies of the paper entirely. There is a committee to work with the editor that will be consulted from time to time as to what is best for the paper, both as to what goes into it as well as concerning financial matters. This committee consists of Dr. C. W. Bates, Mr. E. L. Douglas, and the editor.

And now, let us give a brief outline of the work each one is to do. All mail is to be opened by the editor and the subscription receipts column is to be prepared by him. The editor will give credits on the back page to the charges for what they have sent in and will express the appreciation of the paper from week to week—but perhaps not rave as much as he did last year. Miss Mary C. McCulloch will take the correspondence concerning subscriptions, after it has passed through the hands of the editor, and will keep the mailing list up to date and will keep the books. McCulloch & Swain, the printers, will use the material which we give them, will set the type, make up the forms, print the paper, and mail it out to the subscribers.

But before closing this article, let us say that there is one more thing we are concerned about; namely, the finances. It is to be expected that there will be somewhat of a slump in this week's receipts, for more than one third of all the preachers in the conference are moving. It will take some time for them to get on the new charge and get things organized. In the meantime, those that are not moving and the Herald Agents who have already been appointed should get busy at once and begin the campaign for subscriptions. New quotas are being run this week. The subsidy plan is to be the same as was followed last year. So what we want now, in addition to news, is money. Send it in and we will do our best at this end of the line.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

Selecting Sermon Subjects

Pastors are forever facing the question, "What shall I preach about? The world is full of subjects, to be sure, of more or less interest to everybody; but to select those of greatest worth and those he can best manage is the problem before the preacher.

In this process of choosing vital themes, several things must be kept in mind. One must try to hold the attention of his people; he must also select on the basis of spiritual need; he must try to give a progressive ministry, avoiding overlapping, going around in a circle, or merely pleasing the one-track minds. The minister, then, is to seek variety, helpfulness, and progress.

While doubtless each minister has his own method of selecting themes, I am suggesting a few ways that may be of some value along this line.

First, one's devotional reading offers a rich source of subject matter. I remember hearing Dr. John Timothy Stone say once that most of his sermon subjects came from his own private devotional readings. While prayerfully musing over a Psalm, one often catches deep spiritual truths and new insights that stir the soul until the preacher experiencing such delights longs to impart them to his people. The quiet hour is a fine source of sermons. As the Spirit moves in the heart of the meditative pastor is inspires him to speak forth the things he has seen and heard. Water cannot rise higher than its source. Likewise the sermonic zeal is not likely to rise higher in the pulpit than its devotion in the study. Subjects coming out of these private devotions are especially good for calm, aesthetic, worshipful services. They may not be vigorous and militant as subjects taken from other sources, and hence may not make sufficient appeal to men of practical affairs, but they are usually very spiritual and fine for hours of worship in which we seek to feel and learn more of our invisible yet ever-present Friend.

Second, many subjects can be found in general reading. The wide reader is, other things equal, an interesting speaker. The classics, history, biography, and current books will stimulate the mind and provide one with almost countless topics he could well afford to develop and pass on to his congregation. The magazines of the day, or even the daily papers, will often suggest themes to the alert mind. These themes thus discovered are not to be brought into the pulpit as they appeared in the magazines, of course, but the problems and conditions mentioned in such periodicals do often need a religious interpretation and treatment. Reading of what goes on on Sundays, for example, might lead the minister to give a strong and much-needed sermon on how the Christian should spend his Sabbaths. Modern Christian interpretation can, therefore, be applied to many topics growing out of general reading. Even if there is nothing in what one reads that is to be treated directly, it often happens that something in the article "strikes fire" in your mind, causing you to branch out in your own thinking onto some vital subject barely hinted in the reading.

Third, other speakers will stimulate one to locate subjects he himself would like to develop. I like to have a paper and pencil in hand while another is speaking. His thoughts seem to vibrate with mine until I have several subjects growing out of his. A person's mind works better under the stimulation of another's thought. Some of you men may have shot at a squirrel in a tree only to see three or four more jump out. The activity of one started others. This illustrates my point. So, I would insist that preachers hear as many other speakers as they well can, and to do so with keen discrimination as to the possible subjects it can stimulate for their own needs. I have known the speaker to refer to some text or to use some expression that, on being followed up and developed, resulted in a helpful sermon.

Fourth, study your people. The Scripture says that Jesus, seeing the multitudes, was moved with compassion for them. A good look at any crowd will move us to sermonizing. It appears that the most profound teaching of the Master grew out of immediate, local conditions. He did great work in relation to human need. You may recall, too, how Ezekiel, early in his ministry, went unto the captives by the river Chebar and "sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days." He studied the needs of his people at first hand before preaching to them. The pastor just must keep close to the people if he would serve them well. Aside from the help he may render them through pastoral work, this very pastoral experience provides him with a sympathy and understanding vastly important to his preaching. Ministers may argue that they are so busy writing their sermons that they have no time to visit, but if they would visit more they might not be so hard put to it for sermons. Sermons must be kept very close to human needs, and the association with his people brings its rewards in better subjects and purer preaching. A visit to the aged or the sick will supply more themes for the Christian pastor than twice the time spent in ordinary ways. Pastoral work vitalizes the pastor. Thus, after all, I believe the best field for sermon subjects is one's own congregation of human beings. If one is to be much of a physician, he must study his patient; if one is to be much of a spiritual physician, likewise, he will have to learn of his people's needs through association with them.

In order to have a supply of subjects at hand, the minister will want to select from these or other sources and keep the topic until he has a chance to develop it. It is wise to have several sermons "growing" all the time—keep them "cooking," several at a time, then when one is "done" take it off. By this means one can gather material for a sermon that he expects to preach much later. Material gathered can be used in feeding the growing sermon. If it does not fit into one sermon, it may fit into another. Thus by having several coming on at the same time he can cultivate them all, not waste any material; then, when these sermons are fully developed, they will be much more mature and healthy than if they were built rapidly for a particular hour. Sermonizing is interesting work. I like to have four or five speeches cooking at the same time. Some are very raw as yet, we'll say, one or two may be seasoning right well, while still another is about ready to take off—we hope it will be well done and ready to serve by Sunday morning.

THE HINDERED CHRIST

By Rev. W. A. Ledford

Jesus spoke many words of comfort, enlightenment, and assurance to His Disciples after He instituted the sacrament of the Holy Communion and before His agony in the Garden of Gethsemane. The sorrowing make well-beaten paths to many of these passages. The Christian world is infinitely richer by possessing them. Yet, the inquiring mind wonders what the many things could have been that He had to say unto them, but they could not bear them then. The answer will have to wait till the secrets of all hearts are revealed. Many of the things, doubtless, the Holy Spirit has revealed.

The Bible student makes no claim that all that Jesus said and did are recorded in the brief Gospels; much less what He might have said. The stories as recorded in the Gospels by no means exhaust the matchless Christ. John writes "Many other signs did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book . . . . if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." But John also adds, "These are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that in believing ye may have life in his name." We have all we need to know in order to be saved, thank God.

Reading the plain facts in some places, and between the lines in others, it is clear that Jesus was hindered both in His teaching and works. Through the sorrow of the disciples, and their dullness of spiritual understanding He was unable to continue His revelations. Again we read that He could do no mighty works in Nazareth because of their unbelief. Let us not be too harsh in our criticisms of those of long ago. We might have done no better. I'm not thinking of impossible conditions for today, nor writing in platitudes; but have my feet on the ground, and pleading that Christ may have a chance. There are many individual churches, pitiful in their weakness, and ignoble in their defeats; eking out an existence, and possessing a form of godliness, but showing no power thereof; when they might be rich in faith, abundant in good works, and light houses guiding poor sailors. Jesus Christ has never been allowed further than their closed doors. He has the power to transform them into dynamic institutions for Kingdom service. They are really hindrances to Christ rather than helpers. There are sections both of the country and the cities, which are literal hells on earth, when they might be transformed by the power of Christ into veritable Paradises of God. Not all the Sodoms and Gomorrahs were destroyed in that ancient valley. We fancy today Christ weeping over modern Jerusalems.

Jesus was no whiner nor complainer; but reading between the lines we discover that heart hunger for home comforts, the love and sympathy of friends, and especially for those of His own household. Doubtless, He yearned for those whom He could take into His confidence, and communicate with as friend with friend. He might have pronounced the doom of those rejecting Him, or shaken off the dust of His feet as a testimony against them refusing to receive Him, but, rather, He went on doing good, and waiting for the coming of the Holy Spirit to take of the truths and teach them to the disciples. After the world had done its worst, the beloved disciple was able to write of Him, as "having loved his own, he loved them unto the end." The hindrances were temporary, and not final.

Christ was not hindered in the same way that the Galatian Christians were hindered; but was hindered through the stubbornness, unbelief and disobedience of the people. We read where Peter once became an adversary rather than a helper of his Lord. We should daily examine ourselves as to whether we are co-laborers with Jesus, or are lined up against Him; helpers or hinderers. Like the Master, let us not grow weary in well doing, being assured the harvest will come in due time.

MAKING A PREACHER

The Stationing Committee of the Alabama Annual Conference is composed of two laymen and the President of the Conference. Just before reading the report at the close of the session it is the custom for members of the committee to address the conference. The newly elected President, Dr. J. S. Eddings, unpacked his heart with words, in the last hour of the conference of this year in a notable speech.

He gave good advice to the ministers and then he made a plea to the laymen to support the preachers who were appointed to the charges. One of his sentences was this: "Appreciate your pastor; more preachers die from broken hearts than from swelled heads." He also urged any appointment which might get a pastor who was not desired to so support the pastor that he would make such a record that other charges might want him next year. He strongly stated the self-evident but forgotten truth that churches make preachers as well as preachers make churches.

A church can make or break its pastor. We call upon the charges to serve the ministers appointed to serve them. Appreciation will develop the best in a man. Praise will fill his soul with courage. Intelligent and sympathetic listening will stimulate his mind. Intercession will enrich his spirit with the power of God. Co-operation will multiply his labor. Consistency of life will prove his words. Love will lift him from littleness. A preacher is not an organism which develops independent of its environment. There are churches in which ministers grow. There are some in which they shrivel. A church of mutual rights ought to be a church of mutual aid. If a church is disappointed with its appointment it may remedy the situation by sympathy, service and helpfulness.

The great Apostle writing to Rome spoke of the need of his own soul: "That I with you may be comforted in you, each of us by the other's faith." When a church tries to make the preacher better and stronger, the preacher is able to make the church better and stronger. Mutuality in making each other is the way of making both find the maturity sought by the mind of Christ.—Methodist Protestant Recorder.

THE NEGRO SPIRITUAL

For several years past the negro spiritual has enjoyed wide popularity. And these songs that arose out of a musical race with a remarkable gift for a vivid presentation of the simple and universal experiences of the human race, merit fully this present-day appreciation of these religious folk songs.

What can be finer than the following if one would rebuke the gossip and tale bearer:

They came to my house,
And they talk about you;
They go to your house,
And they talk about me,
But I ain't a-goin' to grieve
My Lord any more.

You can talk about me
As much as you please;
I'll talk about you
Down on my knees—
I ain't a-goin' to grieve
My Lord any more.

THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL

I have beaten the record for my part of the job of getting out the Conference Journal. Thanks to the help of folks at the Conference, who typed a good many of the reports, I had much less to do than formerly. Thursday afternoon I mailed the copy to Baltimore, complete with the exception of the Conference Treasurer's report, which he assures me will go in this week.

Mr. Reiner promises the Journal in five weeks. We'll see if he is a man of his word.

I am suggesting that as many of the pastors as can send in the money to pay for the Journals without waiting to sell them. I should like to make a substantial payment on them as soon as they are out. We owe it to the printers to make up for some of our long delays in paying for them. If you don't know how many your charge is supposed to get, drop me a card and I'll let you know.

WANTS A PEOPLE'S FORUM

Dear Editor:

I have often wondered what the average church member thought about God and religion; also what their thoughts are during a worship service. Perhaps it is not the thing to do, but I have many times sat through a sermon and looked at the faces around me and wondered about their thoughts. Sometimes I can tell, by the expression on their faces; but, if I cannot, I enjoy letting my imagination have full sway when the sermon is not interesting. How many others feel thus?

If the Methodist Protestant Herald is to be our paper, let's make it interesting to all! Let's have a People's Forum in which we may express our views on subjects. When I hear a sermon, I always analyze it; is it composed of a lot of platitudes which have been preached since time was, or is it an honest effort on the part of the preacher to help others out of his experience? I honestly believe each one of us must work out his own salvation, and unless he or she thinks it cannot be done. Let's make our paper a real power for good in our fair state. We are missing a golden opportunity if we do not.

Come on, folks, express yourselves. What do you, the average church member, think of during a sermon? What does the church really mean to you? Are you worshiping the God of Abraham who taught "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," or do you worship the God whom Jesus taught, the God of love, who would make us free indeed? Jesus said, "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." My God does not say to me, you shall not dance or play bridge; I don't do either of these things, because I enjoy other things more, but I cannot see any more harm in these than in some of the other things which are sanctioned by church bodies. Harm can be made of anything, and I do believe if Jesus were here today, he would live in this age. I don't think he would be an old fogy. I am sure he would think for himself and act accordingly. So let us think and study together and we shall learn the truth, "and the truth shall make us free."

THE McCULLOCH MEMORIAL FUND

I do not know what Dr. Andrews is going to say about it in his letter this week, and I am not trying to anticipate it. But I do want to report that the committee named by the Annual Conference to raise the $3,500 for the McCulloch Memorial Fund (See report of the Herald Committee in this issue) met Friday night at the Disrtict Parsonage, and outlined a plan of procedure. We will set the machinery in motion this week, letters going out to the District Chairman and layman appointed by the President of the Laymen's Fellowship to work with these chairmen in each district. Quotas are being assigned to each charge, and on circuits each church will be given its part.

We are expecting each church to take and raise the amount assigned to it, and to do it quickly and cheerfully. It will not be a burden upon any if all will do their part. More later.

C. W. Bates, Chairman,
McCulloch Memorial Fund.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

The First Quarterly Conference

This conference is the one most vital to the interests of the charge. It should be held as soon after the adjournment of the Annual Conference as possible. To it the conference budgets should be presented and by it accepted, then distributed to the churches of the charge, etc. There are other most important matters to be attended to by the first quartetrly conference.

As to the Budgets

The World Service brings the interests of the General Church to the local church. What is done for missions, for the administration of the General Church and for education, outside of our offerings to High Point College, go to this budget. It has long been the policy of this conference to urge upon each first quarterly conference the acceptance of this budget; if the amount seems beyond the ability of the people to pay, then to choose such a percenage of it as can be paid—this amount then becomes its allotment.

The Annual Conference Claims

In this budget are five items: A. C. Expenses, A. C. Debt Retirement, Superannuates, Church Extension, and High Point College. We hope soon to be able to take out of it A. C. Debt Retirement; the conference got in debt a few years ago and these debts are to be paid out of the money of this category. The other items need no explanation.

But Do Not Scale These

It is the expectation of the Annual Conference that these items be accepted as announced in the Herald of last week. They are not large for any church, and since they are within the reach of the church or churches of the charge, no quarterly conference should refuse to accept them and to apportion them, and should insist that the officials of the local church raise the amounts. Those doing this will be Honor Roll churches, as the year just closed.

The Churches Which Pay A. C. Expenses in December

Enfield, Whitakers; Halifax; Burlington, First; High Point, First; Lexington, First; Asheboro; Community; Forsyth, and Greenville.

The money in this item is needed to keep the conference going. Out of this the salary of the president is paid, and it is earnestly hoped that the churches thus listed will at once set about to raise their assessment for this cause so as to avoid borrowing to keep the work up.

The McCulloch Memorial

The last Annual Conference authorized a special committee consisting of the President and Secretary of the Annual Conference, with Mr. J. G. Rogers, to set up a campaign to raise $3,500 as a memorial to Dr. McCulloch, to be used to pay off debts incurred by him in keeping the Herald going until his death. The commitee offers the following set-up: a layman in every district to co-operate with the headquarters committee who is to be assisted by the pastor-chairman of said districts. These chairmen are to canvass the churches in their respective districts and raise the allotments for their churches. The following are the laymen, by districts: 1st, S. C. Whitaker; 2nd, H. T. Powell; 3rd-4th, F. G. Hammer; 5th, D. S. Coltrane; 6th, J. H. Allen; 7th, H. A. Garrett; 8th, J. D. Ross; 9th, E. L. Douglas; 10th, J. W. Boyles; 12th, J. G. Rogers; 13th, B .K. Millaway; 14th, John T. Warlick; 15th, L. H. Sides; 16th, R. S. Garmon; 17th, T. B. Nalley; 18th, J. O. Barrett. The ministerial chairmen are listed in last week's Herald, hence are not published here. The amounts for the several pastoral charges will be published later. The subscriptions to be paid within ninety days from date of making them.

The Last Conference Was Fine

It was characterized by a spirit of fairness, of co-operation, of the desire to transact the business in a business-like manner. There is less and less talk for the sake of talking in our conference; it ought not to be a time for much speech-making—certainly no time should be given to haranguing; neither should the budding politicain be allowed a chance to try his wings in the running of the annual conference. Occasionally there crops out a desire on the part of somebody, but we do not need such methods as "making slates" and "log rolling" against some person or measure. These methods invariably end in harm. Place-seeking and political pushing for measures should be left to the ward politician. We hope that the brethren who are opposed to such measures will not hesitate to express their disapproval of them. At the coming Annual Conference is the time to elect representatives to the General Conference, and we hope the "slate maker" will be conspicuous by his absence. It can never be fair for one man to elect, or cause to be elected, twenty or thirty delegates. Regardless of the issues to come before this session of the General Conference, the "jury should not be packed" for a decision. Or if the election is to be a simple honor, then it is certainly too much a privilege to allow one man to decide who of the 30,000 members of our church in the North Carolina Conference are to be so honored. We recognize the fact that it often happens that many of the lay members of our Annual Conference are there for the first time, and do not know many of those who would make good representatives, yet this fact is no excuse to allow the "slate maker" to "mob up" the election.

R. M. Andrews.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD

As Adopted by the Recent Annual Conference

The publication of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD was begun by Dr. J. F. McCulloch forty years ago as a private enterprise,—private in the sense that he assumed all responsibility for the expense of its publication, asking only that the church patronize it. During the first year or two it became apparent that the patronage would not be sufficient to meet the expenses of publication, and the Methodist Protestant Publishing House was erected, to provide a home for the paper, and to supplement its income. The Publishing House was opened in November, 1897, and an appropriation of $20.00 per month was made to the paper. This was gradualy increased until it reached $100.00 per month.

About eighteen years ago Dr. McCulloch suggested that in order to promote better the enterprise so near his heart,—the building of a college—it would be well to amend the charter of the Publishing House, including the change of the name of the corporation to the Board of Education, which should thus acquire title to the Publishing House. This was done, but the appropriation to the HERALD was continued until the sale of the Publishing House, in order to benefit High Point College. The Board of Education has been compelled to take back the property, but the income is devoted to the payment of interest due the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company.

Several years ago Mr. McCulloch became unable to carry on the paper as he had been doing—by performing a considerable part of the mechanical work, and made a contract with Warren McCulloch and J. W. Swain to print and mail the paper. This they have continued to do, although a heavy deficit has occurred each year, the income from the paper being insufficient to cover the actual cost of producing it,—they charging only the actual cost of paper, composition, press work, etc.

After a few years, the deficit having reached $4,500, Dr. McCulloch made a proposition to the printers that he would reimburse them by transferring to them the machinery he owned personally. It was hoped that all subsequent deficits might be avoided by increasing the number of subscribers, and through a "subsidy" fund. In this we have been disappointed, and a further deficit of $3,500 has been created.

Legally, this is a debt against the estate of Dr. McCulloch, but there are serious objections to allowing it to continue to be so regarded.

First, it would wipe out the estate, which has already suffered the loss of about half its assets, through the settlement of the first deficit of $4,500. As the paper has been published for the benefit of the church, we think this would be manifestly unfair.

Second, the printers need reimbursement in cash, and they propose, if this is done, or if they are paid within a reasonable time, that they will continue to print and mail the HERALD at actual cost, which is $70 per week for 1500 copies, with additional copies at two cents each.

To conform to the legal requirements of the case, the printers have purchased the mailing list from the estate of Dr. McCulloch, for $1.00, thereby acquiring all assets in the way of unpaid subscriptions, together with the good will of the paper, and assuming liability for unexpired subscriptions. They offer all the above to this Conference for the same nominal consideration of One ($1.00) Dollar.

We therefore recommend:

1. That this Conference recognize the debt of $3,500 as its moral obligation, and that the Conference undertake to raise this amount as a memorial to Dr. McCulloch, to be used in liquidating the debt.
2. That a campaign committee, consisting of Dr. C. W. Bates, President Andrews, and a third member of their selection, be created, and that an effort be made to raise the money as early as possible.
3. That the Conference purchase from the printers, McCulloch & Swain, the mailing list and good will of the paper, for the nominal sum of One Dollar.
4. That in order to provide against the incurring of further deficits, the churches be asked to provide a fund through the "subsidy" plan, as well as to materially increase the subscription list, and that the present committee on subscriptions and subsidy be continued.
5. That Dr. J. E. Pritchard be elected by this Conference as Editor of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.

Respectfully submitted,
C. W. BATES, Chairman,
GEORGE R. BROWN,
J. E. PRITCHARD,
E. L. DOUGLAS,
J. G. ROGERS,
J. W. BOYLES,
J. NORMAN WILLS,

I HEAR EDWIN MARKHAM

By LUTHER K. LONG

The 82-year-old poet, Edwin Markham, has just made another visit to Washington. I had the privilege of hearing him in an address on poetry, with readings from his own poems.

Mr. Markham is a medium-sized man with bushy white hair and beard. His face is friendly, and his black eyes still sparkle with kindly humor. The first sentence of his address gives the key to his disposition and indicates his readiness to accept life and its implications. He said, "I am glad to be here, because I am glad to be anywhere."

He defined poetry, for the most part, by quotations from several ancient poets and philosophers:

Zoroaster—"The poet is the man who makes manifest the unmanifest."

Bacon—"There is no great beauty without strangeness."

Edgar Allen Poe—"The origin of poetry lies in the thirst for a wider beauty than the earth supplies."

Coleridge—"Poetry is the illumination of the face of science."

Shakespeare—"The poet is of imagination all compact."

Mr. Markham indicated the whimsical character of the poet and his product when he said, "Writing poetry is like writing a letter. You don't know what you are going to say when you start it, and you don't know what you've said when you are finished."

He read several of his poems. "The Man with the Hoe" was the one that first made his name widely known. "Abraham Lincoln" was given the prize as the poem most suitable for reading at the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial here in Washington. Three hundred others were in the competition. These two are among his best; and he read them with excellent spirit and understanding. Others that he read may be found in several small volumes that he has published. I was pleased with this humorous little quatrain on

DUTY

When Duty comes a-knocking at your gate,
Welcome him in, for if you bid him wait,
He will depart only to come once more,
And bring seven other duties to your door.

THE PRICE OF ONE DRUNK

A man who had always held to the idea that moderate drinking did no harm was relating an experience an uncle of his had gone through some months before, an experience that convinced him that moderate drinking can be very costly and terrible. The uncle was a railroad engineer with a long and enviable record for having no accidents. He did not look forward to approaching old age and the inevitable retirement with a pension with pleasure, but he did feel that if he reached old age in a few years and did have to retire a comfortable sum would be paid him in view of his long and faithful record.

And then, right out of the clear sky, came the news that this faithful worker had lost his job. He had been discovered drunk in his engine—not dead drunk or unable to hold himself up, but unfit for the responsible position of having charge of human life. For the first and only time in life he had succumbed to the urging of companions and had indulged in strong drink, according to the word of the relative telling the story. Naturally he was humiliated, his good record was broken, and he was out of employment at a time when work was hard to get.

Friends interested themselves in his behalf, organizations tried their hand, his long career was urged as a plea for reinstatement, but the best that could be had was a little place in the railroad yards with little pay. Never will that man take his engine for the last run covered with flowers and proudly, if sadly, step down for the last time. He will always feel sure that the whole thing may have been a kind of trap set for him in a moment of weakness so that some worker who coveted his place might advance without waiting, but he cannot prove that, and if he could he is still out of his earned place. A fearful price to pay for one drunk, and one that may shorten his life. Well may young people ponder the penalties that even corporations are forced to deal out to workers, and well may they conclude that if there is never a first drink there will never be a first drunk.—Mrs. W. C. Kohler.

MASABRA'S CHANGE

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus: for He shall save His people from their sins."

Twenty-five years ago Masaba was employed by the officials of the Congo to commandeer men and women as rubber gatherers. When men would not go to work he shot them down, and cooked and ate them. He was known as the most cruel monster in the Congo. Two years ago he came to a station of the Heart of Africa Mission to see the missionary, Miss Rees, who had been preaching in the country. "Tell me," he said, with desperate earnestness, "tell me the story you've been telling in the villages. I feel my sin. I must get rid of it." So Miss Rees told Masaba of the Blood shed for sins, the Blood that makes hearts clean. And this enslaved black man bowed low, very low, at the pierced feet of the Savior, and in five minutes was washed whiter than snow. Then by the native life-and-death oath he vowed himself to God without reserve and irrevocably. He has been learning to read and is witnessing to Christ. He is tempted terrifically, yet he is victorious. Such is the present power of Christ's salvation.—The S. S. Times.

"GIVE US A CRUMB OF JESUS"

A missionary to Africa relates this experience in an appeal for the translation of the Bible into every tongue: "O my friends, give to the people in every land this Book! Many years ago, before I went to Central Africa, I was in Basutoland traveling with a party of missionaries. As we were anxious to get home, we rushed through one village without stopping, and as we cantered away on our horses an old woman came out of the village and shouted to us, and what she said was this: 'You missionaries, why do you pass us by in this manner? Return and give us a little crumb of Jesus.' My friends, you have the whole loaf. Do not grudge these benighted children of God 'a little crumb of Jesus.' "

If we as a church actually believe the Bible to be the Word of God, the revelation of the only way of salvation, let us make our belief evident by a vital and active interest in bringing the same Bible to those who have it not. One of the most fruitful labors we can engage in these times of world-wide unrest is to help scatter the printed Word broadcast over the earth.—Unknown.

BIBLE STUDY

Would it not be a foolish thing
To die of thirst, with this clear spring
Of Living Water at my feet?
To starve when there is bread and meat
And wine before me on the board,
A table spread by my dear Lord?
And would we think he had much sense
Who hoarded only copper pence,
When at his feet, and all around,
Were golden nuggets on the ground?

OUR STORY PAGE

"NOT MY WILL, BUT THINE"

Grandma Grayson sat with her elbows firmly planted upon the dining room table and head resting in the upturned palms of her hands. She looked at me in her grave way while we talked quietly in the sweet solitude of her home. Her usually clear blue eyes grew misty as she told me fragmentary bits of her trials in home-making, while this afternoon we talked mostly of the problems of child training.

"I loved my wee bairns," she reminisced softly; "and when Winnie was so very ill I just couldn't give her up. The doctor had said he could do nothing else for her. She was only a baby, and he found she was already dying, but I whispered hard to God, 'Don't take her, please, dear God. She's all I have, and You have ever so many up there. I had to wait so long for her, too. Please let me have her!" And He did. He gave her back to me."

"How wonderful!" I said to myself.

"But I guess I made a mistake," grandma continued. "I should have let Him have her. I have often wished since that I had. Not that I do not love Winnie, for I love her as much as the rest of them, but she has been such a worry to me ever since. She is sweet and good-hearted and unselfish, and she's a Christian, too; but I can't help thinking that she would have been better off with Him. She's been always such a care to me. Even now, with children of her own, she keeps me on edge all the time, for the unexpected always happens with her."

Grandma brushed back a stray white lock, and I wondered, as she did so, if Winnie might have been the cause of so many of her mother's premature gray locks.

"After that," she continued, "I never begged to keep any when they got sick."

And I fancied a tear dropped from her moist eyes as she recalled the row of tiny graves on Woodlake Hill.

"But then when Billy fell sick," she resumed, "it was an awful trial. He was my first boy and I wanted him awful bad. That time I told God if He'd just let me keep him I'd train him up to be a preacher or a missionary or anything else He wanted him to be, and He let me keep him." And then a broken sigh escaped her breast as she pictured again the long dark nights when she watched beside Billy's bedside while he suffered in agony for which she could do nothing. So many hours she had sat thus, and so many times her hopes had seemed blasted. "And there he is," she motioned to the garden outside where a sickly man tended the flowers, and sat down ever so many times to rest on a bench beneath a tall shade tree.

"Billy loves to go to church, and he wants to do things in the church, but his poor sick body just won't let him. I guess I have failed."

"Oh, don't feel that way about it, Grandma!" I cried. "If you have done your part—"

"But I'm not sure that I have," she interrupted me. "I think sometimes he might have been a preacher anyway if I would have trained him right. You see, after I had made that promise to God, I slid back some, and for years I didn't go to church much myself. They were those years when he should have been taken to church regularly and had the direct influence of the church."

"But the rest of your children are doing so well," I commented.

"Yes, and I always prayed 'Thy will be done' for them," she replied. "If we would only just know and see how things are going to turn out in life, we would never pray anything else but 'Thy will be done' even if we would like best to have our own way. You're still young. Don't let your whole lifetime be miserable because you wanted your own way. When the test comes, resign all to the Lord, even if it does mean giving up the dearest thing you possess. Later on in life—maybe not until in eternity—you will see how that after all His way was best, and the price you had to pay for your happiness was not at all too big. On the other hand, a lifetime of regret will not change one mistake you have made."

I thought about that for a long while, and, divining my meditations, Grandma reflected:

"Well, that's enough of my experiences. Now tell me some of yours."

I smiled, though rather seriously.

"Grandma," I said, "I'm so thankful for your sermon today. It is going to help me ever so much in making decisions in my life." I looked out again at the sad, pitiful figure of her Billy bending over his geraniums, and then I fondly touched her soft white hair. "The small things are not so hard to give up for God, but when it comes to the real problems —the big things—I want to say always, 'Thy will be done!' "

When I left her there, it seemed to me Grandma's kiss and warm embrace were just a bit more affectionate than usual. It had cost her something to tell me what she did, but she knew she was well repaid.—The Youth's Christian Companion.

"AND THEN WHAT?"

Ralph was a student in high school and won honors for each term's work. His thirst for knowledge led him to spend hours and hours studying. One day, his uncle, seeing him hard at work over his books, said, "Ralph, what do you intend to do when your high school studies are over?"

"I hope to go to the university," said Ralph, "and learn all that they can teach me."

"And what then?" his uncle inquired.

"Then I want to go to medical college and become a great doctor."

"Good!" said his uncle. "And then what?"

"Well, if I can afford it, I want to study in Europe for a year or two," said Ralph. "I want to learn all there is to know about medicine."

"Hm!" mused his uncle, "and then what?"

"Then I hope to practice. I'd like to be the head of a great hospital, and cure countless people."

"Very good!" the uncle commented. "And then what?"

"Well, when I've done that kind of work all my life, I'll—I'll—well, I'll die," said Ralph, somewhat surprised.

"Yes," said his uncle. "And then what?"

For some time Ralph looked serious, and there was silence as the young man did some heavy thinking. Then he said, "I see what you mean, Uncle Phil. I've been leaving God out of my plans."

Together they talked the matter over, and together they read the Psalmist's words, "The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom." And Ralph settled life's greatest question—a settltment which put God first.

Before Ralph made his settlement with God, his life would have consisted of study, work and death. "And then what?"

After his settlement with God, his life consisted of study, service, a transition to the Heavenly Home, and an eternity with God. What a difference one decision can make in one's life and in one's eternity.—Selected.

A SINNER WHO WAS SAVED IN THREE MINUTES

Coming from a service a messenger met me, requesting that I would go at once to a neighboring house to see a young man who was considered to be near his end. I hurried to the place accordingly, and knowing the time was short, I came at once to the all-important subject, and said:

"My dear friend, I see that you are very ill. Are you prepared for what may be before you?"

"Oh, if I only were!" he replied, giving me a look in which despair and importunity seemed strangely blended, "and if I could be spared two or three weeks I believe I might be prepared; but the doctor tells me I can only live a few hours."

"Three weeks in order to be saved!" I exclaimed in surprise; "let me tell you how you may be saved in three minutes."

So saying, I opened the Word of God, and read, "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name" (John 1:12).

"If I gave you this gold watch," I asked, "how long would it take you to receive it? Could you not take it at once?" He assented that he could.

"The gift of God is eternal life" (Rom. 6:23), I said, reading again from the Bible. "What have you to do with a gift? Do you buy it, or beg it, or wait a long time to be prepared to accept it? Will you take Christ, God's gift, just now?"

"But how can I take Him? Tell me actually the way to do it," he exclaimed.

Turning to Romans 10:9, I said, "Here we have the way told exactly, 'If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.' Now, if you want to be saved, just receive the Lord Jesus as your Savior, and tell Him that you do so."

Late that night he passed away. Almost his last words were, "Isn't it wonderful? He showed me how I could be saved in three minutes, when I thought I must have weeks."

THE OLD GENERAL

His fighting days had long been done, and one afternoon the old general sat in the garden with a grandson whom he greatly loved. He talked to the boy, and the little man asked him questions. "Grandfather, now that you are old you sit quiet a long time and you remember, do you not?"

"Yes," replied the old soldier. "It is always thus with the aged."

"Grandfather," went on the little man, "you won a lot of victories. Tell me which of all your victories you consider the greatest. Was it that one in which you stormed the hill and fort and took it?"

"Not so," broke in the old soldier.

"Then, was it when you had that night march through the desert and captured that African city at dawn?"

The old warrior shook his head.

"Was it," asked the boy, "when you yourself rescued that wounded man and received the Iron Cross?"

"No," came the immediate reply.

"Tell me, then, Grandfather," coaxed the pleading voice, "which do you think was hte greatest victory you ever won?"

"My greatest victory," said the old gentleman in a solemn voice, "was achieved when, after many years of struggle, at last I conquered myself."

The small boy was silent, for he did not quite understand. "Tell me, please," he asked, "something about it."

"Well, little man," said the general, "when I was your age, I had a terrible temper. I used to feel it rising inside of me like blowing up a fire with bellows; and because I never really fought against it, it got worse and worse. But one day God compelled me to learn that I could never be a true soldier unless I conquered my temper. It took years, and even now angry passions will sometimes rise; but I pray and so come off victorious."

"Yes, Grandfather," broke in the small boy in a rather unsteady voice, for he had a temper of his own, and his nurse could have told tales. "Please go on."

The old soldier went on. "Then," he said, "when I was a boy, I always wanted my own way and all of it. I was often disobedient. When I joined the army I just had to learn to obey, or, instead of being promoted, I should have been sent away in disgrace. I did not like having to do as my superiors told me, but I had to conquer my self-will."

"Thank you, Grandfather," interrupted the little man. "I don't think I want to hear any more. Hearing all this hurts. Please, may I go?"

The aged general smiled tenderly, for he knew why hearing it hurt. "Yes," he said, "you may go. And remember that if my little grandson wishes to conquer himself he must pray a great deal and try hard. He will find that God always helps those who pray."

"I will remember, Grandfather, dear," promised the small boy. And he stood at salute and then ran off.

The old general watched him with shining eyes that showed how he loved him. Then he murmured to himself: "Yes, yes, there never was one of my victories so great as that by which God enabled me to conquer myself."—Publisher Unknown.

The above is our report for a period of over two weeks, and we thank you one and all for your response.

Thanksgiving

When the Herald reaches you this week, Thanksgiving Day will be past. But the period for Thanksgiving offerings for the Children's Home is to extend until every church and Sunday school has made its offering. Give everyone in your community a chance to give something. Our needs will be acute before the winter passes. God bless and keep each of you.

Yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

MAGAZINE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

We are starting a new conference year. Let's give the Children's Home the benefit of more magazine subscriptions this year.

Magazines make lovely Christmas gifts. Send yours in at once. A Christmas card will go to each subscriber.

The magazines cost you no more and the commission means much to the Home. If you see a club in a magazine you want, send in the printed list with your money. I can handle all clubs. MABEL W. RUSSELL.

Trinity, N. C.

THE CALL TO PRAYER

Old Timer, according to authorities under whom the writer has studied, it is modern, reverent, courteous, and even preferable to use the old-fashioned call to prayer, "Let us pray." "Shall we pray?" or "May we pray?" is an interrogation in sound if not in sense. There is never any question as to the advisability and possibility of prayer. We should pray without ceasing. God has given us abundant evidence that he is more ready to hear than we are to call. Therefore, these statements being true, "Let us pray."

It seems to the writer that many things are being done which are neither commonsense nor convenient in an effort to "keep up" with this so-called modern and different world. We should be modern in the sense that we are prepared and able to take care of needs arising from new conditions. But it seems to the writer that there is an effort on the part of the church to conform. It is feared the world is setting too many of our standards. If this is true, the church should REform, and keep in advance of secular forces, and raise a standard to which a modern civilization shall be glad to conform.

Small, indeed, are the men who are controlled by the petty ambition to appear modern. Equally small is he who is dominated by conventionality and custom. We should accommodate ourselves, alone, to the dictates of reason and revelation. W. M. LOY.

FROM DEAN LINDLEY

Dr. J. E. Pritchard, Editor,
The M. P. Herald,
Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Dr. Pritchard:

I am just writing a word of appreciation to you for your willingness to edit the Herald. From your article on the front page of the paper today, I see something of the conditions under which you have to labor. To perform this editorial duty in connection with your usual work at Calvary is indeed an undertaking. I am sure we appreciate this additional work on your part and shall be ready to co-operate with you according to our several abilities even though these abilities may be very limited.

I was not at conference when the Herald question was discussed and, therefore, did not know the details of the plan. Now that I do understand more of the particulars, I just wanted to express my personal appreciation and pledge to you my interest and help in so far as I can be of any value.

With every good wish, I am

P. E. LINDLEY,
Dean, High Point College.

GROUP INSURANCE FOR MINISTERS

It was my privilege to attend the Annual Conference Saturday and Sunday, and one of the things that impressed me was the discussion regarding benefits for the families of deceased ministers. According to the report submitted by a committee, this was to be raised by assessment. It was also brought out that in the past these assessments were not all paid, and that only about $36 was paid in during the year just closed, and that six ministers had passed away—how far would the $6 go? Not enough to keep the family a week!

Using the 1932 Journal for reference, I note that approximately $83,000 was promised the pastors for 1933. If every pastor paid his assessment of 20 cents per $100 of salary for every death, the treasurer of this fund would receive $166. This same journal indicates that the average salary promised is approximately $1,000 per year, or about $2 per minister for each death. I believe that this same amount of money could be expended for some group life insurance that would have a better yield, and at the same time let the conference carry part of the burden. I believe that this could be worked out, and the cost of it could be added to the budget, and it would be so small that the various churches would never realize that they were doing something for the minister's family.

If I recall rightly, this matter has been brought up before the conference several years—and nothing done about it, except that a report is brought in by a committee, and the report is referred back to the committee; and the committee says that it has spent all the time on it that they can give it, and that they do not want it referred back to them. Why is it that something concrete and definite cannot be agreed upon?

I would like to suggest a committee composed of three laymen, or two laymen and one minister, selecting sound and experienced men for this committee. That this committee meet and discuss the matter, then invite in representatives of three or four large insurance companies who write group policies, and have them submit written proposals. With these, the committee can then prepare a definite and concrete plan to submit to the next Annual Conference.

The company I am with has a group policy, by which those employes desiring it may obtain $500 insurance. The employes pay part of the premiums and the company the balance. Under the plan, all employes, regardless of age, are insurable. Approximately 90 per cent of our more than 500 employes are insured under this plan—there is no compulsion—it is merely offered them, and they can take it or leave it as they see fit.

Why not do something with this matter, or lay it on the shelf forever. There is nothing wrong with life insurance. There is nothing wrong with a minister having life insurance for the benefit of his loved ones when he passes on, and I feel that if the laymen were "let in" on this matter that something definite could be worked out, and that the various churches would be willing to bear a part of the burden, through the conference. Something for nothing—no, let those that want the protection pay a stipulated amount; and let those who are not interested and will not subscribe to it be left out.

I would like to see some discussion of this matter from some other laymen, and ministers too. This is a matter that is too vital to be dragged around from one Annual Conference to another with nothing done. Committee reports will get you nowhere, if you will not accept the report of the committee. Select a good, sound committee, one that has experience along the lines the committee is named for; charge it to study the situation thoroughly, and render its report based on its study and findings; then rely on its report—otherwise, why have a committee? A committee that studies its problems can know more of it than a number of "snap judgments" on the conference floor.

In closing, let me say that I am not an insurance agent, and am only interested to the extent that I would like to see the families of our ministers receive some worthwhile benefits at their going.

"LAYMAN."

PROVIDENCE, INTERMITTENTLY, MARKS PATH OF PASTOR WITH MYSTERY

Dr. C. W. Bates, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church, this city, is puzzled at the working of Providence, which has many times touched his life in a mysterous way—each time, however, bringing him to acquisition of his wish.

First it touched him as a youth, when his father mysteriously disappeared, and constant effort for years failed to reveal his whereabouts. Then, after the son had completed his preparation for ministry, and come south in the service of the North Carolina M. P. Conference, Dr. Bates had a letter from his former pastor in Long Island, N. Y., stating that he had received a letter from his (Dr. Bates') father, asking information about his two sons. The pastor related that he had intended forwarding it to him, but being called to a distant city immediately, the letter was mislaid. There were anxious weeks of searching, and months later, when all hope seemed dissipated, the Long Island minister's wife found the much wanted letter in the bottom of their auto pocket, into which it had been placed months before when he made that hurried trip to Chicago. The letter was hurriedly forwarded to the son, who, as hurriedly, packed off to Brooklyn, where father and son were again united. Paternal communion was enjoyed for some time, until death claimed the elder Mr. Bates about three years ago.

Just about that time Dr. Bates, then pastor of a Greensboro church, was assisting in an evangelical campaign at Hickory Ridge M. P. church in Forsyth county. He was stopping in the home of a member of the congregation. Picking up a Winston-Salem paper, his attention was arrested by a brief news item. It related that one John G. Jenkins, Jr., of Brooklyn, had at last completed compliance with the dying request of his father—having repaid all living creditors of the father at the time of the latter's death. The story related that John G. Jenkins, Sr., was a banker in Brooklyn, and that his bank failed in 1907, with a million or more loss to himself and depositors. It was related that the banker died of broken heart a few months after, and as he neared the end he named his son trustee and executor, with the request that the son devote himself as much as possible to liquidating the obligation of his father's business.

Attention was arrested for the reason that the senior Mr. Jenkins was an uncle of Dr. Bates, and at the time of the bank crash Mr. Jenkins was assisting the young theological student in his college work. Of course, that placed new and unexpected burdens upon the young nephew, and through this act of "providence" greater strength of character was possible.

The news item did not give the address of John Jenkins, Jr. North Carolina papers of that date were searched, metropolitan papers were examined, but apparently there was to be another futile search. For some months now the matter has rested.

But just this week Dr. Bates was an evening visitor in a home in this city. There were Lowell Thomas fans in the home and the hour for his program on the air arrived. The radio was turned on and lo! Mr. Thomas began a character study, in which John G. Jenkins, Jr., was the subject. He traced the struggle of the son to comply with the dying wish of his father, and related how after a quarter of a century or thereabouts he had completed the task, redeeming the name of his father and of his family—and how, now, that son was under indictment on the charge of embezzling a paltry few hundred dollars. "There must be something wrong," declared Mr. Thomas, "when a man lives such a life of devotion to home and duty, for providence to interfere to dim so shining a light."

Dr. Bates, three years ago, sought the address of the son, his cousin, in order that he might write him a note of appreciation—first, of his father, who had so willingly offered aid to him in his college days, but who was providentially hindered in his plans, and, then, to commend the son for his loyalty to his deceased father and his remarkable feat.

Now, comments Dr. Bates, I must find that son, if possible, for if he ever needed a friend in all these years, it is now. A letter has been addressed to Mr. Thomas in an effort to locate the troubled son.—Twin City Sentinel.

THOSE STATEMENTS YOU RECEIVED

People keep talking and writing to the editor about those statements which they received concerning their subscription. This to say you have not received any statement from the editor nor by the authority of the editor. The statements sent out were by authority of the administrator of Dr. McCulloch's estate. The new management is in no way responsible for them.

—If the memory of the editor serves him correctly, Friday of this week is the birthday of Brother R. R. Ross, of Asheboro—the 83rd, we believe. Brother Ross has had an honorable career and has been one of the pillars of our church, not only in Asheboro, but throughout the conference. As he approaches his birthday this week, he can do so in the consciousness that he is loved and respected by a wide circle of friends.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle, Mt. Zion Charge.—It has been some time since I have reported to the Herald, and by the time this is in print conference will have come to a close. We regret very much to lose Rev. Mr. Hunter as our pastor. He has served this charge faithfully as pastor for so many years. Mrs. Hunter has also won the love and respect of all our people. But we are indeed glad that they will make their future home here, for such fine people as they will be a blessing in any community. W have not only heard his sermons, but have seen them in their daily walks of life. We appreciate the fine work he has done here. The people here are trying to help him build his home.

Rev. R. A. Hunter was our efficient help during the week of special meeting. His sermons were of the best. Two new members were added to the church.

The president of conference, Rev. Mr. Andrews, and Rev. J. E. Pritchard visited this charge in October, holding services at Mt. Zion church. They brought inspiring messages and we regret that more of our people did not go out to hear them.

Mr. C. R. Nickles has been appointed reporter to the Herald for the coming year.

MRS. W. E. JONES.

Saxapahaw, Saxapahaw Charge.—During the past year we have made quite a few improvements in and around our church and Sunday school rooms at Saxapahaw.

For several months we had a special drive to obtain money in order to beautify, and add such necessary improvements as were needed. The whole church building has been repainted outside, including the much needed coat on the roof. The church auditorium has also been given a new coat of paint. The aisles have been newly carpeted with corrugated rubber matting.

The old wooden steps have been replaced by concrete ones, which add much to the appearance. We are also proud to state that we have added a new piano to our church equipment.

We are indeed glad to have our same pastor, Mr. Loy, return to us for another year.

The total amount that was spent for the repairs of our church and church grounds was $455.75.

Shiloh, Shiloh Charge.—There is not much that I can write this week, but I will write a few lines to keep from disappointing someone who will be looking for news from the home church.

The monthly prayer service was conducted the fourth Sunday by the C. E. Society. The topic for discussion was “The Grace of Gratitude.” The president, Mr. Protus Koonts, was in charge. Those making discussions were: Mr. Protus Koonts, Mabel Berrier, Emma Berrier, Blanch Sink, Alma Koonts, Ruth Sink, Ruth Shoaf, Weldon Koonts, Lessie Lanning, Naomi Swicegood, and Gladys Evans. One of the class leaders, Mr. Jeff Fritts, who keeps the attendance record, stated that the number attending this service was larger than any other this year.

The Primary Department of our Sunday school, under the direction of Misses Emma Berrier and Alma Koonts, is progressing nicely. They are very proud of their new song books which the Sunday school purchased for their use.

The choir practice, which has been discontinued at the church, has not been disbanded. For the past three weeks the choir practice was conducted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Berrier, but will be held next Friday night with our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge.

Mr. Ridge will fill his first appointment for this year at Shiloh next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. We are looking forward for great success through our co-operating and prayerful support in our church this year.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

Calvary, Greensboro. — Our pastor, Dr. Pritchard, has returned to us for another year (years, we hope), for which we are all very thankful. He has completed a fine year's work as Calvary's pastor. Dr. Pritchard, as you already know, is now editing our Methodist Protestant Herald. We are very proud of him.

A large congregation was present Sunday morning to hear our pastor's first sermon in the new conference year. The subject was “Being Accepted of God.” Quite a few visitors were present. We were glad indeed to have them and hope they will come more often.

We were glad to have E. O. Peeler preach for us on conference Sunday morning. We were also glad to have Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Bowman, of Denton, worship with us that morning. Mrs. Bowman, who has a fine talent for singing, sang for us at the Sunday school hour. The Friendly Sunday school class was very fortunate in having her teach their class that morning.

“Count Your Blessings,” a song very much in keeping with the Sunday school lesson last Sunday and with Thanksgiving, was sung very beautifully by Mrs. J. D. Heritage during the Sunday school hour last Sunday.

Recognition was given our Boy Scout troop No. 7 Sunday morning following Sunday school, when the Scoutmaster, Floyd G. Reynolds, announced that they took honors last week by winning the commissioner's attendance flag at the monthly Boy Scout court of honor at the county courthouse Saturday night. The flag was carried to the front by three of the boys in order that everyone present might see it.

The Boy Scout troop has re-registered and a new charter has been issued. J. Frank Coble is chairman of the troop committeemen, which include Robah H. Fields and J. Fletcher Caudle. Mr. Caudle succeeds Dr. Pritchard, who felt it necessary to resign because of other duties. W. L. Caudle is assistant Scoutmaster.

Calvary was fortunate enough to get on all the honor rolls of conference last year. We are proud to report that we were able to pay $1,300 on the church debt last year.

Quite a few of our Sunday school classes held their monthly business meetings last week. The Friendly class met on Tuesday evening with Mrs. Ross Bowman. Plans were made to give a Thanksgiving basket to some needy person in the community. The Christmas meeting will be held at the home of Miss Pearle McCulloch, at which time there will be an exchange of gifts. A musical program is being planned by Mrs. H. W. Highfill and Mrs. Howard R. Neece. A program consisting of different kinds of amusement is being worked out by Mrs. J. W. Tucker and Mrs. Wade Leach.

The Anna Starr class met with Mrs. D. E. Curtis on Thursday afternoon. Final plans for painting their classroom were made. Both the Anna Starr and Friendly class rooms were painted last week.

The Baraca class enjoyed an oyster supper at the hut on Thursday evening. This was followed by the business meeting, during which time officers and class leaders for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: J. W. Tucker, president; Floyd G. Reynolds, vice president; Howard Hemphill, secretary and treasurer. H. W. Highfill was elected chairman of the lookout committee, J. C. Coe was re-elected teacher, and Holt Hunter was elected assistant teacher.

The choir has begun its rehearsals of the Christmas cantata, “The Adoration,” by George B. Devin.

There will be a joint meeting of the quarterly conference and the board of stewards next Tuesday evening at the hut. The board of stewards will hold their monthly meetings this year on each Tuesday evening following the first Sunday instead of Monday evening following the first Sunday, as has been the custom heretofore.

Several of our people called on Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Williams last Saturday evening to extend congratulations and good wishes, the occasion being the couple's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

We wish to extend our sympathy to J. F. Parker, whose brother has just died.

I haven't written since the passing of our very dear friend, Mrs. T. F. McCulloch. Our church has lost one of its very best members. Not only the church but the community as well is suffering the great loss. Mrs. McCulloch was loved by everyone who knew her. Her kind, loving smile and sunny disposition will always be remembered. Her loved ones have our sympathy.

MRS. HOWARD R. NEECE, Reporter.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—There is rich comfort and sweet satisfaction found in the realm of religious activity that is found nowhere else. When we fall into doubt and discouragement, feeling that we are too hard hit by something that has happened—feel almost ruined, in fact—right then something unexpected and very good turns up to save the situation, bringing smiles back to our faces and hope in our hearts. Now isn't that something to be thankful for this Thanksgiving season? Christian reader, what would you take for your hold on eternal life? What would you take in exchange for your church and minister?

When our delegate, Mr. F. S. Pritchard, reported on Annual Conference Sunday that we had lost our pastor, we felt very blue about it. But thanks to our delegate and Dr. Andrews, they got busy and found us another. Our new pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, was right on the job yesterday, preaching at both services. We feel fortunate in securing his services. His first sermon was an earnest appeal to the church to press forward in the work of the Lord. (Text found in Phil. 3:13-14). Mr. Morgan emphasized forgetfulness. How we do need to forget petty injuries, ourselves, our mistakes, failures, losses, successes, sorrows and everything that may have a tendency to cause a hindrance, in our pressing forward in Christian work.

We regret the going of Dr. Taylor and his family, who served this church so splendidly. Our prayers and well wishes follow them to their new field of labor.

REPORTER.

Flat Rock Charge.—Having been assigned to the Flat Rock charge for the coming year, the writer desires to state that we appreciate the privilege of serving the people of this charge for another year, and also appreciate the favorable attitude which has been unanimously expressed by the people of all the churches on the charge. We are looking forward to a greater year's work, anticipating a continuance of the same spirit of harmony and co-operation between pastor and people.

We began the work of our second year on Flat Rock charge with services at Flat Rock and Bethany churches last Sunday. The attendance was very good at each church. Our plan of appointments will be the same as last year. The plan of appointments is as follows: First Sunday: Bethel, 11 a. m.; Gideon's Grove, 3 p. m. Second Sunday: Gideon's Grove, 11 a. m.; Flat Rock, 3 p. m. Third Sunday: Palestine, 11 a. m.; Bethel, 3 p. m. Fourth Sunday: Flat Rock, 11 a. m.; Bethany, 3 p .m. We will omit the first Sunday service at Palestine during the coming year.

We have elected reporters for all five churches, and the pastor will not write reports as he did last year, but will ask each reporter to write a report at least once per month. Reporters, take this request, and be governed accordingly.

Now, Methodist Protestants in North Carolina, let's all work together for a greater Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina during the conference year 1934-1935.

C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Harris' Chapel, Vance Charge.—The first service of the conference year was held at Harris' Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock with a large audience in attendance. The service was in charge of the new pastor, Rev. J. D. Cranford, who brought us a message unexcelled in inspiration. Brother Cranford was introduced to the audience by the former pastor, Rev. D. D. Broome, who we regret has asked for a release from the conference for an indefinite period of time.

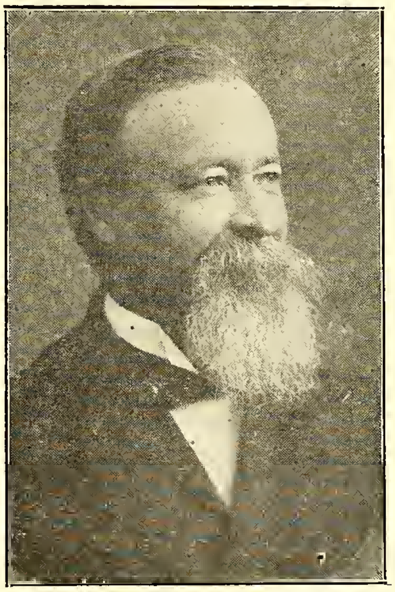
The first quarterly conference will meet at Spring Valley church the third Sunday afternoon in December at 3 o'clock. The pastor urges all officials of the church especially, and as many members as possible, to be present at this important meeting.

The Ladies' Missionary Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday after the second Sunday in December at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. Raymond Wyche, Dabney, with Mrs. Wyche and Mrs. Julian Glover acting as hostesses. REPORTER.

Roberta.—Fair View (Roberta) Methodist Protestant church was organized by the Rev. D. A. Braswell in the fall of 1906. Rev. Mr. Braswell was pastor of the Concord Methodist Protestant church at that time.

Roberta Methodist Protestant Church

REV. EARL A. COOK, PASTOR



The late Rev. D. A. Braswell, organizer of Roberta Methodist Protestant Church.

A large brush arbor was erected on the plot of ground on which the parsonage is now located. A very successful revival was remembered, conducted by the Rev. D. A. Braswell and assisted by Rev. Mr. McSwain. At the close of the revival the church was organized with a good number of charter members. The next year, 1907, a brush arbor was erected on the spot where the church now stands, and another great revival was witnessed. In the spring of 1907, a building committee was appointed, and soon afterward a plot of ground was bought from Mr. J. R. Blackwelder, and the erection of the church soon began. The names of John Foster, Hope McCall and John Kiser appeared on the deed as the first trustees.

Rev. Mr. Braswell served this church as pastor, with the Concord church, in 1907, 1908 and 1909. The following ministers served the following years, and the church was a part of the Concord Circuit: A. O. Lindley served in 1910, 1911 and 1912; Edward Suits served in 1913 and 1914; J. R. Hutton was assigned for 1915, but was released later, and W. R. Lowdermilk was appointed in his place. Mr. Lowdermilk was reassigned for 1916 and 1917, but died in March of 1917. The Rev. P. S. Kennett was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the Rev. Mr. Lowdermilk. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk served in 1918. For the year 1919 Fair View was placed on the Cabarrus circuit and J. F. Alexander served as pastor. In 1920 Fair View was made a station, and thereafter has been known to the conference as Roberta. J. T. Sisk was assigned as pastor and served four years, 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923. N. Brittain served in 1924, 1925 and 1926. Robert Short served in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930. C. H. Hill served in 1931, J. B. Trogdon served in 1932, T. A. Williams in 1933; and in 1934 and 1935 the present pastor, Earl A. Cook.

During the years of 1927-1930, eight large Sunday school rooms were added to the church. This greatly burdened the church financially and it has been struggling under this handicap until April 1, 1934, at which time the entire amount due, $725, was raised and paid, and the church is once more free from debt. Roberta is looking forward to the most successful year of its history, both financially and spiritually.

Asheville.—Our Sunday school attendance was up again this week. The children are doing very well; we were right surprised that the Fawcett Bible class had the smallest attendance of the entire school. I am sure they will be on the job in full force next week. The Frances Cunningham Philathea class again led the entire school in amount of offering; the Golden Rule class led in their department; the Intermediate girls led in attendance; the first-year Junior boys again had the honor of being the only class to have 100 per cent attendance and the largest per capita offering. Miss Adele Biebinger is assisting Mrs. C. B. Baker with this class and it is expected that it will continue its record, since Miss Biebinger has plenty of "pep" and enthusiasm. The teachers in the children's department are the finest in the state, and we are all mighty proud of the work in that department.

A meeting of the stewards will be held this (Monday) evening at the parsonage, at which time plans for the year will be formulated. We expect this year to keep our financial affairs up to date and there will be no necessity for the last-minute rush at the close of the year. We earnestly trust that all members will back up the stewards by contributing regularly and generously enough that the stewards will have no difficulty in keeping things in fine shape. None of us wish to belong to a dead organization, so let's keep growing. We can do it if we start in time and work earnestly toward our goal Your co-operation is solicited.

Mr. Minnis, in his sermon on Sunday, expressed his happiness in being assigned to serve us again, and we wish to assure him that we are all glad. It is expected that this year will be more fruitful than last. Mr. Minnis spoke from the text, "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men" (Psalm 107:8), and enumerated some of the many blessings which we as a community, church, and as individuals are now enjoying. The Lord has indeed been good to us. May we express our gratitude in service to others.

Mrs. Joyner is still on our sick list, so is Mr. H. L. Hanner, Miss Lola Johnson and perhaps many others, as quite a few were absent from their accustomed places on Sunday. We earnestly hope that all will be well soon and be able to worship with us again. It was a genuine pleasure to see Mrs. C. C. McNeill on Sunday. Mrs. McNeill and Josie are both living in High Point now and we miss them. Josie is attending High Point College.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor group will hold their regular monthly business meeting at the home of Miss Betty Marlowe, 106 Washington Road, Friday at 7:30 p. m. Miss Polly Gentry, president, will preside.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held at our church on Thanksgiving Day. The five churches in this part of town are co-operating and the Rev. E. R. Lineberger, of the St. Mark's Lutheran church, will be the speaker.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Since the people have seen fit to elect me as reporter for the new conference year, I will endeavor to do my best to keep the readers of the Herald informed of the work at Hollister.

First of all, we want to take this opportunity to thank our delegate, Miss Burt, and the stationing committee for assigning Rev. O. C. Loy as our pastor for another conference year. It came out in the daily news paper that our pastor was "Rev. O. Cloy." This created quite a sensation among the people. Some were saying our pastor was "Cloy" and others "Loy." We finally decided it was a mistake on the part of the printers, and so it was. We are very glad to have Mr. Loy and family return for another year. Mr. Loy brought to us a very interesting message Sunday morning from Psalm 6:2. He urged us to make the prayer of David, "Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I," our prayer. He also urged us to live in closer contact with God and to feed upon His word daily.

There will be a special offering taken next Sunday for the Children's Home at High Point. We hope to have a large offering.

The Hollister board of stewards will meet on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mr. W. E. Knight.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Eden church on Friday, December 21, at 2 o'clock. All official members are urged to attend the conference.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held in the home of Mrs. W. H. Pierce on Tuesday, November 13, 1934. We had a very good meeting with nine members and two visitors present. The writer conducted the devotional service, using the theme "Deeps in Gratitude," as outlined in the devotional book. The treasurer made a splendid report at the meeting. We are proud of the work our auxiliary is doing. It was decided to use the "Butterfly Friend" plan in our auxiliary as described in the Record. In this way we hope to get more of the women to become active members of the auxiliary.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Among the many interesting and inspiring reports we received from conference was that our former pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, would be our pastor for another year. We are indeed glad to have Brother Williams and his family back for the eleventh year. We hope this will be the most successful year he has spent with us.

As a member said when welcoming Mrs. Williams in our auxiliary meeting, "We would hardly know how to get along without them." Efland was very glad our pastor could report all claims paid. This has not been an easy task with our church indebtedness to take care of, but the efforts of the faithful are always successful.

Our auxiliary held its monthly meeting in the church Wednesday afternoon. All circles were represented and made favorable reports of work they had done and plans for the future. The program consisted of familiar hymns; "Mattie," the story in Our Missionary Record, was told by Miss Pattye Crutchfield; our thank-offering and its three-fold purpose was discussed by Mrs. B. M. Williams; Miss Margaret Efland read "The Lost Thank-Offering Boxes."

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in our church on the evening of Thanksgiving Day at 7:30. Rev. N. N. Fleming, of the Presbyterian church, will make the address. Pastor Williams will also have a part in the service. The public is invited.

Mr. Clyde C. Pratt, who has been acting secretary of our Sunday school for some time, was elected secretary today (Sunday). Mr. Pratt has been serving in this office for the past 13 years and makes a very efficient officer.

Pastor Williams will not accept dinner invitations for Thanksgiving Day, since, as is his custom here of late, he is having wild turkey at home. It seems that turkeys have a habit of getting dangerously near him this season of the year.

To our new editor we wish much success with his new work and feel sure the Herald will be a success under his leadership.

Friendship, Shiloh Charge.—The people of Friendship are happy over the return of our good pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge. On Sunday evening, November 25, he delivered his first message for the coming year. It was a wonderful message, taken from the 103rd Psalm, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

The officers of the church have been elected for 1935 as follows: Trustees, Isaiah Miller, W. D. Walser, L. E. Phillips, J. A. Jordon, N. W. Essex; stewards, B. L. Koonts, J. A. Jordon, Henry Shoaf, Lelia Byerly, Mrs. Zeb Snider, Mrs. Russell Freedle, Juanita Phillips, J. W. Walser, Mrs. Thelma Snider; class leaders, Lelia Byerly; Sunday school superintendent, W. M. Byerly; assistant, Henry Hartley; pianist, Mrs. Amos Snider; choir leader, Alvin Walser; ushers, Willie Walser, Russell Freedle, assisted by R. L. York; sexton, R. L. York; church reporter, Adele Phillips.

Very sorry to note that one of Friendship's oldest and highly esteemed members, Mr. Isaiah Miller, was laid to rest in the church cemetery Friday morning, November 23 He will be greatly missed in Sunday school and church, as well as in the home. There will be a play given at Friendship on Sunday night, December 2, "Train Up a Child."

Union Grove, Mocksville Charge.—We were all delighted to have our new pastor fill his first appointment last Sunday night. Everybody seemed to enjoy his sermon and we hope he will continue to give us just such messages.

We were also glad to have Mr. Allen, from Union Chapel, to visit our church last Sunday night.

Oer church work is being very successful for these wintery Sundays. Our average attendance for the past month was 79.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Taylor

Mrs. Ella Taylor, widow of Ernest Taylor, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Gibson, in Lexington, Tuesday, October 16, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Taylor had been subject to a weak heart and on Sunday developed pneumonia that resulted in her death. She was born on November 8, 1880, thereby making her age 53 years. Mr. Taylor, her husband, preceded her in death several years ago.

Mrs. Taylor is survived by two daughters, Mrs. R. L. Gibson and Miss Teresa Taylor, both of Lexington; seven grandchildren; one brother, Frank Beck, and two sisters, Mrs. Eugene Coble and Mrs. John Vuncannon, of near Central Falls.

The deceased was a faithful member of the First Methodist Protestant church and will be missed there as well as in the other places that knew her.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Methodist Protestant church by the writer, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Burroughs. The large floral offering showed the esteem in which the deceased was held. Interment followed in the city cemetry. C. G. ISLEY.

Hedrick

Martha Louise Hedrick, four years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hedrick, died at the home on South Ford street, Lexington, November 6, after a few days' illness from meningitis.

Funeral services were conducted from First Methodist Protestant churrch by the pastor, and interment was in the city cemetery.

Surviving besides the parents are two brothers and a sister.

Martha Louise was a sweet and loving little girl. The parents have our sympathy in their loss. C. G. ISLEY.

Easter

John Albert Easter, highly respected citizen of Lexington, died at his home on South Main street on October 25, following a confining illness of over a year. He was 74 years, 1 month and 29 days of age.

Funeral services were held Friday, October 26, at 2 o'clock at the First Methodist Protestant church, of which he was a leading member, conducted by the writer. Burial followed in the city cemetery.

Mr. Easter is survived by the widow and the following children: F. W. Easter, of Alamance county; Mrs. T. E. Hauser, of High Point; Mrs. L. A. Beam, E. H. Easter, and Mrs. Elisha Allen, of Lexington. A daughter, Jennie, died at the age of 11 months. Three brothers and three sisters preceded him in death. Surviving also are 30 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

As a young man the deceased joined the Reformed church, but about 35 years ago transferred his membership to what is now the First Methodist Protestant church of Lexington. During this period he was a faitrful member of the church, one that always stood by the various pastors that served the church, and an official for much of the time that served the church efficiently and well. He will be missed in every walk of life, in the community, in the church, and in the home. He had been in ill health for some time, but bore his suffering with resignation and left the assurance that he was ready to go. His influence and example are a living force in the city of Lexington. The high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him was evidenced by one of the largest floral tributes ever seen in this city.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAMS CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On Saturday evening, November 24, Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Williams, both active members of Calvary church in Greensboro, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Williams first thought they would spend the day quietly at home, but the relatives and close friends of Mrs. Williams planned otherwise. Those who did the planning notified Mrs. Williams that a group of the family connections would be there at the evening hour to help them celebrate, and so it was a real celebration. Early in the evening a number of the Calvary church people called to wish them much happiness on their wedding anniversary. Later in the evening still others came and at about 9 o'clok Mr. and Mrs. Williams were really reminded that there had been a wedding twenty-five years ago. Miss Mary Clapp, sister of Mrs. Williams, presided at the piano and played the accompaniment for Mr. Bynum Clapp, who sang "I Love You Truly." And then, to the strains of the wedding music, Miss Mary Wills McCulloch and Mr. N. W. Kirkman, two of the attendants at the marriage, came into the room and took their places, one on the right and the other on the left of the pastor of Calvary church. At this time the wedding music announced in no uncertain tones the arrival of the bride and groom. Then the minister said: "Dearly beloved, twenty-five years ago this man and this woman launched their bark on the sea of matrimony. In so far as we are able to determine, the journey has brought them happiness, peace and joy. The community in which they live has been greatly blessed by their presence, and all with whom they have come in contact have found life richer because of their association. And now, after twenty-five years, we, their friends, have assembled here to congratulate them on the success that has come to them and to express our appreciation of their lives. And at the same time we have come to wish them well on the remainder of the journey of life and to invoke the Divine blessings upon them that the remaining years may be sweeter and richer than the years that are past." This ceremony was followed by an earnest prayer. Following this, the group found its way to the dining room where delightful refreshments were served. At the close of the activities, all went away devoutly wishing for them many more pleasant anniversaries.

MARRIED

Easter-Hamilton

Miss Juanita Easter and Mr. Ernest M. Hamilton, popular young couple of Lexington, were united in marriage at the home of the writer on the evening of November 3.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Easter, of Burliugton, but had made her home here for some time with her grandfather, the late John A. Easter. Mr. Hamilton is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hamilton, of Lexington. He is an employe of the Hoover Chair Company and is a faithful member and capable official of the First Methodist Protestant church, of which the bride is likewise a leading member.

This young couple has our best wishes for a long and happy life together.

TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS ANSWERED AT STATE COLLEGE

Will the use of artificial light increase egg production?

This method of stimulating production is being used with success in many parts of the country. The use of artilcial lights is to lengthen the feeding hours which will increase mash consumption and this will naturally increase egg production. The lights should be so regulated that the birds have from 12 to 14 hours a day in which to eat. Be sure that the entire house is well lighted. Two 40-watt bulbs for each 400 square feet of floor space will give sufficient light, provided that each bulb has a reflector about 16 inches in diameter and four inches deep. Extension Circular No. 158 gives the various systems of lighting most commonly used and this can be secured free upon application to the Agricultural Editor at State College.

Who pays the processing tax on cotton?

This tax is paid by the consumer when any product manufactured from cotton is purchased. It is added to the manufactured article before it is sold to the retail merchant. The rate is 4.2 cents a pound net weight of cotton used in the manufactured article. The average amount paid by the consumer is about 8 cents on sheets, 3½ cents on a work shirt, 8¼ cents on a pair of overalls, and about 1 cent per yard on unbleached muslin.

In writing the article for the first page of the Herald, the editor made the statement that he would not rave as much over subscriptions this year as he did last year as chairman of the Herald committee, and right after that there came a letter from Rev. H. F. Fogleman containing twenty dollars. And it came in the good old-fashioned way, too, just plain subscriptions, paid in advance. And to our way of thinking there is no way quite so acceptable as a yearly subscription. When you get a yearly subscription you know what to depend on, it is certain for a whole year. Well, Brother Fogleman takes the lead and has set the pace for the rest of the folks. Keep it up, Brother Fogleman, and let the rest of the pastors fall in line.

In issuing license plates for automobiles, the governor of North Carolina is given tag number one. Since Dr. R. M. Andrews, the president of the Annual Conference, handed in the first dollar on subscriptions under the new management, it is very fitting that he should be classified as number one. How significant it is for the President to be number one! So, Dr. Andrews is given authority, so far as the new management of the Herald is concerned, to get a license plate and put it on his car and let it say, Number One for the Methodist Protestant Herald.

And our First Church at Burlington made a good start for the Herald this week. That progressive layman, T. T. Stafford, ordered some Heralds to be sent in a bundle last week and he says they went like hot cakes, so he is ordering a larger number this week. Then the progressive pastor, Dr. Paschall, rushed in a good big check, so Burlington is in the race.

But do not forget also that Rev. Earl A. Cook, the hustler from Roberta, is in the race. In fact he and his people take second place this week. If they keep on like they have started, they will give somebody a race. Look for the picture of their church on another page of the paper this week and remember what they have done. While I cannot mention all by name, I must say a word about the charge that is in third place at the top of this column, namely, Anderson circuit. While their check was not as large as some others, yet on a percentage basis it counted for more than some others, so there they are in third place. Let the good work go on. New quotas have been made and if there is any error about them, notify us. Several changes were made in boundaries and we have done our best to make the adjustments in cases where there were changes.

Remember that on account of Thanksgiving we go to print a day early this week. If we did not get your money or your report we will get it next week.

The New Pastor and the New Charge

By action of the last Annual Conference more than 30 ministers in our conference have new charges and the same number of charges have new pastors. Since those who have not already moved will be doing so this week, it seems that it might be well for us to have a few suggestions that will apply equally to the new pastor and the new charge. It is true that the editor is at a disadvantage in making these suggestions, since he, himself, is also a pastor. But some things are everlastingly true and it makes very little difference who it is that reminds us of them.

The pastor occupies a peculiar relationship to his people. He is their spiritual adviser and their friend in times of sorrow and loss. This enables the true minister to form very close and lasting friendships. When the pastor must leave the people that he has been associated with for a number of years, it quite frequently gives him the feeling of sadness and loneliness that the average laymen do not understand. When the minister and his family go to the new charge, quite frequently there is a feeling that they will never have as good friends again as they had when they were on the former charge. The laymen on the new charge can do a great deal to relieve that feeling on the part of the minister and his family. If the house is warm when the new family arrives and if there is a table set and some appetizing things on it, and if there is a hearty greeting on the part of the people, with frequent calls at the parsonage to inquire about the needs of the new family, then it will not be long until the minister and his family will be talking among themselves about what a delightful people they have and the minister will be able to take up his new work with a zeal that he could not have under other circumstances.

But there is another side to this question. The people on the charge many times feel that they will never have another pastor quite so good as the one they have had to give up. It is the high privilege of the new pastor to convince them that he wants to be as good and as helpful as any pastor that they have ever had. He can do this, not by speaking lightly of the virtues of the former pastor but by showing such a concern about his new people as will make them feel that they are safe with such a leader. While the new pastor will think many times of the people he left behind, yet he must immediately begin to think in terms of his new people. If we were asked to say in one short sentence what is the most important thing for the pastor to do in order to have a happy and successful pastorate, after more than 20 years in the pastorate, we would say, Love the people. That is, be concerned about them. Rejoice with them in their successes and weep with them in their sorrows. Spare not yourself, brother pastor, in making the people feel that you are one of them, and that you have come not to be ministered unto but to minister to them. It is a commendable thing for the people to show kindness to their minister and his family, but the minister and his family must realize one thing; namely, that they are there to serve and not to be pampered. With the right understanding on the part of both pastor and people, a year of success is almost certain.

May every pastor be the best pastor this year that the charge has ever had, and may the people this year be the best that the pastors have ever served.

A Few Words About Subscriptions

The new management of the Herald feels that the question of subscriptions is of sufficient importance to justify the use of part of the first page of the paper this week for a brief discussion of the question.

When the committee met recently it was decided that the new management would not use the same system that had been used formerly of marking certain people as "Regular," their papers to continue indefinitely. While there is some merit in the system, yet it has some serious disadvantages. If it did not cost anything to print the paper and there were no mailing charges, then it would be a most delightful thing to have everybody on a regular list and just let the paper continue right on from year to year. But we have not found any such way of getting the paper printed. After we pass the 1500 mark, it costs two cents to print each copy, and before we reach the fifteen hundred mark it costs more than four cents for each copy. While a great many people pay for their paper very promptly, there are others who are now from four to five years in arrears. With some of them the amount has become so large that it will be exceedingly difficult for them to pay it at one time, and it may be difficult for them to catch up, paying in installments. With some it has been a lack of money during the depression, and with others it has been a question of neglect. Now the new management of the paper feels that it is not fair to the paper to have to carry this extra load, and that it is not fair to the subscriber to let him get so far behind that it makes it hard for him ever to catch up. Then, too, with the system that we use for the mailing list, it will make much more work for the bookkeeper to keep up with the markings on a "Regular" list. So what we want to do is to send at the beginning of the month a card to each subscriber whose subscription will expire during the month, reminding him that his subscription will expire on a given date and request that he renew promptly. Surely, no one need get offended at that. When we buy from a store, or from any other kind of a business house, we receive reminders occasionally, and why should not the new management of the HERALD start in from the start with the best business methods that they can find? If the paper is to continue, one thing is certain,—it must be able to reduce the deficit in printing. We are hoping that the plan we have agreed upon will do that very thing.

But the label on your paper tells you when your subscription expires, and until we can get our new system to working, please do not wait for any reminder; but either send your money in, or hand it to your pastor or to the HERALD Agent of your church. Please make checks payable to METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, as we have a stamp with this on it that we can use in the bank.

And before closing this article let us say that those sending in money need not designate any part of it as for the printers and any part for future subscriptions. When the Annual Conference bought the HERALD, it bought the mailing list and all accounts on subscriptions, making plans at the same time to pay the printers the accumulated deficit through the McCulloch Memorial Fund, about which we will hear more this week. So just send in your subscription and the bookkeeper will give you credit just the same as if the paper had not been sold. Those who paid in advance the latter part of the past conference year will get their papers right on, just the same as if the paper had not been sold.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. LINDLEY

Should Sermons Be Written?

It is generally agreed, I think, that the public speaker of today must know what he is going to say before he says it. The practice of trusting to spontaneous inspiration in the pulpit belongs to a past age. Preparation of the sermon is fully conceded, so it only remains a matter as to the best form of that preparation. Some ministers write their sermons in full and read or memorize them; others prepare their messages only in thought arrangement, while still others, and perhaps a greater number, rely upon a written outline and rather full notes to guide them in the delivery of the sermon. In this article I am favoring the practice of writing sermons; nevertheless, we shall consider both sides of the question.

Here are some objections to writing the sermon:

1. It takes too much time. Pastors are busy and hardly have time to select and outline their sermons, consequently, there is hardly sufficient time to write out the messages in full.

2. Written sermons are not flexible and adaptable. They must be given as they are or not at all. They cannot be modified, let down, or otherwise changed to meet the felt need of the hour. Often the occasion and the sermon do not fit very well and the speaker wants to lighten or simplify the discourse, but if the sermon is already "cut and dried" there is little he can do about it. The speaker likes to be free to modify his thought and words to suit the feelings and demands of the congregation.

3. Delivering a written sermon presents a problem; it must either be read or given from memory. The former method is mechanical; most ministers feel like apologizing for reading a sermon word for word; while to memorize requires a great deal of time, besides, it taxes one's powers of recollection.

Still, more sermons should be written, and here are the reasons:

1. Only by writing can we prepare and give the most finished sermon. The written sermon is free from cheap, trashy, incomplete sentences that characterize the "spontaneous" discourse. There is a great need for sound, stately, significant sentences. No amount of little common words thrown together in moments of excitement can be compared with elegant, forceful sentences such as may be achieved by careful writing. Writing a sermon is the only way of being sure of the best selection of words. In preparing an address or article one needs a good dictionary and a book of synonyms at his side. These, of course, he can have in his study but cannot reach for them while delivering the speech. And so, the need for a finished product — good sentences, wise choice of words, and effective paragraph structure — these come only by writing the sermon.

2. The thought quality can be greatly improved by writing. I have often found that new and better thoughts will come to mind as I proceed to write. One idea gives birth to another until some of the very best points of the discussion are those that were not even dreamed of as I began preparing the discourse. I find, too, that there is seldom any lack of material when I begin to write; more thoughts come to mind than one can really use. In fact, much of the material has to be thrown aside because there is not time enough to give all the good related material that suggests itself as one goes on with the writing. One sentence seems to stimulate another; one idea leads to another until it becomes a matter of selecting the best for actual use in the completed sermon. Repetitions can be avoided and the whole discussion can be planned toward a climax. Unless you can write a sermon on a subject, perhaps there is no sermon there.

3. The written sermon sets one's nerves at ease. There is nothing much more trying than to be wondering all the time if you are going to be able to say what you want to as the hour approaches. It is very trying also to proceed through the discourse without any assurance of the right words coming to mind. Much of the nerve-wracking experience of preaching centers right here—the awful feeling of uncertainty of words in the face of a tremendous responsibility! But such is the preacher's plight unless he is well settled as to what he is going to say, while on the other hand, he can rest more calmly, be himself, and save his nerves by having the sermon already prepared ready to deliver. The usual method requires too much thinking on one's feet—thinking that should have been done in the quiet of the study at home. Under the pressure of trying to do this thinking in the pulpit the preacher is likely to become an easy victim to haste, excitement and disintegrating emotions that mar the power and beauty of his words.

4. By writing the sermon the pastor will avoid many unfortunate words he later wishes he had never said. I have made so many unwise statements in the pulpit that I am afraid to trust myself to the impulse of the moment. Under the heat of enthusiasm one is tempted to say things that he would not, under cooler conditions, even think of saying. Many mistakes, often of lasting injury, date from these unplanned, unwritten experiences; but writing the sermon will avoid this.

5. Written sermons serve as records. The minister who writes and keeps his sermons can always tell what he has preached and when; he also can know what poems, quotations and illustrations have been used. Likewise his methed will save the preacher from petty repetitions and overworked phrases. Most of us get into the habit of using a certain expression which becomes distasteful to the audience. But by writing out the sermons all such "hobbies" can be eliminated and a wholesome variety in style and structure be achieved. Thus progress, variety and originality must depend very largely upon writing for their realization.

Now in conclusion note these three suggestions: write sermons whether you expect to deliver them in the written form or not. It is fine practice to achieve the points mentioned above even though you do not follow them to the letter. Then, revise the written manuscript with a view of making it sound natural, inserting sentences here and there that sound more spontaneous. Finally, remember an audience that has been used to the "free hand" speaking must be cultivated to appreciate the more formal and finished sermon. Our cheap, almost jazzy methods have caused many to look for nothing else in the services, yet deeper in the appreciation of the people lies a response to more dignity and beauty, and I know of no better place to start the drive for a fined worship than in the pulpit itself. More care in the writing and preparation of sermons will go a long way in this direction.

GROUP INSURANCE FOR MINISTERS

I am delighted to see the interest of "Layman" who appeared in last week's issue of the Herald on the subject of this article. It is hoped that these columns will "ring with the echo" from other laymen. This interest will become contagious, and when next conference convenes there should be assembled a more reflective and better informed group of laymen as well as ministers, to make plans to better provide for the family of the departed ministers. These men applying their experienced business brain to the problem gives us hopes of a satisfactory solution to it.

During the discussion, to which "Layman" refers, a motion prevailed creating a committee to study the group insurance plan, and report their findings to the 1935 conference. The writer, as a member of the committee, will appreciate it if "Layman" will get in touch with him and give him whatever information and assistance he can in finding a satisfactory plan.

It is our purpose to see what other conferences and churches are doing along this line, as well as study the plans of different companies. Any assistance which any one can give will be appreciated.

SHARING TOGETHER

When Paul wrote his letter to the Galatians and said, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ," he was pronouncing a blessing to be received rather than a burden to be shirked. Burden-bearing in love to our Lord and fellowman is not a thing irksome to be borne, but a joy to be shared. Our Lord told us that much when He said, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for my yoke is sweet and my burden is light." That is the meaning and the measure of the cross. Christ nailed to the cross may never have redeemed you and me, but, at any rate, He redeemed the cross. Up till the time they nailed Him to it, the cross was a symbol of a curse, the sign of condemnation. Since that time and because our Lord was nailed upon it, the cross has come to be a symbol of security, an instrument of adornment, a token of victory. Witness the cross as we see it on thousands of places of prayer, praise and worship; witness it as an instrument of adornment on our watch chains and other chains of precious metals worn for pleasure and adornment. Christ redeemed the cross and turned it from a curse to a cure, from defeat to victory, from disgrace to honor, and, by all this, we are taught that sharing together in Christ is a blessing to be sought and not a burden to be shirked.

One other concrete fact. In the Garden of Eden God created the family—"male and female created he them"—and thus the home was instituted. From that day till this the burden of the home has been the burden of each member of the home and the sorrow of the home has been the sorrow of each member thereof. God created the home as an institution, that those who live therein might have a common burden to be borne, and a common blessing to be shared. And this has been the character of institutions since that day. Individually, we stand alone and, as such, each must bear his own burden. Collectively or institutionally, we stand together and thus learn to bear one another's burdens. Go further in history. God created the State that social, economic and political groups might unite to bear the burdens of Statehood and thus be drawn together in the bonds of patriotism; but for the burden of the State mankind would not have known the blessings and the benefits of patriotism.

And then God created the church that men and women might share the burdens and the blessings of spiritual experience and triumph. The church is a spiritual body seeking to build on earth the kingdom of God, an institution of service and of love in which all may have a part and all may share. We cannot share together unless we have institutions in common. We must have a common load to put our shoulders beneath, in order that our hearts may rejoice in a common achievement and blessing. Thus God has seen fit to unfold before us the purpose and the power of the church in order that through the institutions of the church He may bind us as His children together and unite us in closer and loving fellowship to Himself. As far as I know, all churches, certainly all evangelical churches, seeking with force and fervor to build up the kingdom of God on earth, have five and only five institutions or enterprises growing out of, and at the same time constituting the church, through which God is building His kingdom on earth and bringing us with the grip of His own power into closer fellowship with one another and with Him, our Father. I refer to:

1st. The local church.
2nd. The missionary interests or institutions.
3rd. The educational interests or institutions.
4th. The publishing interests or institutions.
5th. The benevolent interests or institutions.

This may be crude in its conception, but it is a statement of the bare fact that the church of whatever name or creed seems to have developed these five enterprises or institutions in order that through them we mary share together our fervor and friendship in sustaining the local church; our zeal and our passion in pointing the way even to the uttermost parts; of seeking mutual intelligence and learning that we may bear our burdens with fortitude and with knowledge; that we may have the printed page and distribute the message of love and of hope and thus share our common thoughts and experience; and, finally, that together we may share the burden, the blessing and the privilege of caring for the aged, the impotent and the needy, the fatherless and the motherless.

God has not created these institutions that they may be a blight nor a burden, but, through them and our support of them, we may share together the joy of the heart, the passion of the soul, the light of the intellect, the pursuit of literature and the unselfishness of benevolence and charity. We, Congregational-Christians, shall come together and completely merge as a body, a brotherhood and a sisterhood, if and when we come to share with each other the tasks and the trials as well as the triumphs and the trophies of these, our blessed and hallowed institutions.—J. O. Atkinson, in The Christian Sun.

THE PASTOR AND HIS FAMILY

The pastor and his family perhaps have the hardest life to live. People expect so much of them. They must go to everything they are invited to, do anything anyone may ask them, and face so many problems that confront them. People seem to be unaware of the fact that they have to work and live the same as anyone else does. They should be able to drive their car on dishwater and live on nothing. So many people make the mistake in saying all the preacher has to do is to eat and sleep, and the only thing he is working for is his salary.

He should visit them and bring his family along, although in some cases people only seem to want to have something to grumble about because they do not in reality care about their visits. He should also visit them when they are sick, even if they have only a cold, although the pastor may not know about them being sick. No matter what the family does, they are criticized.

The pastor's children should be the best and never do anything, although they are watched, and usually the preacher's children are the meanest.

But why shouldn't they be, moving from place to place, coming in contact with all kinds of children. We children always dread the first Sunday at a new church. People always want to get a good view of the pastor and his family. There is always a large crowd and the people must certainly get a good look, for the children mostly stand up for the view and the adults are raised somewhat from their seats.

In moving about we come in contact with all kinds of people. Mother says she had no idea there were so many different kinds of people until she began moving from place to place.

Now that we have seen only a few of the problems of the family's life, let us consider the good part; although I cannot see much of a good part. Father enjoys his work and Mother enjoys and tries hard to help him.

As the children of the pastor, we cannot find much joy. Having to go along with Father and Mother when they visit where there are no children is not very much fun. But we have had the pleasure of being allowed to stay at home since we are growing larger. A PASTOR'S DAUGHTER.

REV. PARKER HOLMES RETIRED AT LAST CONFERENCE

Rev. Parker Holmes joined the Western North Carolina Conference at Greensboro in 1889, and 45 years later in the same city this popular and effective itinerant Methodist pastor retired from active service. His has been a rather unusual record. On seven pastoral charges he remained the full four years and on Central Terrace, Winston-Salem, his last charge, six years. He was presiding elder of the Marion district a full quadrennium.

His pastoral charges in order of service, if we mistake not, were as follows: Stokesdale circuit, Matthews circuit, Asheboro station, Brevard Street (Charlotte), Mooresville, Thomasville, First church (Salisbury), North Wilkesboro, Newton, Marion district, Forest City, Walkertown, Central Terrace (Winston-Salem).

Brother Holmes expects to establish his permanent residence at Forest City, where he has a host of friends, as he has wherever he has lived. His gift in making friends was truly marvelous. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes have contributed largely to the medical fraternity. A son of theirs and a daughter also are physicians and a son-in-law is also a doctor. These three doctors each and all honor their chosen profession.

No member of the Western North Carolina conference in the last forty-five years has been more thoroughly appreciated than Parker Holmes.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

(Brother Holmes married a good Methodist Protestant, we believe, a Miss Dwiggins, from Flat Rock church in Guilford county.—Editor.)

REV. E. L. BALLARD DID NOT WRITE IT

Some days ago somebody said, "What did you think of Mr. Ballard's article last week?" We said, "He did not have an article in last week's HERALD." The person said, "Why, don't you remember the article signed 'E. L. B.'?" We said, "Yes, but those initials belonged to someone else."

Moral: If you write a good thing and want to get credit for it, sign your name to it. If you write a bad thing and do not want someone else to bear the censure, sign your name to it.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Why Not Charge, Rev. C. H. Hill, Pastor

We held the first quarterly conference of this circuit at Flag Springs church. The charge now consists of Pleasant Hill, New Zion, New Hope, Flag Springs of the original Why Not charge, with two churches from the Denton charge, Piney Grove and Cid.

There was a good spirit of fellowship evident in the conference. The pastor's salary was fixed for the year, plan of the appointments decided upon, and we believe a good year's work will be done there this year. In fact, I am expecting better things of these churches; they hardly know their strength or their day of opportunity.

Welch Memorial Church, Rev. J. D. Williams, Pastor

We enjoyed our visit here with these people. They had renovated their interior or redecorated the walls of the auditorium, since I visited them last time, and it certainly made a difference. The effect is really fine. This is Dr. Williams' fourth year here and he appears to be getting on splendidly. The church paid all its annual conference claims in full, also paid their pastor. That speaks well for them and also shows how they like their pastor and what they think of the annual conference. I wonder sometimes how some churches can ever let the annual conference know how much they love it when they do so little for the interests of the conference. I am still of the opinion that here is a church with a great opportunity for expansion.

A Seven-Point Program of Recovery

Below I am giving the recommendations which were made in my message to the last annual conference. These set forth some of the things I hope our people will do more of than is now done by some of our church members:

(1) That our people become more familiar with the mind of our Lord as it is revealed in the Holy Scriptures; these testify of Him. We cannot afford to neglect our Bible, as the manner of some church members is. We propose, therefore, that our pastors endeavor to secure a pledge from their people to daily search the Scriptures, and that a record of the number of those pledging to do this be kept in the church, wherever practicable.

(2) We recommend that there be organized in every church where possible, a band of members who shall pledge themselves to try to win some soul to Christ each day. That this band or group be designated as the "Won by One Band." Since not half of the population of our nation is yet nominally Christian, and many of those in the churches never have experienced the joy of winning a soul, we urge that this phase of evangelism be kept constantly before the minds of our people.

(3) Just now there is much talk of war. Most of us know by experience or by observation the horrors of war. The war spirit is unchristian; its methods are barbarous, yea, inhuman; destroying the finest youth of our race. We hope that there shall come a strong pronouncement on this subject by this conference. There was such a resolution.

(4) We urge all Christian people to renew their fight against the legalized liquor traffic. We must oppose this traffic whether carried on by bootlegger or by our government. And since no nation ever made itself great by making its citizens drunk, we exhort all of you to do your best to prevent Old Glory from flying over legalized saloons again.

(5) Let us try to learn more fully the meaning of our Lord when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and since there is so much need for money to carry on our benevolent enterprises and educational institutions, we urge both pastors and people to try to enlist more of our people in the practice of systematic and proportionate giving.

(6) We are pleading for more loyalty on the part of our people. By some means those of our membership who know no difference between the church they joined and every other church in their attendance and financial support must be brought to a consciousness of their responsibility to their church. In joining it they pledged to support its benevolent enterprises, to co-opereate with its members, to attend its services, and to co-operate with their pastors in every good work. We recommend that pastors, when studying their membership lists, give special attention to those who have neglected to perform their vows and try to win them back to the church, and to secure a fuller enlistment of all who are in any way indifferent to the claims of their church.

(7) We reaffirm our faith in Jesus Christ as the only Savior and Redeemer of the world; and we insist that He be so preached and accepted by both pastor and people.

PASTORS, PLEASE TAKE NOTICE!

Copies of the Herald mailing list have been printed and placed in the hands of Dr. C. W. Bates, Chairman of the Herald Committee, for this year. Dr. Bates will cut these up and mail the parts to the various pastors, this week, if possible. Pastors will please get these lists in the hands of Herald Agents as quickly as possible. Please see those whose subscriptions have expired and try to get a renewal.

THE CRUCIFIED CHRIST

By Rev. W. A. Ledford

"God sent twelve Apostles to the Jews, and one to the Gentiles," some one has said. Paul, the peerless missionary, with the world as his parish, covering so much ground, and touching so many places, could only be a "pilgrim for a night" at many places, but at others he spent right much time. He was anxious to remain at Ephesus until Pentecost, and spent a year and a half in Corinth. To this church he wrote two of his best letters. That he manifested such interest in this church might be partly due to the fact of Aquila and Priscilla living there and sharing their home with him, as did Mary and Martha theirs with Jesus in Bethany.

Corinth was by no means a faultless church. I suspect Antioch pointed proudly to the fact that the disciples were first called Christians there. I doubt Corinth was proud of the fact that modern schisms had their origin there. The late Dr. Peter Ainslie called denominations "the scandal of Christianity," and Paul by no means endorsed them. He gave his own party scant encouragement, and the high sounding words of the Apollos party did not mislead him. The Cephas party of Judaizers, who hounded him from city to city, were not doing the will of Christ. Some think the Christ party, just assumed this title to hide behind in their opposition to Paul's gracious ministry.

The plea of Paul was for unity, peace, and harmony among the disciples at Corinth. He could not harmonize all the divisions with Christ's prayer for oneness among His followers. In these days, when the church is being scrutinized so severely by unfriendly critics, many churchmen find it difficult to justify the existence of more than 200 divisions among the Protestant churches alone in America. Even more inexcusable is the divisions among the different denominations themselves. The feeling is growing that the time is ripe for the larger bodies of Methodism, at least, to become one. I like to think of the Church of Christ "as a mighty army," undivided with the different branches of the church, as so many regiments in that army. I pity those branches who do not co-operate, mingle, or have fellowship with the rest of God's family. That spirit does not represent New Testament religion.

In speaking of his ministry, Paul stressed the testimony and witnessing rather than arguments, logic, homiletics and theology. He thought of himself as an authoritative herald proclaiming a message from the great Head of the Church. The publisher of glad tidings. Jesus spoke of the Apostles being His witnesses unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Paul was anxious that his testimony might be marked with directness and simplicity, rather than clothed in an ornate style and colored with man's wisdom. Prayer, witnessing and testimony are New Testament marks of a religious service.

Some of us feel that Christianity lost a deal in surrendering the testimony meetings, and Methodism neglecting the class meeting. The Oxford Movement will render a great service, if it can persuade this generation to put on the witnessing for Christ services, again. The writer can recall how his own heart would become strangely warm in the class meetings and love feasts of other days. Another helpful moment was when the preacher left his notes, and exhortations, and lifting his face heavenward, and beating his own breast, would tell what his message meant to his own soul. The Scriptures were to him the Oracles of God rather than pious sayings of the saints of old.

Paul would have had an easy time preaching in Corinth, if all the people there had been pushing forward, saying, "We would see Jesus." But the preaching of the Cross was to the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness in Corinth. I have wondered if Paul was ever tempted to take the course of least resistance, when he saw the Jews stumbling over his preaching, and the educated classes, mainly among the Greeks, calling his message sheer madness. But Paul never surrendered righteous principles for policy's sake.

The noble purpose of Daniel has been held up before young people, as their pattern, and the determination of Paul should be the determination of all the ministers of Christ. His theme was neither narrow, nor contracted; but on the contrary, covered all the fullness of God; expresses the Gospel as briefly as does the Golden Rule and the Law and the Prophets. The Gospel is really the life and passion of our Lord. Many an earnest minister has longed with Samuel Medley to speak the matchless word, and sound the glories forth, which in the Savior shine. He may not now, but some day he will be able to do it.

DR. ROWLAND IN FLORIDA

Our good preacher, friend, and brother to everybody, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., is safely put and happily placed in the Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida, where he is to enjoy the blessings of a generous climate and find health, full strength and vigor at the hands of competent physicians, happy surroundings, and be returned to his work and the rest of us in a few months. The Sun's editor journeyed to the sanitarium with the good doctor, and speaks with authority in saying that he is so situated, surrounded and cared for that he is compelled to regain his strength and youthful vigor. We left him in the company of two or three other ministers who were climbing back to health and happiness, and they, with a number of good laymen and Christian friends who manage the institution, will make his surroundings so wholesome and helpful that health will come as the good Lord smiles upon him and compels him to forget the days of poor health and waning strength.—The Christian Sun.

THANKSGIVING DINNER WITH THE GARRETTS

After church services on Thanksgiving morning the family of Rev. T. F. McCulloch and Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Coble and family, and Miss Mary C. McCulloch and the editor and his wife journeyed down in Alamance county to the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett for Thanksgiving dinner. When the editor entered the dining room there was a large cake on the table with twenty-one candles on it, and immediately voices began to sing, "Happy Birthday to You."

All the comment that is necessary concerning the dinner is that Mr. and Mrs. Garrett raise a very fine grade of turkeys.

OUR STORY PAGE

"RAINBOW JANE"

Yes, it's a nickname. It's what everybody in Fernbank calls Jane Harlow. But they speak it gently and lovingly, for there's a brighter look on every face when Jane passes by. And if you ask why they call her "Rainbow Jane," each one will tell you something different, but altogether their stories will make about three answers to your question.

Some one will tell you that Jane puts a rainbow over her life at home, and its hard problems there. Her mother died when Jane was fifteen, and she had to begin right away to be a little mother to the three youngest children. Her father was a hard-working man, but there wasn't much money to spare, and Jane had to think and plan and work hard to make it feed and clothe the family.

Once Sarepta Holden started to call on Jane and pity her on account of her hard lot. But when she got near the house she heard singing. She wondered who it could be, and pretty soon she got where she could look around the corner of the house, and there was Jane, with a handkerchief tied over her head, beating the dust out of the rugs and keeping perfect time as she sang:

"I sing because I'm happy,
I sing because I'm free."

"Well how can that be!" gasped Sarepta, and she turned around and ran home, so as to change her ideas all over before she called on Jane.

Then some will tell you how Jane puts a rainbow over many of the sorrows and troubles of Fernbank. She'd been such a good mother to her own brothers and sisters that she knew what to do when little Marjorie Noyes came down with the croup and her mother was just about distracted because she had never seen anything like that before. And when Mr. Landon, the Sunday school superintendent, was discouraged over the class of young boys, because their teacher had moved away and he thought the class would be broken up, he went and told Jane about it. He didn't really ask her to take the class, for he thought she had enough to do. But Jane understood what he meant, and she smiled up at him and said:

"Why, Mr. Landon, I think I can take the youngsters. Nellie is getting so that she helps me a lot about the housekeeping; and Tom does, when he doesn't forget. And I'm all caught up with my class at high school, if—if you'd like to have me."

"Like to have you!" almost shouted the superintendent, and he went away with a beautiful rainbow in his heart which made him very happy.

But the brightest of all Jane's rainbows is the one that she arches over the future. There's Julia Gilman. She couldn't understand it. She's a girl who sees every obstacle there is in the way, and they all look like Gibraltars to her.

"I don't see how you can sing and be so happy," Julia said to Jane. "It fairly makes me shiver when I see what dreadful things are happening in the world, and tremendous problems we girls have to tackle, if we ever live to be grown-up women."

"That's just what makes me tingle all over with eagerness to get at my life work," said Jane. "I know there are dreadful things happening in the world that are working for right, too. Just think what chances there are for us to help. Oh, I'm glad, glad that I'm a girl right now!"

Up went the rainbow, and even Julia caught some of its radiance.—Girl's World

WHY HE COULDN'T SLEEP

The March winds were howling outside the windows and rattling about the house like wild things, but that was not why Robert could not go to sleep. He was not sick, either; at least his body was not sick; he did not have a fever or the mumps, or the measles, or the whooping cough. His heart was sick, though, because he had quarreled with his very best friend, and then had come home angry, without ever asking to be forgiven. Robert's heart felt as if he might have swallowed a pound of tenpenny nails.

"Daddy!" he called to his father in the next room, and in less than a minute the kind father was there, and Robert had told him the whole story. "And may I get up and go tell Jamie that I am sorry?" Robert finished.

"Yes, you may; you ought to." his father answered, and very kindly helped Robert get his clothes on.

It was cold and dark outside, and it took courage to go out there alone, but Robert had courage to do what he thought was right.

He hoped, though, that he wouldn't meet anybody on the way, and after he got out of his own gate he ran across the street toward Jamie's house; he ran so hard that he ran "plump" into Jamie coming across to ask forgiveness of him. Then the two friends made up their foolish quarrel and loved each other more than ever.

If you have done wrong or had a quarrel, there is but one right way out of it, and that is to ask forgiveness. Just as soon as Robert and Jamie had asked forgiveness of each other, and gone back to bed, they fell fast asleep as happy as could be.—The Child's Gem.

IT COST HIS SOUL

"What is the value of this estate?" said a gentleman to another, with whom he was riding, as they passed a fine mansion surrounded by fair and fertile fields.

"I do not know what it is valued at; I know what it cost its late possessor."

"How much?"

"His soul. Early in life he professed faith in Christ; obtaining a subordinate position in a mercantile establishment, he continued to maintain a reputable religious profession til he became a partner in the firm. Then he gave attention more and more to business and the cares of this world choked the Word. He became exceedingly rich in money, but poor and miserly in soul. Just before he died, he remarked, 'My prosperity has been my ruin.'"—The Elim Evangel.

Clothing and Other Gifts

West End, Greensboro, 10 quarts canned fruits, vegetables and preserves, 1 bushel apples, 3 pocketbooks, 4 hats, 2 cans Pet cream, 1 pair of gloves and some packages of potatoes and turnips; East Liverpool, Ohio, 1 quilt, 3 dresses, 12 pair knickers and 1 pair rompers; Level Cross, Randleman, 31 quarts of canned fruits and vegetables, 1 quart of sausage, 1 busket of lard, 1½ bushels sweet potatoes, 20 pounds of corn meal and 1 cake; Community Church, Thomasville, 18 cakes for school lunches; Brown Summit, 12 brooms, 100 lbs. sugar, 2 bushels sweet potatoes, ½ bushel Irish potatoes and 24 quarts of canned fruits and vegetables; City Schools, High Point, 30 quarts of canned fruits and vegetables, ½ bushel Irish potatoes and 20 packages of cereals; Friendship Station, 1 box clothing, 3½ bushels wheat, 1 bushel corn, 12 bushehls sweet potatoes, 6 bushels Irish potatoes, 2 bushels turnips, 2¾ bushels peanuts, 4¼ bushels oats, 4 pumpkins, 4¾ bushes walnuts, 4 chickens, 1 quart jely, 23 half-gallon cans fruits and vegetables, and 3 quart cans fruit; Sunshine Circle and Junior Department, Winston-Salem, small box of sugor, paper sacks, 1-lb. box crackers, 1-lb. box 4X sugar, 1 can salmon, 9 quarts canned fruits and vegetables, 3 small cans vegetables, 25 handkerchiefs, and 2 dozen pencils; the L. Banks Holt Mfg. Co., Graham, one bale of cloth for boys; the B. M. Holt Plaid Mills, Burlington, one bundle of dress goods; Miss Sallie Smith, Siler City, one coat; Greenwood, Del., one box of clothing; the Biltmore Industries, Asheville, one crate of homespun for boys; the Woman's Auxiliary, Kannapolis, 13 dresses, 7 coats and 5 pairs of pants.

Quite a lot of produce came in yesterday and that is being listed for next week's report. One good brother in writing about the gathering of the produce at his church said, "I never saw happier faces as they brought their gifts. One colored family caught the spirit and brought two half-gallon cans of fruit." He closed by saying, "I am about worn out, but the Children's Home is still on my heart. God bless you in your noble work."

We are profoundly grateful for all those who made this good report of cash and substance possible. There are many of the offerings above deserving of special mention Look over them and make your own comments. But note especially the one from Roseneath. Perhaps there is not a weaker church in the conference, and yet they sent in a fine offering. God bless and prosper all who have given.

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

REPORTS CARRIED OVER FROM LAST WEEK

Owing to the fact that we went to press a day early last week on account of Thanksgiving, there were several reports and some subscriptions that came too late for last week's issue. We are running these reports this week even though some announcements are out of date.

WHAT SOME OF THE ORIGINAL AND CONTINUOUS SUBSCRIBERS SAY

From Mebane, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Smith write: "The Herald has been in our home for the past forty years and we have enjoyed each and every issue."

From Greensboro Miss Mary Wills writes: "The Herald has been coming to our home since its first issue. My father was a subscriber to its predecessors as long as they were in publication."

Mrs. J. H. Moton, of High Point, says: "Mr. Moton was among the first subscribers when the paper was first started. We have been continuous subscribers from that time. It has always been a welcome and most enjoyable paper in our home."

From High Point, Rt. 2, Mrs. J. E. Welborne writes: "I have been reading the Herald ever since it started. My father, Rev. D. A. Highlll took it as long as he lived, and after I have married I have taken it."

From 2054 N. Urban Street, Winston-Salem, Mrs. Fannie Barnes Glasgow writes: "I have been a reader of the Herald for forty years. Was a reporter from Corinth church, Littleton circuit, for 28 years or more. I was Fannie Barnes at that time. Seven years ago I married A. S. Glasgow and came to Winston-Salem and am still reading it." (Mrs. Glasgow still reads the Herald, even though she is now a Presbyterian.)

From Rev. B. M. Williams, Efland: "I have read the Herald continuously for the past forty years and I hope to continue to read it as long as I live."

Mrs. John W. Moore, Route 4, Greensboro, says: "My husband, John W. Moore, took the Herald as long as he lived. He passed away in 1931 and I still get the paper in his name. I do not feel that I can get along without it. I look for the paper each week as a help to me."

CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD NOTICE

All ministers who have not paid their Brotherhood assessment will please do so at once as the amount must be distributed to the beneficiaries before the Christmas holidays. Six ministers died during the past conference year. Every man employed by the conference is to pay one dollar for each $500 salary received: that is, for each minister who has died. If your salary is $1,000 you are supposed to pay $12. If you can't pay the entire amount, please pay what you can. Make checks payable to R. A. Hunter, treasurer.

R. A. HUNTER,
Treasurer Conference Brotherhood.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY SAMPLES BEING MAILED

Materials are being mailed to pastors, Sunday school superintendents, Christian Endeavor leaders, and other young people's leaders. Place your order at once so that your package will reach you before the Christmas mail rush. If you failed to receive samples, let us know and we will send them post haste. Order from the Board of Christian Education, 3267 W. Liberty Avenue, Room 208, Pittsburgh (16), Pa.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Haw River, Glen Raven Charge.—We are very glad to have our former pastor return for another year. He filled his regular appointment here Sunday. We hope to make this year better than last year.

The writer had the privilege of attending this Annual Conference. I've attended quite a number, but I think this Conference was the best. Both pastor and laymen held higher hopes for the church than usual. I'd like to suggest that the laymen put forth greater efforts to raise the Conference budget in full. Let each church make greater efforts to raise the budgets. If we will all co-operate, I'm sure we will accomplish much.

T. S. COBLE.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—We are more than glad to have our dear pastor and family back with us for another year. We would feel greatly lost without them. We thank Mr. C. H. Jones, our delegate, for the return of our pastor. Mr. Williams filled his first appointment the fourth Sunday at 3 p. m. He preached a splendid Thanksgiving sermon. An offering was taken for the Children's Home. Hope this will be the best year that Chestnut Ridge has ever had.

Come on, folks, and put your shoulders to the wheel and keep it turning; if you don't, the wheel will surely stop.

The first quarterly conference will meet with the Efland church Saturday, December 15, 1934, at 2 p. m. Important business, planning for the new year. Hope to have full attendance, especially of the official members. If anyone wishes to renew or subscribe for the Methodist Protestant Herald, see the writer, who is acting as our agent.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

First Church, Charlotte.—"The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad." We are grateful to Him, to Dr. Andrews and the Annual Conference for the return of our good pastor, for Rev. G. H. Hendry is indeed a good pastor and a good preacher. We appreciate the good work that he and Mrs. Hendrey have done here and we are sure that there are even greater things in store for us in the coming year.

At this Thanksgiving season we have much to be thankful for. For the past 11 weeks there has been one of the greatest evangelistic campaigns ever held in this city, held in a great tabernacle a few blocks from our church—the Ham-Ramsey revival services. Fifty new members have been received into our church and the membership has been greatly blessed and revived. Twenty-five members of our church sang in the great chorus choir and ten members served as secretaries in the services.

Revival services will begin in our church on Wednesday evening with the pastor doing the preaching. On Thursday evening a great Thanksgiving service will be held.

We are looking forward to next Sunday when Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and a group of children from our Children's Home will be with us at the morning service.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Scarboro in the death of Mr. Scarboro's mother, Mrs. Bettie Scarboro. The funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. G. H. Hendry. Burial was in Concord. Mrs. Scarboro, who was 84 years old, was one of the oldest members of our church. She was a good Christian woman and leaves to her children and other relatives and a host of friends a blessed memory.

REPORTER.

First Church, Winston-Salem—First Church, Winston, is very glad to welcome Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Bates back, and, of course, their two daughters, also.

Dr. Bates' message Sunday contained suggestions as to how we may make a bigger, better, and more worth while church. If these good suggestions are followed, it will help greatly in the spiritual upbuilding of the church. After all, that is the most essential and most needed element in any church, anywhere, today. If the spiritual life is what it should be, there's no doubt but that the other phases of the cure will be well carried on.

With co-operation from all the members of the church, Dr. Bates will make a record this year that he may be proud to present to Conference. Without that co-operation nothing can be attained. It is our belief that this co-operation has already begun on this new year, and that it will continue.

A Leadership Training School is being planned in our church for the first of the calendar year. We hope this school is going to be a great success.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

Yarborough Charge.—It has been a pleasant surprise since I came to this work. The people at both churches are interested in religious work, and are willing to take hold and go ahead with the work of the church.

The young people of Harmony have already asked that a C. E. society be organized. With people of that type to work with, there is no reason why we should not have a good year together.

I was at Yarborough's Chapel last Sunday. The attendance was not so large but everyone was interested in the work of the church. There are a number of young people with much talent in this church. I trust that with the co-operation of these people we will be able to do much good together.

K. G. HOLT, Pastor.

Friendship Station.—It has been some time since a report has gone in from our church, but we are still alive. Friends of Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Shelton were very sorry to see them leave. Their short stay with us was in many respects a pleasant one. Rev. Mr. Shelton's straightforward sermons, careful walk, and firm stand against evil was a blessing. The quiet, gentle disposition of Mrs. Shelton made us love her greatly, and the jovial children, how we shall miss them! But we were so very fortunate in being able to secure the service of Rev. W. D. Reed for the incoming year, and we trust for many more. He and Mrs. Reed come to us for the third time, and how happy we were to welcome them. They have always been a friend to us.

Our first quarterly conference was held Saturday, November 24. The work of the church was discussed and outlined. On the following Sunday a helpful sermon was delivered on the subject, "How to Be Successful."

For the first time our church sent a "Harvest Home" offering to our Children's Home. This amounted to $35. Our collection last Sunday was far above the average. This goes to the Home also.

Rev. Mr. Hagar, of Salem M. E. church, brought us a splendid sermon Thanksgiving evening.

The S. S., under the direction of the new superintendent, Oscar Hatley, is planning a Christmas play.

Our pastor and wife are spending this week with their son at Brown Summit.

W. F. Hatley, one of our best members, continues in feeble health.

May this coming Christmas season be a joyous one to the Herald and its readers.

REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—The first quarterly conference will meet with the Efland church Saturday, December 15, at 2 p. m. A full attendance is desired to plan the year's work.

Sincerely,

B. M. WILLIAMS.

First Church, High Point.—We are in the company of those who are glad to welcome the same pastor back for the new conference year. We had no expectation that a change would occur; indeed High Point might not have been a safe place of residence for the conference president if Rev. J. C. Madison had been sent elsewhere.

There is a splendid spirit of co-operation manifested here. Our pastor has the happy faculty with St. Paul of commending the church for some good it has done before he begins to ask for other works, and he usually gets results.

A unique worship service was held at this church at 8 o'clock Thanksgiving morning. Even at this early hour the attendance was fair. A group each of boys and girls from our Children's Home sang during the service. The boys, singing in unison, were especially good.

On Friday, November 30, at 8 p. m., Circle No. 3 of the Woman's Auxiliary sponsored a splendid entertainment when Miss Eleanor Young, a graduate of High Point College, and Emerson School of Oratory of Boston, Mass., gave a series of readings in a most artistic manner. Miss Young seemed to find no difficulty in transforming herself rapidly from one to another of the several characters she impersonated in the three short plays which she gave.

The former Baraca class of this church has changed its name to the W. P. Pickett Memorial Men's Bible class. It was not my privilege to know Mr. Pickett personally, but I think I saw tears in the eyes of the strong men who told me about his many labors of love the day the class changed its name to memorialize this friend of theirs. They said they never realized the strength and greatness of this man until he was gone, but that now it keeps four men busy to do for this church what Mr. W. P. Pickett did so quietly and unostentatiously. He has left fragrant memories.

We are sorry to report that the widow of Mr. W. P. Pickett had a very severe fall three weeks ago, and although no bones were broken, she is still unable to walk comfortably, and is a patient at Burrus Memorial hospital. She is a faithful member of this church, and her speedy recovery is hoped for.

Of much interest to this church and its friends was the marriage of Miss Aline Vance, elder daughter of Mrs. C. W. Vance, to Mr. Hubert Barrier, which was solemnized recently.

A right hearty welcome is extended to two newcomers to our cradle roll, the newest of them being the day-old infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Vance, and granddaughter of Mrs. C. W. Vance and Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds.

The other little lady is eight days old and has a name, which is Charlene Humphreys, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. I. Humphreys.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson.—We are starting a new conference year with Rev. C. L. Grant our pastor. We are very glad indeed to have him back to serve this charge another year.

Mr. Grant delivered a helpful sermon the fourth Sunday, taking for his text Romans 10:10. His subject was "Ashamed of Jesus."

The Sunday school is moving along nicely. The Christian Endeavor has put a bulletin board in the hall of the church.

This church paid $45 on the debt of the parrsonage. We have put new lights in the church.

A Christmas program is to be given at this church Monday night, December 24.

MILDRED GREEN, Reporter.

Concord.—We congratulate Lebanon church, High Point, on securing for their pastor Rev. J. M. Morgan, who has served us faithfully and successfully for the past three years. His many friends here wish for him and his family even greater success in their new work.

As we start our new year we are glad to welcome Rev. D. I. Garner and his family to our church. Our earnest desire is that the new pastor and his wife may enjoy the fellowship of the people here to that extent whereby all of us may profit both spiritually and socially. Large congregations have been present for the splendid sermons which Rev. Mr. Garner has given us for the past two Sundays. Communion service was observed last Sunday with the largest number in years taking communion.

B. F. Waddell entertained the church officials at an enjoyable oyster supper last Thursday evening. During the business session plans were discussed concerning the new year's work. Brother Waddell and his board of stewards are putting real effort and enthusiasm into the financial work of the church, and we are confidently expecting another good year.

On Friday night the Young People's class also enjoyed an oyster supper given by their teacher, Ralph Waddell. Plans were made to divide this class and organize a Young Men's and a Young Ladies' class. We feel this plan will be more satisfactory and we are looking forward to greater things for our young people.

Choir rehearsals which had been discontinued for some time are now being held weekly on Tuesday nights under the able direction of Mrs. C. D. Sides. Our double quartet, under the leadership of L. R. Wensil, with Willie Furr, pianist, are also rendering a most efficient service.

Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary will meet next Monday as follows: Circle No. 1 with Mrs. E. F. Litaker; Circle No. 2 with Mrs. W. H. Scarboro; Circle No. 3 with Mrs. T. J. Blackwelder; Sunshine Circle with Miss Agnes Litaker.

Two of our oldest members were recently claimed by death, these being Mrs. Mary E. Newton and Mr. I. H. Waddell. The church sympathizes with the relatives of these loved ones.

Mrs. P. J. Blackwelder remains critically ill at her home in the county. Mrs. S. H. Teeter, who suffered a broken hip several months ago, continues to improve and is able to be up some now.

Preparations are being made for a Christmas play together with a Christmas tree with the Sunday school treat on Christmas Eve.

REPORTER.

Lexington, Mt. Carmel.—Rev. C. G. Isley delivered another excellent sermon this morning to a large congregation. This being his first appointment since Annual Conference, a large congregation came out to hear our "new" preacher. He chose his text from 1 Cor., 2nd chapter and 9th verse. His subject was "Carrying on With God."

The congregation is very grateful to the delegate and stationing committee for returning Rev. Mr. Isley and mother for their seventh year's work. They have worked very faithfully for the church and the membership has increased under their leadership until it is very near double. The pastor's salary was paid a month in advance. The stewards are going to pay the salary quarterly this year.

A Ladies' Auxiliary was reorganized today. Mrs. Hattie Isley was elected president, and the first meeting was set for the third Sunday afternoon immediately after preaching service.

The Christmas program will be held on Christmas Eve at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited. I am sorry I cannot give some account of the program.

ZULA FRITTS, Reporter.

Mill Grove, Midland Charge.—Our new conference year is now on hand, in fact already started. We opened our Sunday school November 25 promptly on time at 10 o'clock. There was a nice crowd, and a wonderful lesson. And as we usually do, our class just went into the lesson in our own way, reading the Golden Text, then each verse in the lesson, discussing each verse as we read it. We find we can get better understanding that way than by just depending on the book questions alone.

At 11 o'clock our pastor, Bro. J. H. Trolinger, brought us a wonderful message, taking his text from the 14th verse of first chapter of John, reading from first verse through the 15th. He emphasized the fact of what it means to be a true Christian, and letting our lives shine daily for Christ. That is our great need today. He stayed with his text, using Bible from start to finish, and of course that is what our souls are hungering for. Let us hope and pray for real Bible sermons each time he preaches. If we live right, then we can pray right, and our prayers will be answered.

Don't forget our Sunday school hours strictly at 10 o'clock every Sunday except on the second Sunday which is at 2 o'clock, and our preaching hours are on second Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock and fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Keep this in mind and come and bring someone with you. Everybody is given a special invitation to come and worship with us.

Brother Ralph Garmon, our choir leader, while working in a cotton gin last week, fell and got hurt, cracking two or more of his ribs, and for several days was hardly able to help himself to anything. We were afraid he would not be able to be at service with us Sunday morning, but the Lord provided that he was able to be there with us. We were glad to have him with us, and hope and pray he will soon be well again.

REPORTER.

Flat Rock Charge.—We desire to make a correction in the plan of appointments for Flat Rock charge appearing in the Herald last week. It was stated that the first Sunday appointment at Palestine church would be omitted. This should have said "fifth" Sunday appointment. We will not have any fifth Sunday appointments during the coming year.

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will make his official visit to Flat Rock charge on Sunday, December 23, and will preach at Flat Rock church at 11 a. m. and at Bethany church at 3 p. m.

The writer stated in his report last week that he would not write reports as he did last year. This is not a report, but is written to make a correction and an announcement.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Charge.—We are very glad to have our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, back with us again this year. He and Mrs. Braxton have endeared themselves to the church since coming into our midst.

The first church service of the new conference year was held Sunday morning with a large audience. Rev. Mr. Braxton used for his text St. John 5:17: "But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh, and I work." This was Jesus' answer to the Jews as they rebuked him for healing the diseased man on the Sabbath at the pool of Bethesda. The subject for the hour was taken from the address of Dr. Broomfield before the annual conference, "Yesterday we came out of the lines, tomorrow we go back into the lines."

A challenge was made that we analyze ourselves and see what we would be like if we didn't have the advantages of our Sunday schools, hymns, church, etc. We who have these advantages must help the boys and girls of our church, for they are the church of tomorrow. If we hope to aileviate such conditions as one divorce out of every four in the U. S., our prevailing accidents from liquor, pushing down of our moral standards, we must accept this challenge as a great responsibility.

Dr. G. I. Humphreys, president of High Point College, will preach for us the third Sunday at 11 o'clock. At 7:30 o'clock the A Capella choir of the college will render a program. We hope we will have a good attendance for these services.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Smith was buried Sunday afternoon. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved parents.

Our church will be hostess to the Eastern Guilford County Christian Endeavor Societies on Friday, December 9, at 7:30 o'clock. After the business meeting and address a social period will conclude the program.

Reidsville.—Last Friday evening Circle No. 3 of the Missionary Society entertained in honor of Mrs. George R. Brown, their pastor's wife, at the home of Mrs. M. T. Smith, leader of the circle. Games were played and pleasant conversation was engaged in. A musical prorgram was rendered by Mrs. Louise Smith and Mrs. Madge Dixon.

Practically every member of the circle was present and each one extended their appreciation to Mrs. Brown for her splendid work among them, and also told her how glad they were to have her with them another year. She was presented a beautiful table lamp by the members of the circle. Mrs. Brown in a very charming manner expressed her appreciation for the courtesy extended her. During the social hour a delicious salad course was served.

Siler City.—We have started off the new conference year with much enthusiasm. Rev. J. A. Burgess, our new pastor, filled the first appointment the fourth Sunday night and again the first Sunday morning. At both services we had good congregations and we were delighted to have so many visitors from the local churches and out of town and also out of the state. We always welcome visitors to our services. Everyone was thrilled with the splendid gospel messages that Mr. Burgess brought to us. Misses Minnie Cooper and Verda Shaw Fox sang “‘Sing Every Voice” the first Sunday morning.

A union Thanksgiving service was held in our church on Thanksgiving Day at 10 o'clock. Again our new pastor was the speaker and delivered a very helpful and appropriate message from the text, “What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me?” (Psalms 116:12). Revs. F. B. Peele, of the First M. E. church, and W. C. Winslow, of the Pilgrim, offered prayers. “List to the Call” was sung very effectively by Mrs. Guy Presnell, of First M. E. church The congregation was fine considering the inclement weather, and all spoke in high esteem of our new pastor and the good sermon he preached.

The first Sunday night the Woman's Auxiliary presented “Christian Education in Religious Art” for their November thank-offering service. The pictures were shown with this program and made the occasion very impressive. Mrs. T. L. Smith was responsible for the splendid manner in which this program was presented. Congregational hymns were sung and Misses Cooper and Fox sang a special number. All present enjoyed it immensely. Offering amounted to $4.

We had 94 in Sunday school the first Sunday, which was a little better than one year ago. A thank-offering collection was taken for our Children's Home, amounting to over $15. Mr. Sharpe, our new superintendent, was overjoyed with the bright prospect for the future of our Sunday school. It was unanimously decided to have a Christmas tree and entertainment, with every member, young and old, taking part.

We were very much discouraged when we learned our former pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Isley, were not coming back to us. We had learned to love them very much in the two years' stay with us, but our loss is sure to be Alamance's gain. We trust they may have a good and pleasant year in their new field. We are looking forward to the best year yet with our new pastor and all working together for the upbuilding of God's kingdom here on earth.

The first quarterly conference will convene in the Siler City church on Wednesday night, December 12. Dr. Andrews, our president, will be present and it is hoped we will have a good delegation of all official members on the charge.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Now that conference has ended, we are proud to announce the return of our pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery. We hope the coming year will be a great year for us.

We are proud to say our church has a new roof on it and our piano has been put in good condition.

Our pastor will preach for us Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. We hope to have a house full to welcome our pastor back.

The first Sunday in November was a good day for us. We had a grand service at the 11 o'clock hour. Lunch on the ground and the fourth quarterly conference met with our church in the afternoon. We were very glad to have a large crowd present for the conference.

The church officials were elected that day. The same board of stewards was except Mr. Earl Harper was elected steward to fill Mr. Whit Harper's place and Mr. I. W. Porter was added to the steward list.

Mrs. M. J. Morris, Vera and Henry Morris spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Barbee at Farmville.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Shelby, Shelby-Caroleen Charge.—Our new year began November 25. We are very glad to welcome our new pastor, Mr. T. O. Fry, and his family. Mr. Fry comes to us from China Grove and we hope his work here will be as great a success as it was there. His first service here was held on Sunday, November 25. Our church is very small but had a very good attendance.

On Thanksgiving night a pounding of various food stuffs was given the pastor and family. This was given at the conclusion of a very beautiful and helpful Thanksgiving service.

The church at Shelby looks forward to a very prosperous year. There was a great increase in attendance last Sunday in both Sunday school and church service. The pastor is already visiting many of the members. Many of these members have not been attending for some time but have come back. It seems very good to see familiar faces again.

Our first quarterly conference of this circuit, Caroleen and Shelby, will be held here November 16 after the morning service.

We ask the prayers of the readers that we may all do our best the coming year.

Asheville.—I'm so excited over the record made by the Young Men's class this Sunday that I must rave, as Mr. Pritchard calls it, about them. There were only four present and their collection amounted to $1.30. They led the entire school in amount of collection and also had the honor of having the largest per capita offering. That is really a record worth mentioning. Mrs. Wilson's Primaries and the Philatheas tied for the attendance record. Mrs. Williams' Golden Rule class led in amount of collection in the children's department.

I regret I failed to mention last week that the first quarterly conference was to meet on Wednesday evening of this week. It is hoped that all official members will be present. The Sunday School Workers' Council is to meet immediately after the quarterly conference, and all Sunday school teachers and officials are earnestly urged to be present to make plans for Christmas, and to discuss other business incident to the year's work.

Circles of the Women's Auxiliary are to meet this week as follows: Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. R. Moore, chairman, withh Mrs. J. O. Barrett, 53 Montview Dive, Thursday, 3:30 p. m. Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. F. Minnis, chairman, with Mrs. H. L. Hanner, 48 Soco Street, Thursday, 3:30 p. m. Circle No. 3, with Mrs. C. B. Baker, 138½ Washington Road, Thursday, 7:30 p. m. We trust that all circles will be well attended.

The Fawcett Bible class is to meet with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boling, 143 Linden Avenue, on Tuesday evening of this week. At this meeting the officers for the new year are to be elected.

It was reported that the Senior Christian Endeavor meeting was very impressive Sunday night. Miss Nancy Clouse, president, was the leader and as usual she brought her audience a real live message.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor group also enjoyed their meeting, led by Mr. James Clouse. All took part in a lively discussion of the need of missions. This group has taken on new life and is planning some interesting discussions for their meetings. Miss Polly Gentry is their president. They are having a business and social meeting at the home of Miss Lola Johnson, Hillside Street, Thursday, 7:30 p. m., and all members are urged to attend.

I guess Miss Carter and Miss Cunningham are due an apology for reporting them as “cheer leaders.” I don't know why I did it, but I did; and I underrstand they have been the recipients of quite a bit of kidding because of my mistake. Beg pardon, Nell and Frances! They were elected class leaders.

Glad to have Mrs. Joyner in her favorite pew on Thanksgiving Day and on Sunday. We miss Mrs. Joyner when she is absent. We are sorry to report that Mrs. H. L. Hanner is confined to her home with a severe cold, also Miss Betty Marlowe. There were a good many absent this week from services for one reason and another. We sinserely hope all will be on hand next week.

Mr. J. R. Moore was reappointed Herald agent and we are sure of getting up our quota. Mr. Moore is a real "go-getter." Come on, folks, subscribe for the Herald! You will enjoy it and you will also be helping your church to be on the honor roll.

We were glad to welcome into our church membership on Sunday Mrs. J. O. Barrett and her son, Preston Barrett. We are glad to have them join us. M. L. B.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Fogleman, has returned to us for another year. We are indeed glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Fogleman back with us. He has completed a fine year's work. On Sunday morning, November 25, he delivered his first sermon. The subject was "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." We had a very large congregation.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Friendship church on Saturday before the third Sunday in December. The pastor urges all officials and members of the church to be present. Our Sunday school attendance this week was very good.

Last Wednesday, the regular day for the Ladies' Auxiliary, was so bad that they postponed it until Wednesday of this week. They are also using the same Thanksgiving program this week. The meeting will be held with Miss Lucy Willis. The Ladies' Auxiliary has been doing some good work. Some time ago they sent a quilt to their Children's Home.

We are all glad to hear that our friend and neighbor, Mrs. Jess Peeler, is improving. She has been in the hospital for some time.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Charge.—Another conference year has come and gone. Pastor Joyner and our delegate have returned, bringing a fine report frorm the Annual Conference. Pastor Joyner filled his regular appointment yesterday, preaching a very appropriate sermon for the beginning of the new year, and the weather being just fine, the congregation was quite large, more than a hundred attending Sunday school and the preaching services.

The first quarterly conference will be held sometime in this month. We are expecting President Andrews to be with us at that time.

Mrs. Prince Lynch has recently returned home from Roanoke Rapids hospital, where she was a patient for several days, having her tonsils removed. We were glad to have her worship with us again yesterday.

The congregation being quite large yesterday, we were able to pay our conference claims for coming year. We like to be able to meet these claims as they come before us, and pay our pastor at the appointed time; then at the end of the conference year we feel we have accomplished much along the financial line.

On Wedutsday, November 14, in the early morning hours, our friend and neighbor, Mr. William W. Clary, passed away. He had been in bad health for several years with stomach trouble. He recently grew worse, spending several days in Roanoke Rapids hospital. Returning home his condition was still critical, and several days later he passed away. He is survived by his wife and the following children: Henry Clary, of Hopewell, Va.; Mrs. Givens Clary, Ankum, Va.; Preston, Billie, Dorothy and Mabel Clary. Funeral services were held from the home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Matthews Chapel cemetery. Rev. Mr. Lowden, pastor of the James Square Baptist church, was in charge of the funeral since Pastor Joyner was attending Annual Conference. Mr. Clary was a member of Matthews Chapel. We extend our sympathy to the family.

LOTTIE EDWARDS, Reporter.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—The new conference year began here yesterday and we are delighted with our new pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox. We were sorry to know that our former pastor was transferred, but we realize that our loss is somebody else's gain. He had been with us five years; naturally we had come to like him.

Pastor Hethcox delivered a splendid sermon to the young people. I am sure the young people will co-operate with him in any service they can do.

Our Sunday school is under the leadership of E. C. Hendrix again. All the officers of the Senday school are working wonderfully. Plans are under way for Christmas entertainment. We ask the prayers of the entire conference that we may accomplish more this year than we ever have before.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—It seems that we are going forward into the new conference year with great determination. The appreciation of Bro. Trollinger being returned to us for the seventh year was manifested last Sunday by a large congregation. Coming out to hear his first sermon, we were not disappointed, for his message was one of the best. We were glad to have some of the Fair Grove people worship with us.

The officers were elected for the coming year; only a few changes were made. We had a large attendance at Sunday school last Sunday; collection for Children's Home was $7. We ask an interest in the prayers of all who read this that we may do more in the work of God's kingdom this year than ever before. MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Laurel Hill, Fallston Charge.—There is not much I can write this week, but I will write a few lines to keep from disappointing someone who will be looking for news from the home church.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of a different superintendent every Sunday. Miss Edith Mull had charge Sunday. She had a nice program prepared and it was enjoyed by all. The attendance Sunday was 49 and $1.29 collection was taken.

As we start on a new conference year we are glad to welcome Rev. H. F. Fogleman back with us again. We have learned to like him and Mrs. Fogleman from his last year's work. We feel very grateful that Annual Conference saw fit to send him back. They have done splendid work here and it is a pleasure to have them back again. He will fill his regular appointment Sunday morning, December 9, at 11 o'clock. We are hoping to have a large crowd present.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will have their regular monthly meeting on Thursday after the second Sunday in December at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. B. Willis. Miss Lourene Lockey has charge of the program this month. Mrs. Willis and daughter, Vangie, will be hostesses.

We have just finished another book in life's history. Are you satisfied with your past life? Do you desire a closer walk with the Author and Finisher of your soul in the future? If so, there is no better way to obtain this than to stand by your church and work for the upbuilding of God's kingdom and pray without ceasing for faith and understanding from God, the Father.

With all good wishes and prayers for a prosperous and happy new year for the Herald family and for the entire conference.

FLORENCE SAIN.

Bethesda-State St., Yadkin College.—Bethesda finishing (not just quitting) the year's finances, used the Joah box quite effectively. Two hundred dollars was set as the goal to be raised by use of the box. Fourth Sunday in October was named as the date for opening the box. On that date $176.32 was counted out. The next preaching day, two weeks later, $58.50 was counted, making a total of $234.82. It is suspected the box will be used again when the time comes.

The stewards of both Bethesda and State Street, because of the stress of finishing last year's work, which they did in a fine way, did not make the every member canvass before conference. But they are taking the matter seriously now, calling for the printing of a second edition of pledge cards.

Bethesda observed "Harvest Home" on Thanksgiving Day. When the jars filled for the Children's Home had been placed in long rows, and potatoes, sweet and Irish, turnips, dried fruit, and peanuts were laid alongside. It was a fine expession of thankfulness. Then the group bowed in grateful prayer and thoughtfulness of God's bounty.

State Street called a joint meeting of stewards, trustees, auxiliary, teachers and officers of Sunday school, and leaders of Christian Endeavor to make plans for the year. One very important item discussed was plans for further reduction of the building debt. An interesting feature of this meeting was the burning of the note for nearly $700, balance of assessment for street pavement—a sigh of relief and an easy long breath by the group. Then the $2,000 of bonds, with $50 of interest coupons, was turned over to the trustees for cancellation.

Bethesda is filling in spaces on a square of the quilt for the hospital in India. The larger spaces have been taken and the matter is well on the way toward completing the $25 necessary to fill the square.

An encouraging group of enthusiastic young people, in response to a call, met in Bethesda church last Sunday night for the purpose of arousing interest and extending and expanding the work of the Christian Endeavor Society. Following the devotion, encouraging talks were made and plans discussed. Charles Brinkly was elected president; Bessie Sowers, vice president; Josephine Wagner, secretary-treasurer; Frances Wagner, corresponding secretary.

At Bethesda the Junior church meets during the preaching hour under the direction of Miss Ina Wagner. Following one of their meetings, there was noted on the blackboard a unique method of promoting the idea, "God is welcome at our house." A simple drawing of a dwelling showing the rooms In the living room, Bible, good books, family worship. In the dining room, returning of thanks, eating in moderation, Bible reading. In the bedroom, the saying of prayers, reading the Bible, trusting God in the darkness. In the guest room, "God is the unseen guest in this room."

First quarterly conference in State Street church, December 13, at 7 o'clock p. m.

T. M. JOHNSON.

Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.—We are glad to report that our Sunday school shows much improvement. We are having a thriving Sunday school with Mr. Setzer as superintendent, who, with his untiring service, has been an inspiration to us all.

Also, we are very grateful that Rev. J. L. Love and his good family are to be with us another year, for they have greatly endeared themselves to us, and we should have been greatly disappointed had they not been returned to us.

Our good superintendent and his good wife celebrated their golden wedding on Friday. November 23, with a host of friends and three children. We are proud of Brother Setzer and wife.

We were glad to have all of our good teachers present on Sunday, November 25.

We are having a wonderful prayer meeting each Sunday afternoon. The meetings are largely attended by boys and girls. Bro. J. L. Childers read the Scripture lesson November 25 which was taken from the first epistle of Peter, chapter one. He made a wonderful talk on the lesson and there were also many helpful talks made by others. We appreciated especially the talk by Brother Thomas, who urged all of us to be true soldiers of the cross.

We are very glad to have Brother Portenbury for leader for Young People's meetings, and we are glad for the young people of the community.

Our Ladies' Aid is very active these days. At their last meeting it was reported that they had raised $100.

Now, we trust that each one will stand by the church and co-operate with the pastor and hold him up in our prayers.

D. B., Reporter.

Pleasant Grove Station.—The Annual Conference convened at Greensboro November 14 and adjourned November 19 and is now in the past, and we who were fortunate enough not to be moved returned and are at our old jobs planning the work for the future. I was glad the stationing committee returned me to serve this fine people for another year. The welcome has been gracious and we are right on the job, having made several visits, taught a Sunday school class, and attended one Brotherhood meeting. The Brotherhood met with Bro. Clyde Paine. Mrs. Paine served a delicious supper which was greatly enjoyed. The meeting was well attended and several steps taken looking forward to the new year. We were delighted to have with us Rev. T. G. Madison, pastor of First church, Thomasville, who delivered a good address on the world's need of real men. We missed the fellowship of our 73-year-young chaplain, Bro. George Hilton, who has been and is confined to his bed for the past week. Scarlet fever has two of our young members. We are hoping and praying for the speedy recovery of these members.

Our church attendance was off some on account of sickness and the scarlet fever scare, several being under quarantine.

The first quarterly conference for Pleasant Grove station will convene Tuesday night, December 4, 1934, at 7 o'clock. All officials are requested to be present.

We having closed a good year are now looking very optimistically to the future, and are hopeful of another good year for the Master. We started the new year with a Thanksgiving offering for our Children's Home. Our folks are standing by the Home. We were glad to see that Pleasant Grove stands second in number of offerings last year. All the organizations are very active.

Mrs. Ralph Kennedy is also sick in bed but is now on the road to recovery.

May the Lord greatly bless our president and all the various interests of our beloved Zion.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Haw River, Glen Raven Charge.—The Philathea class from our church went Sunday morning to visit Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stone in Greensboro. As the readers know, Mr. Stone has been confined to his home for some time. We gathered in the reception hall and listened to a splendid lesson from Mr. Stone. As he had already informed the hearers after the lesson we went to the dining room and had lunch. We enjoyed it very much.

For ten years Mr. and Mrs. Stone worked faithfully for this church. Later on he moved to Greensboro and became a faithful member of Grace church. We feel that Grace has been enriched by his influence. He not only was financially faithful, but faithful with his prayers as well. We think he has been one of the greatest laymen our churches have had. When his health would permit, he would fill the pulpit in the absence of the pastor. He has filled a number of appointments for us. His health has broken and he isn't able to go among us as he once did, and I think all who know him should visit Mr. Stone to show our appreciation for his splendid work in the church.

T. S. COBLE.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Charge.—On the fourth Sunday morning in November Rev. T. J. Whitehead came to us as our pastor for the ensuing year. Both Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead were already known and loved by many on this charge; we feel that our delegate could have made no wiser choice, and that everyone will be greatly pleased. Mr. Whitehead preached an inspiring message on the text, "Sir, We Would See Jesus," taken from John 12:21.

There was a large crowd out to hear the new pastor for the first time and we only hope and trust that his congregations will increase from Sunday to Sunday. There were visitors from both Burlington and Graham, as well as from other churches on the charge. It was a pleasure to have them worship with us, and we hope they will visit us again.

Plans are being made for a Christmas tree at our church. Miss Hallie Loy and Miss Nannie Coble are in charge of the program. The Woman's Auxiliary is also planning a Christmas tree and program to be held at the home of Mrs. L. S. Russell on Thursday afternoon, December 20.

The new church and Sunday school officers have assumed their duties and we are looking forward to a successful year together.

The Christian Endeavor Society is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. Walter Cates. Our meetings are held each Sunday evening at 6:30.

Mr. Woodrow Morris, son of Rev. J. D. Morris, of Shelby, visited Mr. Howard Pickett last Sunday and Monday.

There will be preaching at Bellemont church next Sunday night, December 9. Everyone is invited and urged to be present for this service.

REPORTER.

Friendship, Haw River Charge.—Rev. J. L. Trollinger, beginning his seventh year as pastor of Haw River charge, preached a very inspirational sermon, using for his text a part of the 48th verse of the first chapter of St. John, "When thou wast under the fig tree I saw thee." Mr. Trollinger stressed the fact that even as Jesus knew Nathanael's secret of the fig tree, he also knows all about our most carefully guarded secrets and treasures.

We are all very glad to have Bro. Trollinger and family with us again, and we promise him our whole-hearted support and loyalty in making this the best year possible for the kingdom of God and Friendship church.

If each member of the church will try to do his or her very best, as requested by Brother Trollinger, I am sure we will all be happy and blest as this year draws to a close.

REPORTER.

Eden, Halifax Charge.—The people of Eden are indeed very happy over the return of our good pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy. On Sunday morning, December 2, at 11 o'clock, he delivered his first message to us for the coming year. It was a wonderful message, taken from Hebrews 12:1, "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us." He urged us to follow the narrow way that leads to life, and walk daily with our Master. There was a good crowd out to hear him, and many plans for the coming year were made.

Our Sunday school, though small, continues steadfastly on, now that whooping cough is getting better, and we are hoping for a larger attendance.

A special offering was taken Sunday morning for the Children's Home which was right good.

We are glad to say that our church paid its budget in full except the World Service part, and a goodly bit was paid on this.

Plans are being made to build a hut at the church, and a committee composed of Mr. J. W. Hardee, Mr. J. L. Bellamy, and Mr. R. G. Willey to draw up plans and cost of such a building and present it to the church next first Sunday.

The trustees are going to see that some work that needs to be done on our church is done right away.

A parsonage fund is being raised from all the churches on the charge to have some work done at the parsonage, and Eden's part has already been raised and turned in.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Eden church on Friday, December 21, at 2 o'clock. All official members are urged to be present.

The regular meeting of our Woman's Auxiliary was held in the home of Mrs. Ed Smith on Thursday, November 22, 1934. We had a very good meeting, and many plans for the coming year were made. Our treasurer gave her report, stating all our budget up to date was paid and we had a goodly balance but I can't remember the exact amount.

We had a good year and we are hoping for a better one this year, as we are using every effort to get more of our members interested.

English Street, High Point.—Since our last report, our pastor, Rev. C. H. Hill, has been assigned to another church, which we regret exceedingly. Our prayers and good wishes go with him and his good wife to their new work. However, we are fortunate in securing Rev. Edw. Suits to fill his place. We hope to go forward this year and to accomplish much in the kingdom service. On the past Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Rev. Mr. Suits brought us a most inspiring and uplifting sermon, using as his text a part of the 28th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John, "The Master is come and calleth for thee."

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet on Monday evening of this week, and Mrs. C. J. Burton, newly elected president, will take charge at this time.

Our first quarterly conference will be held on Tuesday evening of this week. At this time several important matters will be settled concerning the appointments of the pastor at this church and at West End, Thomasville, as these two were made into a charge at the Annual Conference.

We are glad to report that we have been successful in reorganizing a Junior C. E. Society. Quite a number of the Juniors are manifesting an interest in the work, and prospects are good for building up a fine society.

On last Thanksgiving morning our Senior C. E. carried out 10 large baskets of food to the needy of the city. They are planning to make and to buy toys for needy children for Christmas. They are also beginning a mission study class on Wednesday evening of this week.

Shiloh, Shiloh Charge.—The work at Shiloh is beginning in a very efficient way, it seems. The Sunday school enrollment continues to increase. A noted change was made last Sunday when the enrollment reached 363.

Rev. C. E. Ridge filled his first appointment at Shiloh Sunday morning. He preached a very forceful sermon on the subject, "The Power of the Gospel," using as a text Romans 1:16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Paul, the writer, had come into contact with this power. This was the power that changed the persecuting Saul of Tarsus to the preaching apostle Paul, as he journeyed along the Damascus road. Paul was not ashamed of the gospel, then why? Because it is "the power." Not motor power of God—the power which transforms men's lives, the power that calmed the sea, the power of Pentecost, the power that shook the Philippian jail, and the power that changed Saul to Paul. How important then is the gospel which prepares men to live and then prepares men to die. The need of the day is for people everywhere to heed the gospel, for if the gospel is hid, it is hid to them that are lost. Men must live the life that will show the power of the gospel to drive sin and darkness from the lives of people throughout the world.

The Workers' Council held its regular meeting Monday night. A new project has been set forth for this year and we hope it will be accomplished. More definite reports will be given later.

The first quarterly conference of Shiloh charge will meet at Shiloh church on Saturday, December 15, at 2 o'clock. All official members are urged to attend.

The union Thanksgiving service which was held at Shiloh last Wednesday night proved a success, in spite of the rainy weather. The program was enjoyed by all who attended. We were sorry that the main speaker could not be with us.

There is some sickness among our church folk. Mrs. C. E. Ridge has been very sick for the past week but we are glad to report her improving. Mrs. Russell Clodfelter is ill at the Davidson hospital.

Frank Waitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Waitman, has been sick but is somewhat improved.

Mrs. Clem Sink has also been sick but we hope for all these a speedy recovery.

We were glad to have some visitors in our congregation Sunday—Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hedrick, of First church, Lexington, and Mr and Mrs. Curtis Leonard and children from Statesville, who are still Shiloh folk.

First Church, Lexington.—We are proud to announce the return of our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, for the seventh year. We are hoping as we are beginning another year together that we may all have a greater determination to make this the best year yet in the history of our church. First church has increased the pastor's salary $100, bringing it up to $1,500. The salary at Mount Carmel remains the same as last year.

Sunday evening, Pastor Isley delivered a very helpful message from the text, "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good: and his mercy endureth forever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy." (Ps. 107:1-2).

On Saturday the Woman's Auxiliary featured a chicken pie supper with a profit of $21.50. This money will be used to install a water system in the church.

Circle No. 1 met last Thursday evening with Mrs. O. F. Johnson. Circle No. 2 will meet Thursday evening with Margaret Lea Swink.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis announce the marriage of their daughter, Georgia Etta, to William Frank Moorefield, of Danville. The young couple will make their home in Danville.

Martha Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hedrick, was born October 18, 1930, and departed this life November 5, 1934, at the age of 4 years and 18 days. She had been ill only a few days, death resulting from an attack of spinal meningitis. She is survived by her parents, two brothers, Louis and James Franklin, and a sister, Mary Dean.

Louise was a bright, beautiful, and promising child and her going leaves us sad. But there is much comfort in the assurance that Jesus has taken her to Himself and that the bud that was so promising here will bloom into its full beauty in the summer land of God.

Funeral services were conducted from First Methodist Protestant church, where Louise attended Sunday school and where the parents are members, on November 7, by the pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley. The many beautiful flowers and sorrowing friends were evidences of the high esteem in which the family is held. Interment was in the city cemetery.

May the blessings of heaven rest upon and abide with the parents, grandparents, brothers, sister, and friends who are left behind.

Asheboro.—A large numberr of our people attended conference in Grace church, Greensboro, at various times. Mrs. Earl Henley attended as delegate from our church. At this conference many changes were made in the pastors throughout the state. Asheboro was included in the changes, and Rev. R. C. Stubbins, our pastor for four years, was assigned to Fountain Place church and Gibsonville, and Dr. S. W. Taylor, who has served two years as pastor of Lebanon M. P. church, High Point, and five years as president of the N. C. Conference, was sent to Asheboro. Rev. and Mrs. Stubbins have served the church faithfully and well and have been interested in many activities of the town. Mrs. Stubbins was a valued member of the choir, the Woman's Auxiliary, and was very helpful in the Sunday school. Rev. and Mrs. Stubbins have made many friends in the town, outside of our church, who join us in wishing them much success in their new field of labor.

While we regret to lose them, we welcome Dr. Taylor and family to our church and as citizens of our town.

We were also sorry to lose Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Hetheox from the Richland circuit, but welcome Rev. M. C. Henderson and family.

On Friday evening, November 23, the members of our choir entertained in the social room of the church honoring two of our members, Mrs. R. C. Stubbins, who was leaving in a few days, and Mr. W. L. Ward, who was recently married. A large number were present and enjoyed games, contests and stunts. Mrs. Stubbins was presented with a silver cream pitcher and sugar bowl from the choir as a token of esteem and of the fine work rendered the choir during her stay in Asheboro.

Mrs. Stubbins in her pleasing manner expressed regret at leaving and appreciation of the fellowship during her four years here.

Mr. Ward was given a fountain pen as a token of appreciation of the fine work he has done in the choir, which was gratefully received. Sandwiches, tea and cake were served.

On the fourth Sunday in November Dr. Taylor came from High Point and filled the pulpit at the 11 o'clock service. A large congregation heard his discourse on "A New Testament Minister and a Congregation Eager for His Message." There were 285 at

Sunday school with an offering of $30.53 for the Children's Home.

Dr. Taylor moved his family to the parsonage in Greystone Terrace last Tuesday.

On last Thursday morning at 9 o'clock the union Thanksgiving service was held in the new Baptist church with our pastor, Dr. Taylor, delivering the sermon. A large congregation was present, many to hear him the first time. He spoke on "Being Thankful." Offering was taken for the various orphanages.

Last Sunday there were 296 in Sunday school and a good-sized congregation to hear Dr. Taylor preach on "As Much as in Me Is, I Am Ready." The evening service was called in, so that our people might worship with the M. E. congregation who dedicated their church Sunday.

The first quarterly conference of our church was announced to be Thursday evening of this week in the church. All of the circles are meeting this week in the various homes. The auxiliary gave a tea on Saturday evening, November 17, at the home of Mrs. J. S. Lewis, honoring Miss Bettie Brittingham, of Baltimore, Md., who is assistant executive secretary of the M. P. Mission Board and editor of the Missionary Record. Delightful refreshments were served the guests.

Miss Brittingham was in Greensboro attending the M. P. conference and came to Asheboro to be the week-end guest of Mrs. W. C. Hammer.

The Philathea class met at the home of Mrs. Earl Henley on Worth Street Monday evening of last week with Mrs. Clyde Chisholm, Miss Leone Wood and Miss Exie Callicott associate hostesses for the regular monthly meeting and social. Mrs. Henley, the president, presided over the business session. Miss Bertha Presnell conducted devotions. An interesting contest, "How to Preserve a Husband," was engaged in, which afforded much pleasure. It was announced that Mrs. W. L. Ward was the winner. A large basket containing many beautiful and useful gifts was presented Mrs. Ward, a member of the class and a bride of the month. The hostesses served tempting refreshments.

The many friends of W. F. Redding, Jr.. were glad to see him back in the church service last Sunday after an operation on his hand at Duke hospital Saturday, November 17. The operation was performed by Dr Shands, an eminent bone specialist of Duke hospital. REPORTER.

Graham.—Graham people are happy to have their pastor, Rev. J. Clyde Auman, and his family with them again this year. Rev. Mr. Auman was formally introduced to the Sunday school on the first Sunday after conference by our superintendent in a most pleasing way, after which each member came forward to greet the new pastor. We hope this year may be pleasant and the most successful our pastor has spent with us.

The following ushers were elected at the morning service Sunday: S. S. Holt, chairman, P. H. Amick, N. E. Sykes, C. L. Reavis, W. C. Goley, J. L. Amick.

Circles No. 1, 2 and 3 held a "white elephant" sale Monday night at the home of Mrs. J. L. Johnston. The attendance was good and the sale was very successful.

We are deeply grieved by the death of our good friend Dr. W. R. Goley. He was one of our most faithful and most beloved members. He was a charter member of our church and an outstanding member of the M. P. church in this state. Dr. Goley will be greatly missed but he will live on in the hearts of Graham Methodist Protestants.

The Friendly Helpers' class visited the Children's Home the fourth Sunday in November. They were accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Foust Thompson, and Mr. Thompson, and their husbands, mothers and children. Everyone enjoyed the time spent with Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and the children at the Home.

Congratulations to Mr. Phil S. Dixon. He has been recently elected president of the Graham Kiwanis Club.

Mrs. W. R. Goley was able to worship with us Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hunsucker, of High Point, were also present for the services. REPORTER.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Charge.—The Annual Conference is over and we have started on a new year of work. We are very glad to have our pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler, back with us again. He filled his regular appointment Sunday at Oak Grove.

The people of Oak Grove have begun working again on our new church. We will be glad when we get our church finished, and we hope to in the near future.

New officers have been elected and have begun doing their work. The stewards have already held a meeting.

We are proud of Oak Grove this year. It has paid out in full, and we are going to do our best to do this every year.

A Thanksgiving program was given at the church Thursday night. Thank talks were made, recitations were spoken, and the Fallston quartet furnished music.

The offering for the Children's Home was over $17. BLANCHE GETTYS, Reporter.

WORLDWIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL NEWS

Africa.—Friends of Sunday school work in Africa will be delighted to learn that support has been found to make possible the work of the newly formed Sunday school committee in the Belgian Congo. This committee, which is representative of the missions at work in that colony, was appointed by the Congo Protestant Council at the time Dr. Robert M. Hopkins visited Central Africa last summer. Thus the first co-operative unit in the heart of Africa is ready to begin its important work under the leadership of Rev. Malcolm Guthrie, of Leopoldville. A recent letter to Dr. Hopkins from one of the missionaries in Congo Belge has this heartening word: "Your visit to Congo is bearing fruit in our field. We have had no organized Sunday schools in our area although we have felt the need of them. However, a few weeks ago our Station Council voted to respond to the suggestion that our villages should be organized for Sunday school work. We have about 200 villages and these will include several thousand children." Thus the Belgian Congo will be added to South Africa and Egypt as having co-operative committees in fellowship with the World's Sunday School Association, and at work for the Christian education of some of Africa's millions of children and youth.

World's Convention.—Plans are well under way for the Twelfth World's Sunday School Convention which is to meet in Oslo, Norway, early in July of 1936. A recent message was received at the headquarters office of the World's Sunday School Association, 51 Madison Avenue, New York City, from Rt. Rev. Johan Lunde, Bishop Primate of Norway, in which Bishop Lunde says: "We shall do our best to see that the delegates are well taken care of in our beautiful and beloved country. We are very happy to be able to relate that our country's king, His Majesty Haakon VII, has promised to act as the convention's guardian." Thus Norway is deeply conscious of the honor and responsibility bestowed upon the Sunday school workers of that land in the coming of this World's Convention in 1936, and church and state are happily combining to accord the thousands of delegates a cordial welcome and a hospitable consideration of their welfare during convention days.

Sir Harold Mackintosh.—Following a recent meeting of the executive committee of the World's Sunday School Association, which was held in New York City, arrangements were made for five local meetings which were attended by Sir Harold and Lady Mackintosh. In Boston a luncheon gathering was arranged by President and Mrs. Daniel L. Marsh, of Boston University. In Toronto the Religious Education Council of Canada gave a special luncheon and at night a large popular meeting was held in the Victoria Presbyterian church. In Philadelphia, which is the seat of a large number of religious education organizations, a luncheon was given which was attended by a very representative group of leaders. Sir Harold and Lady Mackintosh were also guests for the day at the John Wanamaker store and were received by the president of the organization, Mr. William L. Nevin, and his staff in the private offices of John Wanamaker, which have remained undisturbed since Mr. Wanamaker's death. Sir Harold also visited the great Bethany Sunday school where John Wanamaker did so much of his local Sunday school work and then placed a wreath upon Mr. Wanamaker's grave. In Washington City, the District of Columbia Sunday School Association entertained at luncheon with Hon. W. W. Millan presiding, and Hon. D. C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, delivering the address of welcome. At night the largest popular meeting of the series was held as the closing session of the annual convention of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association. The farewell reception and dinner was given in the Hotel Astor, at Times Square, New York City. In all of these meetings Sir Harold brought a timely message: "Perhaps it is not always recognized that the Sunday school idea has flourished most in the English-speaking nations, and our respective countries owe more than can possibly be told to the influence of the Sunday school. It is only of recent years that the Sunday school idea has spread to other countries. The World's Sunday School Association is the Sunday schools' very own missionary work, and all whose lives have been benefited by the influence of the Sunday school at home should feel constrained to help forward the work of the World's Sunday School Association."

HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIBERS

Well, here is the lineup so far this year. Last week Fallston walked right out in front, but this week Roberta says, "Now, Fallston, you just step down there, please, and give me this first place, for I deserve it, in that I have been busy this week as well as last week." One thing is certain, for a person to keep ahead in this Herald contest, he must keep working. You cannot stand still and win.

And just about the time that Calvary was ready to step into third place, up walked Siler City and said, "Wait a minute, wait a minute, that third place belongs to me," and Calvary said, "That's all right; I will be heard from later on."

We have a fine list of offerings this week. See what Midland charge has done, sent in $8 all in one week. Let the good work go on. And First church, Burlington, is still at it and from the way they have started, they certainly expect to do things. And there are a great many other places that have made a good beginning. We hope that by next week things will be running smoothly and we may have a long list to acknowledge.

And now for a GOOD SUGGESTION. A man suggested to the editor the other day that we ask each charge to send in AT LEAST ONE SUBSCRIPTION each week until the first of the year. Does not that seem reasonable? Is there not one supscription lying around on every charge that could be picked up and mailed in each week? If every charge would do just that thing we could pay all the bills and let the bank account accumulate to that extent that we would not have to pay a service charge at the bank for months to come. That would certainly be a fine thing and it would solve our financial problems at the present at least. Come on, folks, and let's put the Herald on its feet. If you like the paper, then do something for it. That is the way to prove your love for it.

Now, how many will take our suggestion seriously between this and next week?

WHO CAN FURNISH THESE COPIES OF HERALD?

We find that in the files of the Herald for the past forty years these issues are missing: July 3, 1924; Oct. 30, 1924; Dec. 27, 1923; March 5, 1931. If there are those who can furnish these copies, it will be appreciated.

The files that we have have been taken over to High Point College and are safely housed in the fireproof vault of the safe there.

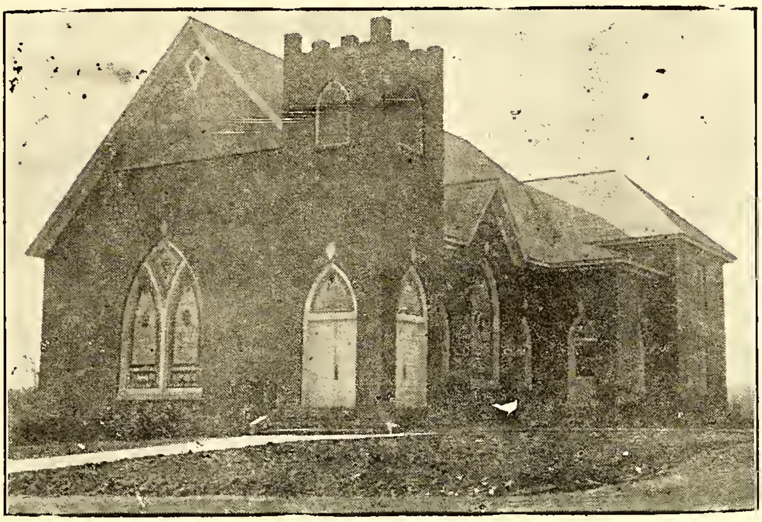
Denton Charge First to Reach Goal in McCulloch Memorial Fund



DENTON METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

REV. J. T. BOWMAN
Pastor of Denton Charge

The McCulloch Memorial Fund

Without in any way trying to take the publicity work away from the committee that was appointed by the Annual Conference to have charge of the McCulloch Memorial Fund, it seems proper that we should use the space this week to say a few words about this important matter.

As the most of our readers know, Dr. J. F. McCulloch started the HERALD forty years ago as his own private enterprise. The Annual Conference encouraged him in the venture and passed resolutions from time to time commending the paper to our people, and encouraged them in subscribing for the paper. Largely through the efforts of Dr McCulloch, money was raised throughout the Conference to build a publishing house that would be large enough to meet the needs of the HERALD with a considerable portion of the building for rent to supplement the subscription receipts. This arrangement worked very satisfactorily and the paper got along very well under that system. But the publishing house was transferred to the Conference Board of Education in the hope that this arrangement might hasten the building of a college, an enterprise that was dear to the heart of Dr. McCulloch. Finally the college was built and when the Board of Education became hard pressed for

Denton Church Raises McCulloch Memorial Fund

Since Dr. Bates is the chairman of the committee on the McCulloch Memorial Fund, it is expected that he will do the "raving" over any payments that are made from time to time on that fund; however, this week, the editor is going to take the word out of the mouth of Dr. Bates and say it first unless he says it right away. Today (Tuesday) we had a letter from Brother J. G. Rogers, of Denton, a member of the McCulloch Memorial Fund Committee. saying that the Denton charge had raised its quota in full. Since the Denton charge is the first charge in the North Carolina Annual Conference to raise its quota in full, or at least, the first to report it raised in full, it does seem that there ought to be some kind of celebration in honor of Denton charge, the pastor, Rev. J. T. Bowman, and Mr. J. G. Rogers, one of the leading laymen in the Denton church. And it might not be any bad idea to include every member of the charge among those who are to receive special recognition.

Some one might want to know how this thing was done so quickly on the Denton charge. Brother Rogers throws some light on the question, so here it is:

"After talking with Mr. Bowman, who is the ministerial

We are asking the editor to give us space this week for the Memorial Fund set-up as it has been worked out by the committee, Drs. Bates and Andrews and Mr. J. G. Rogers—appointed by the Annual Conference. And because it will take some space, we do not propose to go into the details of the why of it, but instead refer you to the report of the Herald Committee in the week-before-last Herald. But we will have something more to say about that next week.

We are asking the pastors to apportion the amounts suggested in this set-up to the churches on their charges if they have more than one, and make an effort to secure either in cash or pledges the amount apportioned. We would like to get this whole amount underwritten within the next ninety days. If we are going to raise it, we can raise it now as well, and perhaps better, than to string it out for six months or a year.

There seems to be some conflict of opinion as to where the money for this Memorial Fund shall be sent. Dr. Andrews thinks I ought to handle it—and I suppose Brother Rogers will concur. It will make it a bit easier to keep in touch with the progress of the campaign if I can be aware of how much and where the money is coming from. So, send it to me.

A certificate is being printed, which will bear a likeness of Dr. McCulloch, to be given to the churches raising the allotment for this Memorial Fund. It will be worth framing and hanging in your churches. Who'll be the first to get a certificate? And an Honor Roll will be prepared to be published from time to time in the Herald, and then in the Conference Journal, of the churches that reach these goals.

Come on! Let's go!

C. W. Bates, Chairman

CHURCH FINANCES

It is interesting to observe the fervor with which the Methodists are pursuing their new financial plan. Apparently there is no desire to sidestep or, having put their hands to the plow, to turn back.

In the Greensboro Daily News for November 10 we read: "Methodism in the Greensboro district launched the conference year with a district meeting of the board of stewards and lay leaders at West Market Street Methodist church yesterday afternoon. Bishop Paul B. Kern was one of the principal speakers for the meeting, which was attended by all the pastors of the 35 district charges in adidtion to the stewards and lay leaders. Rev. Loy D. Thompson, of Greensboro, presiding elder, was in charge. The new principle of voluntary support for general conference work and benevolences was emphasized."

Further on in the same article we read: "In order to organize more completely the work of the conference for the year, it was decided to have three general meetings of all the stewards of the district Sunday, November 18, at 2:30 o'clock. The meeting of all the Methodist stewards of Randolph county will be held at Asheboro, with Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of Wesley Memorial church, High Point, in charge. The Rockingham stewards will meet at Reidsville under the direction of Rev. W. A. Stanbury, D.D., pastor of West Market Street Methodist church, and the Guilford stewards will meet here under the direction of the presiding elder, Mr. Thompson."

At another point in the same article we read: "Mr. Thompson, in referring to the principle of voluntary giving, stressed the advantages over the old way of alloting definite amounts to each church. 'We are emerging out of an old era of coercion into a new period of spontaneous service,' Mr. Thompson stated. Bishop Kern likewise was strongly inclined toward this attitude. 'The most important thing about voluntary giving,' he said, 'is that it preserves the inviolate right of the local quarterly conference to determine what the church will pledge for benevolences. . . The spirit is coming back. Gone is the defeatist psychology and in its place is the philosophy of progressiveness."

Similar meetings are being held throughout the state. The following taken from their official organ, describes results in another district: "Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, the presiding elder, and C. A. Reap, district lay leader of the Salisbury district, appointed a meeting for all stewards of the district at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, November 11, in Central church, Concord. A program had been prepared and the meeting announced in the North Carolina Christian Advocate. How many do you suppose came to the meeting? The writer was there and saw with his own eyes. The stewards filled the church downstairs and balcony, the Sunday school department was thrown open and chairs were carried into the aisles in order to accommodate the crowd. We have seen nothing like it in our born days. And these stewards were intensely interested in the work of the new year."

Reactions in another district are described in the same paper as follows: "The Gastonia district stewards' meeting was an optimistic, bracing sort of a meeting. Such meetings usually aren't. It looks like we might raise a good deal more under the new financial plan than under the old."

Another note of optimism comes from G. L. Morelock, of Nashville, Tenn., speaking in Washington, N. C. "Mr. Morelock rejoiced over the gains which are being evidenced throughout Southern Methodism. Everywhere genuine optimism is asserting itself. He called special attention to the new financial plan, embracing as a basic principle, the voluntary idea."

Frankly the above system should be given a real chance in our conference and denomination before we, under the weight of our debts, fold up our hands and move over in some other denomination.

H. F. FOGLEMAN.

Denton Church Raises McCulloch Memorial Fund

chairman of this district, it was decided that he was to raise Canaan's quota and that I was to raise the balance. After a conference with the pastor and our agreement as to what each should raise, I called the President of the Laymen's Fellowship to my home Saturday night and presented the matter to him, and he finally agreed to raise this fund in the Denton church. And when he left he said, 'I will try to raise this tomorrow.' I presented the matter to the Sunday school, then the President of the Laymen's Fellowship announced his workers for the canvass, and yesterday afternoon the President came to my home and announced the entire amount raised in cash or pledges. I was so elated over the raising of the entire amount for Denton that I had to go over to the parsonage last night to report it, and to my surprise and delight, Mr. Bowman reported that he had raised his quota at Canaan yesterday. The President of our Laymen's Fellowship is Mr. Paul Hamilton, who was just elected this past week, and this first effort on his part seems to promise a successful year for the organization."

And so, there you are, DENTON CHARGE, the first in all the North Carolina Annual Conference to report raised in full. Three cheers for Denton charge, for Pastor Bowman, for Conference President of the Laymen's Fellowship, Brother Rogers, and for the local president, Brother Hamilton, and all the people. Denton has certainly set the pace for all the rest of the charges.

GROUP INSURANCE FOR MINISTERS

For the sake of keeping history straight, let us say to both the proponents and opponents of Group Insurance for ministers that the proposition did not fail in 1927-28 because there was not a definite proposition presented, but because not enough ministers were willing to sign up for it. The insurance companies required three-fourths of the ministers to go into it to make it effective, and also required each minister to pay a certain part of the premiums. The Journal shows that the Annual Conference of 1928 voted to instruct the Budget Council to put $1,000 in the budget provided it was needed to pay the conference's part of the premiums. But this was not needed for the reasons already stated.

CHRISTMAS GIVING

By M. L. B.

Time and again at this season of the year we hear people say, "I'm not doing much this Christmas. I just can't afford it." Possibly you have said the same thing. I have—but I have another idea about giving now, and it seems so good to me that I want to pass it along to others, feeling that possibly it will help them as it has helped me.

Is it true that we do not have anything to give? It may be that we do not have a lot of money; but what of that? Do we not have many other gifts which we can really give—gifts that are more enduring than those which money will buy?

Look about you—possibly your neighbor is "blue" and needs a word of cheer. It does not take money to go and sit with her a while—yet this little action may do a world of good. Then, there may be someone you know who is almost down and out, and a word of encouragement from you will change his outlook. It is said that there is good even in the worst criminal. Search for the good—it is the God within the person——and praise it. The results will be a surprise to you.

There may be one to whom a letter would be worth more than money—write that letter of cheer, understanding, or love. There is the young person in need of a word of guidance, of understanding advice—not criticism, for criticism is resented, while the advice of an understanding and loving heart may make a difference for all eternity. Or you may not need to say a word, but listen understandingly. So few of us are really sympathetic with young folks. A few days ago I read a statement that when we begin to criticize youth it is a sign that we, ourselves, are growing old.

The greatest gift of all is the gift of love. A gift we may make to all about us. If your neighbor did not appear to speak as cordially as usual this morning, that should not prevent your sending the message of love to her or him. That was Jesus' teaching, and the best we can do is to follow His teaching. Two lines of a little song I learned when a child occur to me:

> "Everywhere you find men dying
> For a little bit of love."

How sadly true it is. Now, let us try giving love. Start out some morning thinking, "I'll give my love to all my world today." Then notice how well you are received by your friends and others you may meet. You don't have to say it—just think it—for they will get the message.

Each of us has something to give, and it need not be a gift that costs money—for are not the gifts of love, joy, good will, cheer, praise and understanding worth infinitely more than anything which money can buy? May we give generously of such gifts and thereby make life bright for those about us this Christmas season and throughout the coming year.

No Herald Christmas Week

In accordance with the usual custom there will not be any HERALD printed December 27, this being Christmas week. Those who have announcements for Christmas week will please send them in for the issue of Thursday of next week.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

The Peril of the Church

The hazard the church has to face today is not in the organized forces of evil outside of her; it is the unspiritual leadership in her ranks. If ever the world could have crushed the church it was in its beginning when her membership was so disproportionate to the population of the world outside her. But what the world could not do fighting the church from without it may easily accomplish by becoming a part of the membership which compose it.

An unspiritually minded leader can get in the way of every really worth-while church project and convert the church, which was organized to save the world, into a betterment society of the community. A group of people who have no concern for the benevolent, missionary and educational projects of the church except as these belong to their own community life. They can by their stolid indifference to it defeat an evangelistic campaign; by their refusal to support the claims of the general church they can keep the entire membership from contributing to them, until otherwise good people conclude that their own local interests are more important than any benevolent or missionary project the denomination can undertake. I have been informed that some even have gone so far as to take money raised for conference claims and apply it upon a purely local project.

The task of the modern church is to find a spiritually-minded leadership, regardless of where he or she is to serve. The money raiser in the church should be as spiritually-minded as the most devout class leader, and giving of money should not be exalted into an act that can be substituted for worship and soul-winning.

English Street, West Thomasville, Rev. Edward Suits, Pastor

I held the first quarterly conference of this charge in High Point, December 4. There was a fine group from Thomasville and English Street; a splendid spirit in evidence, and the people are hopeful for a good year.

The High Point church has a big problem confronting it: it is to find a permanent place to worship in, having lost their house on English Street. At the present time they are worshiping in a theatre building, which amply takes care of them, and it is believed they can use this all the winter. Pastor Suits is quite optimistic over the prospects of this new charge, and we believe it is going to prove a wise measure for the present—putting these churches together by the last Annual Conference.

Seagrove-Love Joy Charge, Rev. E. G. Cowan, Pastor

This charge with a new name is a part of the original Why Not charge. It is composed of five churches—Flint Hill, Love-Joy, Macedonia, Fairgrove, and Seagrove. There was a fair attendance of officials and considerable time was given to arranging a plan of appointment and fixing the pastor's salary. We believe the plan adopted will give general satisfaction. More and more our churches are feeling the need of having preaching in the morning, and this always troubles a charge as large as Seagrove-Love Joy.

Brother Cowan will live, for the present at least, at Seagrove, and has entered upon the work in a most enthusiastic manner. We are expecting this charge to grow under the present arrangement much faster than it has been able to grow in the past.

Liberty Charge, Rev. F. R. Love, Pastor

We held this conference Friday night. The attendance was small, only two churches represented. The attitudes of those present were good, and the pastor has begun planning for a successful year. This is Brother Love's third year on this charge, and he has done a very fine piece of work. Liberty church has been greatly improved by the work done on it and all the churches but one, we believe, paid all Annual Conference claims and pastor's salary in full.

Forsyth Charge, Rev. R. A. Hunter, Pastor

I visited Hickory Ridge, Maple Springs, and Union Ridge churches. There was a good congregation present at Hickory Ridge; the people gave good attention to the message, and Brother Hunter presented the A. C. Expense; we do not know how much was received. This is the home church of Brother R. M. Cox and sisters. We had not visited it since his father, Brother R. L. Cox, passed away. This family means so much to the life of this church. I got there in time for the closing of the Sunday school and saw them bring in their birthday gifts. If they can do that well every Sunday the treasury ought to be pretty well supplied. Four made their birthday gifts and some were in nickles and dimes. I do not think I have heard a better birthday song than is used there. Mrs. R. M. Cox is the organist, and if you really want a song that will charm the little folks get this one from her.

Maple Spring in the afternoon was an extra appointment and the attendance was small even for Maple Springs. Brother Hunter preached at Rural Hall or Oak Grove at the same time. Viewed by an occasional visitor, I think Maple Springs has a splendid opportunity for expansion. It is amidst the growing community just outside of Winston, and there is no other church near enough to them to draw upon it very much; so as seen by a visitor, Maple Springs should have one of the most active and growing congregations on the charge. The parsonage is hard by this church, which makes it a very convenient place for the pastor to live and serve all the churches.

Union Ridge church appointment was at night. The church building was pretty well filled by a responsive congregation. Here I had an unexpected pleasure of having my Seven-Point Program of Recovery endorsed and accepted by the church. Look up the HERALD of last week and read my letter; you will find this program stated there as presented to the last Annual Conference. Here the pastor presented the Annual Conference claims and received the total amount for this church.

Union Ridge is also situated just outside or rather on the outskirts of Winston-Salem. It seems to be doing very well, and is destined to become a strong church. Any church that fits into the community life of the people it is among is bound to increase its membership as the community about it is populated more densely.

This was in some respects a hard day, with three appointments, but not much travel, and the task of preaching was made lighter by the appreciation of the congregations. The congregation always adds or subtracts from the effectiveness of a sermon from 25 to 50 per cent. Many of them are unaware of this; it is a fact, nevertheless.

Denton First to Pay McCulloch Memorial Assessment

Hurrah for Denton! This charge last Sunday went over the top on this claim. It speaks well for them as well as for those who lead there.

Send all money for this claim to Rev. C. W. Bates, 906 Carolina Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Plan of Appointments

December 15—Shiloh charge.

December 16—First church, Burlington, 11 a.m.; Glen Raven at night.

December 23—Flat Rock, 11 a.m.; Bethany, 2:30 p.m.

December 30—Mebane, 11 a.m.

The McCulloch Memorial Fund

funds it was voted to sell the publishing house and apply the proceeds on the indebtedness of the college. At the time this was done, it was the hope of the Board of Education to find other revenues for the support of the Herald. But the income furnished the Herald was not equal to its expenses and there was a heavy indebtedness from year to year. After the death of Dr. McCulloch on October 1 of this year, the administrator of Dr. McCulloch's estate, by order of the Clerk of the Superior Court of Guilford County, transferred to the printers of the Herald, McCulloch and Swain, certain machinery belonging to Dr. McCulloch, which balanced the printing account up to 1930. But from that date to the time the Annual Conference took over the paper there was a deficit of $3,331.80 which the Annual Conference assumed as a moral obligation, since the Conference had received the benefit of the paper for all of its promotional work. The Conference proposed to raise this amount to pay this debt to the printers through the McCulloch Memorial Fund. Dr. C. W. Bates and Dr. R. M. Andrews were named as a committee and they were given power to name a third member of the committee to work with them. The member they named is Mr. J. G. Rogers, of Denton, N. C., the chairman of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Annual Conference. This committee is amply able to speak for its self, and it will speak its mind as to its plans and purposes.

But the question might come to someone, Why should the Annual Conference try to raise this memorial fund? The answer might be given, First, it is our way of telling the world how much we valued Dr. McCulloch and his work. Those who are familiar with the work of our church in North Carolina know what a large part Dr. McCulloch played in the development of our church. The Herald was the medium of expression of our people and without it these great things could not have been done. As has been stated on various occasions, it is very doubtful whether we would have our Children's Home and High Point College had it not been for the Herald. Furthermore, it is doubtful whether we could have built churches in a great many of our towns and cities without the aid of the Herald. It informed our people and encouraged and inspired them, and we now see the results of its work. Since these things are so, it seems but reasonable that we should try to pay for that which we have used without Dr. McCulloch's estate having to be completely dissipated to pay the bill which legally was his but morally was ours. If we admired Dr. McCulloch and have any money we can spare, then this will be a good way to express to others our admiration. But the man who can give and will not, will not be in a very good position to sing the praises of this great leader of the church.

The second reason that we will give is that we need to give in order that we may grow by the giving. And people do grow by giving. God seems to have realized this from the beginning and has so planned things that "the liberal soul shall be made fat." There are many people today who are largely what they are because they have invested their money in worthy enterprises. Man cannot give to a good cause in the right spirit without being made better. To lay our money on the altar and put this thing across in a creditable manner will mean the enlargement of interest in the church on the part of a large number of our people. It is true that we do not have many people who are able to give large sums, but we do have a good many people who can give the smaller amounts, and these put together will make the larger amount.

Finally, we need to raise this, in order that we may discharge our obligation to ourselves, to the printers, and to our God. If we have received something, we ought to be willing to pay for it. Some may say they have paid the price of the subscription, but the paper is worth far more than that to the person who reads it and wants help in the solution of his problems. The information and inspiration which people have received from the paper cannot be measured in dollars and in cents.

CHILD SAVED BY READING THE BIBLE

A missionary, in the early days, stopped at a crossing of a stream to water his horse. Nearby stood a little boy of seven years of age. The missionary entered into a conversation with the boy, that ended in his offering the little fellow some money, if he would go home and read the third chapter of John over three times. The boy agreed to do this, and the missionary went on. Twenty years later, he met this boy, a man in his own home, and learned that it was the reading of this special Scripture that so impressed him that he became a Christian.—Sunlight for the Young.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. LINDLEY

Five Types of Preparation

There are several forms the preacher may use in organizing the material for the sermon. Perhaps no one should practice any particular method at the expense of all the others. One's ability, the nature of the discourse, the occasion and the type of people to whom the sermon is directed serve to influence the pattern to be employed. The following types are in rather general use.

1. Extemporaneous Speaking—This form could hardly be called a type of preparation if it is to be purely extemporaneous. It cannot well be termed preparation, since it implies the process of speaking without thought or organization of material beforehand. Fortunately, very few preachers, if any at all, rely upon this type of delivery. It is weak, dangerous, and undignified, unbecoming the minister, and without much appeal to an intelligent audience. It is not to be recommended.

2. Writing the Entire Production—This method we discussed last week and will, therefore, say little about it now. It is well to remember, though, that "writing maketh the exact man."

3. Written Notes to Follow—Perhaps this is the most popular of all types of preparation. In this case the speaker writes out the main points of the discussion with the material, illustration, etc., arranged after each heading. Then the speaker looks at the notes, enlarges upon them, dwelling a rather indefinite length of time upon each. The outline is there, also several ideas and sentences supporting the various propositions, but the wording is left to be "discovered" as the speaker proceeds. By this method the argument or discussion is directed from stage to stage in an orderly and logical fashion. Perhaps the greatest difficulty lies in the fact that suitable words may not come to mind with which to explain, clothe and beautify the main contentions of the outline. Sometimes the ideas crowd into the mind and sometimes they do not. The skeleton is there, but the meat is often very scarce. Then, too, when words do come they may not be choice, strong and dignified enough, but cheap and common. Still the busy pastor employs this type of preparation: it insures good thought, an orderly style, and at the same time lends itself to freedom in delivery, giving that element of spontaneity so much appreciated by the hearers.

4. The Memorized Outline—Some ministers write out their outline, place the sub-ideas under the main points, but never take the manuscript into the pulpit. They memorize the points in the order they come in the outline. This method is to be commended. It gives the speaker freedom in delivery; allows him to face the hearers directly while speaking, gathering inspiration from the audience as he goes along. What he misses by not having the full notes before him he gains in spontaneity and inspiration. Too, it tends to confer upon the speaker new power, since his attention is fastened more completely upon the faces of the audience rather than upon his paper. The speaker that follows this type, though, is tempted to lean too heavily upon feeling and excitement, and when he yields to these his speed increases and his message tends to get beyond his control, mounting higher and higher into the noisy and artificial flights of professionalism. If you are good on memorizing and can regulate your speaking to a fine degree, this pattern may be the one for you.

5. Write out the most important parts. A great many speakers have found that a combination of these methods is what they really like. They prefer some freedom, some outlining and some writing. This they achieve by a careful writing of the most important parts of the sermon. The introductions of the main points and the conclusions of the same are to be rendered in the very choicest words. If a thing is worth saying, it is worth saying well, they feel, and try to live up to this motto. As any one main division of the message is to be climaxed, let it be so arranged and worded as to carry great force. This can be done by a careful selection of words for the purpose. Like building a brick wall, the inside and the outside surfaces are to be smooth and finished with coarse and rougher material thrown between. In a similar manner the sermon is to be built with a fine beginning and a fine ending. If there is any common, rough material to be used at all, let it come along in the less noticeable body of the discourse. The relatively unimportant parts may be left to chance, more or less, but the supreme moments of the sermon are to be achieved by hard work and artistic care.

FAMILY PRAYER

The family altar is one of the oldest and best institutions in the world, and blessed is that family where such is established. It is better to live in a cot or a cabin, with an altar, than a palace without one.

It makes the Lord a welcome Guest, and a member of the family, and it is very comforting to know that we can confer and have fellowship with Him as the Man of our counsel.

It is a sad thing to be without God in the home. It is like being in a tempest-tossed ship without compass or rudder.

Samson became weak as other men, and an easy prey to his enemies, when the Lord left him. So it will be to all those who discard the family altar. The altar is as much needen in the home as a fire on a cold day, or a lamp on a dark night.

No home is complete, no matter how elegantly adorned, without an altar of prayer. Minus this, it is like a watch without a mainspring.

As parents are interested in the mental education of their children, so they should be in the spiritual culture of the heart.

The family altar is a connecting link between our earthly and our heavenly home, and if it was more generally established there would be fewer drunkards, divorces, and suicides than there are.—Publisher Unknown.

Church Reports That Come Too Late

Several church reports came in on Thursday of last week, and had to be carried over to this week. Some short articles reaching us on Wednesdays are printed each week, but nothing that comes after Wednesday can be printed that week. Correspondents will please take note of this.

OUR STORY PAGE

A VERY SHORT LESSON

"Oh, dear!" whined James. "I just hate to do errands. Does Sarah need the sugar right away?"

"Right away," said mamma. "She is baking doughnuts, and wants the powdered sugar to roll them in while they are warm. Run, dear, and get it as soon as you can."

"When I get big I'll never do a single thing that I don't want to," said James, when he was back at his play once more. "It seems little boys have to do all the mean jobs, and it isn't fair."

"But you like doughnuts so well," said mamma, "and Sarah does so many nice things for you that I should think you would like to do errands for her once in a while. Do you think you would be happier if you only did the things you enjoy?"

" 'Course," said James, promptly. "I'd like to try that way for awhile."

"Well, suppose you do this week. We'll do just the things we like, and see if we get along better. I think you will be ready to go back to the old way before supper time, though."

"Indeed I won't, mamma. That is the best thing you could say, for I want to play in the sandpile all day at my fort without having a single thing to do. Are you sure you mean it?"

"Perfectly certain, James. We will wait till you are ready to go back to the old way, if that is a month."

James came into the house for dinner at noon.

"Nothing but bread and butter for dinner?" said James in great surprise. "I'm hungry as anything."

"I told Sarah to get some other things," said mamma, buttering a slice of bread for herself, "but she said she wanted to finish canning her berries. She hates cooking anyway. Don't you want anything for dinner?"

"Yes, please spread me some bread, mamma."

"I just hate to spread bread, dear. Help yourself."

"This is the afternoon of the party, mamma," said James after dinner. "When will you get me ready? I'm afraid I'll be late."

"I don't want to stop reading," said mamma. "I thought we were to do only the things we liked today, and I don't like to leave this comfortable chair."

James went slowly to his room and began to put on his new suit by himself, but everything went wrong. A button came off, and he couldn't find his shoes, and his hands looked dirty in spite of all his efforts, and the first thing anybody knew the big tears were rolling down his cheeks. "I want to go back to the old way, mamma," he sobbed, throwing himself down on the floor by her side. "I didn't know how horrid it was to be selfish till today."

"Are you sure?" asked mamma, lifting the little head from her lap to look straight into the tearful eyes. "Do you want to do the hard jobs along with the easy ones?"

"Well, well," said Sarah, next day, "how's this? My kindling basket's full, and I didn't have to say a word about the scraps for the chickens. I think a small boy must have had a very good time at the party yesterday."

"I did! but I found out before I went that it doesn't pay to be mean and selfish," said James.—Publisher Unknown.

WHY MYRA WAS NOT HAPPY

Yes, why was she not happy? The other girls thought her the luckiest girl in school. How they wished they were in her place! How they would like to have stood up before the whole school, and all the visitors, and have Miss Tyler put a book in her hands, and say all those nice things about her being diligent, studious, etc. My! That was honor enough for a lifetime! That was what the rest had worked for all term, but Myra had taken the prize.

Why was Myra not happy? "Are you sure she was not?" Yes, I could tell by the way she looked when Miss Tyler was putting the prize in her hands that something was wrong. Instead of looking straight into her teacher's face, she kept her eyes all the time on the floor. Then when she went to her seat, she put her head down on the desk before her and began to cry. When the teacher came to her and asked her kindly what was wrong, she burst into a loud sob and said:

"Oh, Miss Tyler, I didn't deserve that prize! I looked into the book when I was writing my exercise, and copied part of it off. I know it was all wrong, and I am very sorry for it. I want you to give the prize to Ella Barton. It is she that deserves the book, and not I." And with that she handed the prize back to the teacher.

Miss Tyler was so troubled by this, that she did not know at first what to do. She would not have believed that Myra would act a lie ,if anyone had told her so but herself. How much ashamed Myra herself now felt, to have to confess that she had cheated. And yet she knew that she did right by owning up to it, and not taking the prize at the last. Every one felt that she had done the right thing, and they liked her all the more for this. But, oh, how much happier she would have been, how much happier her teacher would have been, how much happier her papa and mamma would have been, if she had never done wrong in the first place!

IT IS GENERALLY UNDERSTOOD

That people never criticize a corpse.

That a man without enemies is nobody.

That God loves a fighter—in a good cause.

That lofty ideals often live in a lowly place.

That character is what a man is—in the dark.

That a man is known by the company he does not keep.

That there is a difference between spiritual progress and a religious hurrah.

That people who succeed in these days are like postage stamps—they stick till they get there.

That a Christian who waits for an introduction to a stranger [illegible] too nice for anything.—Methodist Times.

lon cans of fruit and vegetables.

Friends of Henderson sent some packages during conference. They got listed with the things of another charge. Mrs. Dixon was crippled up that week and I was away at conference. We are sorry for the confusion. We hope yet to be able to give a correct report.

Note.—Please help us to say thank you. We want to list each article and each dollar correctly, and make accurate report of same. Mark packages and offerings well. A good offering came during last week, but we had to guess where it came from, and do not know yet who sent it. We thank you once and over again for all your help.

While we are writing today the snow is falling rapidly. Winter is upon us. We need your prayers and your constant help. God bless His people everywhere.

Yours in His blessd service,

A. G. DIXON, Superintendent.

Woman's Missionary Department

Mission Band, Gideon's Grove Church.—The Mission Band of Gideon's Grove church, Flat Rock Charge, held the regular monthly meeting at the home of Helen Angel last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with Helen Angel acting as hostess. Thirty-one members and five visitors were present. The membership of the Mission Band is now 37. The new officers elected at the November meeting presided, with Mary and Olivia Lemmons as program leaders. A splendid program was rendered, after which the business was conducted by the president, Paul Parrish. The boys and girls enjoyed a contest, in which a prize was given. At the close of the meeting refreshments consisting of Christmas fruits were served. A Christmas tree was placed in the parlor where the meeting was held; Christmas gifts were put on the tree for the children. This feature of the meeting was a very delightful one. This brought the Christmas spirit to the children and older ones, too.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Orelia and Eloise Friddle.

MRS. KIME WRITES FROM FLORIDA

Mrs. Kate Harris Kime, daughter of the late Dr. C. F. Harris, one of the ablest of our ministers fifty years ago, writes from her home in Miami, Fla., that she attended the General Convention in Baltimore in 1877 when the Southern division of the church met in the Lombard Street church and the Northern and Western divisions of it met in the Star church. She marched with the Southern division from Lombard Street church over to the old Star church where the two divisions of the church were reunited into one Methodist Protestant church. She says we never heard singing unless we heard that group sing. They first sang "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," and then they sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." She also says these songs as sung by that conference have been ringing in her ears for half a century.

We wonder if there is anybody else that is a member of any one of our churches in the N. C. Conference who was in this meeting in Baltimore. If there is, we shall be glad to know about it.

REMEDY!

Just so long as some people can live in luxury by selling worthless stock, and thereby rob many people of their hard-earned savings, leave many stranded in their old age and cause some to commit suicide; and so long as such people can boldly run at large (remain out of jail) and be lauded as "big business men," just so long may we expect to have disrespect for law and its attendant evils—gangsters, robbers, kidnapers, etc., preying upon America. Jail the big thieves, as well as the petty thieves, regardless of their social and business standing.—Albert A. Riggs.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bethel Home.—All of our Bethel Home friends who have visited us during the past five years remember Margaret Smith. She passed from earth to her eternal home on Thursday evening, December 6th. We shall greatly miss her, but remembering the strength of her character, and how brave she was during the years of sickness that ended her earthly life at the age of 20 years, we will be stronger for whatever ills life may hold for us. Calvary, Greensboro.—The following was sung by Mrs. Robah H. Fields, who at the same time was expressing the sentiments of everyone's heart present when Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard were honored by the members of the congregation of our church last Thursday evening at a reception in the church hut:

"Calvary welcomes you,
So heartily.
Our love is all for you,
Devotedly.
The year that's past has been
The best, we think, so then
We hope to help you win
Hearts for Him.

"We'll work each day with you,
Steadfast and true,
Along the way with you,
Loyal to do
The best we can, and, too,
Through rain and skies of blue
We pledge ourselves a-new,
All to you."

Red and brown leaves were used in profusion to provide the autumn setting. Christmas wreaths were hung in the windows. Receiving guests at the door was Miss Vivian Sullivan, who introduced them to the receiving line, which was composed of Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard, Howard R. Neece, general superintendent of the Sunday school, Mrs. J. G. Sullivan, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, and E. R. Ward, church treasurer.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer and Mrs. T. G. Coble presided at the beautifully appointed tea table. The center of the table was a low amber bowl filled with Christmas balls and banked by pine needles, pine burrs and ivy. Four red tapers burned in silver candleholders on the table. The following girls assisted in serving: Misses Ruth Laughlin, Rebecca Coble, Ruby Blalock, and Claudine Kirkman.

Mr. Neece presided over the program of toasts, readings and music. Mrs. Mabel Holden, of West End M. P. church, and Stedman Clifton presented a number of piano and violin selections. Vocal solos were offered by Mrs. Mary Bissett, Miss Edna Nicholson, Mrs. J. D. Heritage, and Mrs. Fields.

J. C. Coe, retiring superintendent of the Sunday school, gave a brief talk. A. C. Dixon spoke on "Loyalty and Service;" Dr. Pritchard welcomed four visiting ministers, Rev. W. M. Howard of Moriah church, Dr. N. G. Bethea of West End church, Rev. G. L. Curry of Tabernacle, and Rev. J. Elwood Carroll of Grace church. Each of the four responded briefly. Miss Mary Morrison contributed several readings to the program.

Dr. Pritchard used "Rewards of the Reader" for the subject of his sermon in launching "Good Literature Day" Sunday morning. The sermon was fine and was heard by an extra large audience. Following the sermon splendid brief tributes were paid the Methodist Protestant Herald by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, Floyd G. Reynolds, J. Frank Coble, and Rev. W. F. Ashburn. As the beginning of "Good Literature" week quite a number of new subscriptions have been added to the Herald list.

The fourth quarterly conference was held on Tuesday evening of last week at the hut with a good attendance. Miss Vivian Sullivan, who has served as secretary for several years, was re-elected secretary of the conference. Several plans for the new year were made.

Dr. N. G. Bethea, new pastor of West End church, and Dr. Pritchard will exchange pulpits next Sunday morning. We are looking forward to having Dr. Bethea with us.

The regular monthly meeting and annual Christmas party of the Friendly Class was held at the home of Miss Pearl McCulloch Tuesday evening. A Christmas program composed of two Christmas carols sung by everyone present, one musical recitation, one instrumental solo, two vocal solos, and one vocal duet and two contests was enjoyed by over a dozen members of the class. An exchange of gifts was the main feature of the evening. The large living room was beautifully and appropriately decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. J. E. Pritchard entertained the members of her Sunday school at the parsonage Monday evening. Their program consisted of Christmas music. A beautiful Christmas tree was the center of attraction. An exchange of gifts was enjoyed by sixteen members of the class and Mrs. Pritchard. Misses Ruth Laughlin and Velma Beam will be January hostesses to the class at Miss Laughlin's home.

A new furnace has been installed in our church, so don't stay away from church for fear of not being comfortably warm.

L. A. Pugh, one of our faithful members, is seriously ill at his home with pneumonia.

Henderson.—On the Sunday before Thanksgiving the Primary Department gave a very interesting program before the Sunday school in accordance with Thanksgiving. It was enjoyed by all.

The annual Thank-offering service was held on the Sunday after Thanksgiving. The attendance was very good, and our pastor, Rev. L. R. Medlin, brought us a wonderful sermon.

The Auxiliary meeting was postponed one week, so it was held on the first Monday evening at the church. Nineteen members were present. Mrs. S. R. Watson led the devotional, and Mrs. L. R. Gooch led in prayer. Very interesting reports were heard from all the circles. A letter was received from the A Capella Choir of High Point College, asking us to let them come to our church. We hope to have them in the early spring. It was voted to have a memorial service in honor of the members who have died this year.

The Circles have been serving the Rotary Club to obtain money to help raise their budget. It has helped considerably.

The Philathea class met this month with the president. Mrs. Alvin Nuckles, a very interesting meeting being held.

We are very anxious to have the Herald in every home, and we feel sure we will have our assessed number.

The Primary Department is working on a very interesting program for Christmas. I feel sure it will be an inspiration to all, and show the talent of our future church leaders.

Spring Hill, N. Davidson Charge.—Another Conference year has come and gone and we feel, as we look back, that we could have done more for the Master; however, we are encouraged with results obtained and pray earnestly that the incoming year will prove more successful than the past. We are glad to report the return of our pastor, Rev. C. L. Grant, and good wife and two children.

On the first Sunday afternoon of this month we were fortunate indeed to have Mr. N. M. Harrison, of High Point College, and the choir with us. Mr. Harrison delivered a wonderful message, while the choir rendered several splendid selections. We extend a hearty invitation to them to come again.

A Christmas program is being planned for December 24, at 4:30 p. m.

Coming somewhat as a surprise to their friends was the marriage of Miss Sadie Swaim to Mr. Crayton Kennedy on Saturday, November 24, at the home of Rev. C. L. Grant. Their many friends wish them many happy years of married life.

Friends of Miss Bessie Swaim will be glad to learn that she is at home and and that she is somewhat improved from a major operation. Also, Miss Stacie Hilton is confined to her home with sickness. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

May all Herald readers have a bright and happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Asheville.—It is real winter in the "Land of the Sky;" lots of snow and all the fun that goes with it. Just wish all of you could see our lovely mountains!

Our Sunday school attendance was low this week, due probably to the weather. Mrs. Wilson's Primaries tied with the Fawcett Bible class this week for the attendance record. I'm glad to know the Fawcett Bible Class is back on the job again. They had their business meeting last week, and elected the following new officers: President, Mr. H. O. Charnock; vice-president, Mrs. J. O. Hornaday; secretary, Mrs. J. F. Minnis; treasurer, Mrs. U. S. Miller; teacher, Mr. J. A. Hornaday (re-elected).

The Frances Cunningham Philathea Class led in amount of collection in the Adult department and the Junior girls in the Children's department.

First Quarterly Conference was held last Wednesday evening and was very well attended. Everyone seems anxious to make this year the best yet, and I am sure it will be. Things are a wee bit slow just now, but we will be "all there" when the weather is warm again.

There are several on the sick list this week: Dr. Robey Wilson had his tonsils out last week, and is now recuperating at his home. Mr. J. R. Moore has flu, but is improving. Betty Jean and Jack Minnis, Betty Marlowe, Edna Moore, Edele Biebinger and Mrs. C. B. Baker were all "under the weather" during the week-end, but are better.

Circle meetings were held as per schedule last week and all were well attended.

Rev. John R. Chapman is to be the chief speaker at the Christian Endeavor union meeting to be held at our church this (Tuesday) evening.

Today (Tuesday) is Mrs. J. S. Williams' birthday and all the membership of our church, and her many friends throughout the state wish her many happy returns of the day. Mrs. Williams is a splendid worker in whatever group she is, and a lovely Christian woman.

I wish, personally, to thank Mrs. Bolick and the other teachers of the Children's Department and the children for their many expressions of love on the Sunday past, and regret so very much that I was unable to be present to express my appreciation.

Union Chapel, Granville.—We are glad to welcome Rev. C. L. Spencer back as our pastor again, also Mrs. Spencer, who is such a splendid worker. Mr. Spencer brought a most inspiring sermon Sunday, using Matthew, 17th chapter, as the scripture passage.

The November meeting of the auxiliary was held at the parsonage, while the December meeting will be at the church. We hope to have a good attendance.

There will be a public Christmas program at the church on next fourth Sunday night, followed by a Christmas tree given for the first three classes of the Sunday school. Everyone is invited.

Let us all start out the new year giving our pastor the best we have of good work and hearty co-operation.

Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.—We are so glad for our Sunday school at Shady Grove. Our church is still improving. We are also proud of the Methodist Protestant church. Once since I joined the church I moved away where I could not attend the M. P. church, so I joined another church; but like the Prodigal of old, I got homesick to return to Shady Grove, and I asked God to open up a way if there was any where He would have me go. Bless His name, I am back at Shady Grove.

Our Ladies' Aid is working hard for the church. They met Sunday, December 7, at the home of Mrs. John Watson, with 12 members present. Mrs. J. L. Love conducted the devotional service and made a splendid talk. We are very proud of Mrs. Love, for she is such a help to the church. I want to correct an error in my last report. Our Ladies' Aid raised during the last year $103.75.

Rev. J. L. Love, our pastor, filled his appointment the first Sunday in December with a splendid message. We enjoy his sermons very much. The prayer meeting was held at the usual hour on Sunday evening. The scripture was read by Andrew Gorman, and there were a number of good talks made by those present.

The young men of our church have organized a Laymen's Fellowship. Claud Akins is the new president, William Angel, vice-president. They will meet once each month.

Bethesda Church, State Street.—Our church is still progressing, although we haven't had a report lately. It is due to the fact that a change in reporters has been made and I fear the new one will not be as faithful as the old one.

We were glad to have our good pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, returned to us for another year, and trust through his faithful efforts that great things may be accomplished this year. May each and every one of us be willing and ready to do our part through prayer and service.

Although the weather was bad, our pastor and a few of our good people met Thanksgiving afternoon and held services. Articles were brought in for the Children's Home. The 60 cans that our Ladies' Auxiliary canned last summer for the Home were brought in at this time.

Our Young People's Society was reorganized some time ago. Mr. Charlie Brinkley was elected president. They all seem right much interested. We trust that all will stand together for the right and do greater things this year for their Lord and Master.

Our Sunday school is filling a square of the quilt for the hospital in India. This will net $25 for World Service.

Canaan, North Davidson Charge.—We are very glad to have our pastor back with us for another year. We had a very good year last year, but there is always room for improvement. I hope Canaan will make this year one of the most successful years of its life, as we want to gain instead of losing, as there is no such thing as a standstill.

Our Aid Society met Monday, December 10, at the parsonage; there were 13 members present. We had a good program, using the Christmas spirit in our program. We are looking forward to our Christmas entertainment, which will be Monday night, December 24.

First Church, Concord.—We were assigned to this charge at the last Annual Conference after serving the St. Paul church for the past four years. We enjoyed our stay and work on that charge. We feel quite sure in our going from them that we are leaving some good people and many fine friends. And we wish for them great success in their church work this and all other conference years.

We entered upon our duties as pastor of the Concord church on Sunday following conference. We find here a church made up of a number of Christian people. These people have received us very kindly and made us feel by their deeds of kindness that we are welcome among them. We moved into the parsonage on Wednesday, November 28, and Friday night following, while we were at the young people's class meeting in the church, some one came and informed us we were wanted at the parsonage, and returning home, we were greatly surprised to find a number of people standing in the dining room and the table loaded with many good things to eat. This was just the beginning of the pounding, for we have been receiving gifts daily from these good people.

The Ladies' Aid Society have bought 12 new windowshades and a Linoleum rug for the parsonage. They have also planned to have the bed room and kitchen painted this week.

For all these good people we are thankful. And we hope that our stay among this people will be a blessing to them, and that we may have a good year's work together for our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge. — We welcome our same pastor, Rev. R. L. Vickery. He filled his appointment last Sunday evening and Sunday morning. I was not able to be there, but I am sure he preached some inspiring messages as he always does.

Our Sunday School is averaging about the same. Sorry our superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawkins', wife is in the Roanoke Rapids hospital.

The first Sunday morning after Sunday school the class leader, Mr. E. B. Pair, was called away on account of sickness. The writer read from St. John 4:9-24.

We were planning for a Thanksgiving program Thanksgiving evening, but it was so rainy we didn't have it. One of our members, Miss Elizabeth Hawkins, was united in marriage to Mr. John Lucas on Thanksgiving Day.

We are sorry Mrs. Berta Hawkins still remains ill. Mrs. E. B. Pair, Mr. J. D. Hawkins is improving, also Mrs. Mollie Hawkins, of Roanoke Rapids.

Misses Madeline and Grace Pittard had several guests one evening last week.

Mr. Arthur Hawkins spent Monday night with his brother, Claude.

Thomasville, First.—We are all very much pleased with the "new" preacher that conference sent us for another year. I hope that the church as a whole will stand by him and make a greater success this year than the church has ever known. We are proud of its past record, and thanks to our pastor for his great work, also the co-operation of the people. If only all would do their part, how much easier it would be for everyone.

I believe the ones who give and do for the cause of Christ are the ones who are happier.

We have had two new members since our last report. Mr. Carl Welborn joined on profession of faith and Mr. Banie Russell came by letter. We are glad to have these men join our church and we hope that we can be of help to them as well as they to us.

We gave a short play on Sunday night, December 2, entitled "Blessings." The offering amounted to $15.06. This went as our thank-offering to the Children's Home.

Next Friday night the Ladies' Auxiliary are having a Christmas social. A special Christmas program is being planned with a Christmas tree.

On Saturday, November 24, Miss Daphne Lanier was married to Mr. Coy Bryant. They are making their home with the bride's mother on Warner Street.

The Girls' Friendly Class held their regular monthly class meeting in their classroom with all members present except two. The occasion was in honor of the teacher's birthday. After the business was discussed the class presented their teacher with lovely gifts. A social hour was then enjoyed.

We sympathize with the family of W. Raymond Westmoreland in his recent death. He had been critically ill for three weeks in Duke Hospital. His funeral was held in Fair Grove Church last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Hon. J. Walter Lambeth, Rev. T. Glenn Madison and Rev. Dwight Ware, pastor of Main Street M. E. church, in charge of the service.

The deceased was an ex-service man, having served during the World War. The American Legion conducted the services at the grave. The American Legion Auxiliary was in charge of the flowers.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Carrie Trotter; his mother and four brothers, Reuben, of Greenville; S. C. Ridley, of Hickory, N. C.; Stuart and Edgar, of Thomasville, and five sisters, Mrs. L. Walker, Mrs. Ed Johnson, Mrs. Clarence Culbreth, Mrs. Robert Williams, of Thomasville, and Mrs. James Streetman, of Lexington, N. C.

Our Christmas exercises will be on Sunday night, December 23. A group of girls and boys from the Children's Home will give the program. We will also have a Christmas tree the same night.

Pine Bluff, Midland Charge.—It has been some time since a report has gone in from our church. We are very glad indeed to have the opportunity of reporting again. We were all very glad to have our new pastor with us the first Sunday in December. He brought us an interesting sermon.

Our Sunday school is getting along very nicely. We are hoping it will improve.

Mr. O. B. Furr and Mr. McCoy visited our Sunday school today. Mr. Furr made a very interesting talk. Everyone enjoyed it. His subject was on the Herald subscriptions. Mr. Conrad Mabry and Roy Von Cannon were appointed a committee for the Herald. We are planning to have our Christmas program on Christmas Eve. Everyone is invited.

Mt. Zion Church, Randolph Charge. — At this, the beginning of a new conference year, I will try to write a few lines to the Herald and its readers in regard to our church. We have ended a very successful year under the leadership of Rev. Edward Suits. There have been a few substantial members added to our church in the past year. The membership of our church is aattending church services more regularly, and the spiritual condition of the church heems to be good.

Our new pastor, Rev. Geo. Reynolds, preached his first sermon for us the first Sunday in December, bringing to us a message that should be profitable to all present, emphasizing the point that we are indebted to each other. With our new pastor in charge, we hope to work in unity and have a very successful year.

Our Sunday school is going along nicely under the leadership of C. M. Hunt. The Sunday school is planning to have a Christmas entertainment Monday evening, December 24. A program will be given by the children which will consist of speeches, dialogues, and singing. As time goes on, I hope to write again. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

JESSIE HOOVER, Reporter.

Love's Grove, Midland Charge.—As there has not been a report from this church in some time, and since I have been elected reporter, I will try to let you hear from us. We are still pressing forward in the Master's work. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the leadership of Brother John Little. He and his faithful teachers are always on the job. If we as teachers would read our Bibles and sit at the feet of our great Teacher, Jesus Christ, more, we could teach more acceptably. Our new pastor filled his appointment here December 9 with a sermon on Thanksgiving. The sermon was enjoyed very much and I think we will like Brother Trollinger fine. One thing I do know is that we are co-workers with him, can help him, and bear him up with our prayers. If we will only do this, we will have a pleasant and prosperous year in our Master's vineyard.

JOHN N. SMITH, Reporter.

Mill Grove, Midland Charge.—Our quota for the Herald, I believe, is 60 for this year for the charge, and we were mighty glad to see O. B. Furr's name from our church on top of the list for subscriptions sent in in last week's Herald. Although I would like to say that we have appointed two committees to take subscriptions. O. B. Furr and Mrs. C. W. Misenheimer, and Mrs. Misenheimer turning her Herald subscriptions over to Mr. Furr to send in. Therefore, O. B. Furr does not deserve all the credit for being on top of the list last week, and I am sure Mr. Furr will be glad I made this explanation. We feel that the Midland Charge is going to get up her quota for the Herald this year. Pine Bluff has appointed a committee of two to take subscriptions also. Not having heard from Love's Grove, cannot say what steps they have taken, but know they will come up with their part in anything the church sponsors as they always do.

Rev. W. D. Reed, our former pastor, moved to his new location since the last write-up, Friendship. His friends will miss him very much. Brother Reed was one of the best we ever had on this circuit, for many things. One special thing he deserves credit for: visiting the sick, not only the Methodist Protestant, but the Baptist and other denominations. When they were sick, Brother Reed was there, and if the medical doctor was out of town he could very nearly fill the bill until the doctor came. He always had good advice to offer for the ailment. We will miss him I am sure.

Last Wednesday night the stewards met. Brothers O. B. Furr, C. W. Misenheimer, S. N. Garmon and L. W. McCoy are the stewards for Mill Grove church this year. We hope to make a success in our work, and ask the prayers of all Christian people to pray for us to make a success.

Christmas is close by. Our Christmas tree and program will be at our church on Monday night, December 24. Everybody is invited to come and be with us. We hope to have a nice time. But let us all remember to give our Heavenly Father the praise for what blessings He blesses us with. I think so many times we take self credit for what we do, and like for men to boast of our good works. If we forget that and give God the credit, let our light shine, the world will know about it.

Rockingham.—The members of the M. P. church have started off the new conference year with much interest and enthusiasm. We were sorry to lose our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trolinger, and wife. We wish them much luck and success on their new charge.

As much as we regret losing Brother Trolinger, we wish to welcome our new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Bell. We are hoping to do more this year than ever before with the help of God. Rev. Mr. Bell on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock delivered a wonderful message from the text, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calliing of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:13-14). His subject for the night service was: "Supreme Gift to God." Text was taken from Corinthians 2:5, "And this thing they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord and unto us by the will of God." There was a good-sized congregation at these services, but we hope it will increase.

Our first quarterly conference met here Saturday, December 8. There was a good representation from the Bethesda church. Our second quarterly conference will meet at Bethesda at an early date.

Our Christmas program is being prepared and we hope it will be the best yet.

There seems to be a great interest in our Sunday school. We hope to see the church prosper and its people line up for God and His service.

ELLEN V. MARTIN, Reporter.

Albemarle.—We are glad to welcome Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Williams to our church. Our earnest desire is that they may enjoy the fellowship of the people to the extent that we may all profit, both spiritually and socially. From the interest that has been shown in the services it looks as if our Conference year will be very successful. We are glad to report that the attendance has been very good.

On Monday of last week a large number gathered at the church, then went in a body to the parsonage to give Rev. and Mrs. Williams a surprise pounding, which was greatly appreciated.

The first quarterly conference was held last Wednesday night. Plans were made for the coming year.

The Ladies' Auxiliary met at the church Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Ira Smart. After the business hour a very interesting program was given by Mattie Plyler Circle. The Lucy Hatley Circle had charge of the social hour.

We are planning to reorganize the Christian Endeavor at an early date. All the young people are looking forward to reorganization since it has been some time that we have had a Chistian Endeavor in this church.

Mr. C. B. Efird and Mr. D. F. Helms gave a chicken stew for the members of the junior choir and Mr. Helms' class of boys, in the dining room of the church on November 27. Mr. Efird is director of the choir.

About 45 young people enjoyed the occasion. Our new pastor and wife were invited guests, also Mrs. A. A. Wagner, pianist for the choir.

Rev. Mr. Williams gave the invocation. After the supper Mr. Williams made a short talk, which was much enjoyed by the young people. Mr. Efird and Mr. Helms also made short talks and Mr. Jimmy Hatley spoke in behalf of his class, and Miss Mabel Lipe in behalf of her class.

All reported a jolly good time.

The Christmas program is in charge of Mrs. J. E. Gantt and Mrs. D. J. Hatley this year. We are sure they will plan a very interesting progam.

Mr. Fred Trexler, one of our members, is in the hospital suffering from lock-jaw. His condition was considered very serious, but at the last report he was some better. We want to ask everyone to pray for him.

◆

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—We want to thank Annual Conference for sending Rev. Q. L. Joyner back to us again this year. We had a good year last year, and it was a pleasure to work with him, and we hope to be able to accomplish a greater work in our Master's service during the coming year. Let us all pledge our love and co-operation.

At this time we are planning a Christmas tree and program to be given Tuesday night, December 25. We extend to every one a hearty welcome.

The new officers for church and Sunday school have been elected for the coming year. Mr. Roy Chambliss was re-elected Sunday school superintendent. He is a loyal worker for the church and we feel that we were wise in re-electing him. Let us all do our best to have a good school. We need your prayers and co-operation.

With prayers and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

MRS. R. A. SHELL.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We are another of those churches who gladly welcome back our pastor, who is Rev. Robert Short, also his wife, son and daughter.

Rev. K. G. Holt has taken over the work on Yarborough charge, and we wish for them much success. Since this has been done we will have two preaching Sundays a month instead of one. We certainly are glad this is possible, for our church has gone down since we had been having only one. But we aren't discouraged. No, we are full of hopes for a successful year. Rev. Mr. Short gave us two inspiring sermons Sunday. At the morning service he installed the officers. So, with everyone co-operating, we are hoping to have a record God will be pleased with at the close of the year.

Plans are being made for the Christmas tree for the children Christmas Eve night.

Several of our faithful members were missing Sunday. Among them were Mrs. W. R. Harrison, who is confined to her bed with deep cold and sinus trouble; also, Mrs. N. G. McClimon, whose little daughter, Anita, is very ill, were both missed. Mrs. A. A. Foster, was also missed on account of the illness of her little daughter. Mrs. W. M. Compton has been ill for several days. The speedy recovery is hoped for one and all, and our prayers are sent up in their behalf.

We had a number of visitors at our Sunday school Sunday morning. We are always glad to have people from other churches worship with us and welcome them back.

Remember us in your prayers that we may be shining lights for the Kingdom of God.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Bingham, filled his appointment at Stallings church yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. Everyone enjoyed the sermon so much. We think that we all are going to like Bro. Bingham and family. We hope and pray that he is going to like us. We are going to stand by Bro. Bingham and do our whole part.

We are hoping that Bro. Henderson and family are liking their new home fine.

Our Sunday school is growing and getting along fine.

Our Ladies' Aid Society met the first Thursday of this month at 2:30 p. m. with Miss Naomi Honeycutt. We opened our meeting with a song. Mrs. M. L. Stallings led in prayer. We read the 18th chapter of St. Matthew as our devotional. Those taking part on the program were Mrs. Arch McLeod, Mrs. Bingham, Mrs. D. C. Stallings, and Miss Naomi Honeycutt. Mrs. Bingham led in prayer. The roll was called. We re-organized our society. All of the old officers were re-elected for another year. Our collection was $2.70. After the usual buhiness Miss Honeycutt served delicious refreshments. Mrs. Bingham joined our society. We were dismissed by Mrs. Tracy Helms.

We ask all the Herald readers to pray for us that this may be a good year for us.

MRS. M. L. STALLINGS.

Grace, Greensboro—The Annual Conference, which adjourned three weeks ago, left behind it many pleasant memories. The good fellowship, the morning devotions conducted by honored superannuates, and the presence and the strong messages of the President of the General Conference, other General Conference representatives, and of fraternal messengers from Methodist Conferences, were outstanding features. The great service Sunday morning, the overflowing congregation, the fine music, the clear and convincing ordination sermon by Dr. Paschall, and the consecration of two fine young men to the work of the ministry, made one feel that "a day in thy courts is better than a thousand." The Annual Conference should never lack for invitations. Its entertainment is not burdensome, and the presence of its members should mean a benediction to the church, the town, and the homes which receive them.

The first quarterly conference was held November 28. The pastor presented a series of recommendations which were readily adopted, and which indicate a forward movement for the year. Committees were appointed to handle the questions of Vacation Church Schools, special religious services, church grounds, and visitation plans, in addition to the usual committees which had existed heretofore.

The second Sunday in December was observed as Bible Sunday, and Mr. Carroll's sermon was appropriate to the occasion. His remarks concerning Luther's translation, made 400 years ago, were of especial interest. The entire sermon was a strong plea for the Book, the world's best seller, yet, in fact, to a great extent a forgotten book.

The choir, under the direction of Bynum R. Clapp, with Mrs. R. E. Morrisette as organist, is doing fine work. It was announced that next Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock a "candle-light" service will be given, consisting of Christmas music, with Scripture readings. The choir will be augmented by a number of visiting musicians. The public is cordially invited, and we should be especially pleased to have members of the other Methodist Protestant churches of the city enjoy this occasion with us.

Greer's Chapel, Shiloh Charge.—We are off to a good start on our new Conference year. To begin with, Rev. and Mrs. Ridge were returned. They have been with us only one year, but both of them have endeared themselves to us, and we would have been greatly disappointed had they not returned.

Although our community is still somewhat under the depression, we were able to send our pastor to Conference with a report "Paid up in full," and we hope to carry on in the new year.

Our church has indeed been unfortunate in losing four of its oldest members during the past year—Mr. C. F. Fitzgerald, Mr. Billy Walser, Mr. Noah Walser and Mr. J. B. Bailey. Mr. Bailey, who lived near the church, was always present at services when it was possible, with his pleasant smile and cheery "Good morning." He will be greatly missed in the church and community. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

Mr. Ridge will fill his appointment next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Let every member be present if possible, and through our co-operation and prayers let's make our church work a greater success this year than ever before.

Denton.—Another Conference year has closed. We are glad to report a very successful year just past, and we are looking forward to a better year than ever before.

We are all indeed glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Bowman back with us for another year. I am sure the membership of our church is willing to co-operate with them in making this year the most successful we've ever had.

On Sunday, December 2nd, Mr. Bowman preached for the first time this year. Both morning and evening services were inspiring and well attended.

We are very proud of our Ladies' Aid Society which recently presented to the church a beautiful carpet.

Another society that we are really proud of is the Christian Endeavor. A very loyal group of young people who seem to enjoy doing their duty.

Our Sunday school is very much alive and we have good attendance most of the time and our supeprintendent, J. G. Rogers, always has something interesting for every Sunday.

The Young Woman's Auxiliary met on Tuesday night, November 28, at the home of Mrs. Geo. Haltom. All members could not be present due to illness and some were out of town. Before our program we were invited into the dining room where a delicious buffet supper was served. The Auxiliary accepted an invitation from the Asheboro Auxiliary Monday night, December 3rd. All who went enjoyed the meeting very much. We hope that they will return the visit real soon.

MARJORIE CRANFORD.

Bethel, Flat Rock Charge.—I think everybody was pleased to have Mr. Way back with us for another year. He brought us a splendid message last Sunday morning, his subject being "What Shall We Do for the Betterment of our Church and Community Through the Coming Year," and indeed there are many things that should be done if we will only do them, I trust that each one of us may do more this year for our Lord and Master than ever before. We have had so many blessings this past year, although many have had sorrows, but they must come, too. Without them I am afaid we would grow too worldly. Some of the ladies and girls are preparing a Christmas program which will be given on Monday night, December 24th.

Our Sunday school is doing very nicely, though more could come, I'm sure.

Christian Endeavor each Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. We were glad to have with us last Sunday several visitors, among them being four young people, visitors of our pastor and family, who came from a distance, but I have forgotten their names, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Jones and Miss Alva Lee Combs, of Greensboro.

The farmers of this community were very glad to see the nice rains of last week, as grain crops were very much in need of rain.

We wish our new editor much success in the management of our Herald.

Best wishes to all the readers.

REPORTER.

New Salam, Randleman Charge.—Here we are at the beginning of a new conference year. What are we going to do with it? Are we going to make it a success, or are we going to drift along and not do anything for the Master?

Let's make it a success instead of a failure by pushing and boosting our pastor and church.

We can succeed if we only try hard enough, so let us get to work and make this a year not to be forgotten.

We are grateful to have our good pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, and family, return to us, for he is indeed a good pastor and a splendid preacher as well. He is a spirit-filled man.

Last Sunday afternoon, December 2, Pastor Trogdon held the first service of the conference year. The subject was "What the Church Means to Me."

At Rev. Mr. Trogdon's last appointment at our church before the Annual Conference, new officers were chosen in the church for the ensuing year. Practically all the old officials were elected to their posts.

We are also proud to state that we have added a piano to our church equipment.

I am very sorry to note that one of our neighbors and Sunday school members, Mr. J. B. Henley, was laid to rest in the Browers Chapel church cemetery Tuesday morning, November 20. He will be greatly missed in Sunday school and church, as well as in the home.

Mrs. E. C. Hinshaw, one of our members, has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the loss by death on Friday night, November 23, of her brother, Eugene Ferree, who died in a government hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah. The body was brought to Asheboro for funeral and burial.

MRS. R. L. WARD, Reporter.

Gideon's Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—We are pleased to have our same pastor return to us. We hope to make this year better than last. Rev. C. B. Way filled his regular appointment the first Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. We were glad to have visitors present for this service, from Asheboro, a nephew of the pastor and friends of his. On the second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock he brought us a forceful sermon, using a text taken from First Corinthians 3:9, "For we are laborers together with God." The congregation was larger than usual. We extend an invitation to the visitors to come and worship with us again. Mr. Nance, who is conducting a singing here, was present, with his quartet and rendered two special selections, and directed the choir. The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held at the home of Mrs. D. P. Lemons Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A Christmas program is being arranged by the Sunday school to be given the fourth Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

MRS. FOLSOM ANGEL, Reporter.

Cedar Cliff, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Our church has responded wonderfully to our new pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead. He preached his first sermon at our church Sunday afternoon, November 24. It was enjoyed immensely.

Sunday morning, November 16, we took our offering for the Children's Home.

The people of this church surprised Rev. and Mrs. Whitehead with a pounding after the service.

We are planning a Christmas program and a tree with a treat for each member of our Sunday school, although we have not definitely decided what date we are going to give it.

The marriage of the former Miss Allena McPherson to Mr. Lawrence Faulkner has added a new member to our Sunday school. We are very glad to welcome her into our midst. Mr. Faulkner is already a member.

BERTHA BOGER, Reporter.

Roberta.—We, the people of Roberta Methodist Protestant church, are happy to have our former pastor, Rev. Earl Cook, back for the year 1934-35. He has only been with us for a year, but we feel, with his leadership and guidance, that we have accomplished much. We wish to express our appreciation to him for his work in laying plans and helping us to free our church from debt. Rev. Mr. Cook gives us two services every Sunday, at 11 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. The evening services are being used principally for Bible study, which I think will be very helpful and beneficial to the people of our community. We hope to learn much about the Bible that we do not know. We hope to have a very successful year, both spiritually and financially.

A pageant, "The Sign of Peace," is being rehearsed, as well as drills and recitations, for the Christmas exercises.

The first quarterly conference will be held Friday evening, December 14th. The official members are urged to be present.

The Ladies' Auxiliary plans to have a bazaar and cake sale at Roberta school Friday evening, December 21st. As many as will are invited to bring a cake or a Christmas gift for the sale.

Come and bring your friends and let's have an old time social gathering.

REPORTER.

Concord, Lebanon.—The three years we spent in Concord were very short years, and we have some very staunch friends we will never forget. However, the best of friends will have to part, for I told them at the fourth quarterly conference to instruct their delegate for a new pastor. After conference we spent several days with friends, bidding them good-by. We moved to 1815 North Main Street, High Point, N. C., on Wednesday, December 5, to take up our new work. We found a warm house and well furnished with heavy furniture by the Ladies' Aid. We were invited by Mrs. J. W. Montgomery out to supper and it is useless for us to say we enjoyed it. The people of Lebanon have given us the warmest welcome we have ever received. Thy seem to know how to make their pastor feel welcome, and they have been giving us many good things to eat, and I am doing my part of eating.

We are planning to hold our first quarterly conference Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. R. M. Andrews will be with us and hold the conference.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

J. M. MORGAN.

Spring Church Charge.—We held our first quarterly conference in Spring church last Sunday, beginning at 2 p. m. The conference voted to hold the next on Sunday also. This pastor does not always approve of Sunday quarterly conferences, but in the face of certain conditions it certainly is right and proper. Our conditions here are such as to justify the change.

The conference Sunday was unusually well attended. Miss Aubrey Crew was elected secretary to succeed Bro. R. M. Robinson.

The A. C. B. items were apportioned to each church, and a devnite poprtion of the World Service was accepted.

The Dr. McCulloch Memorial Fund of $25 was accepted and apportioned to each church.

Each church on the charge pays regularly to the Children's Home.

It was also reported that each Sunday school is planning a Christmas service. The C. E. society at Pleasant Hill is planning a special service to be given Friday night preceding Christmas.

The work here as a whole is starting off well. Everybody, it seems, is hoping that this shall be our best year so far. We are justified in believing that it will.

The writer is pledging his best in every way to those whom he serves.

Since conference we visited Rev. and Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson, of Halifax, N. C., and Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, of Washington, N. C. In each case normal health was in evidence, and a spirit of optimism prevailed.

WM. H. NEESE.

Graham.—I am glad to be back with the Graham people for another year, and the reception of the people has been such as to assure me of their hearty co-operation in the Kingdom's enterpprise here. They are a great people to serve and the spirit of the people from the very first service has been such as to make me feel that this is going to be the best year yet.

Mrs. Chas. A. Cates has been the church reporter for a year, and at the service last Sunday she was re-elected to serve another year. Everyone is highly pleased with the splendid service she has rendered in this capacity.

At this writing Mrs. Heenan Hughes and Mrs. J. H. McPherson are confined to their homes on account of illness.

Brother Henry Evans has been in the hospital some ten days after undergoing an operation.

Pray for the speedy recovery of these members of our church.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Graham.—Universal Bible Sunday was observed at our church last Sunday. Our pastor's sermon at 11 o'clock was on the subject "Across the Barriers of Language," and in the evening he spoke on "Pilgrim's Progress." Special music was given at both services. Mrs. J. D. Lewis sang a solo, "Cling to the Bible," at the morning service. The Jarvis Brothers' quartet gave several selections at the evening service.

Mrs. Lucretia Johnson celebrated her 73rd birthday at her home Sunday. Her children and grandchildren were present to help her celebrate the occasion. Congratulations, Mrs. Johnson; we wish you many more happy birthdays.

The Auxiliary will meet on Thursday night. A "white elephant" sale has been planned for this meeting. All members of the church are invited.

Mrs. Heenan Hughes, Mrs. J. H. McPherson and Henry Evans are on our sick list. We hope them all a speedy recovery.

MRS. CHARLES CATES, Reporter.

Friendship, Mt. Hermon Circuit.—Rev. T. J. Whitehead began his work with us on the first Sunday at 11 o'clock. We are glad to have him come to serve us as our pastor for the coming year, and hope the Lord will do many mighty works through him here.

For the 11 o'clock service Mr. Whitehead chose as his subject "Call to Righteousness" and as a text Amos 5:24, "But let judgment run down as water, and righteousness as a mighty stream." Referring to the likeness in Amos' time to the time in which we are living today. "We are not living in an age different from what they lived before Christ. They had drunkenness, greed, selfishness, and luxuries. We have the same today. When we have found the call for righteousness, we must help to give it to other people."

The first quarterly conference will meet at Mt. Hermon church on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock before the third Sunday in December.

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. C. M. Mann in Burlington on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock before the third Sunday in December.

We are sorry to have to give up our superintendent, Mr. Kenneth Holt, who resigned to take cp his new work as pastor on the Yarborough charge.

CHRISTMAS ANGELS

When man from Paradise was driven,
  Beneath the ban and blight of sin,
Through the dark clouds, by Mercy riven,
  Angels the recreants came to win
Back to the path that leads to Heaven,
  And tell that God and they were kin.

But sensual pleasures had displaced
  The joys of soul, and Virtue slept,
While arms of Lust and Greed embraced
  The grovellers who had not kept
Their Maker's image undefaced;
  The guardian angels saw and wept.

Pitiless strong the weak oppressed,
  Took from the poor the fruit of toil,
The rich, by treachery dispossessed,
  To the cunning lost ill gotten spoil;
The wronged, by force their wrongs redressed,
  Reddening with blood the verdant soil.

Then Justice rose up, heavy-hearted,
  That men were sensuous, cruel, blind,
While Truth and Peace for Heaven started,
  Earth's lost happiness there to find;
But though each angel thus departed,
  Forgiveness still remained behind.

"Man's need," she said, "now more than ever
  Demands my counselling presence here,
Since Anger and Revenge endeavor,
  Whispering dark deeds in every ear,
The golden bonds of love to sever,
  And rob all hearts of human cheer."

Thus as she spoke—O sight amazing!
  A new Star in the zenith burned,
While wondering shepherds, skyward gazing,
  First the glad Christmas chorus learned,
And back to earth, God's mercy praising,
  The angel's Love and Peace returned.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Fox

Mrs. J. B. Fox, formerly Miss Margaret Pirie, our "Birdie" in love's vernacular, has gone to her rest. We have no words to express our feelings, nor indeed our appreciation of her life and love. She was always good, and ready for any good action. She grew up with the Henderson Methodist Protestant church, and has been in all of its activities.

No one ever moved our church to more interest and to greater love than did her father, when out of his experiences he would tell of "carrying the lambs in his arms." It seemed like a hillside in Scotland was nearer heaven than the rest of the earth.

"Her children shall rise up and call her blessed," but her children in the gospel shall gladly echo their responses. She was always in her place, and when the church called her answer was an action. It is good to know that "He giveth His beloved sleep"—that she has "laid down her burdens," and that she has entered into rest.

Our hope is her glad fruition, our loss is her eternal gain, and our memories will always be sweeter because of her life. She was of our loved ones, we enjoyed her comradeship, and we hope to follow her as she followed Jesus.

We would ask that this tribute be inscribed on our records and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication, and that one be sent to the members of the family with whom we are in deepest sympathy.

NOTICE

The Conference Council of Religious Education has the Christian Endeavor edition of the Scripture Text Calendar for sale. This is a very attractive calendar. It contains the following items: A very beautiful picture on the cover and on every page; a story explaining every picture; the Junior, Intermediate and Young People's subjects for every Sunday in the year; subjects of the Sunday school lessons for every Sunday; a verse of Scripture to guide your daily meditation. These calendars sell for 30 cents each. Pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavor presidents, order a few of these and sell them to your friends. The calendar would be a splendid gift. Profit goes to the Conference Council. Order from Rev. J. Clyde Auman, Graham, N. C. You need not send money with the order. Send for any number from one on up.

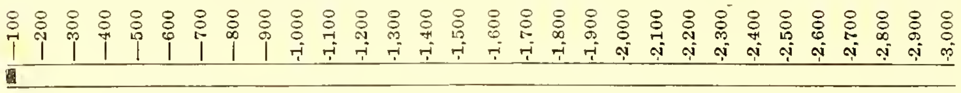
HERALD CAMPAIGN FOR 3,000 SUBSCRIBERS



YOUR CO-OPERATION IS NEEDED TO INCREASE THE LENGTH OF THIS BLACK LINE

Herald Directing Committee: C. W. Bates, chairman; E. L. Douglas, J. E. Pritchard.

	%
CALVARY	27.5
FALLSTON	20
ROBERTA	19

Well, boys, there she is this week. And my. What a week it is. For the first time since the new management took charge, the receipts passed the hundred dollar mark. This week the amount is $101.48. If we could do that well every week, how the problems would melt away. It would be like snow on a hot August day.

But look at the new lineup this week. Calvary, Fallston and Roberta. It might be said with all truthfulness that Midland came very near pushing Roberta off the stage this week, and Siler City—well, it is just too bad. But they will come again.

And while Asheboro sends in the largest single item to be credited in the column, Herald Subscription Receipts, yet if the two items sent in by Midland had been added together Midland would top the list. But we credit money in that column by the person sending it in, and so Midland's offering is split into two parts while Asheboro's is all in one. And those of you who will take the time to add up Calvary's offering will see that Calvary was a close second to Asheboro.

But Calvary can boast of one distinction that no other charge in the conference can boast of, namely, it has paid Subsidy in full. Salem church on Saxapahaw charge was credited last week with having paid its subsidy, but as we do not have any column to show the payment of an individual church on a charge, it does not show up here for what it is worth. To list by churches instead of charges would make the list so long there would not be room for it all on this back page. Maybe we can work out some system whereby individual churches can get credit when they raise subsidy in full.

Now there are so many fine payments this week I cannot mention them all. Look at the list and see for yourself.

This week also we are giving the name of the charge that is to receive the credit for the payment.

Christmas

NAHUM TATE

I

While shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground;
The angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around.

II

"Fear not," said he, for mighty dread
Had seized their troubled mind,
"Glad tidings of great joy I bring,
To you and all mankind.

III

"To you, in David's town this day,
Is born of David's line,
The Savior, who is Christ, the Lord,
And this shall be the sign:

IV

"The heavenly Babe you there shall find,
To human view displayed,
All meanly wrapt in swathing bands,
And in a manger laid."

V

Thus spake the seraph, and forthwith
Appeared a shining throng
Of angels, praising God, and thus Addressed their joyful song:

VI

"All glory be to God on high,
And to the earth be peace;
Good will, henceforth, from heaven to men,
Begin and never cease."

"Glory to God . . . Peace on Earth . . . Good Will Toward Men"

THE WHY of the McCULLOCH MEMORIAL FUND

Most of us, I think, are interested not only in what we are giving to, but we are concerned, also, to know why we are asked to give. You who read this are being asked to contribute to the McCulloch Memorial Fund. Why? I shall attempt to answer that question as briefly as possible. For part of the answer, the background of it, I refer you to the report of the Herald Committee, found on page 6, issue of November 30. That report was largely written by Brother J. Norman Wills, who has been close to the Herald and its former editor from the very beginning. But, for fear you have mislaid the paper, I want to refresh your minds with certain facts in the report.

First—For many years, up until about eight years ago in fact, Dr. McCulloch did most of the mechanical work connected with the publishing of the paper, being assisted at times by semi-skilled laborers whose services could be obtained for a nominal sum. In this way the production costs of the paper were very low; made still lower since the editor asked nothing for his services. But even with that the cost of issuing the paper was greater than the income from subscriptions. The Herald never did pay for itself, I feel safe in saying, in any year that Dr. McCulloch printed it. The actual cost was met, as the years went by, with the help derived from the income of the Publishing House. That is, it was subsidized, as all other religious papers are that I know anything about.

Second—But then two things happened. Dr. McCulloch became so feeble that he either had to discontinue the paper, or he had to find some other way of having it printed. To discontinue it was in the mind of Dr. McCulloch unthinkable. (And we ought to be eternally grateful to him that it was unthinkable.) He must find some other way to get it printed. About that same time, the Publishing House was sold in order to save the College, thus cutting off the income that he had received over and above that received from subscriptions, which, as I have already stated, had not been sufficient to pay the full cost of printing the Herald. What then to do? Try to increase the Herald subscription list to the point of self-support, and try to find a firm that would print the paper at a price so low as to enable him to meet the cost. He obtained bids from several printing firms, only to find that all prices offered were prohibitive. About this time, two young men, one the editor's son, the other the son of another of our ministers, offered what seemed to be the only possible solution. They proposed to take over the Herald printing plant, to add to it such equipment as would enable them to do a general commercial printing business, and to print the Herald at actual production cost, depending on commercial job printing to yield them a livelihood. With faith in the future, the editor and these young men entered into this agreement, and the printing firm of McCulloch & Swain was created.

Dr. McCulloch's hope that the Herald subscription list would show a marked increase did not materialize; the panic came on, and instead of increasing, the number of subscriptions steadily decreased. But his promise had to be met. He had guaranteed that the printers would get cost out of it, that they would suffer no loss. What to do? Make over to them an equity in the machinery he owned sufficient to clean up the deficit that had accumulated. And that he did. That was good so far; but it did not provide for any further deficits. So he fell upon another scheme—a double-barreled scheme: to increase the Herald subscription list to 3,000; to ask the churches and institutions to pay a certain amount so that if the subscriptions did not reach the point where the income from that source would be sufficient, there would still be a way to meet it. Well, you know the history of that effort. The number of subscriptions has been increasing since the plan went into effect, and the amount received from the Subsidy Fund has been growing. But neither has been sufficient as yet to meet the cost. There has been a deficit each year. The following figures represent the amounts of the yearly deficit that has accrued since the time that accounts were balanced by the transfer of machinery in the printing plant:

For Conference year ending November, 1930......	$ 900.00
For Conference year ending November, 1931......	691.82
For Conference year ending November, 1932......	1,060.21
For Conference year ending November, 1933......	355.77
For Conference year ending November, 1934......	324.00
Total accumulated deficit	$3,331.80

Now, who has borne this loss? To a certain extent Dr. McCulloch, for he was compelled, to keep the deficit from becoming greater, to reduce what he took out of the receipts to the barest possible amount. (Perhaps he might have been living today if he had taken more.) But the major portion came out of the pockets of McCulloch and Swain. That cost had to be met—it represented wages, paper, power, the mechanical expense. And more than that, it represented time and effort that might have been used on job work that would have brought in an income.

And, so it stands: Due McCulloch and Swain, $3,331.80, the amount that their receipts from the Herald has failed of paying the actual cost of producing the paper. This was money that Dr. McCulloch had guaranteed would be paid and had appealed to the conference to make it possible for him to pay. And why couldn't he pay it? Because the income from the Herald was insufficient. And why was it insufficient? Because not enough people took the paper to make it self-supporting. Is it a legal obligation? Not at all. It was a private arrangement entered into by Dr. McCulloch, who owned the paper, and the firm that agreed to pay it. It can come out of Dr. McCulloch's estate, AND WIPE OUT THE ESTATE. Or the Conference, meaning the members of our churches, can recognize it as a moral obligation, and determine that neither the estate nor these men who have sacrificed so much to give us the paper, shall suffer loss. And that, you will agree with me, is the only fair and Christian thing to do.

And that is the purpose of the McCulloch Memorial Fund —to do what Dr. McCulloch wished to do but could not do, because we, the real beneficiaries of the paper, did not make it possible for him in his lifetime to do; namely, to repay the firm of McCulloch and Swain, the printers of the Herald, for every cent of loss that they have sustained in the printing of the paper.

And they, the printers, have agreed that if we will faithfully discharge this debt that we have taken upon ourselves to meet, they will continue to serve the Conference by producing the paper at bare cost of production.

So, folks, come on. Raise your allotment. Send it in. Square the account. And do it now.

C. W. Bates, Chairman,
McCulloch Memorial Fund.

Davidson and Whitakers Heard From

A letter from Brother J. G. Rogers brings us the good news that he was with Rev. E. A. Bingham on the Davidson charge larst Sunday and that the charge went over the top in the McCulloch Memorial Fund. Well, this is great news. And it speaks well for the future of the North Carolina Annual Conference. The very thing is taking place these days that ought to take place. There is a shifting of the limelight from some of our churches that have so long taken the lead in things, to other places that have not in the past been at the head of things. Denton and Davidson charges have set the pace for all the rest of us. And they can boast of the fact that the district in which they are located now has raised a hundred per cent of its quota for the McCulloch Memorial Fund. Three cheers for Davidson charge!

And a card from Rev. E. O. Peeler brings the news, also, that Whitakers church has raised its quota of the Memorial Fund and that check is being sent to Dr. Bates. Great for Whitakers! Really we did not expect them to do otherwise, for they have formed the habit of doing things like this.

Now, the editor must not continue to trespass on Dr. Bates' premises by getting ahead of him each week in raving over the charges that have gone over the top. So we promise Dr. Bates now that after this we will leave him to rave over this fund, and we will go on with our raving over subscriptions,—the thing that the Annual Conference appointed us to do.

Since there will not be any Herald next week, Dr. Bates ought to have a lot to write about two weeks from now.

Would You Like to Help the Editor?

Believing that a great many people would like to help in making our work as light as possible and at the same time eliminate errors, we are listing a few things which we are asking our friends to do, also some things not to do.

If you are sending money, whether by cash, check or money order, enclose a piece of paper telling what the money is for. This ticket goes to the bookkeeper.

If you have both a business item and matter for publication, use separate pieces of paper, as one goes to the bookkeeper and the other to the printers.

Get all money and matter for publication to us not later than Wednesday noon—earlier if possible. The mailing list is corrected and turned over to the printers as soon after noon on Wednesday as possible. The subscriptions receipts column is made up and the credits are given in the received column after the mail comes in on Wednesdays. The editor and the bookkeeper check against each other to see if everything has been recorded. To undo all of this to add something is a great deal of work.

If for any reason you should be getting two papers, notify us at once. Sometimes in renewing, initials are given instead of the full name that had been given before, and we cannot tell whether it is the same person or not.

If you change your address, notify us immediately. If you do not do it, the postmaster will, and by a new ruling, we will be charged two cents postage on each notification. This applies even to your changing from one street to another in the same city. But we are not charged postage where the postmaster notifies us of consolidation of different rural routes.

If we make an error, notify us of it. We are anxious to correct it. But please be gentle in doing so. We are all human beings.

METHODISTS GATHER IN GREENSBORO IN JANUARY

The three annual conferences at their recent sessions provided for a meeting of our three Methodisms, the Methodist Protestant, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be held early in January. M. T. Plyler, S. W. Taylor, and B. A. Culp were appointed a committee to make all arrangements for this gathering.

The committee has selected Greeensboro as the place of meeting. There will be one day of three sessions, morning, afternoon and night. This will be January 11 or 15, contingent upon the presence of certain speakers. The general theme will be "The Sesqui-Centennial and Afterward," or "Methodism Facing the New Era."

The representative speakers will be Bishops W. F. McDowell, Paul B. Kern, and Dr. J. C. Broomfield. Speakers from within the state will be announced as the program is formulated. The hope is that from all our North Carolina Methodism will come preachers and laymen who will gain inspiration and cultivate a spirit of fraternity that will hasten the union of American Methodism as we face the problems of the future.

PAUL'S THORN IN THE FLESH

Paul's thorn was not pleasant to him. He prayed to be rid of it. But when he found it had come to stay, he made friends with it swiftly. It was no longer how to dismiss, but how to entertain. He stopped groaning, and began glorying. It was clear to him that it was God's will, and that meant new opportunity, new victory, new likeness to Christ. What God means is always too good to be lost, and is worth all it costs to learn. Let us learn swiftly as we may. Time is short.—Maltbie B. Babcock.

No Paper Next Week

For the benefit of those who did not see our notice last week, we will say again that there will not be any Herald issued next week, this being Christmas week. This custom has been followed by the Herald for a number of years.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Consecration :: Co-operation :: Consolidation

CONSECRATION—let us devote our energies and talents to the work to which we are called.

CO-OPERATION—let us willingly, gladly, work with others who are likewise called to do the work of the Lord.

CONSOLIDATION—while our individual tasks may be small and insignificant, yet when joined with others they are of greater value.

Our Own for Us

One of the strange things about church people is their failure to appreciate what is their own. Some attend the services conducted by their own pastors with varying regularity; nor do they support the benevolent enterprises or missionary activities of their own church; do not send their children to the colleges of their own denomination; do not subscribe for nor read their church papers, and refuse to use the Sunday school literature prepared for them by their own Board of Publication—using literature prepared by others. While I am not sure just how many Methodist Protestants there are in colleges of other denominations, nor how many of our people who support some other orphanage than our own, nor how many who subscribe for other church papers than ours; but I do know we have thousands who fail to support their own. And I do know that there are many Sunday schools in our conference which use literature prepared by some other Board of Publication than our own. We have the literature; it is prepared for our folk; but they buy from somebody else. And when I ask why they do this, I am told that it is cheaper. Once in a while someone will say it is better, but as a rule, they will say they do it because it is cheaper.

I am wondering if these people have really taken the pains to find out if our Sunday school literature really costs more than others. And do they consider the effect upon the denominational life of our people, of this practice? It so happens in many of our urban churches that the only contact our children make with the church is in the Sunday school. Now suppose, when they go there and receive a lesson leaflet published by a Board of Publication other than their own, and never hear the name of the denomination mentioned, nor hear the pastor who preaches there; I wonder how these children can ever develop a denominational consciousness. It is not surprising that some of our churches have to struggle to keep the doors open. The heads of the families are killing their churches for the sake of the few pennies they save a week on their Sunday school literature. Our youth are not to be criticized for this so much as should their parents be blamed. OUR OWN FOR US, might well be a motto for us to hang across our church doors and keep on our calendars in our homes so that we shall not forget the duty we owe to these agencies and institutions of our denomination.

Hurrah for Efland!

A note from Pastor Williams states that the amount to pay off the debt on this church was received in cash and pledges last Sunday. Say what you please, but these folks on Orange charge are doing things. Last year they freed their parsonage from debt, and here they make another dash for freedom by covering this obligation. We congratulate them and want to be there when the mortgage is burned.

Helping High Point College

The General Board of Education made a proposition that if our Conference would raise five thousand dollars by the first of next May, it will give in adidtion seven thousand, five hundred dollars. I think we now need to raise three thousand dollars to secure their gift. Let all who can, begin at once to lay by in store for this purpose, and when the assessment is called be ready to pay it in full, and thus help our college in these days when a dollar means so much to those who are carrying the work on there.

A Merry Christmas

It is so easy to say "A Merry Christmas." But will it be a Merry Christmas for the stingy soul who hordes instead of gives? Will it be a Merry Christmas to the selfish soul who gives only to those who give to him or her? Will it be a Merry Christmas to the sordid and gluttonous ones who gorge the stomach unto sickness? Will it be a Merry Christmas to those who must drink strong drink to make it merry? Will it be a Merry Christmas to you? We hope it shall be; certainly you can make it such.

Lebanon Church, Rev. J. M. Morgan, Pastor

This quarterly conference was held on Tuesday night. There was a representative group of the officials present. The conference budgets were accepted and plans made for the work of the year. The movement to build a hut seemed to be revived and there was expressed the hope that it might be erected early in the conference year. This is Pastor Morgan's first year, and while he had not been on the charge long enough to get all details of the work in hand, he is enthusiastic over the prospect of a good year. Lebanon church has all to itself a part of High Point in so far as our denomination is concerned, and its growth should be steady and substantial.

Siler City Charge, Rev. J. A. Burgess, Pastor

This conference was held in Siler City Wednesday night. All churches were represented, and the budgets were accepted as raised last year. There was present a spirit of hopefulness for the year, and the people seemed delighted with their pastor. We are expecting this little group of churches to do splendid work, as they have before. It is a three-point charge with small memberships, but there are some most loyal souls to whom sacrifice is no new word. We missed from this meeting Brother L. L. Wrenn, who is always present at such meetings unless detained by sickness. We are sorry he could not be present.

State Street Charge, Rev. T. M. Johnson, Pastor

This conference was held on Thursday night. There was a good attendance of the official members and the business of the conference was transacted in the spirit of kindliness and interest. The conference claims were accepted and will doubtless be raised, as last year. State Street is hopeful of cutting another slice off its indebtedness. Last year almost three thousand dollars were paid beside the contributions to current expenses and conference claims. This is Pastor Johnson's second year, and he is beginning it hopefully.

Shiloh Charge, Rev. C. E. Ridge, Pastor

This conference was held at Shiloh church Saturday afternoon. The three churches, Shiloh, Greer's, and Friendship, were represented. The usual business was transacted harmoniously and the conference claims as met last year become their assessments for this year. They paid all their acceptances last year. Pastor Ridge is beginning most hopefully his second year with this group of churches. We heard talk of a parsonage for the new year; that would certainly be a fine objective for a special for the year.

Burlington, First Church, Rev. F. W. Paschall, Pastor

We were at this church for the morning worship Sunday. Saw the closing moments of the Sunday school and had the pleasure of preaching to a good congregation. This church was the first church to pay all conference claims and pastor's salary last year. They have the mind to do the same thing this year. This is a fine group of workers, and possibly no city church in the conference has a better opportunity than this one. Some new projects are discussed, and a young people's choir is already started, I heard. This is Dr. Paschall's fifth year as pastor of this church, and he is held in high esteem; the work seems to be moving along smoothly.

Glen Raven Church, Rev. J. P. Pegg, Pastor

We visited this church Sunday night. There was a good attendance and the people gave good attention to the message. This is Brother Pegg's fourth year on this work, which is a three-point charge, Haw River and Fairview being the other churches in the group. Glen Raven has been remodeling their church during the past year and have now a very good auditorium; they are looking forward to having the building dedicated in the spring. This church is largely the village church, made up of Glen Raven mills, and the proprietors think so much of the good influences of a Christian church that they pay four hundred dollars to the salary of the pastor each year. The parsonage is close to the church. We are expecting Glen Raven to join the other two churches in the group and pay all conference claims this year.

Plan of Appointments

December 23—Flat Rock, 11 a.m.; Bethany, 2:30 p.m.

December 30—Mebane, 11 a.m.

January 6—Mt. Pleasant charge.

January 13—Randolph charge, Bethel at 11 a.m., Bethany in afternoon.

January 20—Calvary church, 11 a.m.

January 27—Brower's at 11 a.m., Giles in afternoon, Cedar Falls at night.

NOTES ON PREACHING

By P. E. Lindley

The Preacher's Voice

His voice is the preacher's greatest weapon. Words are the vehicles that bear the Gospel truth; the pastor's key to unlock human hearts; the indispensable agency through which the Divine Will can be made known to man. The greatest work of the minister is done with the voice. It naturally follows, therefore, that this capacity for speech ought to be governed and trained to the highest point of beauty, power and efficiency.

But there are numerous indications that this vehicle is badly abused. No less an authority than Dr. Charles E. Jefferson says: "The Christian pulpit has been a hotbed for the growth of all sorts of curious and unearthly tones. Twangs of various twists, singsongs of divers melodies, howls of different degrees of fury, and roars of many types of hideousness have tarnished the fame of the pulpit and caused the ungodly to blaspheme." This interesting quotation tends to provoke a smile for the simple reason that every reader has heard some such unfortunate vocalization in his own church.

At the present time there is particular reason for grooming and guarding the preacher's voice. People who once tolerated a rough, harsh or irritating voice without complaint will not in these latter days of refinement and aesthetic appreciation bear with it without resentment. A violent voice rasps the critic's nerve. A few primitive communities still long for noise and "much speaking" in the services, but these localities are fast passing away, leaving a type of people with better taste and keener discrimination. To please and serve this latter class of hearers is more and more the role of the modern minister. His voice must not offend.

Whether in music or oratory, the voice is usually thought of under three aspects; namely, pitch, power, and quality. Pitch, of course, refers to the highness or lowness of the tones and is caused by the frequency of vibrations, the greater number of vibrations producing the high tones and the fewer vibrations giving the low tones. Power means the loudness or volume of the voice, while by quality is implied the particular type of the voice, such as the pleasant or the unpleasant elements. Two tones may be of exact pitch and power and still be very different in quality, as, for example, the tone produced by striking a bell and that produced by a violin. The proper balance of these three factors should be the aim of every public speaker who wishes to preach with ease, pleasure and effectiveness. A few suggestions will now be given to each of these important characteristics.

1. Pitch. Happy is the preacher (and happy is the congregation also) who can speak in a normal, pleasing voice, avoiding the extremes of very high and very low pitch. Many speakers, especially under the stress of earnestness or excitement, sail up into the thin, fine, treble notes and never come down until the sermon's end is reached. Others drag along the low, bass level without rising to the natural, conversational pitch. If one wishes to know the pitch that best suits him, let him try this test: Go to the keyboard of a piano,

OUR STORY PAGE

A CHRISTMAS IN PRISON

Some years ago, while conducting a series of meetings in Michigan City, I was asked to preach to the convicts in the State Prison. I sat on the platform with the Governor and watched the prisoners march in—700 men, young and old. At the word of command they sat down. Among the number there were seventy-six "lifers," men who had been committed to prison for life for the crime of murder.

After the singing I arose to preach, but could hardly speak for weeping. Disregarding all the rules of the prison, in my earnestness to help the poor, fallen men, I left the platform and walked down the aisle among them, taking one and then another by the hand and praying for him. At the end of the row of men who were committed for murder, sat a man who, more than his fellows, seemed marked by sin's blighting curse. His face was seamed and rigid with scars and marks of vice and sin. He looked as though he might be a demon incarnate if once aroused to anger. I placed my hand upon his shoulder and prayed for and with him.

When the service was over, the Governor said to me, "Well, Kain, do you know you have broken the rules of the prison by leaving the platform?" "Yes, Governor, but I never can keep any rule while preaching. And I did want to get up close to the poor, despairing fellows, and pray for them, and tell them of the love of Jesus the Savior. 'He came to seek and to save that which was lost.' 'This man (Jesus) receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.' "—Luke 19:10; 15:2.

'Do you remember,'' said the Governor, 'the man at the end of the line in the lifer's row, whom you prayed with? Would you like to hear his history?" "Yes," I answered, gladly. "Well, here it is, in brief: Tom Galson was sent here about eight years ago for the crime of murder. He was, without doubt, one of the most desperate and vicious characters we had ever received, and, as was expected, gave us a great deal of trouble.

"One Christmas eve, about six years ago, duty compelled me to spend the night at the prison, instead of at home, as I had anticipated. Early in the morning, while it was yet dark, I left the prison for my home, my pockets full of presents for my little girl. It was a bitter cold morning, and I buttoned my overcoat up to protect myself from the cutting wind that swetp in from the lake. As I hurried along, I thought I saw somebody skulking in the shadow of the prison wall. I stopped and looked a little more closely, and then I saw a little girl, wretchedly clothed in a thin dress; her bare feet thrust into a pair of shoes much the worse for the wear. In her hand she held, tightly clasped, a small paper parcel. Wondering who she was and why she was out so early in the morning, and yet too weary to be interested, I hurried on. But I soon heard that I was being folowed. I stopped, and turned around, and there stood before me the same wretched-looking child.

" 'What do you want?' I asked sharply. 'Are you the Governor of the prison, sir?' 'Yes, who are you, and why are you not at home?' 'Please, sir, I have no home; mamma died in the poor house two weeks ago, an' she told me just before she died that papa (that Tom Galson) was in prison; an' she thought maybe he would like to see his little girl, now that mama is dead. Please, can't you let me see my papa? Today is Christmas, and I want to give him a present.'

" 'No,' I replied gruffly, 'you will have to wait until visitor's day,' and started on. I had not gone many steps when I felt a pull at my coat, and a pleading voice said, 'Please, don't go.' I stopped once more, and looked into the pinched, beseeching face before me. Great tears were in her eyes, while her little chin quivered with emotion.

" 'Mister,' she said, 'if your little girl was me, and your little girl's mamma had died in the poor house, an' her papa was in the prison, an' she had no place to go an' no one to love her, don't you think she would like to see her papa to give him a Christmas present, don't you—don't you think I would say yes?'

"By this time a great lump was in my throat, and my eyes were swimming in tears. I answered, 'Yes, my little girl, I think you would, and you shall see your papa'; and taking her hand, I hurried back to the prison, thinking of my own fair-haired little girl at home. Arriving at my office, I bade her come near the warm stove, while I sent a guard to bring No. 37 from his cell. As soon as he came into the office and saw the little girl, his face clouded with an angry frown, and in a gruff, savage tone he snapped out:

" 'Nellie, what are you doing here? What do you want? Go back to your mother.' 'Please, papa,' sobbed the little girl, 'mamma's dead. She died two weeks ago in the poor house, an' before she died she told me to take care of little Jimmie, 'cause you loved him so; and told me to tell you she loved you, too—but papa'—and her voice broke in sobs and tears—'Jimmie died too, last week, and now I am alone, papa, an' today's Christmas, papa, an'—an' I thought, maybe as you loved Jimmie, you would like a little Christmas present from him.'

"Here she unrolled the little bundle she held in her hand, until she came to a little package of tissue paper, from which she took out a little fair curl, and put it in her father's hand, saying as she did so, 'I cut it from dear little Jimmie's head, papa, just before they buried him.'

"No. 37 by this time was sobbing like a child, and so was I. Stooping down, 37 picked up the little girl, pressed her conlvusively to his breast, while his great frame shook with suppressed emotion.

"The scene was too sacred for me to look upon, so I softly opened the door and left them alone. In about an hour I returned. No. 37 sat near the stove, with his little daughter on his knee. He looked at me sheepishly for a moment, and then said, 'Governor, I haven't the money'; then suddenly stripping off his prison jacket, he said, 'For God's sake don't let my little girl go out this bitter cold day with that thin dress. Let me give her this coat. I'll work early and late; I'll do anything. I'll be a man. Please, Governor, let me cover her with this coat.' Tears were streaming down the face of the hardened man.

"'No, Galson,' I said, 'keep your coat; your little girl shall not suffer. I'll take her to my home and see what my wife can do for her.' 'God bless you,' sobbed Galson. I took the girl to my home. She remained with us for a number of years, and became a true Christian by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. God's Book shows man's need and God's remedy. (Rom. 3:9-26; John 3:1-16).

"Tom Galson also became a Christian, and then he gave us no more trouble." (Luke 8:35).

A year ago, when I visited the prison again, the Governor said to me, "Kain, would you like to see Tom Galson, whose story I told you a few years ago?" "Yes, I would," I answered. The Governor took me down a quiet street, and stopping at a neat home, knocked at the door. The door was opened by a cheerful young woman who greeted the Governor with the utmost cordiality.

We went in, and then the Governor introduced me to Nellie and her father, who, because of his reformation, had received pardon, and was now living an upright Christian life with his daughter, whose little Christmas gift had broken his hard heart. Christ died for the ungodly. (Rom. 4:5; 5:6.) "And a little child shall lead them."—Selected.

ascend the scale step by step, humming each advancing tone with the instrument. Continue this until the very highest note he can sing has been reached, then reverse the exercise, going down the keyboard until he reaches the lowest note he can make. Now locate the tone that is equidistant between these extremes and establish this note as the normal pitch—a sort of "home base" from which to range up and down in the oratorical compass of the voice. It is good also to practice reading aloud certain selections, as poems that carry emotions of joy and gladness or sorrow and anxiety. Repeat these readings, using various pitches, until the most effective and natural vocalization has been discovered. Above all things, avoid monotone. One must cultivate the habit of moving the voice up and down as he proceeds. If in the midst of the discourse he finds himself dwelling on a constant, high pitch, he must deliberately bring himself down. The change will have a wholesome effect upon the audience. Vocal flexibility is the ideal here.

2. POWER. Loudness is almost universally thought to be a sure means of emphasis—but it is not a very dignified means. There are moments, to be sure, when a point can best be driven home with a sudden swelling of the voice. Loudness has its place, but it is to be used very sparingly indeed. Unless this element of loudness is well regulated and kept within a safe, reasonable limit throughout most of the sermon, it will have no virtue of emphasis when intensified. Shouting is to be avoided. There are times when a preacher feels like "putting everything he has into it," but the trouble here is that when he once adopts the loud pattern of speech the hearers gauge their ears to it and the speaker has lost his power of emphasis. If the preacher gives himself to loud speaking he is almost obliged to continue. In the effort to hold attention and make additional emphasis he grows louder and louder, while the listeners set themselves for the noise and fortify their ears as best they can against the voluminous bombardment. Some sleep on, of course, for it has been found that variety of tone and not noise keeps the news awake. Especially should preachers in small churches guard themselves against the distressing errors of extremely loud speaking.

3. QUALITY. The sound of the violin is preferred above the beating of a tin pan purely because of its quality of tone. The pan can make a tone identical in pitch and power to the one produced by the violin, but there is no comparison in the beauty of quality. Quality refers to the pleasantness of the sound. Some voices are rich, pleasing, winning. These we like to hear. Others are harsh, metallic, thin. These are harder to follow. In case a speaker is troubled with some disturbing element in this matter of vocal quality, he should first of all locate the exact difficulty. If his words are too wirey and pinched, perhaps the throat is not open, easy and relaxed. If he seems to lack breath, perhaps his breathing is faulty. Suitable exercises to remedy all such ailments can be found in any good book on public speaking.

But if the pastor does not care to apply any of the more scientific instructions found in the books on expression, he can at least do this: Be natural! If ministers would only carry their own natural conversational style into the pulpit with them, their preaching would be greatly improved. This naturalness, too, would help save and protect the voice. Any voice can be ruined by overstrain and abnormality. Naturalness will preserve it. The preacher complains that he has spoken twice today an dthat his voice is about played out; yet the child talks, laughs and yells all day long with never a sign of fatigue. The child does his talking naturally, while the public speaker does not. Naturalness is generally the safest course.

FOURTEENTH DISTRICT RALLY

The people of Caroleen church, Shelby-Caroleen charge, have extended an invitation for the churches of the Fourteenth District to meet with them on Sunday, December 30, in a District Rally.

At the morning service we hope to have Rev. R. S. Troxler develop the subject, "Other Foundation Can No Man Lay Than is Laid," followed by a Communion Meditation by Rev. J. R. Anderson.

In the afternoon session we hope to hear the following individuals briefly appraise the following sections of their religious endeavor and experience: "Why I Read the Bible," Rev. T. O. Fry; "Why I Pray," Rev. J. L. Love; "Why I Go to Sunday School," Miss Mildred Ramsey; "Why I Go to Christian Endeavor," Miss Jessie Baxter; "Why I Attend the Ladies' Auxiliary," Mrs. F. B. Toncy; "Why I Read the HERALD," Rev. D. T. Huss.

Lunch will be served at the church. Remember the day, Sunday, December 30.

H. F. FOGLEMAN, Chairman.

Mrs. L. S. Woody, Siler City, special for chairs	2.00
Miss Annie Byron, Greensburg, Pa., special for chairs	5.00

We are so thankful for this good financial report. Look over the list and commend the deserving ones. The personal donations deserve special notice. Then perhaps the banner offering coming from any local church is the one from Creswell—it represents more than a dollar per member. A dollar per member from all our churches would enable us to do wonders here this year.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Miss Annie Louise Brewer, High Point, 2 coats.

Mrs. W. S. Jones, Greensboro, 2 coats and 2 dresses.

Mrs. N. F. Carroll, Winston-Salem, a suit for boy.

Shiloh, on Shiloh, an additional 15 half-gallon cans fruit.

Friendship, on Shiloh, 32 half-gallon cans fruit and vegetables. 1 bushel sweet potatoes, 1 bushel turnips, 1 chicken, several glasses of jelly, 1 package of beans and a small bag of nuts.

The Woman's Auxiliary, Nassawango, Powellville Charge, Md., a box of towels and soap and wash-cloths.

Swain, N. Y., by Rev. F. M. Karr, a box of clothing, towels, wash-cloths and soap.

Mrs. Johnson, Siler City, two boxes Uneeda wafers.

M. P. Sunday school, Glassboro, N. J., a box of towels, soap and other toilet articles.

Jonesboro M. P. church, Jonesboro, Ind., a box of individually-wrapped Christmas packages.

Charlotte, Richland, 2 bushels sweet potatoes, 4 towels, packages of apples and oranges, 16 quarts of canned fruit and vegetables, 3 glasses of jelly, 3 cakes of soap, 3 cans of Gibbs beans, 5 little dresses, 1 package of nuts, and 3 cakes for school lunches.

Please accept our thanks for every kindness shown this Home around the Thanksgiving period. Christmas is only a few days ahead, and a number of good things are in store for our children. God bless every one who in any way has remembered, or is planning to remember the orphan child.

Chairs for Dining Room

For six years we have patched up and done every way possible to keep from buying chairs for the girls' dining room, and we have gone as long as we can. We simply have to have five dozen chairs. We have $48 in coupon money, and several friends have already sent money for chairs until we have nearly half enough to pay for them. There are two ways to help: 1. Send us money for chairs; 2. Send us Octagon Coupons right away. Thank you.

We are wishing for all our dear friends throughout the church a very happy Christmas and a glad and prosperous New Year. It would be a joy to us to send to many of you a greeting card, or a personal letter for Christmas; but what we would spend for that we are putting into the work here.

We can truly say, We never craved money until we took charge of this Home, but we do really crave money now—not for ourselves—but for these children. God has the money somewhere, and we keep believing that He will send it.

Yours in His blessed service,
A. G. DIXON, Supt.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

SPRING CHURCH CIRCUIT AUXILIARY

On Wednesday, December 5, at 2 p. m., the Spring Church Circuit Auxiliary met for the first meeting of the new conference year in the home of Mrs. J. H. Harris. Mrs. J. G. Mitchell, first vice-president, conducted the devotions, using worship service No. 9 in the devotional book. She was assisted by Miss Mildred Mitchell, Mesdames M. L. Crew, John Hart, R. M. Robinson, and Temana Hart. Mrs. H. E. Vassar led the society in a very impressive prayer.

"Launch Out" was then sung by the Auxiliary. There were 16 members, one honorary member, four Precious Jewels and four visitors present. We were glad to welcome as visitors Mrs. Bessie Rash, Hopewell, Va.; Mrs. Wilbur Harris, Garysburg, N. C.; Miss Ruby Bozeman, Enfield, N. C., and Miss Mildred Mitchell, Skippers, Va.

During the business session the Society voted to pay $4 during the month of March to aid a young girl at Pine Ridge to go an with her high school work. A number of the Auxiliaries in the First Dstrict are doing this. It was also voted to buy paint for a bed-room floor at the parsonage.

The pastor's wife was asked to take the initiative in raising money on the India Hospital quilt block. The matter was taken up at this time and $12.50 in cash and pledges was gotten. We hope by the first of the year to have it finished.

We would not have you think that the matter of raising money is all the Auxiliary is interested in, for we are trying to stress the religious side also, and much interest is taken in the programs at each meeting and also in the question box. Mrs. W. L. Mitchell had charge of the question box last time and much information was gained from the questions and answers.

Mrs. R. M. Robinson had charge of the program. Mrs. H. E. Vassar read an interesting paper on "The Christian Home." Papers on "Non-Christian Homes" were read by Mesdames Len Glover, Temana Hart and John Hart.

The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. G. W. Massey in January. Rev. W. H. Neese led the closing prayer. Mrs. Harris served delicious refreshments.

MRS. WILLIAM H. NEESE, Cor. Sec'y.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Rev. D. R. Williams to Albemarle.
Rev. M. C. Henderson to Asheboro.
Rev. R. L. Hethcock to Mocksville.
Rev. G. B. Ferree to Tobaccoville.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer's Address

So many people are asking us for the address of Mrs. L. W. Gerringer that we are giving it. It is 1113 Bellvue street, Greensboro, N. C.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Shoals-Pinnacle-Zion. — The services at Shoals church last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour were very largely attended. The people were attentive to the sermon, and everyone seemed to have enjoyed having Rev. J. H. Morris and wife with us. They were accompanied by Rev. A. L. Hunter. Everyone was glad to see the old pastor and the new one. We gave them a hearty welcome, and hope Rev. A. L. Hunter will be able to visit us very often.

Rev. J. D. Morris was no stranger at all Sunday. We were not acquainted with Mrs. Morris, but it didn't take very long to become acquainted. We also enjoyed having her with us. Hope she will come with Pastor Morris time after time as he fills his appointments.

He used as his subject "The Growing Kingdom." He brought out a great number of good facts on the subject. I'm sure Bro. Morris is going to do his part and that the community will co-operate with him all during the year.

Bro. Morris helped Rev. A. L. Hunter in a revival about four years ago. He did splendid work then, and we all feel as if he will do his best again this year.

We sincerely hope this will be the greatest year we have spent in a number of years. Things are beginning to look brighter and more money is available with which to pay our dues.

Mr. A. L. Holloway and Mrs. Nora Kiger were married November 24. They left November 25th for New York and several other cities. They returned to her home in Shoals on December 2nd. They will make their home on her farm in Shoals.

I'm sure everyone is glad to hear that Mr. Odell Moser, reporter for the past year, is showing a little improvement. He has been right ill for the past two months.

CARRIE KIGER, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—Church attendance seems to be on the up-grade with West End. Large congregations have come out to hear our new pastor, Dr. N. G. Bethea, for every service so far, with increasing interest indicated.

The church Circles met on Monday, December 3, at 7:30, No. 1 in the home of its chairman, Mrs. A. E. Pleasants; No. 2, with the chairman, Mrs. V. C. Stockard. Fine social service reports were received from each of these circles, denoting a great deal of interest for those less fortunate. Pollyanna Christmas gifts were distributed during the social hour following business routine.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church Monday night, December 10. Due to the inclement weather the attendance was not large, but a very good meeting was held. The devotional, led by Mrs. W. W. Clement, was along the theme of Christmas and its significance, with the Scripture from Luke's Gospel. Circle No. 1 was hostess to the Auxiliary following the business session. Doughnuts and hot coffee were served and each member received a Christmas gift.

The first quarterly conference was held on last Wednesday evening with a good attendance. A number of plans for improving the church program were introduced by the pastor and members of the conference.

Dr. Bethea delivered a very stirring sermon Sunday morning, using the first verse of the 12th chapter of Hebrews as his subject: "Therefore, let us also, seeing as we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses; lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is before us." We need to cultivate a spirit of prayerfulness that puts us in closer touch with God, enabling us to know Him and gain eternal life. Mr. Bethea said, also, that one of the greatest needs of the church today is a passionate desire to think, to speak, and to look like Jesus. The young people's choir had charge of the music for the evening services and a beautiful anthem was rendered as special music for the service last Sunday. Dr. Bethea took his text from the 119th Psalm, 38th verse, "Incline my heart unto thy testimonies."

The Philathea class will hold its annual Christmas party at the church on Saturday evening, December 15. Mrs. J. R. Holden is teacher of this class, the largest in the Sunday school. Each member is expected to be present for an evening of fun and exchange of gifts. M. C. S., Reporter.

(This report came in too late for publication last week.—Editor).

Community Church, Thomasville.—It has been some time since you have had a report from us, but we have not ben idle. All activities of the church are moving on nicely. We are more than glad to have our pastor and wife back with us for another year. We appreciate the good work they have done and we feel sure greater things are in store for us in the coming year.

A union Thanksgiving service was held at the First Baptist church on Thursday at 10 o'clock, Rev. H. F. Surratt bringing the message. He used as his subject, "Why Celebrate Thanksgiving."

Sunday, the 9th, was observed as Bible Sunday. We found that many had read the Bible through and also many had read through the New Testament. At the close of the service an opportunity was given to pledge to read the Bible daily and a goodly number responded.

It has been noticed that the attendance at both the morning and evening services has increased and a record of attendance of church members being kept and will be made known quarterly.

The various Circles of the Woman's Auxiliary met in regular session as follows: Circle No. 1 met at the home of Mrs. J. W. Boyles. Circle No. 2 at the home of Mrs. Tom Kennedy. Young Ladies' Circle with Mrs. W. C. Taylor, and the Teen-Age Circle with Miss Estella Clodfelter. The attendance was very good and great interest was manifested.

The Layman's Fellowship met at the church on Wednesday evening, the 12th, for the purpose of election of officers. After discussion of some aims for the new year they decided to assume the assessment of "The McCulloch Memorial Fund" of $100, to be raised in January.

New officers for the year are: G. M. Hobbs, president; C. L. Berrier, vice-president; John R. Perry, secretary, and O. H. Berrier, treasurer. Prospects for the new years are very encouraging.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society was entertained by Mrs. H. F. Surratt on Friday evening. A business session and social hour was enjoyed by all present. A Thanksgiving basket was reported carried to a needy family by the C. E. Society.

A wedding of much interest to friends of the couple was solemnized Tuesday afternoon, November 27, in the library of Community Church, when Miss Susie Myers became the bride of Mr. Fred Perdue, High Point. Only a few intimate friends were present for the ceremony.

Mrs. Perdue is the daughter of Mrs. W. S. Myers, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Perdue will make their home at 1000 North Main street, High Point.

A Township Sunday School Institute for all denominations met Sunday afternoon and evening, December 16, at Heidelberg Reformed church. The theme for this institute was "The Value of Trained Leadership." We feel that these institutes are very helpful to all Christian leaders and all should take advantage of them.

This is a very busy season, as all the variours departments and organizations of the church are planning their Christmas programs.

A party for the departments from the Cradle Roll through the Intermediate department will be held at the church next Saturday afternoon.

A program featuring Christmas music will be held next Sunday evening.

We are indeed glad that Mrs. T. G. Perry is able to be back with us, after having undergone treatment in the Guilford General Hospital for some time.

We are glad to report that the condition of Mrs. John Stone, who underwent an operation at the City Memorial Hospital is much improved, and we hope she will soon be able to be back with us again.

With prayers and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

MRS. G. M. HOBBS, Assistant Reporter.

Gibsonville-Fountain Place.—After an enjoyable pastorate with the people of Asheboro and Randolph county, we find ourselves happily located with the people of this twin charge. We have found as fine and thoughtful people as it has been our privilege to meet. We are located in Gibsonville and the Gibsonville people have been busy supplying the furnishings for the parsonage, such as: electric range, kitchen cabinet, circulating heater, bed room suites, hot water heater, window shades, curtains and other things needed at the parsonage. They also gave us a generous pounding last Thursday night. Of course we appreciate the fact that we are in the midst of a people so thoughtful and responsive and who do things so fully and gladly.

Fountain Place church gave a church reception for us the night of December 7th. It was well carried out and much enjoyed. Mr. Talton Johnson, son of Dr. T. M. Johnson, acted as toastmaster, and a number of addresses of welcome were extended from the various departments of the church. A table filled with good things to eat was a great feature of the occasion. Fountain Place people are a loyal and co-operative band, always ready for any thing suggested that looks like progress. This makes us feel that one day you will find this church taking its stand, with the leading churches of the conference. In fact, we predict this for both of the churches on this charge.

With a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to our friends on the Asheboro Charge, we look forward to an enjoyable new year on our new field. R. C. STUBBINS.

Flat Rock Charge.—Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of the Annual Conference, will visit Flat Rock Charge next Sunday, December 23. He will preach at Flat Rock church at 11 a. m., and at Bethany church at 3 p. m. We hope to have a good attendance at each church.

The first quarterly conference for Flat Rock Charge will be held at Flat Rock church on Saturday, January 12, beginning at 2 p. m. The first quarterly conference is always important, and we trust there will be a full attendance of the official members of each church and as many other interested persons as can attend.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—Our people were very glad to have our old pastor returned for our new pastor, and we hope this year may be one of the very best years for both pastor and people. Pastor Way filled his first appointment for this Conference year at Palestine today. Several have told me, "You should have heard Brother Way this morning. He preached the best sermon I ever heard him preach." (Sorry the reporter had to be absent). Pastor Way announced there would not be any fifth Sunday services at Palestine this year, as we have been having.

The Sunday school children will give a Christmas program at the church next Sunday morning.

Mrs. Emory Parish is confined to her bed by sickness, I am sorry to report.

Uncle Calvin Tucker was too feeble to attend church today.

Little Junior Way has been confined to his bed and home for the past several days, suffering from a tonsil operation. We are hoping the little fellow will soon be able to return to school. Mrs. Way and the children are missed very much when not able to accompany Pastor Way.

Best wishes to the new Herald Editor, and a Merry Christmas to each and every one, with a happy New Year coming.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant Business Girls' Circle.—Carrying out the Thanksgiving note in games and in refreshments, Mrs. Coley Shoffner delightfully entertained members of the Mount Pleasant Business Girls' Circle and their guests at the November meeting, Saturday night, November 24.

Thanksgiving was also the theme of the devotional service, led by Miss Una Mae Phillips, who gave a Thanksgiving reading and selected the 115th Psalm for the Scripture lesson. Mrs. W. A. Stafford, in reviewing the Missionary study-book, told of "Education in Japan," emphasizing the changes brought about in that country during recent years and the new importance of education for women since the age of unrest and the earthquake of 1923.

She told of the work which American missionaries have done in building kindergarten, elementary, and secondary schools in Japan and of the accomplishments of noted Japanese educators in carrying on and supplementing this work.

During the business session, plans for a Pollyanna Christmas party were discussed, after which the hostess directed contests and served refreshments of mixed fruits.

REBECCA M. CAUSEY, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Siler City Charge.—Although we have not been reporting much we have not been idle. The Sunday school is still doing as well as could be expected. We are planning to have a Christmas entertainment on Tuesday evening at 2 o'clock, December 25. A program will be given by children which will consist of recitations, singing and a play. Everybody is invited to come and be with us.

We were sorry to give up our former pastor, Mr. Isley, but we are glad to welcome our new pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess. With him in charge, we hope to work in unity and have a very successful year.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

FANNIE LOUISE POE, Reporter.

Mecklenburg Charge.—We were pleasantly surprised last Wednesday night when the members of Stallings church and community met at the church and came to the parsonage in a body, loaded down with packages. They certainly gave us a generous kitchen shower. We deeply appreciate every gift. Several others have given us fresh pork, greens, potatoes, turnips, and wood, that were not included in the shower. We thank you one and all for each gift.

Two of our churches, Stallings and New Hope, are planning to have Christmas programs, including plays, pageants, songs, etc.

Our first quarterly conference will meet at Stallings church Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on January 12, 1935. All official members are urged to be present.

We have preached at all the churches on the charge. All the people received us cordially. We feel that we shall like the people and work here.

P. E. BINGHAM, Pastor.

Gibsonville.—The first service of the Conference year was held Sunday morning, December 2nd, at 11 o'clock, with a large audience in attendance. The service was in charge of the new pastor, Rev. Roland Stubbins. Rev. Mr. Stubbins was introduced to the audience by Mr. F. G. Hammer. We welcome Pastor and Mrs. Stubbins to our church.

From the interest that has been shown in the services it looks as if our Conference year will be very sucessful.

Mr. W. J. Jennings presented to the church a beautiful Bible for the pulpit. Rev. Mr. Stubbins expressed thanks and appreciation for this wonderful gift.

The first quarterly conference was held on Thursday evening, December 13, in the Hut, with good attendance, there being 36 present. Plans were made for the coming year. After the business was disposed of, the members asked Pastor and Mrs. Stubbins to go out into the church, and there they found that the members had given them a pounding, which was greatly appreciated.

Sunday evening, December 23rd, at 7:30 o'clock, the regular Christmas service, with special music will be held. Everybody is invited to come.

Best wishes for a Merry Christmas.

English Street.—We are glad to report that our church seems to be going forward under the leadership of our new pastor, Rev. Edward Suits. Our first quarterly conference has been held with West Thomasville, at which time the plan of appointments for the pastor was worked out. Our church will have preaching services every other Sunday morning and every other Sunday night, except on the second Sunday when this church will have both services. A fine spirit was present in the conference and it is hoped that these two churches may unite and accomplish much good.

Our Christmas service will be held on next Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m. The program will consist of songs, recitations, exercises and a short play. We are planning, also, to make it a "White Christmas." Everyone has been urged to bring some small gift that may be sent to needy families. The Sunday school treat will be given out immediately after the service.

We were glad to add to our number a young lady of our community who has been active in the church work for quite a while. Miss Nora Lee Stephens, who joined our church the past Sunday evening.

We wish all of the Herald readers a very Merry Christmas. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—President Andrews was with us Sunday morning, and brought a very helpful message. He is always a welcome visitor here, as this was his home church for several years and the older members especially remember him.

Our first quarterly conference met last Wednesday night, and transacted quite a lot of important business. The Annual Conference budget was accepted in full, and the same amount as last year was accepted as our World Service budget. In his report, Dr. Paschall presented three recommendations, all of which were adopted. The first of these is that the church begin at once to start a fund for a new church edifice, and it is hoped that a start may be made soon toward working out some plans to this end. The second is that a new pulpit Bible be secured for the church, and Mr. H. W. Wade volunteered to be responsible for this, so this will no doubt be done at once. The third recommendation was that our church approve the "Seven Point Program of Recovery," as suggested by Dr. Andrews and accepted by the Annual Conference.

The church treasurer made a report of finances for the past year, which showed that all claims were paid in full, including local accounts, with a balance brought over to the new year of $37.00. His report for the new year, to date, was also good, with pastor paid to date and other local bills paid in full. The church's allotment for Annual Conference Expense, amounting to $150.00, will be raised next Sunday, according to plans made at the Conference. It is hoped and expected that all members of the church will join heartily in this effort.

The Sunday school had an average attendance of 351 for the six Sundays of the new Conference year, with average offerings of $20.00 per Sunday, the report of the superintendent revealed. The school is handicapped by lack of room, the superintendent stated.

Bro. J. J. Campbell, aged 81, died at the home of his son, W. M. Campbell, on Holt street, this morning, and will be buried tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon, with Dr. Paschall and Rev. R. L. Jerome, pastor of Webb Avenue M. E. Church, in charge. Mr. Campbell united with our church in 1925 and has been a loyal and faithful member since that time. He was a regular attendant at the services until ill health prevented his attending. Mrs. Campbell and a daughter, Miss Deeie, both members of our church, had preceded him in death within the past three or four years. EX-REPORTER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—We were delighted to have Dr. Bethea of West End preach for us Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour. He broeght us a splendid message. His text was "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." "There is something wrong with the person who desires to remain the same and is content to float along," said Dr. Bethea. "God's plan is to develop the lower into the higher. We should all make habits that fight for us rather than those we have to fight; when we make bad habits they become our enemies." "One thing we should each try to cultivate is good friends." He continued by saying that the things we once dreaded, but now enjoy doing, change and prepare us for the change when we become like Jesus Christ and God has so arranged that the things which are hardest for us are best for us. Our final satisfaction will be rest, even though it may not be the kind we are expecting it will be far beyond our expectations. We should want to be like Jesus. God has placed that desire in us, and if we find it dying down it is because something else has crowded it out. Many things come to us here that we enjoy. We also have many shadows and disappointments, but these will all be over up yonder when we become like Jesus.

Just prior to the sermon Miss Edna Nicholson sang "Lord, Forever by Thy Side."

Dr. Pritchard preached at West End Sunday morning. One of the immediate purposes for the exchange was to launch a Good Literature Campaign in the West End church.

The Workers' Council of our Sunday school met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Neece Thursday evening. Mr. Neece, general superintendent, presided over the meeting. Mrs. W. F. Parker acted as secretary. Following the singing of a number of Christmas hymns, Dr. Pritchard led in prayer. Reports were made by the heads of various departments. Floyd G. Reynolds was appointed chairman of a committee to plan a social function in honor of those who remain on the honor roll for the three months of October, November and December. Miss Vivian Sullivan was appointed to plan a special feature for the smaller children during the Christmas season.

At the close of the business Mrs. Neece was assisted in serving a salad course by Mrs. J. E. Pritchard.

Our choir will present the Christmas cantata, "The Adoration," Sunday afternoon at 4:30. The cantata is being directed by Arthur Fiddler, of High Point.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church Hut Monday evening. Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, second vice-president, presided. The president, Mrs. J. G. Sullivan, was ill and unable to attend the meeting. An interesting program was presented by the Young People's Circle.

We are glad to report that L. A. Pugh, who has been very ill with pneumonia, is improving rapidly.

We are happy to tell you that our Sunday school attendance has not fallen below the 200 mark for several Sundays. There were 208 present last Sunday and 201 the Sunday before.

MRS. HOWARD R. NEECE, Reporter.

Davidson Charge.—We appreciate the privilege of beginning our fifth year's service on Davidson Charge. We have preached at each church on the charge since Conference. The people have received us gladly. We appreciate the good people of this charge and their co-operation in Kingdom service. A Thanksgiving offering has been taken at each church on the charge.

Mr. J. G. Rogers, of Denton, went with me to Chapel Hill, Liberty and Lineberry churches yesterday and helped me put these churches over the top for the McCulloch Memorial. We saw some individuals from some of the other churches on the charge and secured cash or pledges to cover Davidson's amount for the Memorial Fund. We appreciate very much Brother Rogers' help. We also thank each one who helped raise the money.

The first quarterly conference of Davidson Charge will be held at Lineberry church on Saturday, January 5, at 2 o'clock. We will appreciate a good attendance from each church.

At least four of the six churches on Davidson Charge are planning to have Christmas trees and exercises. The time for these exercises are: Lineberry and Chapel Hill, Saturday evening; Pleasant Grove, Sunday evening, and Alleghany, Monday evening before Christmas. We invite everyone to these services. E. A. BINGHAM.

Shiloh, Shiloh Charge.—The first quarterly conference of Shiloh charge was held at Shiloh on Saturday afternoon, December 15. Dr. R. M. Andrews, the Conference president, was present to preside. All churches of the charge were represented. The work seems to have started fine, after having paid all claims in full last year. We hope that the entire charge will have great success in this year's work.

Coming as a complete surprise to the entire community was the marriage of Miss Ruth Shoaf to Mr. Vilas Swieegood, which took place at the home of their pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, on Saturday, December 15. Mr. Swicegood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Swicegood. Mrs. Swicegood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Shoaf. Both bride and groom are members of Shiloh church. We sincerely wish for them a long life of true happiness and success.

Rev. C. E. Ridge filled his regular appointment at Shiloh Sunday morning. After brief but impressive remarks concerning the Lord's Supper, the regular communion was observed.

There still seems to be much sickness among our church folk. We can't mention them all, but remember each one in prayer to the Heavenly Father, and hope all a speedy recovery.

We are nearing the date when we shall celebrate the anniversary of the greatest event of all times—Christmas, when Christ our Redeemer and Savior, came into the world. So, with best wishes to one and all of our Herald readers, we wish you a very joyous Christmas, remembering the joy that it brings to every soul. May this spirit guide everyone through the coming year.

MABEL BERRIER, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—The first quarterly conference was held at Efland church December 15th. Plans were adopted for the year's work. The new year is starting off nicely.

Yesterday, December 16th, cash and pledges were received for more than $2,700.00 at the Efland church to pay the church debt in full by April 15, 1935. We want to dedicate the church the third Sunday in May. More about this later.

We are being remembered from time to time with fresh meat and other things to eat. My car was bombarded with fruit, produce and meats during or after the services at Union Grove church yesterday, December 16. Many thanks to all who have remembered us.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pine Bluff, Midland Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, was kept away from service Sunday on account of illness. We are hoping he will soon be better, so he can fill his appointments.

We had a large attendance Sunday for Sunday school and had an interesting lesson. Every one enjoyed it. Our superintendent, Mr. J. E. Jenkins, is working very hard indeed to get up an interesting Christmas program. The Sunday school pupils are all doing their part. We have changed the date for our Christmas program. We are planning to have it on Sunday, December 23. Everyone is invited.

We like our pastor just fine, and we are hoping we will have a successful year.

We are very glad to know that more of the members are taking interest in the Herald.

BESSIE VONCANNON, Reporter.

Shady Grove, Connelly Springs Charge.—Our church is still progressing. We are very glad indeed to have Rev. J. L. Love and his wife with us for another year, and trust that through his faithful efforts greater things may be accomplished this year than in any previous year. We all love Mrs. Love very much, so let us show our appreciation by helping her in every way possible.

We enjoyed another good message by Bro. Love Sunday evening. He used the 26th chapter of the Epistle of James as his Scripture lesson.

The November meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. John Watson. The December meeting will be at the parsonage.

The November meeting of the Young Men's Laymen's Fellowship was held at the home of Claud Akins, while the December meeting will be held at Bro. Portenbury's.

Our good superintendent announced Sunday that all are to gather at the church on Christmas morning. There will be a Christmas tree. The children will have charge of the singing and will be directed by Mrs. Love, the organist and by Mrs. Claud Akins. The Rev. Mr. Love will bring us a message at 10:30 on Christmas morning.

Winston-Salem, First Church.—Our reporter is keeping you fairly well informed as to the happenings over here, but there are a few things that she hasn't mentioned that I should like you to know about.

First of all, the Baraca supper-oyster stew, held last Wednesday night. Held at a rather inconvenient time, there was nevertheless a good crowd and good fellowship. We were delighted to have Dr. Dixon and three of the boys from the Home. One of the boys, Thomas Brewer, the class is undertaking to clothe. If he isn't too hard on them, we hope to keep him fairly well dressed. And while I am saying that about the class, I might as well take time to say some other things. The first Sunday after Conference I presented an outline of goals, spiritual, numerical, financial, that I hoped the church would meet, and challenged the church to meet. The class gave me money enough to mimeograph and mail copies to all the members of the church. We are, I think, already seeing results from it. Some months ago, as you may remember me reporting, they raised the money for an outside bulletin board. That, too, has been a great help. This is, taking it altogether, one of the most active men's classes it has been my good fortune to be associated with. They are always ready to help.

But I must not neglect the ladies. The Philathea class last year gave $25.00 on the Superannuate apportionment for the church; the Boosters' class, a mixed class, gave $10.00; and an individual gave the balance, which enabled us to meet that obligation in full. Both classes have repeated their offer for this year, so that item is assured.

The Philathea class is having their Christmas party at the parsonage this Wednesday night. The Intermediate Department will have their party at the same place on Thursday night. The Sunday school Christmas entertainment and treat will be given Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the church; the entertainment, consisting of a Christmas play, carols and recitations in the church auditorium; the treat and exchange of gifts, in the Sunday school auditorium.

We raised our Subsidy quota yesterday, most of it at the morning service, a little balance at the evening service. It was easier to raise this year than last.

We are planning to observe Young People's week a little more elaborately this year than we did last. The plans this year call for two banquets, one for fathers and sons, the other for mothers and daughters. That to be followed by the special services on Sunday, a sermon in the morning, a play at night. We were second in our offering for that interest among the churches of the Conference last year. We hope to be first this year. So, look out! Get busy—beat us if you can. We'll let you, if it will help raise any more money.

We are planning to put on an A-Level Training School after the holidays, to run until we have taken as many courses as the folks will sign up for. A good many of our own folks have indicated a desire to take the courses. We have extended an invitation to the other Methodist Protestant churches to join us. Since none of our churches are having Wednesday night prayer meetings, it is likely we will take that night for the courses.

One of the brethren, as he was leaving church yesterday morning, asked me how big a turkey we wanted for Christmas. How big do you think I said? Well, knowing the man who is giving it, as well as the man who is going to eat it, I'll answer the question by saying it will be big enough. Another of the brethren gave me a 24-pound sack of flour the other day. Two of her friends gave Mrs. Bates the fruit-cake yesterday. So we've got that much of a start toward a Christmas dinner. Thanks! C. W. BATES, Pastor.

* * *

I ought to have waited a few hours before writing the last paragraph of my letter—the folks must have gotten wind of that Christmas turkey and decided to finish up the dinner. They came last night, big and little, great and small, with the biggest and most varied pounding I think we have ever received. Everything in it but salt and soap. We are delighted—and grateful. And we appreciate the fact that the folks not only came with the pounding, but remained for a visit, which was almost as much appreciated as the pounding. Preacher folks get sort o' lonesome sometimes. C. W. B.

Lebanon, High Point.—It is a weakness among some of us to fail to manifest a real gratitude at times. Yet, just the knowledge that that gratitude exists is so satisfying that we feel happier, and even though we make no verbal expression, we feel blessed.

This reporter is guilty of procrastination—not ingratitude. The activities have been going on as usual. An inactive reporter is the cause of our news not reaching these columns.

The new year has opened up in fine spirit here. Our new friend and pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, Mrs. Morgan, and children, were received with gladness. We trust the entire family will enjoy their work in our community and that our dear heavenly Father will abundantly bless the labors of pastor and people.

Rev. Mr. Morgan preached two powerful sermons yesterday. At 11 o'clock his text was Phil. 3:10. In this message the spirit of Christ in Paul was emphasized. The ruling passion in Paul's life was to magnify Jesus Christ, to do the will of Him. Paul, forgetful of self, pressed forward with great zeal in the work of the Lord.

At 7:30, the text, "Yet lackest thou one thing," Luke 18:22, was explained in a most interesting manner. When we sit under the sound of these gospel messages we feel glad for an understanding of the Truth, but we cringe with the thought of the awfulness of the fate of us if we come up to judgment and are found wanting. Oh, how many of us lack one thing!

Sunday school attendance yesterday, 157; enrollment, 188.

The C. E. Societies will sing Christmas carols on Sunday night, December 23, in the community, immediately after church services.

Our Christmas program will consist of a play and Christmas tree on Tuesday night, December 25th, at 7:30. Mrs. Ida Lambert is in charge of the program.

The Baraca class has elected Mr. Victor P. Hammer teacher. This class was taught by Dr. S. W. Taylor, pastor, last year.

The Ladies' Aid is planning a unique program for this week's meeting with Mrs. John Reddick, Farriss Avenue. The Christmas decorations will include the evergreen tree, bearing the gifts of love—an individual gift for each member—also, a gift for the husband of each member. (This humble servant, the reporter, wishes so much "Christian" joy on these honorary members that they will desire to attend subsequent meetings, not only in person, but as real, serviceable, and sympathetic representatives.

In the beginning of the new calendar year, it has been announced from the pulpit, the pastor and people here are expecting to launch a program of activity unparalleled in this church's history. The hut project, which was started last year under the direction of Dr. Taylor, pastor, but was not carried to completion, is before us. That calls for activity.

The McCulloch Memorial Fund calls for activity. We take og our hats to Denton! May many other charges take courage and do likewise—that is, raise the apportionment in full.

First Church, Lexington.—This being the month for First Church, Lexington, to raise Annual Conference Expense, we are glad to announce that we went over the top on December 15. In our stewards' meeting December 4, some of the stewards suggested that the board sell potatoes and put on an oyster supper to raise this part of our budget. Bro. Arch Miller was kind enough to let us have potatoes from his store at wholesale. We wish to thank Bros. J. J. Mallard and Arch Miller for the oysters and the stewards who donated crackers, milk and butter. It was a real sight to see these men cooking and washing dishes. C. G. ISLEY.

◆

First Church, Lexington.—Rev. C. G. Isley filled his regular appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock, bringing a very inspiring message.

The Christmas program is under the direction of H. C. Koontz, Sunday school superintendent, and Paul Wallace. The program will consist of a play, "The Human Christmas Gift," and various recitations, and will be presented December 22 at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. C. M. Isley will be hostess to the Woman's Auxiliary Tuesday evening at her home on Market street.

Last Saturday evening the board of stewards sponsored an oyster supper. The proceeds which amounted to $15, will be applied on the Annual Conference claims.

Miss Beulah McCulloch, who has been ill for the past week, is very much improved.

A wedding of much interest in the community and elsewhere is that of Miss Annie Lucille Mallard and Mr. John William McBride. Both are members of First Church. The wedding was solemnized December 8 at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mallard, the ceremony being performed by their pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley.

For her nuptials the bride wore a dress of blue crepe with matching accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of Talisman roses and fern.

Mrs. McBride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mallard. She received her education in the public schools of Lexington.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McBride, of Churchland, N. C., and is a graduate of Churchland High School. At present he is employed by the Hoover Chair Company. They will make their home with the bride's parents on West Seventh Avenue.

Kistler's Union, Cleveland Charge.—We have begun another new Conference year with the return of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Troxler. They have been with us only one year, and we have learned to love them very much. We would have been badly disappointd had they not returned.

The work of our church has started well for the new year. Since our consolidation we are fortunate in having preaching twice each month, which is on the first and third Sundays. Bro. Troxler delivered a very inspiring message Sunday morning. A good congregation was present. We were glad to have several visitors from other churches come and worship with us. We welcome them at any time.

Bro. Troxler opened the doors of the church and three new members were added to our church roll. These are: Mrs. O. V. Warlick and daughter, Mary Frances; also Mrs. Annie Hull Falls. We welcome these dear friends to our church and truly hope they will feel at home.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with our attendance gradually increasing. Our enrollment has increased to 104, for which we are much encouraged.

At this time we are planning a Christmas tree and program to be given Monday night, December 24. A hearty welcome is extended to every one.

With prayers and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Caroleen.—Our people of Caroleen are pleased very much with our new pastor, Bro. J. O. Frye. He has visited most of our homes in the short time since he has come to us. We elected church and Sunday school officers Sunday, December 9th. A very significant thing occurred. Many young people from our C. E. Society were elected to various offices, they are very active in their new offices, being assisted and led by older officers. We are expecting the greatest year we have witnessed in our church.

Many of our older members who have not been attending church have taken new interest and the church school in general is showing permanent signs of recovery.

One of our sure signs was that of the first quarterly conference, which was held in Shelby Sunday, December 16, immediately after the preaching hour of 11 o'clock. Bro. Frye, as well as all those who attended, were delighted with the atmosphere of co-operation and sincere interest shown between Caroleen and Shelby churches.

Another sign was that of co-operation extended the newly-elected officers by an impressive hand-shaking of laymen and officers and then by the officers shaking hands with each other in the spirit of co-operation.

The C. E. Society had its first social hour at the home of Mrs. Mildred Deal Tate. Our pastor and family attended and the young people enjoyed the way in which the pastor conducted the meeting. We enjoyed many new games and had lots of fun. A short business meeting was held and plans were discussed for the new year.

The 13th District is going to have its Rally Day observed at Caroleen. We extend to each of you a cordial welcome, and bring a well-filled basket.

In conclusion we wish each charge a most successfull year and a Merry Christmas.

Concord, Saxapahaw Charge.—We were glad indeed to have Pastor Loy and family back with us for another year. We hope to do greater work in the coming year than in the past.

The new officers of both the Sunday school and church seem to be entering their work with much interest.

As it is nearing the birthday of our Lord and Savior, we are planning to have a program at this church on Christmas Eve night.

Our C. E. Society is growing and is doing some splendid work. Hope to make this a Society that will continue to grow and reach out and help others.

Several of our people have been on the sick list. Mrs. R. F. Davis and Mrs. M. W. Curl are on it at this writing. Hope they will soon recover.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Mill Grove, Midland Charge.—Well, it seems that the Herald subscription committees are running a race these days to see who can get the most subscriptions. It is interesting to watch this each week.

Last week, our other churches on the charge gave a nice write-up. It is natural for us to look for our charge first. I enjoyed reading their articles so much. In my first letter I signed it simply as Reporter. Some of the people got after me to sign my name as reporter, saying that would represent the church better by showing that we had a special reporter. Now I am asking that each reporter sign your name, too. Don't let a few of us sign "Reporter," and a few sign our names. Since thinking the matter over I have decided it will show that we have a reporter elected and it will help us to get acquainted to sign our names.

Something should be said about Christmas, in this letter, since we will not have any Herald next week. To me it means more than any other day in the year. And I think of it in a different way from what I once did. So I will ask each one that claims to be a Christian to ask himself what is Christmas? How it came about that we have Christmas? Let us see if we cannot celebrate it differently this year from the way most people do. Let us thank God that we have lived to see the birthday of His dear Son.

We are looking forward to great services next Sunday, both in Sunday school and church services. We are expecting our pastor to bring us a great sermon. Let all of us pray to that end.

It may seem a little out of line, but I am asking all who can do so to tune in on Station WLW at Cincinnati at 7 o'clock daily, except Sunday, for 15 minutes of real service. I can give this service credit for one thing: it has caused me to pray each morning. I am sure that if Christians will listen to this service they, too, will agree with the opening song each morning. The preacher, E. Howard Caudle, gives wonderful advice.

I hope every reader of the Herald may have a happy Christmas, and that their minds may be directed to Christ and His work on Christmas day.

Kannapolis.—It has been some time since a report has been made from this church, but the work has continued rapidly.

We were glad to welcome Rev. Aubert Smith as our pastor and we pray for a good year of service with his guidance.

On Sunday, December 9, Rev. Mr. Smith preached a very helpful sermon, and a beautiful solo was rendered by Miss Laura Braswell, accompanied at the piano by Miss Elva Sides.

On Saturday, December 8, Miss Blackwelder and Mr. Odell Tutterow were united in marriage and we wish for them many happy years in the future.

At this time everyone is looking forward to Christmas. This church is promised a good program for the holidays under the very efficient program committee, Mrs. W. T. Kiser. The Senior pageant will be given on Sunday, December 23, at 7 o'clock, p. m., and the Children's part on Monday, December 24, at 7 o'clock, p. m. At this time there will be a tree loaded with nice gifts; also, a delicious Sunday school treat.

"My heart goes to all, far and near,
And I repeat the same this year,
A Merry Christmas and Happy
New Year" to everybody!

Asheville.—I am lacking in enthusiasm this week and so my report will lack enthusiasm, too; for, it is not possible to give out something which is not within.

It is a strange thing to me that many folk get an idea that preachers and their families can live on fresh air and sunshine. Now, we boast that we have the grandest fresh air and sunshine in all the world, but, I don't think any of us would find it very fattening were we to try to live solely on it. If Christmas makes us selfish, so much so that we curtail our giving to our church, then we are not celebrating Christmas. Rather, we are slaves to custom and to giving presents because we think someone is going to give us something. How far away we are from the original idea of Christmas!

Our attendance is still low, both in Sunday school and church. Many of our regular attendants are ill and that accounts partially for there being so few present. We earnestly trust all who are indisposed will soon be well and able to be out with us again.

Mrs. Wilson's Primary Class is certainly keeping a splendid record. They led all the school in number present this week. Of course, most of the credit should go to Mrs. Wilson; a class is usually what the teacher makes it and Mrs. Wilson is indeed an enthusiast.

The Golden Rule Class led in the amount of offering in the Children's Department. Mrs. J. S. Williams has done wonders with those boys, but then, Mrs. Williams always does things well.

The Frances Cunningham Philathea Class led in amount of offering in the adult department. The Young Men's Class again had the largest per capita offering. The Fawcett Bible Class had the smallest attendance of all, but a good number of their members are ill.

The entire Sunday school enjoyed a real treat during the opening exercises this past Sunday. Miss Eleanor Galphin and her harmonica band played several Christmas carols which were enjoyed by all present.

A "White" service will be observed next Sunday evening, 7:30 p. m., and the gifts are to be food to be sent to Bethel Home. All members are urged to be present and to bring a gift of food.

The children of the Sunday school will be entertained by their respective teachers on Wednesday, December 26, at 2:30 p. m.

The Woman's Auxiliary is to meet with Mrs. J. S. Williams on Thursday at 3:30 p.m. and a full attendance is expected. A box of things for the Children's Home is being mailed from members of the Auxiliary this week.

It was fine to have Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boling worship with us on Sunday. Mr. Boling's neck is healing rapidly and it is only a matter of time until he will be quite O. K., and we are all so thankful. Mrs. Boling was received into the church and we all extended her a sincere welcome.

Inasmuch as there will be no paper next week, we wish to extend to all the Methodist Protestants throughout the state a very Merry Christmas. M. L. B.

Mt. Hermon Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—It was with much anxiety that we awaited the results of Annual Conference, knowing that our faithful pastor, Rev. L. E. Mabry, was going away to school and could not serve us again. We wish to express our appreciation to our delegate and to the stationing committee for sending to us Rev. T. J. Whitehead as our new pastor. Mr. Whitehead has been with us in many special day programs and already has many friends in our community. Mrs. Whitehead is well known, too, and is loved by all. We feel that we are very fortunate in having them with us and we are looking forward to a happy, successful year ahead.

Mr. Whitehead filled the two regular appointments of this month. The first Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock he spoke on "What It Is to Be a Christian," his text being "Follow Thou Me," It was a fine lesson, teaching that to be a Christian we must love Jesus, follow Him, and serve Him. At this service we were very glad to have Mr. Charlie Coble from Burlington, accompanied by Miss Truth Isley to sing two beautiful selections. We hope he will sing for us again

The third Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Mr. Whitehead was here with a wonderful Christmas lesson.

The first quarterly conference of this charge was held in our church Saturday before the third Sunday of this month.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will meet with Mrs. V. S. Garrett on Tuesday evening of this week at 7 o'clock.

Our attendance for Sunday school is about as usual. Our new superintendent, Mr. James Thompson is very much interested and we feel sure will make us a fine leader for the year ahead.

We are planning a Christmas program to be held at 7 o'clock, p. m., December 24. The public is cordially invited to attend.

MRS. L. P. HOLT, Reporter.

Tabernacle-Julian.—Conference did not make a break in our work at Tabernacle-Julian. We did not have to move and we did not have to get acquainted with the people and the charge, nor did the people have to get acquainted with the NEW preacher. The same day Conference adjourned we were on the job visiting and doing other pastoral work. Thanks to the Good Lord, the good Conference and the good People that this pastor has had the privilege of continuing the good work without having to stop and go through the awful ordeal of moving. What a contrast! Why all this moving, anyway? Are Methodist ministers and their families so wicked that they must be put to these tests and trials? But this is not what I started to write about. I just wanted to say that we are moving along in an interesting way at Tabernacle and Julian, as some of the notes to follow will indicate.

We had loked forward to the Thanksgiving and Harvest Home services for some time even before Conference. The Thanksgiving service was conducted at Tabernacle on Thanksgiving day at 10 o'clock, but because of the very unfavorable weather the attendance was not large. However, we had a very interesting service and those who were present did not regret going through the rain. The Harvest Home service was conducted at Tabernacle on Sunday, December 2, and the people contributed nicely of both money and kind. Because of improvements of the Julian church building we could not have the Harvest Home service as planned, but they contributed their share of nice things to the Children's Home.

On November 23 the Tabernacle trustees and their wives were invited to meet in the parsonage. We had a great meeting. The trustees were asked to make an inspection of the parsonage and premises after which an inventory was made of all parsonage possessions, marking conditions, etc. Then a time was spent socially. Many things were done in the meeting that we believe will tell for good to the church and the kingdom.

On December 14 the Tabernacle stewards and their wives were invited to the parsonage. This meeting was well attended and we had a meeting of much interest. The entire church membership was divided into classes, placing every man, woman and child in the church in one of these classes. These classes number from 20 to 38. A steward is assigned to each of these classes and when the organization is complete a class leader will be found for each class. The stewards were given their class rolls and plans were made whereby the lists of each of these classes are to be posted in vestibule of the church. Monthly stewards' meetings were planned and the monthly activities and the results of each class are to be posted.

This pastor does not hesitate to say that these meetings of trustees and stewards were are good, if not the best, it has ever been his privilege to abserve, and it is believed that great good will come out of them.

Because of the extreme weather of last week the flue of the Julian church, which is being rebuilt, could not be completed. This means our church was too cold for services last Sunday, but the use of the commodious home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner was extended to us, and we had a fine service. Mr. and Mrs. Hanner have our sincere thanks

On last Sunday afternoon the A Capella Choir of High Point College brought to us one of their fine programs. The house was full and everyone was highly entertained. It was a musical feast. Dr. Humphreys and Rev. N. M. Harrison were also present and each gave us a good word about our college. Thanks to all of these, and we wish them to come back to us again.

Among our sick is Mrs. George A. Garret, of Julian, who has for a great nember of years been among the most faithful of the Tabernacle membership. Mr. George O. Garrett, the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, is a patient at the St. Leo Hospital in Greensboro. Mrs. Garner, not a member of our church, but a good woman, and the mother of three of our members at Tabernacle, is quite sick. We pray that all these may soon be restored to health.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

Grace, Greensboro.—Mr. Carroll's sermon last Sunday (December 16) was based upon the text, "Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us." The preacher presented his theme in a way that held the close attention of the congregation, and the sermon elicited many favorable comments.

In the afternoon at 5 o'clock, one of the most beautiful and inspiring services that Grace church has known was held. This was the annual program of Christmas music by the choir, with readings from the Scriptures by the pastor. The beautiful chancel was decorated with a mass of evergreens—pine and cedar. Candles in plentiful supply were placed upon the altar, and along the front of the choir stalls. To the strains of Adeste Fidelis, the vested choir, augmented by a number of visiting musicians, marched up the center aisle of the church, taking their places in the choir--stalls. The program, consisting of solos, quartets, and choruses, was enjoyable and inspiring. The director, Bynum Clapp, and the organist, Mrs. Morrisette, as well as every member of our own fine choir, and the visiting musicians, deserve the appreciative thanks of all who heard the magnificent program. Quite a number of music-lovers from other churches attended the service.

The evergreens were furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Teague, two of the most valued members of the choir.

The election of Sunday school officers, held during the morning session of the Sunday school, resulted as follows: Superintendent,

J. Norman Wills; associate superintendent, Carl Jones, Jr; secretary, Ernest Scarboro; treasurer, Wills Staley; pianist, Mrs. J. Elwood Carroll; assistant pianist, Miss Margaret White.

The meeting of the Council of Sunday School Workers was held Monday evening, and plans suggested looking to an aggressive year's work, as we feel that each succeeding year should be better than those that have gone before.

The Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting meeting Monday afternoon. The devotional service was led by Miss Emma Page, which was followed by appropriate music and readings, with the regular business meeting following.

Where will the Annual Conference be held?

J. N. W.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Charge.—We are very glad indeed to have our same pastor returned to us. We are hoping to make this year much better than the last. We all think Bro. Williams is a splendid preacher and everyone that hears him enjoys his sermons very much.

Our Sunday school is doing very nicely, though our attendance is not as good as we would like.

Prayer meeting is held each Sunday night at 7 o'clock. The young people are taking right much interest and some of the young ladies have been in charge of the service.

The Sunday school is planning a Christmas program and tree Monday night, December 24, at 7:30 o'clock. We extend to everyone a welcome.

We were very proud of the Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home by the Sunday school, which amounted to $18.60.

Let us all pray that our church work may be a greater success the next year than ever before.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

SUPT. S. S.

Efland, Orange Charge—Perhaps no day will be longer remembered by the Methodist Protestants of Efland and their interested friends than Sunday, December 16, 1934. By planning, then praying and working to accomplish our plans we usually succeed. Much of this has been done to bring about what we have been hoping to see. At the close of a very inspiring sermon based on "The Star of Hope" by our pastor, he said, "One star we see in the distance is the dedication of our church next May, when it will be 30 years old." To many of us this star seemed very distant with quite a debt on hand, but this challenge, from one we love, to do our part to help the great cause of Christ brought one of our most dependable members to his feet to say "The Bivins Brothers will pay one-half of this amount if the church will pay the other half." In a very short time this amount had been pledged, to be paid by April 15. Soon after this date we hope to invite all interested friends to be with us to give to Him a part of what He has so graciously given to us. For more than six years we have been worshiping in our new church, which really is the former one remodelled and additions made in order to take care of the growing Sunday school.

Both services Sunday were well attended. For the morning service the church was well filled.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, of Mebane, worship with us and other visitors also.

We are glad to welcome Mr. Willard Clarke, who has recently located in Hillsboro, into our church and hope that both will be a blessing to the other.

Our Christmas program will be Christmas Eve at 7 o'clock. There will be a community tree and "treat" for the Sunday school.

PATTYE CRUTCHFIELD, Reporter.

Mebane.—We are indeed happy to have our pastor return to us for another year. He and his wife have been faithfully performing their duties and have accomplished much for the church.

Our Sunday school, under the new superintendent, Mr. Dewitt Pender, seems to be steadily growing, both in interest and numbers.

We are planning a pageant and White Gifts for next Sunday evening. A committee has been working on this and we expect a beautiful and impressive service.

We are looking forward with pleasure to December 30. Dr. R. M. Andrews will be with us on this date.

The Herald committee expects to try to secure our quota soon. Mrs. Callie Nicholson and Mrs. Herbert Christopher are to assist in this work.

The pastor preached Sunday morning on "Who Need Jesus at Christmas?" and at the evening hour, "Pictured Nativity," the birth and early life of Jesus in beautifully-colored stereopticon pictures. We were pleased to see in the audience Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Waynick, Miss Eldrige and Dr. Joy Harris Glascock, of Greensboro.

MRS. H. C. NICHOLSON, Reporter.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

A ringing call is sounding to all Sunday school workers throughout the 100 counties of the great state of North Carolina to assemble in Annual Convention January 21, 22 and 23, 1935, in the First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

The call is a triple call—a call from within, a call from without, and a call from above. From within comes a personal call for a renewing, re-challenging, re-inspiring consecration. From without comes the call from others for individuals to help them in a great religious and spiritual recovery. From above comes the call for co-workers with Christ, and thus our Convention theme: "Fellowship With Christ."

To help meet these needs there will be outstanding people, nationally known, among whom are: Dr. Hopkins, of the World's Sunday School Association; Dr. Harry C. Munro, of the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago; Dr. Chas. L. Goodell, of the Federated Churches of Christ in America; Dr. John W. Elliott, of the Baptist Board, Philadelphia, in great demand because of his fearlessness in presenting the Christian's duty as far as alcohol is concerned; Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer, of Gettysburg Seminary (Lutheran) at Gettysburg, Pa.; the Rev. Minor C. Miller, general secretary of the Virginia Council of Christian Education; and Miss Elizabeth McE. Shields, the Children's Work Director of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., from Richmond, Virginia.

Prof. H. Augustine Smith, from Boston University, of international repute, will have charge of the music of the entire convention, will establish his "Temple of Religious Art," through which he will conduct tours at all hours of the day; have discussion groups of "The Fine Arts of Religion," and present one of his magnificent pageants.

From our own state come such well known men as Dr. S. D. Gordon, Winston-Salem; Dr. Russell, Dr. H. Shelton Smith, and Dr. Gobble, from Duke University; Dr. Gwynn, from Davidson College, Bishop Penick, from Raleigh, and many others.

Will you answer the call and be present at this great state convention as a registered delegate? January 21, 22 and 23, 1935, in Greensboro, N. C.?

I want to here use the opportunity to thank the pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and C. E. secretaries for the splendid way in which they co-operated in paying their apportionments to the Council of Religious Education last year.

My, what a week this has been! $120.00 on subscriptions and $10.00 on subsidy! That is the greatest yet so far as ye old timers can remember. Somebody certainly is doing some work these days. Such a wonderful list came in this week that we cannot mention all of them by name, but, folks, look at the list and see. How those printers will smile when they see the list.

We have held the forms open until the very last minute this week in order that everything that came in might be recorded, since we have no paper next week. In fact, it is so late now that this scribe must hurry through with this and run for the printing office. While the printers are happy over the returns they are also wanting us to hurry on with it.

Last week we credited the entire five dollars sent in from Fallston charge for subscriptions, whereas one dollar should have been credited to subsidy. Since we do not give credits on subscriptions for subsidy, we are subtracting one-half of one subscription from their list this week.

Now let the good work go on, and week after next let us make up for the last of next week. Keep it up, good folks.

Remember our slogan is: EACH CHARGE SENDING IN AT LEAST ONE SUBSCRIPTION EACH WEEK.

CONGRATULATIONS, DENTON

I am perfectly willing for the Editor to do my raving for me, but I do want to express my appreciation in this public way, and extend my congratulations to the good folks on Denton Charge for being the first to reach the goal for the McCulloch Memorial Fund. WHAT DENTON DID, WE ALL CAN DO! How's that for a slogan for the campaign?

C. W. BATES, Chairman.
